Thomasburg

Thomasburg—Mrs. Fred Porter entertained the ladies of Thomasburg United Church at her home on Tuesday afternoon for the regular monthly meeting of the Women's Missionary Society.

A party was given in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Percy Franks in the Oddfellows Hall on Tuesday evening. Percy was a private in the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment going overseas in December 1939, and returned to Canada in March of this year. Two years ago he married a Scotch girl who arrived from Glasgow about six weeks ago. Percy was well known in this community before his enlistment having been employed by some of the local farmers and since receiving his discharge from the military forces has been connected with the police force at Trenton. During the evening the honored couple were presented with a wall mirror and two electric lamps from their Thomasburg friends who wish to welcome another Scotch bride to Canada and wish them every success in their new home.

Mrs. A. C. Porter, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Geen and Kenneth were guests on Sunday of Mr. and Mrs. Newton Foster in Kingston.

Mrs. Earl Carter and Miss Olive Carter of Toronto spent several days last week with Mr. and Mrs. Clare Carter and Mr. and Mrs. Edward Carter.

Friends from here were sorry to learn of the sudden death of the late Mr. James Haggerty, Treasurer of Hastings County, which occurred at Dunnville on Thursday afternoon and sincere sympathy is extended to Mrs. Haggerty and her family in their bereavement.

Mr. Donald Richardson who has been employed in Toronto for the last year and a half has given up his position there and is assisting his brother Edward, who is operating the Thomasburg Feed Co.

Mrs. Will Reid of Crookston has taken up residence in the village in the house recently vacated by Mrs. James Bateman which Mrs. Reid's son, Mr. Clifford Adams purchased a few months ago. Friends welcome Mrs. Reid to the village.

Burrs

Burrs—Congratulations to Mr. and Mrs. Don Spencer on the birth of a daughter, Saturday morning, at Belleville Hospital.

Mrs. L. Burlingham, Wellington, was the week end guest of Mr. and Mrs. Val Squire and family. With them she enjoyed a drive to South Bay, visiting relatives there, returning to her home Tuesday.

Mrs. W. J. Herrington, Bad Axe, Mich., with Prof. and Mrs. Fred O'Dell and son Fritz, Ann Arbor, Mich., were for a few days the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr and Ronald. During their ten day trip they visited Montreal and at W. S. Herrington's, Napanee. On Tuesday evening Mr. and Mrs. Ross Burr entertained for them at a dinner. Other guests were Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Werden, Mrs. Earl Anderson, Capt. and Mrs. Shannon LaFontaine, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley Werden and Mrs. Anderson also entertained for them on Wednesday and Thursday evenings.

Mr. Fritz O'Dell and Mr. Ronald Burr were Wednesday noon hour guests of Mr. and Mrs. R. B. Morden.

Mr. and Mrs. Haymon Montgomery were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Henry Dick and family.

Mr. George Jackson, Mountain View, received painful injuries among them, a broken leg, when a rung on a ladder broke during silo filling operations at Mr. Harry Gibson's, Ameliasburg, on Thursday, just as they were finishing the day's work. He is a patient in Belleville Hospital.

Mrs. Harold Caldwell, Toronto, was Thanksgiving guest of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Harold Hall.

Main Bouters Knock Each Other Out in Wild Flurry, Referee Calls Matches a Draw

There wasn't any fooling about this Joe Jackson-Pat Flanagan main bout at the Arena, Wednesday night. The lads lived up to all advance notices and staged one of the best headline attractions seen here in many a moon.

That is if you class fast aggressive clean action as compared to the rough-and-tumble-knock-'em-down drag-'em-out style of mat calisthenics.

But it ended rather suddenly. The two gladiators had each won a fall, more or less and were tearing at each other like a couple of wildcats over a juicy jack rabbit in the third stanza when they collided, or hit one another with a ring post and they both went out colder than a landlord's heart. Referee Bert Maxwell had no trouble tolling the fateful ten over the prostrate pachyderms.

Several Methods.

The pair produced several methods of flying wrestling tactics. Both are exceptionally speedy on their feet with Pat Flanagan being able to handle his like legs strangely in the same manner as a kangaroo. Several times he drop-kicked Jackson to the mat, and as many times the kid from Nawth C'lina bounded to his feet something after the manner of a rubber doll.

On occasions they bounced off the ropes with the agility of an antelope only to find one another just where he wasn't supposed to be.

Comes Back.

Flanagan nailed Jackson for the first fall after fifteen minutes of wrestling agility, but the lad from the south came back strongly to ground the fighting ex-flying officer after a pinwheel where that had the Irisher seeing more stars than his forebears saw Shamrocks on St. Patrick's Day.

Came the third fall and the lads really went after each other's scalps. Introducing a little pugilism into the pastime they buffeted one another all over the ring. It was clean, aggressive wrestling however and not once did either of the lads resort to the mat villain's tactics.

There was a flurry of fists and while the majority of the faithful did not see what happened, Jackson and Flanagan slumped to the mat after a brief wild exchange of something or other and both went out like the proverbial light. Stretched out on the canvas, the boys apparently did not hear Referee Bert Maxwell toll the count and that was that.

Katan Beats Morgan.

John Katan used the noggin to pull off a successful semi-final go against Marine "Toar" Morgan. After some furious meleeing with the honors going first one way and then the other, Katan finally heaved the Marine out of the ring and followed through. Referee Fox started to count and the Krafty Katan waited until he had reached "eight", then with a sudden heave he threw Morgan into the crowd and reached the inside of the ropes just before the count "ten" was reached.

In the curtain Aaron Stein, and Joe Maich offered some lively wrestling with Joe in the villain's role. It ended after eighteen minutes when Stein whirled Maich over his head and floored him for the fall.

SPLENDID RACING WITNESSED AT BRIGHTON, WED.

Three Races Carded and Excellent Time Made in Each Heat; Track Fast

The final racing event of the season in this district was staged on Wednesday afternoon by the Brighton Driving Club before a large attendance and under ideal weather conditions. A bright sun mellowed the October air while the track was in perfect condition, being hard and fast. There were seventeen horses entered in the three races carded and every class was keenly contested and it is rumored plenty of money changed hands on the results. The most interest was created in the Free-For-All, where six of the best pacers in the district faced starter George O. Tice of Belleville and every heat was a battle. Lee Volo, who had taken the measure of Black Prince on a couple of occasions this year was trying again but the best he could do was win the last heat. Pacey could have won the race had he used a little judgment in the second heat by holding his brush until the horses were straightened away in the stretch. As it was his horse went to a break and lost all chances of winning. The boys, after the last oat money of the year, were taking many chances and the judges had to call the drivers to the stand to warn them.

One horse was set back to last place for cutting another horse off his stride going into the bottom turn and after this action was taken the drivers settled away to give the public a few thrills. Babe Elmhirst, who has been around teaming horses for many years was the winning driver of the afternoon with two wins to his credit. He teamed Worthy Frisco to a win in the 2:28 class and repeated with Maud Grattan in the 2:22 class. Both horses were three-heat winners and although every other horse took a crack at them during the three heats none was able to catch the front runner. The time of the heats was exceptionally good and the driver of the fastest heat in each class was given $5 and the driver of the fastest heat of the day another $5. The results.

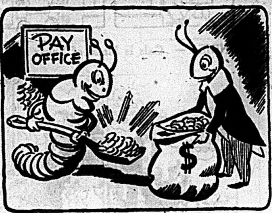
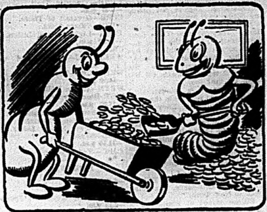
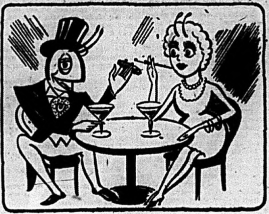
ANT CRICKET



1 When the war was on Joey Cricket was a rather rambunctious fellow. But nevertheless, he made a swell haul on his job . . . just rolling in dough.

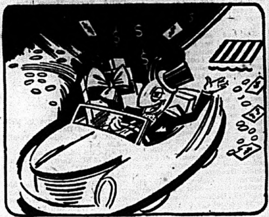


2 Andy Ant worked at the same plant. He took in a sizeable bit of cash too. Long hours and overtime sure added up.

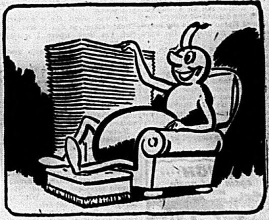


3 "A fool and his money are soon parted", they say, and Joey proved the proverb with a vengeance. No luxury cost too much for him.

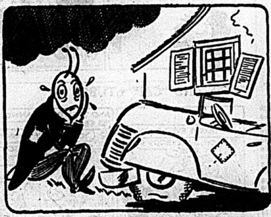
4 Andy unloaded his money too, but he put it into Victory Bonds. His interest was in interest (3%) . . . besides he wanted to help beat the Japanese Beetles.



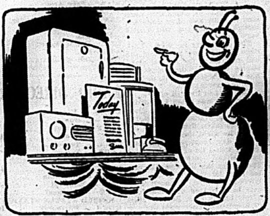
5 Joey bought what he wanted, when he wanted it . . . stuff that was high-priced and scarce. Money burned a hole in his pocket faster than a new bride burns toast.



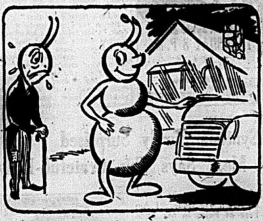
6 Andy sat tight with his growing pile of Victory Bonds. "Joey Cricket", he would often remark, "likes high living . . . but gentlemen prefer Bonds."



7 Now let's look ahead a bit. The war has been over some time. Joey is finished too. Upkeep is keeping him down. Wartime wages and overtime didn't last forever. Life was just a bowl of cherries. Now Joey has the pips.



8 Andy is still living comfortably. The things he wants are coming back on the market, with postwar improvements, too.



9 Andy's investment in Victory Bonds is paying off. You see . . . there's a moral . . . save your dough for a better buy . . . 'bye and bye.

STARBRIGHT

By Jane Bliss

CHAPTER 18

She knew most of them—stars, producers, directors, writers, a few technicians. There were important people and some who weren't, but had hopes. Elaine felt unwanted among them.

She stood near the door, holding a tall, cool glass absently, gazing at the room. She tried to work out the change that had come to her, tried to find an answer to it, tried to beat down the throbbing hurt and depression within her.

Paul was sitting across the room, playing a match game with a cute, blond actress who was riding the crest of great popular acclaim at the moment. Michael, the producer, and Ellison were watching them, kibitzing and laughing.

She did not see Lee sidle up to her until he had spoken.

"You're looking very sorry about something today."

"Am I?" she asked, a little startled. She tried to smile widely. "Maybe it's these new shoes?"

"You're drunk, Lee," Elaine said. "You know Annie and Sam are close friends."

Lee clucked his tongue in mockery. "You still have faith in people and things such as friendship, haven't you?—Life is great, life is beautiful, says our little Elaine." He stopped smiling and looked at Elaine, his eyes red, uncertain. "You're almost too naive for Hollywood, Elaine."

Lee turned and stared at the room again. "There's Karen, beautiful, selfish, lovely Karen." He took a few steps away from Elaine and Karen was beating a spoon against a glass, clamoring for attention. The room quieted and Lee stood still.

"Listen, everybody," she said. "I've got wonderful news for you." She turned and looked at the man standing beside her. "John and I are going to be married."

Elaine imagined John Warren looked a little sad for a moment and in the instant of silence that followed Karen's words she heard Lee's glass shatter on the hard floor.

Lee's face was ashen when he turned away from Karen and Warren. The shattering of the glass seemed to have gone unnoticed by most of the people in the game room. Elaine stood by the door watching Lee, feeling Paul's eyes on her. But she did not trust herself to meet his glance.

The news of the engagement sobered Lee. He stopped by Elaine again. "Still so naive?"

"I'm sorry, terribly sorry for you."

"Don't be. I had it coming. I knew what she'd do when she hit the top out here and didn't need me or anybody in particular." There was a burning rage in his eyes. "But I don't like to be laughed at. Don't you laugh at me, Elaine."

"I won't Lee."

He started out of the room. "And don't stop me from getting drunk this time. I've got the right."

Elaine shrugged. "You know what you want to do."

He turned and looked at her. "I guess I really don't want to get any more drunk that I already am. Are you going to stay here?"

"For a little while."

He nodded. "I suppose I should offer them my congratulations. But why get laughed at?" He walked out of the room, his lips curling angrily.

She had returned to her office at the studio to begin work on a new script with Ellison and it was a week before she saw Lee again.

He was walking out of the administration building, his eyes still angry, his lips still curled back.

"Farewell, International slave" he said.

"Why, where are you going?"

"In a circle. I just got fired. By Brann. Brann, you know, is a big man at International."

Elaine gasped. "Fired? But why, Lee?"

"I am told my writing has a bad odor," Lee said. "Perhaps it has. I wouldn't know."

"What are you going to do now?"

"Seek employment of some kind. Need a man to wash windows at your place?"

"But there are other studios, Lee."

He grunted. "Yes, I know. I'll let you know how I come out — standing or flying."

"Don't be silly. You can write."

"Lee," Elaine called after him. She caught up with him near the end of the walk. "Are you — are you broke?"

He was silent for a moment. Then: "Okay, so I'm busted. I'm flat. I'm back where I started. Got any ideas?"

"Let me loan you some money?"

He shook his head vigorously. "Not this time, baby. I'll take a chance on myself for a few more rounds. When you hear three short knocks at your door, you'll know it's me. Just slip a quarter under the door." He waved and walked out of the studio grounds.

Elaine turned back to the administration building and hurried to Brann's office. She had to pass two secretaries before she could finally get in.

When she entered the huge suite or offices that were Brann's private sanctums, she said: "Hey, remember me, Annie? Why the barricade for an old friend?"

Brann flushed. "Well, you know how it is, Elaine." He spread his hands.

"No, how is it? I haven't seen you to talk to you for a long time. We used to speak occasionally back in New York. Or do we do things differently in Hollywood?"

"You're being a trifle unkind, Elaine." Brann shifted in his chair. "Minnie tells me you ran out on the party early. You shouldn't have done that."

Elaine sat down opposite the desk. "I can think of a lot of good reasons why I did, but that isn't what I came here for."

Brann's eyebrows arched. "Something troubling you?"

"Why did you fire Lee?"

"Oh, that." Brann swung his chair around to the desk again, picked up huge pictures of set decorations and stared at them. "He wasn't producing the kind of work we want. That's why I fired him. His option was up anyway."

"Why didn't you let me know you were going to let his option drop? I could have helped him."

Brann dropped the pictures. "Elaine, when are you ever going to get it through your head that to keep helping Lee is wrong." He turned his attention back to the set decorations and Elaine knew he had no more to say.

Elaine stood up. "My option will be up next month, Annie. I think we'd better let it drop, too. I don't believe I like International any more."

Brann did not look up. "All right, Elaine. You're free to negotiate with other studios if you wish." His voice was busy and neat and Elaine felt a little sick.

Ellison was sitting in her office when she returned from the administration building.

"Well, Miss Grayson," he snapped, "do you think they hold up the daily double until I get there?"

"I'm sorry, Ellison. I'm not on this story any more."

He sat up straight in her chair. "What are they trying to do? Discourage me again? Why aren't you on the story?"

Elaine walked to the desk. "In fact, I'm practically through at International. They're not lifting my option next month."

Ellison stood up. His face was dark. "They're nuts. They have gone crazy. You're the most natural screen writer this lot has ever had. You wait right here," he exclaimed, starting for the door. "I'll talk to Lewin. I'll tell them I'll quit too!"

"Ellison, wait a minute. I asked them to terminate the contract. I'm quitting. They didn't fire me."

Ellison turned and walked slowly back to her, his eyes wide. "You quit? With the contract you had? What lousy producer made a pass at you? Tell me, and I'll knock him 10 miles into the Pacific."

"You don't understand, Ellison. I'm sick of this place. I'm going back to New York."

Ellison stared at Elaine for a long time. "I wish I had your courage," he said and walked out of the office.

It was perhaps an hour after Ellison had left that Elaine started taking her personal belongings out of the desk drawers. In that hour she had sat motionless, watching the sun rays like moats of dust whirl down from the window. She had thought — thought of everything she could think of from the very beginning of her life.

She had smiled over some thoughts, let her mind fasten quietly and seriously on others. It was a peaceful hour, an hour that gave her a freshness for the future. And in that space of time she learned not to be weak any longer, nor afraid to seek happiness for herself and the satisfaction of her own desires.

And somehow, in that hour — she did not really know how — she had severed completely the ties, the unseen wires that had bound her to Lee and his life.

Elaine had the sense of exhilliration that comes with a long-sought freedom while she was clearing the desk drawers. She hummed a tune that was catching on—"Oh, Dadd-ee, I wanna diamond riiiinnngg..

It was Fall, 1941, and Elaine Grayson had just passed the transition of completely growing up.

The St. Louis Cardinals defeated the New York Yankees in the world series that fall, and people were listening to Red Skelton on the radio and going around saying "I dood it," and investing in the government with Defense Bonds, and more young men were seen in army and navy uniforms, though the number still wasn't very large.

The publishers in New York liked Elaine's new novel and she had contracted for several short stories with a leading magazine. She was, she told herself, through writing screen plays.

That was in the fall of 1941.

And that was when Lee struck Warren in Ciro's during a floor show in an argument over Karen and was taken drunkenly to jail where he spent the night.

The day court was jammed, mostly wth a lot of people Elaine had almost forgotten existed. They were the little people who led lives far foreign to the Hollywood standard, although they may have resided in homes only a few blocks from Beverly Hills or Brentwood. They were there in the day court to see Lee Collins and Karen Stoddard and John Warren, with his black eye.

Paul Mason was also there, and so was Anthony Brann and a staff of lawyers and a lot of reporters and photographers.

Elaine laughed when the judge surveyed the scene and said that all that was necessary was for somebody to pay Lee's fine of disorderly conduct and that it wasn't necessary to have all of Los Angeles county present to watch the clerk count the money.

It took only a few minutes and she was outside in the bright sun, talking to Karen.

"We were sitting there, minding our own business," Karen was saying, adjusting her silver fox neckpiece. Warren was standing on one of the steps, listening to Paul and Brann. Lee had disappeared a few moments before in a taxi.

"That's the way the best fights start," Elaine snickered.

"Well, Lee had no right to come to our table and sit down. He was horribly offensive. He accused John of taking me from him, of breaking our engagement. He called me all sorts of names—said I only used people, hurt them. Really, darling, I think Lee is a bit insane, don't you?"

"Syntona Surely Surprised Me," Says This Grateful Lady

"These Awful Attacks of Indigestion are Gone. I Am Free of Pains in My Back and Muscles. My Nerves are Calmed, and I Sleep Soundly Once More."

All over Ontario people are talking like that about SYNTONA, the amazing herbal compound that is bringing relief from suffering and distress to thousands of grateful men and women. For example, just a few days ago Mrs. Louise Leigh, 136 Elmwood Ave., London, made the following statement:

"For more than 10 years I suffered with a weak, nervous stomach. I tried every remedy I ever heard of, went on special diets, but no matter what I did, I just went on suffering. Food just seemed to sour in my stomach and scalding liquids would rise right up into my throat. Gas would accumulate and press up into my chest so bad I could hardly draw a full breath and I was subject to spells of palpitation, dizziness and nausea. Later, pains developed in my back and spread all through my muscles and joints.

"I had become discouraged trying one thing after another without getting any real benefits, so you can imagine how pleased I was when I found Syntona was really helping me. Any person who suffers like I did will understand why I want to make this statement and I only hope it will help others as it did me. I wasn't taking Syntona long before I could tell it was helping my stomach and now I am free of all that gas and indigestion. The pains have gone from my back and muscles, my nerves are calmed and I sleep soundly once more. It is years since I felt so well at this season before."

Let this pure Herbal Tonic help you as it has hundreds of other local men and women. It is pleasant to take and quick to act. Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

COUNTY COURT

38 Radio Owners From Stirling Fined

Names of 38 residents of Stirling and immediate district appeared on the county police docket list today as that many 'Stirlingites' were charged with having no radio licences for the receivinb sets in their homes. With one or two exceptions all paid the conventional $5 fine out of court with several Stirling district residents having costs added to their fines.

Two motorist paid fines and costs for speeding while another two paid $10 fine and $3 costs for having liquor and for consumin a public place. Another paid $12.50 after pleading guilty out of court to driving with no permit and failure to notify the Highway Department of the sale of a car cost another county resident $12.50.

Found guilty on a charge of careless driving and of driving without a permit. Dennis Callahan was fined $7.50, while a charge of failure to notify the department of the sale of a car issued against Ernest Cole was enlarged for personal service. Charge Dismissed.

Charge of careless driving against Bruce Bankey was dismissed as result of a verdict of accidental death being returned by a coroner's jury at the inquest looking into the death of William Blackburn. Blackburn received fatal injuries at Corbyville, several weeks ago when the Bankey driven auto in which he was a passenger left the highway and crashed into a hydro pole.

John Huffman was given suspended sentence and had his driver's licence suspended for one month when he was found guilty of reckless driving. At Cannifton Huffman's car had left the highway and crashed into a hydro pale with a passenger in the car sustaining injury.

FAIL TO APPEAR

Toronto, Oct. 18 —(CP)— Representatives of the Independent Canadian Mine Workers Union yesterday failed to appear before the Ontario Labor Relations Board which had prepared to hear the Union's application for certifications as bargaining agent for 700 workers at Lake Shore Gold Mines, Ltd., Kirkland Lake.

Await Report Of Conference Held in Toronto

(By The Canadian Press)

Reports on the three-day government-sponsored conference in Toronto where representatives of Ford Motor Company of Canada and the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) unsuccessfully sought settlement of the 10,000-man strike at Windsor, Ont., were awaited as the strike continued through its 37th day.

Elsewhere, ballots by workers in several plants of Canada's "Big Three" packing companies —seized by the Federal Government in an effort to avert a strike —favored strike action unless a master agreement providing for a 30-per cent wage increase is negotiated. Approximately 5,000 Western Canada miners who struck in protest against meat rationing appeared determined to continue their holiday.

Sources close to the Ford talks, but unofficial, said deadlock came when Ford officials insisted they could not enter into detailed discussion of union demands until power plant employees returned to work and Ford office workers were allowed to pass through union picket lines to enter their offices.

Discussions went smoothly Monday, slowed up Tuesday, and reached an impasse Wednesday.

Indonesians Reject Dutch Proposal For Partnership

By RALPH MORTON

Batavia, Java, Oct. 18 —(AP) —The Indonesian National Council today rejected a Dutch proposal for partnership in this Netherlands empire and its Vice President, Dr. Mohamed Hatta, warned that many years of bloodshed and bitter fighting would ensue if Holland attempts to rule the colony by armed force.

Hatta held a Press Conference in the residence of the Indonesian Nationalist President Soekarno a few hours after a fresh series of outbreaks in scattered localities had resulted in the death of 15 Netherlands and Christian Indonesians.

"The Dutch should not remain under the illusion that they can thwart the Indonesian desire to remain independent," Hatta said. "The reported 40,000 Dutch troops to be used in Indonesia to spread love for the Dutch with sword and fire will definitely not succeed in their efforts.

"Not for a moment will Indonesia countenance any form of colonial status, whatever new garb it assumes or whatever fancy name is given it. War and revolution raging fiercely for years will be the only result."

'Sweet' Disposition Means Just That

The criminal has little sugar in his blood—that may be the reason why he is a criminal.

Human behavior is an intriguing chemical problem. For some years past it has been known that there is an intimate relationship between the amount of sugar present in the blood and one's social action, by Edward Podolsky, M. D., in Science Service.

Psychiatrists connected with courts and prisons have found that a decrease in the normal amount of sugar in the blood has been responsible for the following anti-social acts; Disorderly conduct, assault and battery, attempted suicide and homocide, cruelty against children and in marital relationship, various sexual perversions and aggressions, false fire alarms, drunkenness, embezzlement of property, arson, slander and violation of traffic regulations.

Problem children and delinquents have been found to have a tendency to hypoglycemia (decrease in the blood). The lower the sugar level falls the greater is the tendency to commit a criminal action. The normal amount of sugar is from 90 to 110 milligrams per 100 cubic centimeters. When the figure is below 90 the chances are that the individual is likely to commit some mischief.

Of course not all physiological processes are always maintained at their proper level. Our blood sugar varies from hour to hour and there are times when it is below normal.

As a rule crimes and offenses are committed not in the minor attacks of sugarlessness, but in the medium or major attacks. The sugar level may fall slightly and we may still be free from a tendency to commit a crime, but should it fall decidedly we will certainly be tempted to commit some folly. A pronounced decrease in blood sugar is manifested by weakness, perspiration, tremor, hunger and certain typical psychological changes.

The person whose blood sugar has fallen greatly becomes transformed. In cases of depressed sugar level people occasionally develop among other symptoms a rude and boorish manner. They jostle and push people aside on the street without apologizing. These symptoms disappear when the sugar level is raised by eating a piece of candy.

Assault and battery are often committed because the sugar level is not what it should be. A man whose sugar blood fell so low that he began to perspire, also became so violent that he attacked the doorman of his house for no reason whatsoever.

Following this outbreak, during which he was pummeled himself, his anger rose; so also did his blood sugar, and he calmed down. It has been found that anger releases adnnalin and this in turn raises the blood sugar, and once this is accomplished any tendency to antisocial conduct disappears.

A doctor tells us of a case of a woman who for years had hysterical attacks in which she felt herself extremely weak, incoherent and emotionally upset. She threw dishes at her husband. During these attacks she had a great desire for sweets. This meant that her blood sugar was low, and had she yielded to this desire, she could have sweetened up physically and emotionally. Many cases of domestic mishap are due to these sugarless attacks.

Physicians who have examined traffic violators have found that quite a few of them suffer from lack of sugar in the blood. When the sugar level is restored by eating chocolate the individual becomes more careful in his driving and accidents are reduced.

The lesson to be derived from this observation is never to drive a car when you are hungry. The hungry person is far from being a rational one, and this is because his blood sugar is too low. This type of sugarlessness is quite obvious and it is often corrected by eating something sweet.

The thing to remember is that each one of us may suffer from attacks of sugarlessness. It is during these attacks that we may behave boorishly, antisocially, and even criminally.

Jap Women Want to Keep Trousers

(By Wm. McCaffin, Writing From Tokyo, in Chicago News)

When demure Japanese women emerged from the medieval bondage of their homes to carry on war jobs vacated by their soldier menfolk, they adopted a garb as revolutionary as their action.

They exchanged their lovely but impractical kimonos, with bellowing sleeves and ankle length skirts, for trousers. Now that the war is over they do not want to give up their trousers.

At least, that is the opinion expressed to me by a number of Japanese women with whom I have talked in an effort to get a sampling of female thought in general.

They say: "Kimonos may be all right for parties and ceremonial occasions, but for every day practical convenience, give us trousers."

They have another reason for wishing to retain their trousers. They say they consider them significant as a symbol that "Japanese women have taken at least one small step on the road to emancipation in a country where women generally are regarded as men's chattel."

The war had another effect on the women of Japan also. In response to questions, women I have interviewed have admitted, with sighs that "morals have deteriorated here as everywhere in the world during the war."

And what are the evidence of this moral decline?

Well, for one thing—they blush—woman, whose place always has been in the home, has gone around a lot more in public with men. "At that," they say, sticking up for their Japanese sisters, "the morals of women in Japan have been a lot better than the morals of men."

REVOLUTION BREAKS OUT IN VENEZUELA
MORE PACKING PLANTS ENDORSE STRIKE ACTION

Deadlock Persists In Ford Motor Car Strike at Windsor

Packers' Master Agreement To Be Discussed Oct. 24

By The Canadian Press

As deadlock continued in the Ford Motor Company of Canada strike at Windsor, Ont., possibility of a United front among Canadian Packinghouse Workers in strike-threat demands for a 30-per-cent wage increase was strengthened when workers in two more packing plants voted in favor of strike action.

Workers in plants where the strike votes were taken last night—those in Hull, Que., and St. Boniface, Man.—

Already members of that Union in burns and company plants in Winnipeg, Regina, Prince Albert, Sask., Edmonton and Vancouver have endorsed strike action failing negotiation of a master agreement granting Union demands. The plants have been seized by the Dominion Government in an effort to avert a strike.

The master agreement will be discussed Oct. 24 when representatives of the three major packing companies and of the U. P. W. A. are scheduled to meet in Winnipeg with Mr. Justice S. E. Richards as mediator.

Talks Postponed.

Mr. Justice Richards announced yesterday that talks set for Oct. 22 between the Union and Burns and Company had been postponed two days and expanded to include Swift Canadian and Canada Packers, Ltd.

Meanwhile, the Trades and Labor Congress (A. F. L.) moved into the complicated packinghouse scene with the announcement in Ottawa that T. L. C officials were to confer today in Montreal to discuss methods of opening negotiations with several large packing plants in Quebec and in the Prairie provinces.

One Canadian strike is ended and a back-to-work movement was to start this morning. The strike of Drumheller Valley Coal Miners in protest against meat rationing reached its end last night and it is expected every striking miner in Western Canada will go back to his job within the next few days.

Jewelers to Meet.

Toronto Jewelry Workers, members of Local 33 of the Toronto Jewelry Workers Union (A. F. L). were to meet this morning to consider a new agreement with the manufacturers' section of the Canadian Jewelers' Association. Union spokesmen expect the Union will ratify the agreement, ending a two-week-old strike.

While the Labor situation brightened in some directions, the strike of 10,000 Ford workers at Windsor entered its 38th day.

Labor Minister Mitchell's report on this week's three-day talks between officials of the United Auto Workers of America (C. I. O.) and the Ford Company at a government-sponsored conference in Toronto was greeted by a suggestion that the government take over the big Windsor plant to break the deadlock.

In reply to the suggestion, made by C. C. F. Leader M. J. Coldwell, Mr. Mitchell said:

"I can only say to my honorable friend that if he has got the answer, God bless him."

Mr. Mitchell said he tried at the Toronto conference to reach a compromise settlement by proposing a checkoff of union dues revocable at any time by an employee but the idea "was not acceptable to their party." He added that give-and-take was lacking in both the Union and the Company.

Weather Forecast

Lake Superior — Saturday — Fresh westerly winds; partly cloudy and quite cool with light scattered showers or snowflurries.

Manitoba—Saturday— Fair and cool.

Company, Union Against Federal Govt. Proposals

Ottawa, Oct. 19 —(CP)—Labor Minister Mitchell said Thursday in the Commons he has asked the Ford Motor Co. of Canada and the United Automobile Workers (C.I.O.) to give further consideration to a compromise settlement proposed by the Dominion government and turned down by the company and union at the conference held at Toronto Wednesday in an effort to end the Windsor strike of 10,000 automobile workers.

Mr. Mitchell said he had proposed that a plan of collection of union dues by payroll deductions sought by the union be modified so any employee could revoke the deduction scheme on his behalf at any time.

The minister's report on the Toronto discussions touched off a series of comments from members in the House. He said he had warned the company and union that with maintenance workers kept out of the plant by pickets there was a danger with cold weather in the offing that serious damage would be caused the plant resulting in lengthy delays in resuming operations when the strike was settled.

Coldwell Suggests Controller.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader, suggested placing a government controller in charge of the plant. Mr. Mitchell said the dispute had already been the subject of conciliation efforts by some of the most capable men available. He made no direct answer on the proposal for a controller. "Willingness to come together and talk" was essential to a settlement.

Fred Rose (LP-Montreal-Cartier) asked whether Ford officials had said they would not accept a union shop because it was not provided by legislation and whether Hon. Leslie Blackwell, Acting Ontario Labor Minister, had intimated such legislation was under consideration. Mr. Mitchell said he was unable to answer.

Mr. Mitchell said he was hopeful that another meeting might be held in Ottawa to survey possibilities of a settlement.

In his statement Mr. Mitchell reviewed the disagreement between the company and union, dating back to April 1944.

DEBATE ON UNITED NATIONS CHARTER STARTS IN HOUSE

Quebec Liberal Claims Canada May Have to Adopt Compulsory Training If Accepted

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 19 — (CP)—Possibility that Canada may have to adopt compulsory military training in peacetime and in wartime as a signatory of the United Nations Charter was advanced yesterday in the Commons by L. R. Beaudoin, Liberil Member for the Vaudreuil-Soulanges Constituency of Quebec.

Mr. Beaudoin, 33-year-old Montreal lawyer and former radio news commentator, said it appeared inevitable that Canada would have to adopt compulsory training if the United States, Britain, France and other countries adopted such systems to fulfill their commitments to the United Nations Security organization.

He spoke in continued debate on the Charter after Solon Low, Social Credit leader, failed in an attempt to postpone adoption of the Charter at least until it had been fully explained to the people by members of the House during a month-long educational campaign over CBC networks.

Other speakers in the debate were M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader and a member of the Canadian delegation to San Francisco; Roch Pinard (L — Chambly Rouville); T. L. Church (PC — Toronto Broadview) Donald Gleming (PC —Toronto Eglinton) and Joseph Bradette (L — Cochrane).

Mr. Coldwell, calling for unanimous ratification of the Charter, said it left much to be desired but was the "highest common denominator attainable" at San Francisco.

Low in Opposition

Mr. Low, expressing opposition to adoption of the Charter in its present form, said it embodied features which are "flagrant violations of the most previous principles of democracy and human justice." He called for Canada to take the lead in questioning the whole basis of the security pact.

His amendment calling for postponement of the adoption was ruled out of order on the grounds it called for the expenditure of public money. His appeal of the speaker's decision was defeated by a vote of 155 to 9.

Mr. Beaudoin said he realized that in supposting adoption of the Charter he might be voting for universal peacetime military training and universal compulsory wartime service.

While he hoped such a system would never be necessary in Canada he realized that obligations toward keeping the peace might make it necessary.

23 TOP NAZIS FORMALLY SERVED WITH INDICTMENT

World's First Great War Criminals Trial Will Begin on November 20

Nuernberg, Oct. 19 —(AP)— The world's first Great War criminals trial of 24 high Nazis and German militarists and industrialists will begin in Nuernberg Nov. 20, the International Military Tribunal announced today.

The date for the beginning of the proceedings to establish responsibility for the Second World War and its cruelties was set by the tribunal shortly after the massive indictments presented to the court yesterday at its first sitting in Berlin had been served on 23 of the defendants here in the Nuernberg jail.

The 24th defendant, Martin Bormann, apparently still is at large and probably will be tried in absentia.

Copies Given Defendants.

The indictments were served on the defendants—politicians, militarists, industrialists and other functionaries in Hitler's Nazi regime—at 2:15 p.m. (8:15 a.m. E.S.T.).

Maj. Anthony Neave, a British lawyer, gave copies of the 23,000-word accusation to the men in their cells.

Although no definite date has been fixed for opening of the trial it was suggested today that Nov. 19 may be the opening day.

The final decision on a date will be made by the International Military Tribunal at Berlin in the next day or two, it was learned.

30 Days to Prepare Defence.

The indictments were served on Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Robert Ley, Wilhelm Keitel, Ernst Kaltenbrunner, Alfred Rosenberg, Hans Frank, Wilhelm Frick, Julius Streicher, Walther Funk, Hjalmar Schacht, Gustav Krupp Von Hohlen, Und Halbach, Karl Doenitz, Erich-Raeder, Baldur Von Schirach, Fritz Sauckel, Alfred Jodl, Franz Von Papen, Arthur Seyss-Inquart, Albert Speer, Constantin Von Neurath and Hans Fritsche.

The defendants have 30 days in which to prepare their defences.

The survivors of Hitler's regime, which sought at a cost estimated at 10,000,000 lives to dominate the world, were charged individually and collectively with conspiring to wage war—a crime against humanity.

In addition to the individuals, the prosecution will attempt to establish the responsibility of seven Nazi organizations — the German general staff and the High Command, the German Cabinet, the leadership corps of the Nazi party, the S. S. or Elite Guard, the Gestapo, the storm troopers and the S. D. or secret service.

DENIES ORDERS ISSUED TO KILL ALLIED SURVIVORS

U-Boat Captain Testifies at Trial of Another Commander

Hamburg, Oct. 19 — (AP) — Capt. Adalbert Schnee, German submarine commander who was connected closely with Grand Admiral Karl Doenitz, testified today that no orders ever were issued for U-boat officers to kill survivors of torpedoed ships.

Schnee, known to the Germans as "beautiful addy," was a witness before a British military court trying another U-boat commander, Heinz Eck, and four of his crew on charges of killing eight survivors of the British freighter Peleus, sunk in the South Atlantic in March of 1944.

Schnee asserted he never had heard of any submarine commander killing survivors.

Eck had sworn previously he was ordered to Berlin for a special briefing and told to take special precautions against leaving any trace of sunken ships. He is accused of ordering his crew to machine-gun and grenade survivors of the freighter.

British Expert Quotes Order.

Earlier it was testified that an order to U-boat commanders to abstain from attempts to save men from ships they sank was quoted by a British expert.

John C. Mossop of the British admiralty said the order was issued after a German U-boat had sunk the British ship Laconia off West Africa in 1942. The U-boat commander radioed instructions to help survivors of the Laconia, including 1,500 Italian prisoners of war and some British passengers. The radio exchanges were picked up by British receivers and the submarine was subsequently depth-charged.

'Choice Segment' Of Nazi General Staff Indicted

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

Berlin, Oct. 19 —(AP)— Only "a choice segment" of the German General Staff was indicted for the Nuernberg war crimes trial beenuse "the so-called General Staff is too nebulous an organization to be indicted," a spokesman for Justice Robert H. Jackson, chief United States prosecutor, said today.

"Other military leaders not named in the Nuernberg indictment will be tried for war crimes with specific geographic locations," the spokesman added.

Explaining why the General Staff was not indicted as a group as was done with the S. S. (Elite Guard) the spokesman said:

"There is really little similarity between the S. S. and what is generally referred to as the German Staff.

ARGENTINE ARMY PERMITS PERON TO RUN FOR PRES.

Stipulates That Govt. Must Remain Impartial Giving No Direct Aid To Peron

By LAURANCE F. STUNTZ

Buenos Aires, Oct. 19 —(AP)— Col. Juan Domingo Peron will be permitted by the army to run for president next April 7, a reliable source reported today as a stunned populace dazedly accepted his swift return to power.

But the army, patently the power behind Peron and President Farrell, was reported to have stipulated further that the government must remain impartial in the elections, giving no direct aid to Peron.

This source said the army, represented by the powerful Camp de Mayo garrison, had laid down conditions for Peron's return from custody to the dominating position in Argentina's violent politics.

Evidently intent upon retaining its iron grip on the government, the army was said to have vetoed any attempt to install either Hortensio Quijano or Armado Antille, both staunch Peron supporters, in the new cabinet. Quijano was interior minister and Antille was finance minister when Peron resigned Oct. 9 as war minister, labor minister and vice president under pressure from the Campo de Mayo group. Neither Quijano nor Antille appeared in the cabinet which was sworn in yesterday.

Streets Dominated.

This version would explain a number of puzzling circumstances: The presence in the capital, unmolested, of Admiral Hector Verengo Lima, a Peron appointment who served briefly in the past week as navy minister; and the fact that the army stood idly by and permitted the streets to be dominated by Peron demonstrators.

As for Gen. Eduardo Avalos, leader of the Oct. 9 movement who had taken Peron's post of war minister, one report said he had patched up his differences with the strong man after quitting the war ministry.

Posters hailing Peron as "the next president" were hung in shop windows throughout Buenos Aires.

Midnight brought an official end to the 24-hour general strike which had paralyzed the capital and left it in the hands of marching demonstrators — many of them youngsters below voting age who professed allegiance to Peron because their apprentice schools had been formed by him.

It was estimated the strike had been 95 per cent effective.

Rebel Garrison In Possession Of President's Home

Heavy Firing Heard During Morning in Caracas Suburb

Washington, Oct. 19 — (AP)—A revolution has broken out in Venezuela, centered at the capital, Caracas, the United States State Department has been informed.

The word reaching here through diplomatic channels is that rebellious forces from San Carlos barracks have taken possession of the residence of President General Isiah Medina Y. Angarita at Miraflores, suburb of Caracas.

Heavy firing was reported this morning, shortly after midnight.

There also was an apparently reliable report that the rebel garrison at San Carlos barracks had been given an ultimatum.

Troops loyal to the government, according to information reaching the State Department, were reported ready to march against the barracks.

(From Bogota, Colombia, the radio at Caracas was reported saying government actions against the rebels included suspension of constitutional guarantees last evening, immediately after the revolt started.)

Word reaching Washington is extremely scanty and not in all cases subject to confirmation from reliable sources at the scene.

Indications were that there is some confusion in Caracas, at least, and that this condition may extend to other parts of the country. The limits of the revolt, therefore, could not be precisely determined.

Nor was there authoritative data here on the issues involved. One official said that the fighting has nothing to do with the Argentine situation as far as is known in Washington.

Bogota, Columbia, Oct. 19. (AP) —The radio at Caracas, capital of Venezuela, reported that a rebellion had broken out in Venezuela and that "all armed forces remain loyal to the government except a very small minority" of officers.

Fragmentary and conflicting reports from the Caracas radio said the revolters seized the garrison at Miraflores, Caracas suburb, and the military school.

One broadcast said the rebels claimed to have the support of former President Gen. Eleazor Lopez Contreras one of the candidates in Venezuela's current presidential campaign but that this claim was not true.

A later Caracas broadcast then said the army was remaining loyal to President Isiah Medina y Angarita.

An announcer who said he was a speaker for the "Communist Legion" urged the public to accept orders only from Rodolfo Quintero, Communist Party leader.

S. A. LABOR PARTY TO WITHDRAW

Pretoria, South Africa, Oct. 19 —(Reuters) — The Labor Party of South Africa is withdrawing from the coalition government of the Union at the end of this month it was announced today. Walter B. Madeley, Labor party leader and Minister of Labor and Social Welfare, will resign at that time.

Prime Minister Jan C. Smuts' majority will remain substantial in the South Africa House.

LOVE FINDS A WAY

Washington, Oct. 19 — (AP)— Love laughs at red tape too. Frank Kraker, 28, of Cleveland, O., has the passport he needs for a trip back to Europe and his pretty Polish fiancee whom he met during the liberation of Buchenwald concentration camp in Germany. He spent a week in Washington before he could get the documents.

German Prisoners of War Changed Minds About Work After VE-Day

By GEORGE A. YAKULIC
(Canadian Press Correspondent)

Lethbridge, Alta., Oct. 19—(CP) —More than 6,000 of the 13,634 German prisoners of war at the Lethbridge camp are working, and many of the remainder would gladly welcome the opportunity to join working parties.

Those employed on labor projects are working on farms of southern Alberta and southern Manitoba and in forests of northern Alberta, Ontario and Quebec. They must actually work at least eight hours on the job.

Although many were unwilling to work in Canada during the war because they felt they would be helping the Dominion against Germany, most changed their tune when their country surrendered and majority of the men are anxious to go to work — to earn canteen credits and to get away from their barbed-wire enclosure at least temporarily.

Most working on labor projects are happy to be doing so and some told me they were worried about the program ending when the grain, potato and sugar beet harvest in finished.

"We have freedom here and can speak as we please without being afraid of the Gestapo or fanatical Nazis," a number of men told me. "There are still some of those stupid foods inside the camp even though their power in gone."

A group of captives who claimed they were skilled craftsmen in various building trades wanted to know whether there was any possibility of them being employed on construction of homes in Canada. "We see in the papers that you are short of carpenters and other tradesmen and we would be glad to do that kind of work."

Officials explain that in no instance is prisoner-of-war labor being used in competition against Canadian labor but only to supplement normal labor where there is a serious shortage.

English Country Hospital Becomes Leading Plastic Surgery Centre

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

East Grinstead, Sussex, Oct. 19 —(CP)— In this over-grown village an hour's drive south from London, a former country hospital is preparing for its war-won destiny as one of the world's leading plastic surgery centres.

Through the hands of the surgeons in the squat, red-brick Queen Victoria Hospital here, more than 5,000 men have passed during the war years. Many were but remnants of men.

They were "the burn cases," airmen seared from head to toe, sailors with ghastly, skeletal faces, soldiers rescued from flaming tanks. They spent months here, and finally emerged with bodies re-made and courage restored.

Hospital files show that in one section alone — aircrew — 82 per cent of terribly burned fliers were not only returned to active life but went back on flying duty. Operations were performed that gave thousands of men new noses, ears and jaws, grafted from living tissue taken from other parts of their bodies.

The centre was born shortly before the war, when the British Emergency Medical Service selected East Grinstead as a specialist hospital for plastic surgery.

Today, the original little building is surrounded by a fine R.C.A.F. wing, built and equipped at a cost of £60,000 ($270,000) by money raised in Canada, a large South African wing, and, now building, a £90,000 ($405,000) American wing.

All three wings now have been handed over as gifts to the hospital. The American wings, designed by hospital department heads, holds the most modern surgical theatres and equipment known to medicine and will be the main treatment centre.

Surgeon-in-charge of the centre throughout the war, and its presiding genius in peace, is Archibald McIndoe, 45-year-old New Zealander, and an acknowledged "great" of plastic surgery.

With a team of five assistants, Dr. McIndoe performed something like 12,500 plastic operations during six war years — an average of 2½ per patient. He scorns the idea of "miracle cures," but says no man has gone from here without new hope and the ability to make his way as "an economic citizen."

Camp Orderly Admits Beating Some Prisoners

Lueneburg, Germany, Oct. 19—(AP)—Hilde Lobauer testified Thursday at the war crimes trial of 45 concentration camp officials that she beat prisoners at Oswiecim with a broom handle but one was lashed herself by the S.S. "and taken away unconscious."

One of the spectators in the British military court was Lord Wright, chairman of the Allied War Crimes Commission, who arrived "to have a look at the Belsen trial" of Joef Kramer and his subordinates.

The Lobauer woman, 27, said she was sent to Oswiecin as a camp orderly after she refused to work in a munitions factory "where my mother was killed when I was very young."

Prosecutor T. M. Backhouse questioned her about previous testimony of drowning prisoners in a concentration camp ditch. The woman said there was not enough water.

"I suggest you amused yourself with women in the ditch," Mr. Backhouse said. "You had a long pole and amused yourself by pulling the women half way out and then pushing them back in."

"No, that is untrue," the S. S. guard replied.

Tipping Abolished In Dining Room Of British Commons

London, Oct. 19 — (CP) — The House of Commons dining room, one of Europe's finest pre-war eating establishments, felt the effects of a labor government today.

On behalf of His Majesty's government, Robert Morrison, chairman of the House Kitchen Committee, formally announced that tipping has been abolished and the price of meals reduced.

PICKS RASPBERRIES FROM GARDEN PATCH

Raspberries out of season appear to be a common occurrence during this autumn of unusual weather conditions with reports of the succulent garden fruit being picked having been received from many parts of the Quinte district.

The latest is that of Mrs. Elijah Horton, 5th concession of Thurlow, who has been picking raspberries from her garden patch. Recently Mrs. Horton displayed a few boxes of raspberries on the market and saw them rapidly picked up by eager customers.

CHILDREN HELPED BY ROTARY CLUB

Belleville Rotarians felt another glow of pride of achievement this week when the chairman of the club's crippled children committee, Mr. Charles Symons, announced that two children, who were almost hopelessly crippled, have been brought back to near perfect health through the ministrations of the club.

One young girl who was born with a large lump on her spine from which protruded a perfectly formed finger, movable at will, underwent a successful operation and the unnatural appendage was removed. Born with one leg deformed in the shape of a right angle, the little girl has had the limb straightened and she is now wearing a cast. Prospects for a 90 per cent cure are exceedingly bright, it is stated.

Another child, who was afflicted with infantile paralysis has undergone lengthy treatment in Toronto and returned home this week. She is said by doctors to be an almost 98 per cent cure.

SHINGLERS REQUESTED TO DISCONTINUE WORK

Shingling of a roof near midnight may fit in well at the convenience of the particular owner concerned but the rapid pounding of hammers was thought of differently by neighbors in the Bridge and John Street district Thursday night. Disturbed residents unable to put up with the noise any longer complained to police who asked that the shinglers await a more suitable time to continue their labors.

All in all police circles were comparatively quiet over the night although a local Front Street barber did pinch hit as a constable when he caught a peeping tom at work on Church Street. The observant barber, apparently minus his razor, forcibly detained the peeping tom until the arrival of the police who lodged him in the cell on a drunk charge.

DR. GRANT FRASER ATTENDS SHRINE CIRCUS

Dr. Grant Fraser, Madoc, Oriental Guide in Rameses Shrine Divan, is at the Maple Leaf Gardens, Toronto, assisting in the overseeing of Bob Morton's Shrine Circus. Profits from the show are divided between the Hospital for Sick Children and the Crippled Children's Fund.

2,500 Residents Take Advantage Of Shrine Clinic

Over twenty-five hundred residents of the city from all walks of life, took advantage of the free tuberculosis clinic sponsored by the Belleville and District Shrine Club in conjunction with the National Tuberculosis Association, here this week.

This figure in conjunction with 3,000 examinations conducted in factories of the city and 1,000 examinations of shop personnel brings a total of 6,500 examined for T.B. here this summer.

The clinic was made possible by finances derived from the annual sale of Christmas seals, a yearly social service work conducted by members of the Shrine Club here. The 1945 annual drive will start in the near future and envelopes with stamps enclosed are now being readied for the mails.

The clinic here was a decided success, Shrine officials stated today. "The response to the offer was more than gratifying and the Shrine Club is justifiably proud of its efforts in bringing this free service to the people of the city of Belleville," one stated.

The clinic was held in the Kiwanis Centre starting on Tuesday. It will conclude its activities today and will remain open till nine o'clock tonight, so there is still time for those who have not so, to take advantage of the free examination.

Examinations are conducted by medical and technical experts of the Department of Health.

Papers Demand Severe Punishment For War Criminals

Moscow, Oct. 19 — (AP)—Soviet newspapers printed at length today an account of the war crimes indictment handed up in Berlin yesterday against 24 top-ranking Nazis. Editorial writers uncompromisingly demanded the severest punishment for German war leaders.

"It is a cause of honor," said the government newspaper Izvestia, "to punish these monsters unsparingly."

The paper added that the Russian people consider the work before the Allied tribunal "a fulfillment of duty to millions of orphans, widows, injured, plundered and humiliated."

"The names of the 24 indicted are pronounced in our country with loathing and contempt," Izvestia declared. "We Soviet people will never forget the misdeeds of the Hitlerites on our soil. The suffering of the peaceful Soviet people, the blood of the guiltless murdered, the tears of mothers — all these will rise before the people when they read this indictment."

MISSING WIFE WALKS INTO COURTROOM

Elizabeth, N. J., Oct. 19 — (AP) —Philip J. Reiss of Plainfield, attended a court hearing on his application to have his wife declared legally dead. He said she had disappeared in October, 1935. Then he asked for a dismissal of the petition when Mrs. Reiss walked into the courtroom and explained she did not know her husband was looking for her until she read a newspaper notice of the application.

Obituary

MRS. SARAH E. HINCHLIFFE
(Wallbridge)

Frankford, Oct. 19 —(Special)—Mrs. Sarah E. Hinchliffe, widow of John Hinchliffe, died early this morning at the home of her son, Mr. James Hinchliffe, at Wallbridge in the 5th concession of Sidney Township. She was in failing health for some time.

The late Mrs. Hinchliffe had reached an advanced age, being in her 93rd year. She was born at Warkworth in Northumberland County, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kemp. The greater part of her life was passed in Sidney Township and she was highly esteemed. She was a member of the United Church at Wallbridge.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

LATE JAMES McAVOY
(Tyendinaga)

The funeral of James McAvoy, formerly of Tyendinaga Township, who died in Toronto on Oct. 17th., took place from the Corrigan and O'Brien Funeral Home, 30 Moira Street West, this Friday morning to the Holy Name of Mary Church at Marysville where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father R. J. Coyle, who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in the cemetery at Marysville.

LATE MRS. ELIZA M. FAGAN

The funeral of Mrs. Eliza M. Fagan, widow of Captain Joseph Fagan, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Thursday afternoon to St. Thomas' Church where the Burial Office was conducted by the rector, the Rev. Rural Dean A. Beauchamp Payne, who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in Belleville Cemetery.

The bearers were Jack Fenn, Ted Smith, Gordon Addy and William Walker, all of whom are grandsons of the deceased.

The late Mrs. Fagan was a charter member of Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 133 and the last rites of the order were conducted in the chapel at the funeral home by N.G. Mrs. Georgina Charlton, Vice Grand Miss Evelyn Frost and Chaplain Miss Phyllis Twiddy.

INFANT WOODCOCK

The infant daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Woodcock, 128 Foster Avenue, died last evening. The funeral will take place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, on Saturday.

Army Rejected 488 of Each 1,000 Men Examined

Ottawa, Oct. 19 — (CP)—Mental retardation and temperamental instability topped the reasons for rejections on medical grounds of prospective army personnel, it was disclosed today in a return tabled in the Commons for Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce (PC — Toronto Parkdale).

The army reported its total rejections were nearly 50 per cent —488 per 1,000 men examined. RCAF rejections were 20 per cent for aircrew and 15 per cent for ground crew. In the navy rejections were 10 per cent.

The army divided its rejection statistics into two periods. In the first—Jan. 1, 1942, to June 30, 1943 — rejections of general service personnel totalled 67,582 and amounted to 29.95 per cent. NRMA personnel rejections — Oct. 9, 1940, to June 30, 1943 — were 54,557, or 29.78 per cent.

In the second period — July 1, 1943, to May 31, 1945 — general service rejections were 63,519, or 40.5 per cent and NRMA rejections, 54,339 or 55.43.

A breakdown of reasons for the army rejections, per 1,000 men, showed: Mental retardation, 80.6; temperamental instability, 59.5; anxiety neurosis, 52.5; errors of refraction, 30.8; diseases of the middle ear, 17.7; malnutrition, 16.1; flat feet, 15.1, and hernia, 12.7.

The RCAF listed 27,973 rejections in the period August, 1940, to October, 1944, for aircrew and 27,498 for ground crew. In the aircrew applicants' defective vision accounted for 25 per cent, color vision 18 per cent, other eye conditions 8 per cent, and digestive disorders 4 per cent. In ground crew defective vision was responsible for 17 per cent, digestive disorders 13, heart conditions 6 and foot conditions 5.

The navy's rejections numbered 10,676, with eye conditions and defective color vision responsible for 2,242, heart conditions 1,126, and ear conditions 1,071.

VETERAN DANCES JIG ON 100th BIRTHDAY

Bradford, Pa., Oct. 19 — (AP)—White-bearded Erastus Rockwell Barton, United States Civil War veteran who astonished friends by dancing a jig on the dining-room table on his 100th birthday, died yesterday at the age of 102. He cast his first ballot for Abraham Lincoln and had voted in every election since.

Small Child Writes To Hospital Asking For Baby Sister

It is not all sorrow and sickness, medicine and flowers at the Belleville General Hospital. Occasionally a spot of humor arrives in the mail to brighten the lives of the staff.

For instance the other day, a hand, scribbled in a childish hand, with no name signed arrived at the desk of the administrator.

It read "Want a little baby for June . . Send June a baby girl, as she needs it".

The note was presumably written by a small child, who having been told that baby girls were available at the hospital promptly sat down and scribbled her order. The address was merely "Belleville General Hospital," and no postage had been affixed.

Pre-Fabricated Home Designed by Local Firm Inspected

Indication that the Department of Veterans Affairs is interested in the pre-fabricated house designed by Universal Moulded Products at Belleville as a possible means of easing the housing shortage being experienced by rehabilitated members of the armed services was seen here Thursday with the visit to the city of two officials of the above organization.

For five hours Thursday, Mr. Gordon Murchison, Director of Veterans Affairs and of the Soldiers' Settlement Land Act, and also G. L. McGee, chief engineer of the above department, inspected the model Manhard pre-fabricated house designed and built by the company. Following the inspection both men assured company officials they had been very favorably impressed by the possibilities of the pre-fabricated home.

Officials of Wartime Housing and heads of Canadian insurance underwriters have also been invited to inspect the pre-fabricated home and it is expected these men will visit the plant in the near future.

Designed by Col. W. E. Manhard consulting engineer at Universal Moulded Products, the pre-fabricated house which the company expects soon to go into production, is a tidy four-room bungalow completely furnished. The house was built in its entirely in the factory and then set up in sections on its present site just north of the plant on Sidney Street.

Residents of Belleville and district will be given the opportunity to inspect this modern innovation in housing when, starting on Monday of next week, the house will be open for inspection, it was stated today by company officials.

POLICE COURT

City police court was of short duration Friday morning as the majority of cases listed had been settled out of court with fines and costs paid. Only two or three cases were heard in court with several others being laid over until next week and two others dismissed.

William Ryan will spend the next ten days in jail following being found guilty on an intoxication count, while Richard Cottrell, O'Brien's Bridge, was found guilty on a second offence intoxication count and was accordingly fined $50 and costs and in default will spend one month in jail.

Charges Withdrawn.

Charges of careless driving against George Haggis and Dorian McAvoy were withdrawn at the request of the Crown when it was decided the matter was one for civil action.

Three cases of intoxication and two of disorderly conduct were settled out of court, the first three paying the conventional $13 with the accused paying $4.50 on the latter counts.

Suspended Sentence Given.

Three juvenile cases, one for theft of a motor car and the other two for joy riding, were heard in court. All three charges arose out of the same incident when the young boys took a motor car from a local parking lot and went joy riding. One year's suspended sentence was given in two of the cases, while the third was laid over until next week.

COMPANY, UNION

Willingness to give and take and a change of attitude on the part of both the company and union was necessary to a settlement.

Blackwell Thanked.

The Toronto conferences, which lasted three days, were called by Mr. Mitchell after consultation with Ontario government authorities. In his statement to the House Mr. Mitchell expressed appreciation to Hon. Leslie Blackwell, Acting Labor Minister, for his co-operation at the meetings.

"We acted in unison," Mr. Mitchell said.

Mr. Mitchell continued:

"The representatives of the union were very definite in their statement that the main requirements necessary to effect a settlement were (a) provision for a union shop whereby every employee would be required after employment to join the union and remain a member thereof as a condition of employment; (b) a check-off provision whereby union dues would be deducted from the pay cheques of employees and paid to the union and (c) a satisfactory decision on other questions of importance to the union.

Definite in Attitude.

"The representatives of the company were just as definite in their attitude which may be summed up as (a) they were not prepared to enter into negotiations for a new collective agreement until access to their plant was given to their officials and to office workers and until employees necessary for the proper maintenance of the power plant were returned to work and (b) they would not in any event grant a union shop of check-off or any variation of such union security provisions."

". . . We told them (the company and union representatives) that they had in their own hands the power to settle their differences and we urged upon them the importance of their doing so in the interests of all concerned, including the citizens of Windsor and the people of Canada generally. These representatives later reported to us that they had a very frank discussion but could not come to an agreement."

Thanks to the efforts of a number of women of the city, some order is beginning to take place out of the chaos of piles of clothing and footwear. The gifts of the city to the destitute people of Europe.

Huge orderly piles of men's, women's and childen's clothing are shaping up on the Armouries floor as the workers tirelessly sort the piles of variegated paparel.

Other donations are coming in hourly. People who forgot to pack their contributions or who were overlooked in the collection are bringing in cartons of clothing periodically.

The Armouries orderly phone rang nearly 200 times yesterday with requests for pick-ups of packages of clothing and boots and shoes which were overlooked.

There is still a tremendous lot of work to be done before the huge supply will be ready for shipment. Not only must the piles of apparel be sorted and placed in their different categories but in turn must be baled and labelled again for shipment overseas.

The committee under Jack V. White is working tirelessly in an effort to get the Belleville contribution ready for transportation as quickly as possibly.

New Gift Shop with Much Attractive Merchandise Opens for Business

Presenting a decidedly attractive appearance with its interior decor of soft shades of pink and light blue, Belleville's newest gift shop, will open for business tomorrow (Saturday) morning.

This new addition to the city's business roster is owned by Mr. Ted Schwab, former manager of the Lipson Department Store here and who is well known in business, sport, service club and other phases of city life.

The new shop is appropriately named "The Gift Shop" and an attractive sign with original artistic effects will proclaim the fact to the general public.

Located on Bridge Street East, the shop which formerly housed the business of Mr. Laurie Lewis, is so designed in its new interior to give a maximum of room to the clientele and yet provide plenty of space for the many attractive gifts which are even now on display.

Mr. Schwab, has left nothing undone to make his new shop one of the most attractive of its kind in the city and district. He has arranged his color motif so that gifts blend easily into the whole. There are no harsh contrasts, and the new fluorescent lighting subdues the whole into an eye-pleasing picture.

All kinds of gifts will be on display. Novelties, pictures, porcelain ware and china gifts will be in profusion. This department covers practically the entire phase of the gift business while at the rear of the new shop are the books and office supplies department..

Mr. Schwab extends a cordial invitation to his friends of the general public to browse around "The Gift Shop" on opening day.

Erection of Sports Arena As War Memorial Will Be Given Consideration

Appreciating the need in Belleville of a suitable sports arena containing an artificial ice plant, members of the local city council took initial steps toward such a project during committee meeting Thursday evening when a committee was appointed to investigate all angles of such a project.

It was recommended that the proposed structure be built as a memorial for members of the armed services who sacrificed their lives during the war. Aldermen Follwell, Wilbur, Clapp, Chamberlain and Armstrong with Mayor Frank S. Follwell, were appointed to the committee to investigate into the matter and make their report to council.

Full-Time Health Inspector

Approval of the city fathers for the employment of a full-time health inspector for this city was also seen in the recommendation that the Board of Health together with the City Comptroller be empowered to employ a full-time inspector. The city solicitor was instructed to draw a bylaw accordingly.

Following further discussion on the same topic the Mayor was given authoirty to appoint a member of council to sit on the Board of Health in his absence, this member to have power to act.

Step Toward City Planning

Acting upon a discussion which had been heard in a previous meeting of council a committee of Aldermen Follwell, Clapp, McDougall, Armstrong and Mayor Follwell was appointed to bring back a proposal for employing a town planning engineer to make a survey of the city of Belleville.

Fire protection for certain built up areas outside the city but within the townships of Thurlow and Sidney was discussed briefly with the city solicitor being asked to contact Fred J. Wilson and George McDonald, reeves of Sidney and Thurlow respectively, and to draw an agreement protecting certain areas in the two townships with fire protection.

Water Contracts

The Public Utilities Commission was requested to make no contract with adjoining municipalities for the supply of water without first submitting plans to council.

Under special property the sale of Lot 9, Hillside St., to F. S. and F. L. Pope, was declared void, the lot being recommended sold to Alfred A. McCoy, Church Street, for $25 with a one year building covenant.

Council concurred in a city of Sarnia resolution asking the provincial minister of agriculture to conduct a province-wide campaign for the elimination of starlings which were declared a public nuisance.

Prospective O.B.C. Student From Peru Takes 25 Years to Find Time to Attend

Some 25 years ago, Mr. Wilfred T. Stephenson, a citizen of Bolivia, South America, wrote to Mr. I. L. Moore, principal of the Ontario Business College, inquiring about courses in which he was interested. He was sent the information and also an order for books, and the regular business envelope. A short time ago Mr. Moore received the same order blank and envelope, which had been carefully preserved through the years, and a letter from Mr. Stephenson, who explained that he had been trying every year since 1920 to come to Belleville to attend O.B.C., but up to now had been unable to do so. He now hopes to be here to start his course by April, 1946. Mr. Stephenson a native of British Guiana is at present principal of a School of Basic English in Peru..

Although no paid advertising is done outside of Ontario word of the College has been spread throughout the hemisphere. Mr. Hartley Wallington, a student of the College many years ago and an employee of the transportation business in Bermuda, is largely responsible for advertising O.B.C. in the West Indies.

Mr. Stephenson is typical of the many students who come to Belleville from distant places to attend the O.B.C. Students are recorded from fourteen of the West Indian Islands from British Guiana, Dutch Guiana and Brazil in South America, Nigeria in West Africa, Panama, Bermuda and England, as well as eighteen of the United States, Newfoundland, and all provinces of Canada.

IN MEMORIAM

SIMMONS—In loving memory of my dear husband, Wallace Simmons, who left me suddenly on October 19th., 1939.

Only God alone knows the sorrow of one's heart, though it is an encouraging thought that however difficult life may be we are not living it alone; that above and beneath and around us are the resources of the Eternal Spirit, and that death is not the end. Till death takes me sweet memories of you dear Wallace will remain.

—Fondly remembered by wife, Victoria and children.

Conference Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writes

Quebec, Oct. 19 (CP)— Two young men, one 36 and the other 42, both bearing scars suffered in fighting in defence of their personal belief and both of lowly crisis, shared the spotlight of interest at the Quebec Food and Agriculture Organization conference.

They were M. Tanguy Prigent, Minister of Agriculture in the French Provisional Government, and Vasili Sergeev, Commisar for Foreign Trade in the Soviet Government. Both headed their respective delegations. M. Prigent, 36 years old and looking nearer 26, short, fresh faced with heavy black pompadour, was a peasant boy forced to leave school at the age of 12.

He educated himself by studying at night on his 20-acre farm and by the time war broke out was Deputy for Ministere and had been Mayor and Alderman of his native St. Jean Du Doight since 1935.

He served with the French army, was wounded, retreated to Vichy, voted against Petain and was twice arrested by the Gestapo but escaped and served two years as organizer and liaison officer with the resistance movement. At the time of invasion he was actively serving in the field with the Haquis. In September, 1944, General Charles Degaulle, Provisional President, made him Minister of Agriculture.

M. Pringent is Socialist, candidate in ministere for the general elections starting Sunday.

Gen. Degaulle gave him his own private plane to fly to the Quebec conference, sign the constitution of F.A.O. and return in time to close his campaign with two political meetings. His schedule called for an absence from France of only six days.

Vasili Sergeev is well-known in Canada and the United States. He is 42 and looks much younger. Although scarcely in his teens he fought in the revolution and suffered many wounds.

Soviet representative on the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration Council since its inception he has attended conferences in Montreal, Atlantic City and London and is always a popular international figure.

Short, stocky, with thinning fair hair, Sergeev is intensely secretive and serious about international affairs but is a convivial companion and was once a great sportsman.

At the conference here two tall companions constantly at his shoulder and towering over him at receptions and public gatherings were mistaken for bodyguards until it was learned they were delegates and high Soviet officials.

Some idea of the change in world conditions that would result in the F.A.O. achieves its goal of carrying efficient production methods to all the world was given by Conference Chairman L. B. Pearson, Canadian Ambassador to Washington when he said that in China it takes ten men to raise the necessary food to sustain eleven people while in Canada and the United States the same production is obtained by the labor of one or two men.

Life Underwriters Hear Speaker On "Ideas That Sell"

Discussing "Ideas that Sell", Mr. M. Castle Graham, publicity manager of the London Life Insurance Company, was guest speaker at the regular monthly meeting on Thursday of the Belleville Life Underwriters' Association which was held in the Y.M.C.A. with the newly-elected president, Mr. A. G. Stackhouse in the chair. Mr. Graham, a former secretary of the Life Underwriters Association of Canada, and with a background of extensive experience in insurance and publicity, presented in an interesting manner suggestions of great value to the individual underwriter.

Of special interest was the splendid contribution made to the program by guest artist, Mr. Rodney Sexsmith of Napanee, who favored the meeting with vocal solos. Mr. Sexsmith, a pupil of Mrs. (Judge) Madden, Napanee, who acted as accompanist for the young singer, possesses a remarkable voice of fine tonal qualities and expressive power. He was heard in the popular "Bluebird of Happiness" and in the negro spiritual "Joshua Fit the Battle of Jericho" in which he showed complete mastery of his art. Mrs. Madden's sympathetic accompaniment made a perfect background for the singer. In presenting the appreciation of the audience, Mr. F. Kelly and Mr. B. Joyce expressed the sentiments of the gathering in the hope that Mr. Sexsmith would again be heard in Belleville.

Chairman Appointed

During the business of the meeting, Mr. F. Creeggan was appointed chairman of the membership committee. Mr. Don Williams, secretary, had the pleasure of introducing three new members, Mr. Clarence Whiteman, Napanee, Mr. Eric Cooper, Belleville and Mr. Harold Baker, Stirling. Greetings were extended on behalf of the Association through Mr. P. C. McGuire, to Mr. Gordon Jeffery who has recently resumed his duties with the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company at Trenton after being discharged from the armed forces following a distinguished career with the R.C.A.F.

Mr. Stackhouse, who had introduced the guest artists called upon Mr. F. Creeggan of the London Life Insurance Co., group responsible for the excellent program, to introduce the speaker of the day, Mr. Graham. Mr. Creeggan referred to Mr. Graham's work as first paid secretary of the Life Underwriters' Association, and to his ability as publicist, the executive position which he holds with the London Life.

Stresses Organized Effort

Mr. Graham paid tribute to the accomplishments of the Life Underwriters' Association both of the United States and Canada stressing the value of organized effort as revealed in the development of salesmanship in recent years. In introducing his subject "Ideas that Sell" Mr. Graham described the new marvels of science, their effect on the householder of the future, and showed how the life underwriter can make it possible for men and women to enjoy these new advantages in years to come.

"We endeavour to show people" he said, "how to adjust their budgets and to refinance themselves so that they may not only live comfortably now, enjoying the fine things that modern innovations will present, but with the knowledge that their families will continue to enjoy these things in after years. In other words we are selling a way of living available to those even in most moderate circumstances."

Developing the thought that life insurance is eventually paid for by somebody, Mr. Graham said that other forms of insurance were "if" insurance, but life insurance was "when" insurance providing not for eventualities but for the inevitabilities of death and old age. Mr. Graham advanced many interesting sales ideas and concluded his talk with the reminder that no more effort is required to hit the bullseye than to hit the target—it was just a matter of aim.

Thanks Expressed

Mr. A. L. Burke, immediate past president of the Association expressed the thanks of the members to Mr. Graham, Mr. Stackhouse conveying appreciation to the speaker and the visiting artists. Reference was made to the illness of a popular member, Mr. Vernon Weir, who was to have been associated with Mr. Creeggan in arranging their company's program.

A new feature of the meeting was the appearance of a sergeant-at-arms, Mr. J. J. Hibbard, acting in this capacity for Thursday's meeting and displaying an alarming originality in discovering occasions which warranted fines.

Soviet Russia Moving Livestock

By LARRY ALLEN

Breslau, Poland, Oct. 19 (AP) —Soviet Russia is moving livestock and practically everything else detachable to the east from this section of Poland.

Along highways leading eastward there are long convoys of Russian repatriates guarded by soldiers. Many trucks and carts are loaded with furniture and have horses and cattle hitched to the rear.

One sees another type of cargo travelling westward upon the railways—carloads of anti-aircraft guns and ammunition.

In this once great city of the greater German Reich, Poles are gradually assuming control of administrative affairs subject to Soviet approval.

It is estimated there are 100,000 Red Army soldiers in the Breslau sector. Approximately 200,000 Germans who have not yet been repatriated to Germany are still here. Poles number only from 40,000 to 60,000.

The city—renamed Wrachlaw by the Poles—is in a state of semi-confusion. Gunfire sporadically rattles through the streets at night and there is intrigue by day.

After dark soldiers armed with machine-guns and rifles guard the Hotel Monpol, only hostelry in town capable of receiving guests. The Poles go home early, for many Germans are believed to retain arms and shootings and killings are frequent.

Lands and Forests Magazine

Members of the Department of Lands and Forests of the Province of Ontario now have an added inspiration in their work with the publication of "Sylva," the Lands and Forests Review, which has just made its appearance in a very attractive form. The magazine is published by and for the members to be a link between the diverse activities carried on by the department and to bring about a closer understanding and mutual sympathy between the men in the field and their co-workers in the home office.

As indicated in a foreword, the task of the Department is to preserve and direct the use of the greatest single source of wealth and recreation in this Province. "From this source come the houses in which we live, the tables off which we eat, the cellophane our cigarettes are packaged in, even dresses women wear and the very paper on which these words are printed. Without wood man's modern material world would be crippled; without proper preservation and careful use our resources of timber might be plundered and diseased until they disappeared."

The magazine appeals to the members of the department service to make "the little job" as important as it is and it hopes to have its members contribute to its pages all kinds of interesting reading material.

Premier Drew has written a message and sees the publication as a means of improving the position of the Civil Servants of the Provincial Government. He finds it bringing about this objective by stress on co-operation and understanding between the various members to the eventual benefit of the people. The Minister, the Hon. W. G. Thompson, points out the greatness of the trust reposed in the department, the management for the people of Ontario Crown land, forest and water resources. "A competent and enthusiastic personnel is of paramount importance in all our undertakings," he says. "While money and materials are requisite, they must be placed in the hands of intelligent, informed and progressive people, resolved to work together harmoniously to the common end. Your publication, which proposes to assist in bringing this about, has my unqualified good wishes for success."

"Sylva" among its features in this first volume numbers informative articles, has an intimate touch and carries pictorial features in reproduction of paintings of Ontario forest and lake scenery besides paying a tribute to the poets and artists of the nation.

This publication cannot fail to inspire its readers, the staff of the department, with the magnitude of the heritage this Province enjoys in these resources of forests and lands and their part in preserving and expanding this heritage.

The Bicycle

Though the bicycle is not a new means of travel, it occupies more than ever a place in the life of workers and especially of school pupils. Something of the importance of this development can be seen around any school building in towns and cities, while in the larger places there are often hundreds of the machines parked in the space appointed by the autohrities. It is a proof of the fact that the public likes to ride. There are motorcars, there are busses, there are in many cities street cars, and everywhere there are bicycles. Some idea how many students use this means of getting to and from school may be gathered when school is in and the collections of machines can be seen neatly parked. If all the bikes were cars, metropolitan parking garages could not hold them, so great is the bicycle in popularity.

During the war the bicycle became more and more a necessary vehicle for workers of essential industry to get to the areas about war production plants. The boys and girls too developed an interest in this means of conveyance in these same years. Everyone has seen the evidences of this day after day.

This indicates the perennial interest in the "bike." The two-wheeler is definitely in popular favor with young and older sections of the people. Even the high peak of favor in the past, at the turn of the century, could not rival the interest of today in the pedalling method of transportation for work, education and pleasure.

About homes this has brought to the fore, among new questions, the problem of a place to house the bicycle. The basement is not convenient, so most often the boy and girl park their bicycles beside the family car in the garage however narrow this may be. If there is more than one bicycle in the family, the problem becomes very complicated. The New York Times suggests on this question that perhaps Father will solve it by having his garage widened or a new garage built sufficiently wide to accommodate son's and daughter's two-wheelers. The Times also notes on the question of safety that "the major problem of the situation is the lack of bicycle paths" and points out that in other countries where the bicycle is common as anyone knows from having read of the place bicycles occupy in Europe, and where cars are scarce, bicycle paths have been built on a nation-wide scale.

Some bicycle riders have caused anxiety at times by their manner of riding but in general boys and girls and adults have followed the obligation upon them to use care in riding especially on highways, main roads and crowded streets. With the greater use of cars that is to come, bicycle riders will naturally be called to pay the closest attention to traffic regulations.

Impersonation

Of the many strange tales of espionage counter-espionage and psychological warfare to come out of the war, few are more bizarre than that of Lieutenant Clifton James of the Royal Army Pay Corps, says The New York Sun. A former actor, he was serving as entertainment officer at Leicester early in 1944, when the audience took him for Field Marshal Montgomery. An officer of the military intelligence saw potentialities in the situation. Would it not be possible, he wondered, to fool the Germans about D-Day if Marshal Montgomery were seen far from his normal post for such an attack? So Lieutenant James became Marshal Montgomery, even to the donning of a false finger in place of one he had lost. He carefully studied the Marshal's speech and mannerisms and when he was received with ostentatious formalities by Field Marshal Sir Henry Maitland Wilson in Algiers, German agents quickly sent word to Berlin that Montgomery was away from his invasion base. Records show that the Normandy landings caught the Germans by surprise. On the basis of present information it would appear that this was a trick that worked and, in working, greatly affected the course of the war.

"Woodland Harvest"

A man goes to the woods these days—as he ought. He goes to gather autumn's harvest. He gleans it from atop a mossy boulder or by scuffing through leaf-strewn woodland paths. He watches the flaming maples as they sweep across the sky, or the birch and beechnut preening brown and yellow leaves in a gentle breeze, says an editorial in the Christian Science Monitor.

He closes his eyes and cocks an ear to the chuckle of a tiny stream as it swaps jokes with a speckled trout. He hears a chipmunk scold a gray squirrel for stealing a choice nut. He listens to the winter song of the chickadee or the wind strumming the Aeolian harp of the pines.

Strolling along the wooded trails, he follows the beaten path of a rabbit or stops to examine an autumn flower. And, as he goes, he picks a bouquet of colored leaves brightened with a sprig of goldenrod and a cluster of berries — and, of course, he'll fill it out with a variety of asters. Then, those hickory nuts or butternuts or chestnuts—his foraging wouldn't be complete until he had stuffed his pockets with them.

FAILURE

Failure is a teacher stern
Telling youth there's much to learn,

Saying, more in grief than rage:
"Look beyond the printed page!"

Writing with an acid pen:
"Wrong you were, but try again!"

Tutoring the courageous few
How to tell the false from true.

Whispering that genius makes
Progress out of past mistakes.

Crying, pleading: "Ten times ten,
Wrong you've been, but try again!"

OCT. 19TH, 1925

During the 60th anniversary of the forming of Christ Church Parish a tablet was dedicated to the memory of members of the parish who lost their lives in the Great War. The tablet which is on the reredos to the left of the altar is the gift of the choir. The dedication was conducted by the Rev. Dr. Blagrave of Peterboro, a former Rector of the parish, assisted by the Rev. A. L. Geen. A tablet on the north side of the altar was also dedicated, having reference to the large beautiful chancel window. The lower part of the reredos hides the original inscription on the window and to overcome this the tablet bears the inscription as follows: "The windows above the altar were erected in memory of Lewis Wallbridge, Hannah Caroline Wallbridge and William Holloway Wallbridge.

The Family Allowances

(Ottawa Journal Editorial)

In the light of the new Dominion budget, the family allowances proposition put on the statute books by the Mackenzie King Government, just previous to the recent general election, looms up burning brightly.

Mr. Isley's budget offers a cut of $300,000,000 in taxes.

The family allowance bill provides just about $300,000,000 increase in taxes.

In other words, but for the family allowance bill," Mr. Ilsley would have been able to announce a cut of $600,000,000 in taxes instead of half that.

Now—how should we figure about this?

Should we think that a cut of three hundred million in taxes, plus a three hundred million bonus on babies is better for Canada than a six hundred million cut in taxes? Or should we prefer six hundred million cut in taxes in this time of national uncertainty, with the baby bonus to be put on later when we know where we are?

Only, we think the baby bonus just previous to the general election was a cute election move by Ms. King.

DELAY IN CROP HARVESTING

Toronto, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Heavy rainfall during the latter half of September delayed corn and late crop harvesting through Ontario and interfered seriously with fall plowing and the sowing of fall wheat, the Ontario Department of Agriculture said in its monthly crop report yesterday.

READY FOR CROSSING

Sydney, N.S., Oct. 19 —(CP)— With his one-man "crew" signed on and everything shipshape, 29-year-old Mark Charlton yesterday launched his barrel vessel that he hopes will carry him across the Atlantic. He plans to set out in his over-size barrel over the weekend, with Peter Olfen, 62-year-old Norwegian sailmaker as his first mate.

70,000 Tons Of Foodstuffs On Way to Islanders

Batavia, Java, Oct. 19—(AP)— Seventy thousand tons of desperately needed foodstuffs and clothing purchased from the United States army in the Southwest Pacific are on the way for the relief of East Indian islanders, Dr. J. E. Van Hoogstraten, director of Economic Affairs of the Netherlands East Indies, announced today.

"Tragically, 14 ships and 30,000 tons of cargo are bound by strikes in Australia inspired by communists," Dr. Hoogstraten said.

He estimated 4,000,000 Indonesians have died of starvation under Japanese rule. He said they now have sufficient rice crops to last until Dec. 15, but thereafter great quantities of food must be imported.

He said liberty ships now were being loaded at Finschaven, Biak and Hollandia, and the first steamship would arrive in Batavia Monday.

The Dutch are negotiating to take over the United States Naval base at Hollandia with its stores of food, clothing and valuable equipment, Dr. Hoogstraten said.

DENOUNCE BILLS FOR CONTROL

Washington, Oct. 19 —(AP)— Two scientists who helped harness atomic energy denounced administration bills for its control today as an invitation to the world to get into an atomic bomb race. This description came from Dr. Herold Urey of Chicago and Dr. H. J. Curtis of Oak Ridge, Tenn.

MILL OWNER GIVES LIST

Munich, Oct. 19 —(AP)— A German paper mill owner, peeved because the Nazis wouldn't give him enough business, was responsible for discovery of the master list of an estimated 10,000,000 Nazi party members and their records, it was disclosed last night.

Nazi Bestiality Shown in Allied Indictments

In killing more than 10,000,000 European civilians and captured war prisoners, the German used —among other methods:

Shooting, hanging, gassing, starving, beating, cremating, disembowelling, "experimental" surgery, freezing in tubs of water, branding with hot irons, burying alive.

Children: On the Eastern front, they were buried alive; thrown into flames, stabbed with bayonets; poisoned. Their blood was extracted for use of the German army. In Lwow, the Germans killed 3,000 children in two months; at Tiberda, they annihilated 500 children suffering from tuberculosis of the bone.

Jews: "Of the 9,800,000 Jews who lived in the parts of Europe under Nazi domination, it is conservatively estimated that 5,700,000 have disappeared, most of them deliberately put to death by Nazi conspirators."

They were among the estimates 5,500,000 persons exterminated in the Maidanek, and Auschwitz concentration camps; Allied prisoners were murdered in Normandy and in the Ardeness; were starved and beaten in numerous prison camps.

Labor Department Says Unemployment Becoming Serious

Ottawa, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Unemployment conditions of serious proportions are current in about half Canada's leading industrial centres and an early start should be made on some post-war projects, the Labor Department said last night.

Centres which the department described as facing "a serious unemployment problem" were Quebec City, Windsor, Ont., Vancouver, Montreal, Winnipeg, Calgary, Victoria and the industrial area of Cape Breton, N.S.

The department said it was urging an early start on the bridging of the Strait of Canso, between Cape Breton Island and the Nova Scotia mainland, to relieve "the serious labor situation in Cape Breton."

In its review of the Canadian employment situation as a whole, the department said the number of available jobs at Oct. 9 was 145,600, a reduction of 10,500 from two weeks previous, and the number of unplaced workers was 133,000, an increase of 9,000. The latest figures were in line with a constant narrowing of the margin between jobs and workers prevalent for some weeks.

Demands for 4,200 bush workers and large numbers of men for base metal and gold mines during the two-week period failed to halt the downward trend of labor demand. A speed-up in demobilization of the forces was said to be partially responsible for the increase in the number of unemployed.

While many of the larger centres has more available workers than jobs, vacancies still exceed job-seekers in Toronto, Halifax and Ottawa.

Requirements of manufacturers in Quebec had slowed down and lay-offs had increased the number of unemployed. Ontario reported little fluctuation in the number of unfilled jobs but the number of unplaced workers had risen sharply.

Early Solution Is Predicted

Toronto, Oct. 19 (CP)— Police revealed Thursday that investigations in to the death of Josiah Martin, 55-year-old cattle buyer whose blanket-wrapped body was found just off the Queen Elizabeth Highway near Oakville eight days ago, show death was not due to foul play. An early solution of the mystery was predicted.

Provincial and Toronto police have learned, it was said, that Martin collapsed while in the company of two or three other persons. His frightened companions wrapped him in blankets which were in his automobile and placed him under a tree near the highway.

Sought for questioning are a woman and a man. Martin's automobile also is the subject of a search.

Martin, a cattleman from the district of Elmira, in Western Ontario, was last seen at the Toronto stockyards the day before discovery of his body. He was said to have approximately $900 on his person.

KEEP THE BELT ON THE FLYWHEEL

Fear naturally induces one or the other reaction: fight or flight. You instinctively wish to remove or destroy what you fear or else run away from it. A child or other sensitive person may faint or become too weak to move when startled or suddenly confronted by some strange or menacing thing. A good many people who are neither sissies nor cowards become faint or ill at the mere sight of bleeding even though it be no more than is good for the slight wound.

Anxiety and worry are milder forms of fear—say chronic rather than acute fear, or diluted fear.

Fear is the principal cause of surgical shock and traumatic shock (trauma means injury or wound). Every physician knows how important it is to allay fear and to avoid frightening or alarming the patient, no matter what the nature of the illness may be. Every surgeon takes routine steps to insulate the patient when preparing for operation. It is to this insulation or anoci-association (we'll leave that to Webster) that we owe the remarkable freedom from shock in modern surgery.

The symptoms, bodily changes, alterations in appearance and disturbances of various bodily functions are the same in anxiety or worry and shock, but in anxiety or worry these manifestations are more likely to be misinterpreted or attributed to causes which really have nothing to do with the patient's condition. I say patient's condition—unfortunately the majority of victims of anxiety or worry choose to be their own doctors if they do anything at all about it.

Some people prefer to call it just care or responsibility—but it is still anxiety, worry or fear, by whatever pleasant name you please to disguise it.

You fear whatever you think may harm you, and the thought of being harmed arouses your anger. Purpose of this anger is to remove, drive away or frighten off, or to destroy the menace! This is not just my view of the matter. I refer you to Darwin's "Expression of the Emotions in Man and Animals" and Cannon's "Bodily Changes in Pain, Hunger, Fear and Rage," books obtainable in any public library, if they are not in your own.

Physiologically the fear-rage-fight-or-flight-offensive-defensive emotion causes increased secretion of adrenin (adrenin (ardrenal gland hormone) into the blood. The adrenin causes liberation of glycogen (animal starch, blood sugar, stored fuel) from the liver into the blood and quick oxidation of this fuel for conversion into muscular energy.

If there is sufficient muscular activity, say fighting, running away or just running hither and thither or punching the bag or doing a round or two of shadow boxing or dancing a jig or taking a brisk walk, to use the energy the emotion liberates, you suffer little bodily harm. On the other hand if you just sit there and take it in gentlemanly or ladylike fashion, the effect is like that of racing your engine with the clutch disengaged or throwing the belt off the flywheel. It is bound to damage your heart, your arteries, your n—— no, no I must not say that, let's say instead your disposition.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Two Near-Sighted Parents

If two near-sighted people marry are their children likely to inherit near-sightedness?

(M. R. W).

Answer—Yes. The normal wife of a near-sighted husband may have some myopic (near-sighted) sons, but no near-sighted daughters, but the daughters may transmit near-sightedness to their sons, not to their daughters. At least this is the observation of geneticists.

Bursitis

Please let me know what bursitis is. There is great pain in the shoulder. (A. L. G.)

Answer—You put it mildly. A bursa is a pad or sac, perhaps between a tendon and a bony prominence. Such pads or sacs are found in various places—for instance under the knee cap. One just under tip of shoulder is often affected and causes painful stiff shoulder. Excellent treatment in many cases is puncture or double puncture of the bursa and drainage or irrigation. Best relief for the pain is daily application of diathermy.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is shoddy?

"Shoddy," which is found in the 17th century Yorkshire dialect, is of unknown origin. The compilers of the Oxford dictionary suppose it to be related to "shed" in the sense of "separating" or "sloughing."

Originally the term was applied to the shreds or waste incident to the manufacture of woolen fabrics. "Shoddy" became the generic name of low-grade woolen cloth made of used wool or the worked-up waste of woolen or worsted goods. Old clothes made of long-fibred wool are collected, by ragmen, "deviled," or unraveled by machinery, mixed with new wool and made into "shoddy."

Although the term is generally associated with a low grade of woolen cloth, many pieces of clothing made entirely of shoddy wool are very attractive and durable.

The U. S. Department of Agriculture says it does not follow that a piece of goods should be called shoddy merely because it contains a small percentage of shoddy wool. Some of the finest overcoats contain shoddy.

Many states have passed laws forbidding the use of shoddy for certain specified purposes. The Pennsylvania legislature passed a law prohibiting the use of shoddy in making or renovating mattresses, pillows, bolsters, comfortables, cushions or upholstered furniture, on the grounds it was dangerous to health. In 1926 the Supreme Court of the United States declared this act unconstitutional, asserting that the danger in using shoddy could be eliminated by sterilization and that to prohibit the use of sterilized shoddy was arbitrary and unlawful.

During the Civil War "shoddy" acquired the meaning of anything inferior or adulterated. The term was particularly associated with the inferior clothing made for the army by profiteering contractors.

In the second series of "The Biglow Papers," which began to appear in 1864, James Russell Lowell wrote:

> I call it shoddy,
> A thing, sez he, won't cover > soul nor body,
> I like the plain all wool of > common sense,
> That warns you now and will
> a twelvemonth hence.

Madoc Section Of W.M.S. Holds 13th Annual Rally

Madoc (Special)—The thirteenth Annual Rally of Madoc Section of the Women's Missionary Society was held in Cooper recently and the theme of the rally, "The Family Crusade for Christ" was used in the worship service conducted by Hazzard's Auxiliary. Mrs. S. Moorcroft sang a solo, The Crusaders' Hymn. Mrs. Patton, speaking from John 12: 17-22, where Christ prays for His followers, very fittingly spoke from the Crusaders' standpoint.

Miss Frances Harris gave Echoes of School for Leaders at Whitby, urging all to "Come, taste and see—the beauty, the inspiration received from gifted speakers who were there to teach and discuss. You are passing up the finest holiday obtainable — come, taste and see."

Greetings from Cooper were received from Mrs. Geo. Harris, who assured the Rally of a hearty welcome, deeming it a great honor for Cooper to have the privilege of entertaining the Madoc Section. Mrs. Cadigan replying reminded the ladies of the pleasure which was theirs in the beautiful drives with trees arrayed in their gayest dress, under a glowing autumn sun, and also the inspiration which they received, to carry back to their Auxiliaries.

Retiring President Lauded

Mrs. Barnett, in moving a vote of thanks to Mrs. Empey, the retiring Sectional President, spoke of her consecration as a W. M. S. worker and one who has given of herself unstintingly. Mrs. Dafoe introduced the guest speakers, Mrs. E. Thomas and Miss C. Chappell of Toronto, Mrs. A. D. Way, Picton and Mrs. Spafford, Trenton, the Presbyterial President.

Mrs. Spafford asked the audience to get behind the Crusade for Christ Movement. The church must touch a power it has never touched before, she asserted. She then conducted a Work Forum with questions to each Auxiliary represented, and amid much discussion a very clear insight into the work was given.

The Hooper Memorial Fund, amounting to $325.00 will be used to send literature to China, Africa and India, a work which was very dear to Mrs. Hooper.

Good Reading Important

Mrs. E. Thomas, Literature Secretary of the Toronto Conference Branch, considered the literature department in very good hands, when Mrs. McCreary gave her report. Mrs. Thomas, quoting Emily post,

"Books are keys to wisdom's doors,
Books are gates to lands of pleasure,
Books are paths that upward trend
Books are friends, come let us read."

Continuing, Mrs. Thomas stated "the reconstruction program must have a plan based on principles of truth and justice. For Christians, Christ is the only Arbiter, the only Architect. We church members cannot, in ignorance, just believe. We must be intelligent. And the sourse—readintelligent. And the source—reading will portray shallow minds. A smattering of knowledge makes life interesting, but it is limited. Genuine knowledge can show people what knowledge is. We have a maximum standard, as well as a medium, which sets the pace which makes the W.M.S. a power in the world. Let each one of us shape our reading to tomorrow's world," concluded the speaker.

Memorial Service Held

A very impressive Memorial Service was conducted under Eldorado and Union Auxiliary, by Mrs. Empey and Mrs. Cecil Blackburn. Flowers were placed in remembrance of each deceased member as their names were read. Those who have served so faithfully are not soon forgotten, but are treasured in the memories of all and in the foundation laid in the work they have finished. Mrs. Geo. Palmer sang, "The Beautiful Garden of Prayer." A duet contributed by Mrs. Fred Irwin and Mrs. Will Rollins was much enjoyed.

At noon a fine dinner was enjoyed, with delicious food and tables attractively arranged were served by the ladies of Cooper. In the afternoon Mrs. A. D. Way, the Presbyterial Temperance Secretary, brought a very timely report, encouraging all to strive to work, to keep informed, to pray, for the furtherance of God's work.

1945 Crucial Year in History

Miss Constance Chappell, returned Missionary from Japan, and now Candidate Secretary for the Dominions Board, spoke on "Re-establishment of Friendship with Japan." "We are living in the most momentous year," said the speaker. "In 10 to 20 years, when we look back, 1945 we will see it as the most crucial year in world history. VE Day, VJ Day. How could it be otherwise? The post war period! But it is more than that, it is a new era. The atomic era. It is a symbol of life in general, almost too terrible to contemplate. It is also the era of reopening doors. In Japan we have 64 years of missionary history. Christian service in Japan will be difficult to reestablish."

Reports were received from the Secretaries of Associate Helpers, Mrs. N. Broad, Baby Bands, Mrs. C. Atton and Mission Bands, Mrs. H. Harrison. These were presented with enthusiasm and much interest shown.

The exhibit of Literature, Mrs. McCreary, of Baby Bands, Mrs. Atton and of Mission Bands, Mrs. Harrison and Miss Annie Holmes were much appreciated.

The service of song throughout the day was spiritually uplifting and added much to the enjoyment and consecration of the day.

To Buy Lantern Slides

At the morning and afternoon Offerings, Mrs. Patton and Mrs. Harris led the dedication service. Afterwards it was voted to use the surplus from this fund for lantern slides, to be sent to Miss Coultes at Maynooth. Mrs. F. J. Nickle, the Sectional President, presided most graciously at all sessions. And to her sincerity and vivaciousness goes much of the credit for a very interesting rally.

Rev. Mr. Patton, in closing, gave a message on the Crusades. "We must each ask ourselves, 'what is my part in this great Crusade?' Re-dedicate your lives to Christ and His service. The fields are white to the harvest, but they cannot be garnered in unless you and I do our part."

With the Benediction a very profitable day in the history of Madoc Section of the W. M. S. was consummated.

Troops Used To Study Climate

By JACK BRAYLEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 18 —(CP)— Canada is continuing defensive experiments on her unguarded northern fringes and speculation here today was that a new cold weather scheme, announced yesterday, has approval of the permanent joint Canada-United States Defence Board.

At the same time it was learned from official sources that a United States military mission would accompany 200 Canadian specialists making a 3,000-mile trek — called Muskox — across the top of Canada beginning at Churchill, Man., Feb. 1.

The expedition, concentrating at Camp Shilo, Man., for training Nov. 1, will cover northern wastes to Fort Simpson and then proceed down the Alaskan Highway to Edmonton completing the trip about May 1. War conditions will be simulated throughout.

The expedition will include scientists, meteorologists and medical men and will be supplied by an air train. It will travel in snowmobiles and study the effects of intense cold on fuel, rations, ammunition, clothing and most important of all—the troops. The R.C.A.F. will study supply problems under similar conditions.

It is possible that at some later date a full-scale Arctic manoeuvre, involving several thousand men, may be held with the information gathered from the projected expedition and previous experiments being brought into practical use.

Late winter experiments of similar type were held in British Columbia and Saskatchewan but a greater number of men were involved. The previous tests, called Eskimo and Polar Bear, left some problems — especially that of Arctic transportation — unsolved. So experiments will be continued, especially in the matter of perfecting snowmobile equipment.

Mrs. Peter Laughlin, Deseronto, was the recent guest of her son, Keith Laughlin and Mrs. Laughlin, of this city.

Mr. and Mrs. R. L. Wyatt are in Toronto, attending the Chiropractic Convention there.

Miss Barbara Flurey, of this city, was a guest last week of her uncle and aunt, Mr. and Mrs. William Reeks, "Gulmarg", Waupoos Island.

Friends and relatives will be pleased to learn that Mr. and Mrs. George Butcher, (nee Merle Wannamaker), who have been laboring in South Africa as missionaries for the past nine years, will arrive in the city sometime Friday or Saturday.

Arthur Duby will be heard singing several solos over CHEX, Peterborough, on the Children's Story hour from 9 to 9.30 on Saturday morning of this week. He will be accompanied by Mr. Bill Navin. This is not a new adventure for Arthur as he has sung from CKWS Kingston, several times and also took part in CHEX broadcast that was staged from the Capitol Theatre, early this Spring.

A miscellaneous shower was held last night for Miss Dorothy Lazenby at the home of Miss Jean Vickers, Grier Street, by Mrs. T. J. McAuley, Miss Thelma Schlievert and Miss Jean Vickers. During the evening the guests made a combination snapshot and autograph album for the guest of honor, who is leaving town, following her marriage. The guests consulted the Ouija board, also. The tea table was centred with a silver basket of fruit and lighted candles. Mrs. McAuley presided at the table. Miss Thelma Schlievert served. Mrs. Betty Hastie read the girls' teacups. Miss Lazenby received many lovely gifts for which she expressed her since appreciation.

Missionaries Tell Of Work in India

On Tuesday and Wednesday evenings, at the Wesleyan Methodist Church, the members and friends of the W. M. S. heard two missionaries, Rev. and Mrs. J. L. Landrey.

They have just returned from an eight-year term in the mission field in India. They have three sons, Mark, 8 years of age, Paul, 6 years old and Jerald, age two years. Mrs. Landrey is a Canadian, her home being in Iroquois, Ontario.

Both evenings after short opening exercises Rev. and Mrs. Landrey thrilled their listeners with true stories of their experiences, as messengers of the cross to this foreign land.

The following were some of the interesting statistics given such as ninety per cent of India's population live in villages; there is one doctor to 9,000 people and two and one-half million children die annually before five years of age.

Rev. Landrey also gave a brief outline of their pioneer work in several districts.

Mrs. Landrey explained how different the missionary work is now that the governments have sponsored day schools for children in some areas. It leaves the missionaries free to do more and more personal work. For many months of the year, they take their tent and housekeeping equipment and go from village to village in the jungles, living among the natives and telling them the story of Christianity.

An appeal was made for funds for foreign missions, with splendid results.

Many beautiful and interesting curios were displayed and explained by the missionaries.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

Winnipeg, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Seventeen - year - old Armand Proulx last night was sentenced by Mr. Justice Dysart to be hanged Dec. 29 for the murder of pretty Barbara Smith, 15, in a darkened archery field in suburban St. Boniface last July 28, after an assize court jury deliberated for 3 hours before returning a verdict of guilty, with recommendation for leniency because of the youth's low mentality.

RAWDON

L.A.C. and Mrs. P. White Honored

Rawdon. —On Monday evening, October 15, the Mount Pleasant people and several visitors gathered at Mount Pleasant United Church and tendered LAC. Percy White and his bride, a shower. Percy was married in June and has been stationed in Prince Edward Island, is now enjoying furlough with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. E. White.

Rev. T. F. Townsend was master of ceremonies and he with Mrs. Townsend led in a round of community singing using "Church in the Wildwood", and other selections.

Miss Doris Sine read "The Perfect Housekeeper", Mrs. Edgar McKeown sang "Smilin' Through" with Mrs. John Holmes as accompanist. Mrs. Sid Demorest read a poem on "Friendship". Mrs. Will Jeffs delighted with a guitar selection and a vocal number.

Rev. and Mrs. Townsend contributed a vocal duet and the latter gave a reading.

Mrs. Arthur Phillips read a humorous poem. The Misses Lois Weaver and Ruth Rose with Mrs. Ken Weaver as accompanist, rendered a vocal duet.

Mrs. Percy MacMullen recited "Wives" by special request.

Percy and Helen were given seats of honor. Mr. Don Johnson read an address on behalf of by Burton Sharp, Ross Jeffs, those present and this was signed George Young, Mac Sharp, Don Johnson, Harvey Couch and Angus Johnston.

Mr. James Hoard made the presentation of a purse of money and a few gifts from the relatives.

Percy and Helen both graciously thanked their friends for the pleasant evening arranged in their honor and when they are settled in their new home at Brantford, they hope to purchase a piece of furniture as a remembrance of the occasion.

Women's Activities

CENTENARY W.M.S.

On Wednesday, October 17, the W.M.S. meeting was held at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Dave Thrasher. The President, Mrs. Roy Thrasher was in charge.

A special feature of the meeting was the presentation of a life membership certificate and pin, to one of the society's most honored members, Mrs. W. Ray. Mrs. Fred Aikens read an address of appreciation of the outstanding contribution of Mrs. Ray's life and service in the community.

Mrs. G. Avory and Mrs. M. Nobes were appointed delegates to the Sectional Rally at Mount Pleasant. Rev. Mr. McCallum gave some information on the much discussed Jap deportation question.

Mrs. Thrasher served dainty refreshments and a social half hour was enjoyed.

MARMORA I.O.D.E.

The regular meeting of Marmora Chapter I.O.D.E. was held on October 16, at the home of Mrs. Gordon Scobie, Deloro, and the Regent, Mrs. C. Bradley, presided. The secretary read a letter from the skipper of the ship, "Glenbrook", adopted by the Marmora Branch of the I.O.D.E., in which he thanked the members for their recent parcel. He mentioned that his crew was changing each day but that he didn't expect his ship would be disbanded very soon. The members are preparing a Christmas parcel for next month.

Mrs. W. A. Shannon read a most touching article on "An European looks at Canada".

It was moved that the sum of $50 be donated to assist in the expenses of the banquet for the ex-service personnel to be held in November.

The next meeting will be held on Nov. 1, at the home of Miss Reta Deason, with the hostesses, Mrs. Floyd Loveless and Miss Anne Paquet.

THOMASBURG W.M.S.

The Women's Missionary Society of Thomasburg United Church held their October meeting at the home of Mrs. Fred Porter in the afternoon of October 9.

The President, Mrs. J. E. Bateman presided.

A delegate was chosen to attend the Presbyterial Rally to be held at Cooper.

Mrs. George Walker conducted the program. A poem "Thanksgiving" was read by Mrs. Harold Morton. Mrs. A. A. Richardson gave a reading entitled "Do We Thank Our Father". Mrs. B. Heywood introduced the new study book on Africa.

Watermelon was enjoyed and a social half hour spent.

A hearty vote of thanks was extended to the hostess for her kind hospitality in opening her home for this meeting.

CENTENARY W.A.

Mrs. Dave Thrasher opened her home on Wednesday for the October meeting of the W.A. with a large attendance. The President, Mrs. Harry Roblin, occupied the chair.

Letters were read from Mrs. J. Sargent and Mrs. F. Radford expressing appreciation of kindness shown them during illness. Mrs. Edmonson, Mrs. Kelly and Mrs. J. Ray also thanked the ladies for kindness, and cards sent to them.

Plans were made for a community supper to be held in the near future.

LADIES' AUXILIARY CANADIAN LEGION

The Ladies' Auxiliary to the Canadian Legion held their regular monthly meeting in the Sacco Rooms last night. At the conclusion of the business a social evening was enjoyed with several games of Bingo. Refreshments were served by the Social Committee.

ST. ANDREW'S W.M.S.

Members and friends of the Women's Missionary Society of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, assembled in the Church hall on Tuesday evening, October 6, for the Thanksgiving Thank-offering meeting. The President, Mrs. Baragar, presided and Miss Frieda Mathews, Toronto, was guest speaker. A duet, "Beautiful Isle of Somewhere", was sung by Mrs. Barlow and Mrs. Mantle, which provided a lovely prelude to Miss Matthews' address, which stressed the need of missions in India and China. Though the work had been interrupted during the war years, it is being taken up again.

Following the meeting a social half hour was spent.

WEDDINGS

WHITTARD—BROOM

On Wednesday, Sept. 5, at the Priory Church, Christchurch, Hants, England, the wedding took place of Gunner R. J. (Bud) Whittard, Canadian Army, son of Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Whittard, Toronto, (formerly of Belleville), and Miss Nancy Mildred Broom, youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. E. B. Broom, of 6 Hillingdon Cottages, Burton Rd., Christchurch, Hants, England. Rev. Canon Gay officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was attired in a white satin gown with train and veil, and headdddress of lilies, and carried a bouqust of deep red carnations.

The bride was attended by four bridesmaids, Miss Sylvia Barrow and Miss Olive Broom, nieces of the bride, and Miss Gladys Pounds and Miss Jean Turner. They wore gowns of blue taffeta and satin, with headdresses to match, and carried bouquets of mixed asters.

As the bride entered the church the organist played Mendelssohn's Wedding March. On leaving the church the bride was presented with two horseshoes by Brian Broom and Peter Stapleton, nephew and cousin.

The bride's gift to the bridegroom was a cheque and the bridegroom's gift to the bride was a cabinet of silver. The gifts to the bridesmaids were silver bracelets.

The reception was held at the home of the bride's parents, where thirty guests were present.

The future home of Mr. and Mrs. Whittard will be 13 Mount Noel Avenue, Toronto, Ont.

Hints on Keeping Cheese

Cheese must be kept in a cool place. High temperatures cause some of the fat to melt and escape from the cheese. It must also be kept from dampness as this will cause mould. But it is essential that the natural moisture be retained.

The best place to keep cheese is in the refrigerator or a very cool cupboard, free from dampness and it should be kept well covered to prevent drying. To preserve the flavor and texture of a small piece of cut cheese for a few days, a wrapping of waxed paper is sufficient. A wide-mouthed jar with screw top is an excellent container if the cheese must be kept longer. A piece of paper moistened with vinegar and cut to fit into the bottom of the jar helps to prevent mould if it is to be kept for any length of time.

A large wedge or a small cheese may be wrapped in a cloth moistened with vinegar and water using 2 tablespoons vinegar to 1 cup cold water. Dampen the cloth once a week with the vinegar solution.

Processed cheeses are best stored in the refrigerator and left in the package in which the cheese was purchased.

To prevent waste scraps of cheese may be grated and stored in a covered jar ready to use in cooking.

Indictment Blames High Ranking Nazis and Associates With Brutal Slaying of 10 Million Persons

Basically Accused of Gigantic "Plan or Conspiracy" to Rule Germany and Conquer Other Lands

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Oct. 19 — (AP)— The Allied Powers indicted 24 German leaders and six Nazi organizations Thursday on charges of starting the world's greatest war and committing history's most horrible mass crimes of murder, torture, devastation and hatred. The leaders named are former key men in Adolf Hitler's government and top generals and admirals of the German High Command.

Basically they are accused of a gigantic "plan or conspiracy," dating from 1921, to rule Germany and conquer other lands they wanted. Their strategy: treachery and terror first, finally a deliberate, aggressive war.

The 25,000-word accusation was drawn for representation to the Four-Power War Crimes Court at Berlin. It is an unprecedented document; it sums up in cold legal form Allied fury over Nazi outrages, and it forces the men accused of responsibility to answer for their acts.

Recital of Horrors

The Nazis and their High Command associates are blamed officially for the brutal slaughter of about 10,000,000 helpless persons, civilians and prisoners of war.

About 4,000,000 were slain at Oswiecim concentration camp alone, the indictment says, and another 1,500,000 in notorious Maidenak.

Of 9,600,000 Jews who came under domination in and out of Germany, the document asserts, 5,700,000 disappeared, "most of them deliberately put to death by Nazi conspirators."

1. Of torturing civilians to obtain information,
2. Of putting civilians under "protective arrest" in the "most unhealthy and inhumane conditions",
3. Of mass murders of defenceless people by gassing and shooting, of incredibly cruel "scientific" experiments on women.
4. Of drawing the blood of children,
5. Of shooting hostages, illtreating and murdering war prisoners, and
6. Of plundering or wiping out by wholesale destruction the cities and towns of lands they occupied.

Projected Trial

The indictment furnished the basis for projected trial of German Nazi and military leaders by the Anglo-American-French-Soviet Military Tribunal at Nuernberg, Germany. It was drawn up by prosecutors of the Four Allied nations and released simultaneously in the Allied capitals and in Germany.

The 24 men named as defendants were the highest in Adolf Hitler's Nazi government to be taken alive. Among them are Hermann Goering, Rudolf Hess, Joachim Von Ribbentrop, Robert Ley, all key Hitler officials, Generals Wilhelm Keitel and Alfred Jodl; Admirals Karl Doenitz and Eric Raeder; industrialist Gustav Krupp Von Bohlen Und Halbach; financier Hjalmar Schacht.

Against most of them the indictment makes four sweeping, general accusations:

1. Crimes against peace in starting the war;
2. War crimes in violation of the accepted laws of war;
3. Crimes against humanity which includes the Jewish persecutions, and
4. Conspiring together to commit these crimes.

Organizations Indicted

Organizations indicted are Hitler's old Reich cabinet, the German General Staff and High Command, the leadership corps of the Nazi party, the S. S. organization (a police and military outfit), the Gestapo (secret police), and the S. A. (a police and military training organization).

The previously announced intention of the prosecution is to prove these to be criminal organizations so that any person legally found to be a member would be convicted automatically as a criminal. Thus the prosecutors hope to shorten the trials of hundreds, perhaps thousands, of Germans yet to be indicted.

Three aims are attributed to the Nazis:

1. To destroy the Treaty of Versailles and its restrictions on German military power,
2. To regain territories occupied by "racial Germans" such as the Sudetenland, and
3. To acquire "living space" in Europe and elsewhere.

"By reason of all the foregoing," the indictment states, "the defendants with divers other persons, are guilty of common plan or conspiracy for the accomplishment of crimes against peace; of a conspiracy to commit crimes against humanity in the course of preparation for war and in the course of prosecution of the war; and of a conspiracy to commit war crimes not only against the armed forces of their enemies but also against non-belligerent civilian population."

Country by Country

The indictment takes up these war crimes and crimes against humanity country by country, including the pre-war persecutions of Christians, Jews and political opponents of the Nazis in Germany itself.

The indictment says the Germans carted off to slave labor many millions of citizens from the occupied countries and forced prisoners of war into work contrary to the provisions of the Geneva Convention. France suffered heavily in this way and the number of Russian citizens deported to slavery was put at about 4,000,000.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Oct. 18 (CP)—First pilot to land on Kelanang airfield, Malaya, after its liberation was 31-year-old Wing Cmdr. F. M. Smith of Edmonton. He led in an R. A. F. Spitfire formation from the deck of an aircraft carrier.

Smith is a veteran Spitfire pilot, with a "bag" of five German aircraft destroyed in the air and several damaged. He joined the R.A.F. in Jan. 1936 and is now on his fourth operational tour.

He helped cover the evacuation from Dunkerque, was a flight commander during the Battle of Britain, and saw service in North Africa and India.

Among the 1,700 former prisoners who left Singapore for Britain aboard the S.S. Togelberg was a Canadian who had been interned in 17 Japanese prison camps—Sgt. Harley Monsell of St. Lambert, Que.

Monsell, an R.C.A.F. pilot with No. 605 R.A.F. squadron was taken prisoner in Java in 1942. He and some others attempted to escape by boat at the last moment but were captured.

Among Canadians who were in Changi jail, Singapore, with Monsell and who also left with him was PO. W. M. Lockwood of Renfrew, Ont.

A father and son combination turned up at the Torquay Repat Depot, and dad found himself his son's commanding officer for the first time—in the airforce, anyway.

In charge of all ground crew transients at the Depot is Flt. Lt. R. B. Donovan of Toronto. One day another Donovan arrived "on strength," and it was son Pat, 20-year-old LAC. wireless mechanic.

For 18 months young Pat serviced wireless gear in the Canadian heavy bomber group in Yorkshire. "We managed to meet now and then in Yorkshire, but this is the first time Dad's ever had any authority over me," Pat boasted.

Donovan junior still tells Donovan senior to "get some time in." He beat his father overseas by a matter of three months.

Canadians on the continent usually find themselves outnumbered at the leave centres by swarms of G. I.'s and Tommies. Result: In Brussels they have founded a rendezvous exclusively for men in brown and blue who can show a Canada flash.

Furthermore, it is at the Rue de Science home of the late Albert Lowenstein, mystery man of international finance during the 1920s. At least, it's in the basement.

Upstairs there is a snooty club. Forget it. Into a dungeon scarcely 10 feet square, at the base of a narrow twisting stairway, the Canadians gather nightly. The theme-song is "Alouette," and they carry on the old, old arguments of Ottawa vs Winnipeg, and Bluenoses vs British Columbians.

U.S. Proposal Considered Too High by Attlee

Washington, Oct. 19. (AP) — The issue of additional Jewish immigration to Arab-dominated Palestine simmered in Washington again today in the wake of these rapidly-consecutive events:

1.—President Truman disclosed that Prime Minister Attlee considers too high an American proposal that 100,000 homeless European Jews be admitted to Palestine immediately.

2.—State Secretary Byrnes asserted the United States would not support any final decision on the Palestine matter "without full consultation with both Jews and Arabs".

3.—Mr. Byrnes made public a letter President Roosevelt wrote one week before his death to King Ibn Saud of Saudi Arabia, promising he would take no action "hostile to the Arab people".

4.—The Syrian Legation issued a 2,000-word letter Ibn Saud wrote to Mr. Roosevelt March 10, saying that Allied support of Zionism would mean "Fires of War" and bloodshed between Arabs and Jews.

Mr. Roosevelt met Ibn Saud aboard a warship in the Suez Canal following the Yalta Big Three meeting last February. Later Ibn Saud brought Saudi Arabia into the war on the Allied side. The exchange of letters on Palestine followed.

25 Are Killed By Explosion At Sub Base

La Pallice, France, Oct. 19 — (Reuters)— At least 25 prisoners, including 12 German prisoners of war, were dead and more than 100 seriously injured following an explosion and fire last night at this submarine base which left hundreds homeless in the area.

The explosion occurred as German prisoners were loading hand grenades into trucks under the direction of French engineers. The collision of two grenades caused a series of blasts, wrecking the concrete building where the loading was being done and setting fire to nearby railway installations.

Enormous blocks of concrete were hurled into the air by the force of the blast and a heavy pall of smoke hung over the entire area this morning as rescue workers dug in ruins in search of dead or injured as yet unaccounted for.

ON TRIAL FOR MURDER

Winnipeg, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Cpl. Frederick D. McCallum, 37, former Royal Canadian Air Force service policeman, went on trial yesterday on a charge of murdering his wife, Ileen May, the night of Sept. 8. He appeared before Mr. Justice Major and an assizes jury.

500,000 Members Of Peron's Group Leave Their Work

Buenos Aires, Oct. 18 —(AP) —A country-wide strike by 500,000 members of the General Confederation of Workers who supported Col. Juan Peron, former Vice President, in a new surge of power, today brought nearly to a stop Argentina's industrial and commercial activity.

At the same time a high source said the Argentine High Seas fleet had moved out of its base at Puerto Belgrano, 500 miles south of Buenos Aires.

Destination of the fleet was unknown, but Admiral Hector Vernengo Lima, a leader of the movement which ousted Peron Oct. 9, was in turn thrown out of office yesterday in the political upheaval which saw Peron returned to a position of dominance.

Peron himself, after forcing the formation of a cabinet of his friends, hailed the strike as celebrating "a day of glory for the workers."

Thousands of idle workers took to the streets in Buenos Aires today and conducted demonstrations on Peron's behalf.

The Railroad Union said train traffic was stopped throughout the country. Buenos Aires transportation facilities were described as "completely paralyzed."

Streets cars, subways and buses and taxis were stopped in the capital.

Light, water and telephone service continued, however.

President Farrell tossed aside a "cabinet of notables" submitted by Juan Alvarez as Attorney General, threw out Alvarez himself, reinstated several members of his deposed cabinet, ousted admiral Hector Vernengo Lima, a leader of the Oct. 9 movement against Peron, as Navy Minister, and before a vast crowd hailed Peron as "a man who knows how to win your hearts."

The newspaper la Prensa said that shortly before midnight the gunboats Independencia and Rosario and the minesweeper Drummond of the Argentine Navy left the capital's port. It printed an unconfirmed report that Vernengo Lima and other High Navy chiefs were aboard the Drummond.

Judgment Reserved On Dairy's Appeal

Toronto, Oct. 19. (CP) —Mr. Justice George A. Urquhart has reserved judgment on an application by Crown Dairy of Kingston for a writ ordering the City of Kingston to issue a building permit for remodelling of the dairy's premises.

The city had refused to issue the permit on the grounds that the dairy was in a zone in which only residences and retail stores could be constructed.

The dairy company argued that it was entitled to the permit because the dairy was in its present location before the zoning bylaw was passed in December, 1941, and that a ruling by the Court of Appeal stated that the dairy could remodel its premises but could not extend its plant to an adjoining property it had purchased.

J. R. Cartwright, K.C., of Toronto, represented the Dairy, and H. E. Manning, K.C., of Toronto, and T. J. Rigney, K.C., of Kingston, appeared for the city of Kingston.

REMANDED ONE WEEK

Simcoe, Oct. 19 —(CP)— Charged with armed bank robbery, Dominic Minnille of Ottawa and Gail Hastings, Gerald Blackburn and William Vance of Windsor, were remanded one more week in custody when they appeared today before Magistrate H. P. Innes for their third time.

The four men are charged with the armed robbery of the Imperial Bank at Langton. Only $8,000 of the loot has been recovered.

CRASHED ON BORDER

London (CP)—Flt. Sgt. A. Sutherland, a Mustang pilot, was flung from one county when his plane crashed. The plane came down at Limpley Stoke, on the border between Wiltshire and Somerset. Sutherland was unhurt.

Asks 100,000 Jews Be Admitted Into Palestine

Washington, Oct. 19 (AP) — President Truman said today he had asked Prime Minister Attlee to admit 100,000 Jews to Palestine and that the matter is still under consideration by Britain.

The President made this disclosure at a news conference at which he also said no additional "Big Three" meeting is contemplated to settle the stalemate which developed from the London council of Foreign Ministers.

The President said he did not want to push the British authorities unduly in their consideration of further Jewish immigration to Palestine. He said that Prime Minister Attlee did not want to admit as many as 100,000 immigrants.

The whole matter, he said, still is being considered and there was rather voluminous correspondence between the two governments some time ago.

The President also told reporters that European rehabilitation and relief will have to be continued through UNRRA unless the United States wants to assume the whole burden.

He made this comment when asked about criticism of UNRRA by members of Congress, recently returned from Europe.

RESCUED FROM FLAMING LINER

Calcutta, Oct. 17 —(CP)— A Southeast Asia Command communique said today 820 released prisoners of war and internees en route from Hong Kong to Madras were rescued from the liner Takliwa, which went aground in flames during heavy weather in the Bay of Bengal eysterday.

REHABILITATION OF VETERANS GREATEST TASK FACING CANADA; DO YOUR BIT BY BUYING BONDS

Victory

Square Deal Must be Given Those Who Sacrificed for Us

New needs have come with Victory. New tasks that must be accomplished to make possible the kind of peace for Canada we all want.

The Dominion Government is asking Canadians to invest in the Ninth Victory Loan because Canada needs the loan of its people's savings to help finance the great national tasks that are confronting the nation.

The City of Belleville and the county of Hastings have been asked to raise $3,600,000 toward the Ninth Victory Loan.

In the words of a once popular war song, "We did it before, and we can do it again."

And it is imperative to the future progress of Canada that it is done.

Achieve Three Aims

Canadians are reminded that in buying Victory Bonds in the Ninth Loan they are achieving three important things. They will provide discharged service men and women with the opportunity to readjust themselves. They will be doing their duty as Canadians as much as those gallant men and women did in answering their country's call, and they will be making the safest investment for their money.

Victory Bonds are backed by all the resources of the Dominion. They are as sound as Canada itself and pay a good rate of interest.

Rehabilitation of returned veterans is a problem of paramount importance now that the boys and girls who fought over there are arriving home by the thousands.

Needs Practical Help

Glory may be fine, but those returning from the hell of Europe need a lot of practical things for a new start. The Victory Loan dollars of Canadians are needed to provide clothing allowances, grants, transportation, training for skilled jobs, help in establishing themselves in business and farming.

Money alone can never fully repay those who fought for freedom—but money— and what money can buy—will do much to give them the opportunity of a fresh start in life.

Many of those who have come back are so badly handicapped that their earning power has been impaired. These must be given care and hospitalization and training in some form of gainful employment suited to their abilities.

Those, who went direct into service from schools, must not be forced into immediate competition with those who are thoroughly experienced. They must be given the training and the knowledge required by modern conditions.

Families Must be Protected

Help must be given those desiring to go into some line of work other than their former vocations. And the wives and children of all who made the supreme sacrifice must be adequately provided for.

Canada's extensive rehabilitation plans are now in operation. Already thousands have returned to civilian life and have benefited from the training—the maintenance grants, the social security provisions offered. But this goal can be attained only through the full and hearty support of every Canadian.

A fresh start in life for those who fought for Canada and civilization is a debt Canadians owe and should gladly pay. Every one in Belleville can help do it by making their Victory Bond investments bigger than before.

Only by Buying Bonds Can We Express Our Appreciation

The escutcheon of the County of Hastings is bright with the deeds of its war achievements.

It has never been sullied. Today it glows brighter than ever with the added lustre of the glorious deeds of her gallant sons and daughters now returning to the land and county they love—and of those who rest in a soil that will be forever Canada.

Emblazoned on that escutcheon are the deeds of those of the "grandest county in Ontario" who by money, efforts and unsung deeds did their bit on the less glorious but just as necessary Home Front.

Task of War Over

For the gallant soldiers, sailors and airmen, the tasks of war are over. They are returning to the land they love, flushed with hard-earned victory, to pick up the threads of life where they were broken and to enjoy the rich heritage for which they so nobly fought.

For those of us who were not privileged to serve "over there" there is still a job to be done. Our money is needed just as urgently now as it was when the days were dark, and the forces of good were embattled to the death, with disaster lurking in the thunderous clouds of war.

In the eight Victory Loans which Canadians have subscribed to during the war just finished. The City of Belleville and the County of Hastings nobly did their part. There is no reason to anticipate anything other than a repetition of those splendid records made in previous loans.

Over-Subscription Wanted

The Hastings County General Committee feels as confident that this district, as it did in the former loans, will once more rise to the heights and not only subscribe its allotted quota of $3,600,000 but generously over-subscribe as well.

The future of Hastings County and the Dominion is bright. Now that victory is ours and peace has returned to the world, Canadians with other peoples of the world have a definite obligation to those who suffered from the holocaust of war.

Many Hastings County boys returned home maimed and wounded. They must be given the best medical care and treatment. Thousands of others must be clothed and fed and paid while they learn new peace-time trades and professions.

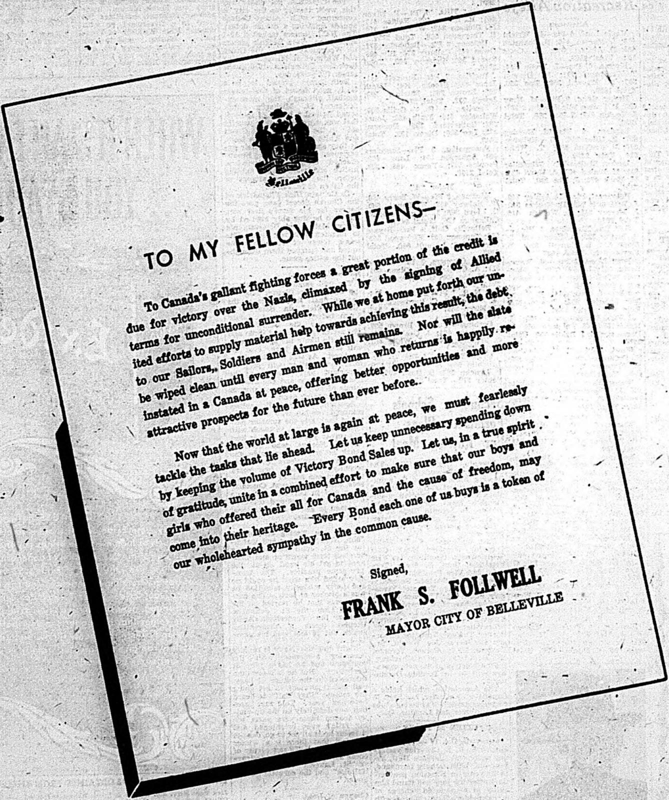
A SPECIAL MESSAGE FROM "MAYOR FRANK FOLLWELL" TO THE CITIZENS OF BELLEVILLE AND DISTRICT!

MAYOR FRANK S. FOLLWELL



TO MY FELLOW CITIZENS—

To Canada's gallant fighting forces a great portion of the credit is due for victory over the Nazis, climaxed by the signing of Allied terms for unconditional surrender. While we at home put forth our united efforts to supply material help towards achieving this result, the debt to our Sailors, Soldiers and Airmen still remains. Nor will the slate be wiped clean until every man and woman who returns is happily reinstated in a Canada at peace, offering better opportunities and more attractive prospects for the future than ever before.

Now that the world at large is again at peace, we must fearlessly tackle the tasks that lie ahead. Let us keep unnecessary spending down by keeping the volume of Victory Bond Sales up. Let us, in a true spirit of gratitude, unite in a combined effort to make sure that our boys and girls who offered their all for Canada and the cause of freedom, may come into their heritage. Every Bond each one of us buys is a token of our wholehearted sympathy in the common cause.

Signed,

FRANK S. FOLLWELL

MAYOR CITY OF BELLEVILLE

College Football Opens Sat. After Five-Year Wartime Layoff and All Teams Good

Many Fans of Belleville District Will Likely Take in Game at Kingston

By The Canadian Press

Revival of intercollegiate football after a five-year wartime hiatus lends a welcome "Joe College" touch to the eastern Canadian gridiron scene this week as nine other senior teams swing into the decisive second half of their first peacetime schedule since 1939.

Off to a tardy start because college officials didn't know until August whether permission to operate in 1945 could be obtained, four familiar rah-rah teams—University of Western Ontario Mustangs, Queen's University, University of Toronto and McGill—open an abbreviated schedule Saturday with games in Montreal and Kingston, Ont.

Because of the late getaway there'll be no protracted post-season play-offs this season but the setting should be just as colorful as ever and competition just as keen. It's practically unanimous that Mustangs must be favored to repeat their title triumph of 1939 in the last year of college football, so their debut tomorrow in Montreal will be eagerly watched.

Similarly the fans will be out in force at Kingston to watch the tricolor against the team coach Warren Stevens will bring from Toronto. Varsity has a number of players seasoned in Ontario competition earlier this season, but Queen's count on speed boys Jack Milliken of Regina and Jack Parry of Windsor, Ont., to offset that edge in experience.

Krol to Join Argos

The anticipated intercollegiate opening even overshadowed such vital football gossip as the news that Joe Krol, member of the Western College champs of '39, will sign a contract with Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four after obtaining his release from Detroit Lions of the National Professional League. Krol, one of Canadian football's outstanding performers, was understood to have been released by Lions this week after playing in only one exhibition game.

Ironically, Krol originally was slated this season for Hamilton Tigers, who meet Argos at Varsity Stadium Saturday in a game Tigers must win to remain eligible for a play-off berth. Ottawa Rough Riders, tied with Argos for the Big Four lead four points ahead of Tigers, entertain Montreal Hornets in the other I.R.F.U. contest. Hornets are tied with Tigers in third place.

Victories for Argos and Riders would leave them the only clubs in the play-off running. The picture may be clarified similarly in the Ontario Union, which lists Toronto Indians at Windsor Rockets and Toronto Beaches at Hamilton Wildcats, with Ottawa Trojans idle. Rockets are already out; Wildcats must win to retain a mathematical chance of sharing in post-season games; and Trojans are just about in the same spot as Wildcats.

RECORD WALK COMPLETED

London, Oct. 19 —(CP)— Bert Couzens, London glass worker who claims the British walking championship, strode into Fleet Street at dawn today after walking 408 miles from Edinburgh in 84 hours, 50 minutes—an average of slightly more than 4.8 miles per hour.

Three cyclists accompanied him. He bettered his 1937 mark by nine hours, 10 minutes. He had no sleep and rested only one hour and 40 minutes.

What's Doing in Sport

(By The Canadian Press.)

Billy Conn, challenger of Joe Louis for the heavyweight title bout next June, and his manager, Johnny Ray, secured a number of concessions from Promoter Mike Jacobs yesterday before attaching the required signature. Chief of the advantages was permission for Conn to appear in several pre-fight exhibitions. Conn gets 20 per cent of the gate and the same percentage of the television and film rights.

A former first baseman with the Toronto Leafs, George McQuinn let it be known at Washington yesterday he was quitting pro baseball after eight years in the majors. He recently was traded by St. Louis Browns to Philadelphia Athletics for Dick Siebert.

British contender for the world flyweight title, Joe Curran decisioned Rinty Monoghan of Belfast in a 10-round bout at Liverpool last night.

Jockey Ted Atkinson, of Toronto, had the honor yesterday at Jamaica Park of being the first rider to have five winners in a day's card on any New York track this season. In the two other events he finished second and fifth. He rode three winners Wednesday.

ROOF FELL IN

Toronto, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Arthur Stickle, Toronto, jointly charged with Haroldf Kates of Cincinnati with obtaining $38,300 under false pretences to aid them in gaining a United States Estate, yesterday testified in court that "the day war broke out the roof fell on us."

N.H.L. Training Notes

By the Canadian Press

Drums are starting to beat for rookie prospects at National Hockey League training camps. Detroit Red Wings believe they have an outstanding fresh candidate in 22-year-old centre Jim Conacher, recently released from the services. Conacher is a cinch to stick with Red Wings, club officials say.

Horace (Bud) Lamarche of Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., formerly with North Bay, Ont., junior trappers, Kansas City of the American Association and several Canadian Navy teams, has left the Owen Sound, Ont., training camp of Toronto Maple Leafs to join Tulsa Oilers of the American Association. The netminder expects to be joined shortly by Johnny McCormack of Edmonton and Gus Mortson, who signed professional contracts with Toronto yesterday. McCormack and Morston played last year with Toronto St. Michael's College, Canadian Junior champions.

It's definite now — Billy Reay will play for Montreal Canadiens. Originally sent to Canadiens by Detroit Red Wings for Rollie Rossignol and Ray Getliffe, Reay was in the dark about his destination after Getliffe announced his hockey retirement. Now it's announced Fern Gauthier will be sent to Detroit for Getliffe, Reay remaining with the Habitants.

Chicago Black Hawks outskated New York Rangers in the final two periods at Winnipeg last night to gain a 4-2 victory in the first of a two-game exhibition series. Hawks counted two goals while Rangers were a man short. Chicago scorers were Doug Bentley (two), Red Hamill, Wingy Johnson. Rangers' marksmen were Hank Goldup and Alex Shibicky.

With Captain Bob Davidson making his first appearance on the ice, Toronto Maple Leafs juggled forward lines for afternoon workouts yesterday at Owen Sound. Davidson replace Gaye Stewart on a line with Mel Hill and Ted Kennedy, but the change made little difference to Hill. In an hour of fast hockey, Hill sniped three goals.

Lieut. Syl Apps who dazzled hockey fans as one of the starriest of Toronto Maple Leaf centre icemen, left Ottawa last night for Toronto to become attached to Military District No. 2 there. It was believed Apps, who has been stationed at Ottawa, would get his discharge on a leave of absence form the army at Toronto so he may rejoin the Leafs.

Latest addition to the Montreal camp is Jimmy McFadden, who checked in from Winnipeg where he received his discharge from the Canadian Army. McFadden, purchased in 1941 from Portland of the Pacific Coast League, may be assigned a left wing berth on the third-string line.

Toronto, Oct. 19. (CP)—The Canadian Secondary Schools Rowing Association at its annual meeting last night formulated plans to hold a Canadian championship meet for High School oarsmen in Toronto. Date of the meet will be announced later.

Officers elected for a two-year term were:

Past President, S. I. Wells, Toronto; President Elect, Cliff Shuttleworth, Hamilton; 1st Vice President, Doug. S. Wells, Toronto; 2nd Vice President, Russell Woods, St. Catharines; Secretary, J. A. Forlong, Toronto; Treasurer, Sqdn. Ldr. Clarence Wright, Ottawa; Executive Board, Ralph Gossit, Hamilton: J. L. Murray, Kingston; Russell R. Shorey, Brockville; Director of Publicity, Harvey Tufford, Toronto; Honorary Presidents, Joe Wright, Sr., Toronto; T. H. Carson, Toronto; W. D. Cleland, St. Catharines.

First meeting of the new executive will be in Toronto December 3.

The Association, which holds a Canada-wide charter, has been in correspondence with rowing clubs in Vancouver and Lachine, Que.

GIVEN 20 YEARS

Cornwall, Oct. 19 — (CP)—Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier yesterday sentenced Clarence Hutt, 33-year-old Williamsburg farmhand, to 20 years in Kingston penitentiary after the jury had found him guilty of a reduced charge of manslaughter. Hutt, charged with the murder Aug. 14, 1943, of his 55-year-old uncle, George McFadden, Cardinal, Ont., millhand, showed no emotion as sentence was passed.

MANSLAUGHTER CHARGED

Toronto, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Police yesterday charged James Clinton, 19, of Toronto, with manslaughter in connection with the death of his brother-in-law, Fred Brown. Brown died Oct. 13 from wounds police said he received when stabbed with knife during an altercation Oct. 4.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

The Pigskinners.

The C.O.S.S.A. got under way this week insofar as the city is concerned with Albert College squads suffering a double defeat. The B.C.I. juniors tacked a 12-1 setback on Pete Beach's juniors on Wednesday with the Green and White of St. Michael's setting back the Collegians 16-0 in the senior tilt yesterday.

Both games proved to be a fairly good brand of first-season football, although the more experienced St. Michael's senior squad flashed a brand of football that was more of the type usually seen in the playoffs. The Green and White appear to be the team, as they should be, with their experience. However the Beach-coached crew did themselves justice and went down fighting before the organized attacks of the Green of St. Mikes.

To Captain Dick Fitzpatrick of the Church Street gang goes the honors for his team's first win, although he was ably abetted by Bobby Moher and Donovan, not to mention a sturdy line. Fitz was a tower of strength to the squad and sparked them throughout the entire game.

Baseball.

The first game of the finals of the City and District Baseball League finals takes place at the Alemite Field on Saturday at 2 p.m. between Speedy St. Louis' Juniors and the Batawa nine. The series is two out of three and it is quite likely the second game will take place here over the weekend. As was mentioned before, the weather will play an important part insofar as the final series goes and the masterminds of both teams are anxious to get the thing over.

Speaking of baseball, another returned veteran who is anxious to get back into the summer pastime next year got in touch with this corner yesterday. He is Bert "Lefty" Noakes, who used to chuck 'em from the port side, and still does, some years ago. Lefty recently concluded four years, three and one half of them overseas with the Royal Canadian Navy and in between duties on destroyers, frigates and corvettes managed to get in the occasional diamond exercise.

Lefty was fooling around St. John, N.B., one day and watching the St. John Garrison army baseball team warm up and managed to get his hand in at the pre-game practice. The manager asked him what he could do and Lefty modestly admitted he was a pitcher of sorts. The outcome was that he started on the mound for the St. Johnners, against the Fredericton Army Utopias threw a three-hitter struck out 18 and won his game 11-3.

Right now the Navy is rapidly becoming a memory with the southpaw and he has a job at Corbyville. But he is more than interested in the future of baseball and is anxious to get going the minute "Play Ball" is heard here next year. Told that baseball was definitely on the up-and-up around these yere parts, the big fella's eyes brightened and it seems he is all set to go, despite the fact that there is a winter ahead of him. He saw plenty of ocean service aboard the destroyer "St. Laurent" the frigate "La Halloise" and the corvette "Owen Sound".

Change of Date.

Wrestling fans of the city are advised, according to announcement from Maestro Tunney, Toronto, today, that the date for the weekly fiesta of the rasslin' fraternity has been changed from Wednesday to Thursday next week. The official information arrived late last night and due to circumstances the card had to be laid over to Thursday instead of the usual night. Incidentally, this corner was informed that the popular Vic Christie will be included on the mat bill of fare next week. Christie was always popular with the fans here and his return will be welcomed by a large number of the faithful. It was also hinted that those two mat hellions, Joe Jackson and Pat Flanagan are scheduled for a return engagement.

Tonight's the Night.

The boxing fraternity are providing tonight's sports' tidbit at the Hume Arena when the Newfoundland welter champ of the army, one Frank Morton home address, Napanee, headlines the card in a five-round go with popular Billy Westfall, of Trenton. . . Morton is said to have quite a leather-pushing rep, and he must have if he won the title down around Nefie way, so the main go should be more or less of a sizzler. Seven other bouts of high calibre are scheduled for the evening's performance and Maestro Harold Kurtz promises a gala evening's entertainment.

Footnote.

Batawa and Belleville Juniors baseball squads will meet in the first game of the City finals series Saturday afternoon at two o'clock. Place—Alemite Field.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 820
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

There are all kinds of jokes about trumping your partner's ace. But they are mostly by persons who do not play good bridge. Because taking partner's trick is often an expert piece of work.

See something like that in this deal:

NORTH
♠ K Q J 10
♥ 8 6 2
♦ K Q
♣ K 5 4 2

WEST
♥ 10 4
♦ J 9 7
♣ Q J 10 8 7

EAST
♠ 9 5 4
♥ 9 7 5 3
♦ 10 8 5 3
♣ A 6

SOUTH
♠ 7 6 3
♥ A K Q J
♣ 9 3

The bidding goes like this:

SOUTH	NORTH
1 H	1 S
1 NT	3 NT

The opening lead from west is the queen of clubs. When dummy is spread, declarer can see tricks enough to make his contract as soon as the ace of spades is pushed out.

With that club lead, declarer must consider how many tricks he may lose in that suit. He hopes east's ace will be forced out before dummy king goes. So, dummy ducks.

East did play the ace before the king was killed. But it was in a manner that declarer did not like. Although it was partner's trick, east went right up with the ace and returned his small club.

Dummy soon took a club trick with the king and led a spade. But the contract dies in its tracks when west won with the spade ace and took remaining clubs.

Even in the heat of a bridge game, you should easily see that play in the east. Because the opening lead of a queen says there is the jack and ten or jack and nine of that suit in leader's hand.

It would be apparent that you must take the second club trick if not the first. And if you waited for the second trick, you would have no more clubs to return.

That would prevent you from helping partner set up his suit. So, don't hold back. Get up there and git.

ALL EIGHT TEAMS OF AMERICAN LOOP IN ACTION

Providence Reds Swamp New Haven While Capitals Trounce Bisons

(By The Canadian Press)

All eight teams of the American Hockey League were in action last night and a total of 27,500 fans saw the teams play in four cities.

Indianapolis Capitals toppled Buffalo Bisons 3-1 at Buffalo while Providence Reds swamped the visiting New Haven Eagles 6-2. Pittsburgh Hornets defeated St. Louis Flyers 4-2 at Pittsburgh while at Hershey the Bears battled to a 1-1 draw with Cleveland Barons.

Bisons went into a 1-0 lead when rookie Tommy Cooper scored late in the first while Caps were a man short. Playing through a scoreless second period, Caps came back strong in the third with Rosy Rosignol scoring the tying and winning goals.

Providence had the game well in hand against New Haven. Wingman Roger Gagne paced the winners with three first-period goals. Juckes scored the other Red goal in the first while Red Boothman tallied for Eagles.

George Bellemare of Providence scored the sole second period goal with Jacques Lavoie rounding out the Reds' scoring in the third. Ken Kilrea bagged the second New Haven goal.

St. Louis Flyers held a one-goal edge over Pittsburgh for the first period but gave ground to a powerful second period Hornet attack in which Bob Gracie, Johnny Mahaffey and Bob Walton scored for Pittsburgh.

Flyers were put back in the running when Dick Rimstead made it two for St. Louis at the nine-minute mark of the final only to have Bob Gracie tally his second goal of the game seven minutes later.

More than 7,000 fans watched Cleveland Barons and Hershey Bears play to a 1-1 draw. With three minutes to go in the first period Les Cunningham scored for Barons. Bill Warwick tied the game up on a freak goal in the second period. He fired from behind the Cleveland net, the puck rolled part way up goalie John Kizkan's stick and dropped into the net. The rough third frame was scoreless.

Greenshirts Score 3 Touches And Convert to Beat Albert College in Senior Tussle

St. Michael's Showed Exceptionally Strong Line and Fast Half in Fitzpatrick

Paced by the dashing play of Captain Dick Fitzpatrick, the St. Michael's senior C. O. S. S. A. football squad had little difficulty in turning back Pete Beach's Albert College eleven in the first game of the schedule on the college gridiron yesterday. The Greenshirts had three touchdowns and converted one to win by a 16-0 score.

Jack Doran's Irish youngsters handed out an aggressive style of play that the college lads could not cope with to any degree of success. Their line work was good and their tackling of outstanding variety. Their catching could have been improved upon as two forwards into the end zones were fumbled by the receivers and two potential major scores lost.

However the passing and running of Fitzpatrick highlighted the first game between the squads with Bobby Moher fine plunging and Donovan running standing out.

The college squad fought back valiantly against a superior team, but only once did they actually threaten the Green goal line, and that came in the dying minutes of the game after a St. Mike's fumble near the 20 yard line. But the whistle blew to end the threat and the game.

Soon Score Touch.

The Green marched goalwards in the first quarter after the kickoff. Three first downs went to them and the first score came in nine minutes, when Fitz flipped a forward to Donovan in the end zone. The ball hit the crossbar, when the quarterback kicked for the convert.

Minutes later Bobby Moher, who had galloped behind the college posts dropped a forward pass. Before the quarter ended Fitz pulled a quarterback sneak and Duffy leaped high in the air to pull down his forward for a score. This, too was unconverted.

The teams battled more for the next two quarters with the Green having the better of the play. In the fourth chukker with minutes to go, Fitzpatrick tore through the college line for twenty yards and parked the pigskin in the proper place. This time he didn't miss with the convert kick.

Landon and McCullough for the college were the best with the former showing fine running ability.

The teams:

Albert College: Woodrow; McIntyre, Harkness, Cotton, Patterson, Aiken, Sutherland, Vessey, Scott, McCullough, Bell, Landon, Cay, Hird, Burns, Crockett, McKendry, Wilson, McDonald, Stafford, Liveley, Sutherland.

St. Mikes: Garven, Bradshaw, Briand, Pigeon, Boyle, Peets, Duffy, Fitzpatrick, Donovan Sweenard, Lucy, Moher, R. Moher, Finkle, Callaghan, Barrett, J., Barrett, E.

Officials, Red Townsend, Vernon Goyer.

Before the war Hoosman had some five professional starts before he was nominated for a soldier suit. All told he's had some 32 fights, winning 18 by "kayo," he says.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 19 —(CP)— Professional baseball scouts are like travelling salesmen. They always have choice words of wisdom to dispense, and an anecdote to point the moral.

For instance, scout Fred (Pork) Lamlein of the Chicago Cubs believes young baseball players, like kindergarten pupils, should always "do what they're told." Fred is a former resident of Kitchener, Ont., who played baseball in Waterloo shortly after the turn of the century and made his Major League debut with St. Louis Cardinals in 1916.

In an interview with Fred (Kitchener Record) Thompson, Lamlein recalled the circumstances of his first start in professional company to emphasize his faith in the do-what-you're-told principle.

The Cardinals were trailing Cincinnati Reds by seven runs when Lamlein was thumbed from the bullpen. The bases were loaded and nobody out — a tough situation for a rookie hurler. On top of that, his catcher was Cuban Mike Gonzales, a Cuban with only a fragmentary understanding of the English language.

At that time, Gonzales could hardly make himself understood. He told Lamlein he had only one sign — for a waste or "pitchout" ball. If Gonzales didn't give that one sign, Lamlein could threw any pitch he pleased.

Well, Lamlein strolled to the mound and was nonplussed when Gonzales gave the sign for the first pitch. The Kitchener boy couldn't figure a pitchout with the bases loaded and nobody away, so he called for time and asked Mike to confirm the signal.

Gonzales did, so Lamlein threw the waste ball. The catcher whirled out of position, whipped a fast peg to third and caught Joe Tinker off the bag to relieve the pressure.

"That taught me a great lesson," Lamlein told Thompson. "If young ball players do what they're told, they'll go a long way."

Jim (Toronto Globe and Mail) Coleman says he has it from an "unimpeachable source" that Jolting Joe Krol of Canadian gridiron fame has been released by Detroit Lions of the National Professional Football League after taking part in only one exhibition game. If the report is substantiated, Krol is expected to play with Hamilton Tigers of the Big Four, now on the brink of elimination.

CHANGES MADE IN SCHEDULE

Montreal, Oct. 19 — (CP)—Two changes were made in the Quebec Senior Hockey League schedule, announced last month, at a league meeting here last night, as a result of travel difficulties anticipated by Quebec Aces. The Quebec members asked that a date assigned to them in Ottawa, Dec. 26, when they face Hull Volants, be changed.

As a result, Ottawa Senators will play Volants Dec. 26 and the Aces will have their game with Volants Feb. 6, 1946.

It was decided that teams will be allowed to ice 15 players, including a spare goalkeeper. Dressing of two goaltenders is mandatory and any player not listed on the official score sheet will not be allowed to play.

The top four teams of the six-team league will meet after the regular season in a play-off series with the winner advancing to the Allan Cup play-offs. The first-place team will meet the fourth-place team in one series, while the second and third teams will meet in another, the winners entering the finals.

All former professional players making application to amateur teams must be reinstated unless they are still in the armed services.

BUFFALO BISONS STAGE RALLY TO TIE INDIANAPOLIS

Reds Score Second Consecutive Win With Resounding 7-4 Victory

(By the Canadian Press)

In the only games scheduled in the American Hockey League last night, Buffalo Bisons came from behind at Indianapolis to tie the Capitals 3-3 as Providence Reds scored their second consecutive win over New Haven Eagles with a resounding 7-4 victory.

Bisons and Caps played through a scoreless first period and Pete Leswick gave Caps a 2-0 lead with a brace of goals within 11 minutes. Bill Allum put Buffalo back into the running with a goal four minutes after Leswick tallied his second.

The first professional hockey game in New Haven since 1942 saw Providence Reds take a first period lead and stay in front all the way.

Stan Kemp Roger Gagne and Jacques Lavoie scored for Reds in the first against Eagles' only tally by Ken Kilrea. Red Boothman for Eagles and Lemieux for Indianapolis did the only second period scoring.

CHAPTER 19

Paul turned from Warren and was listening to Karen. He seemed not to notice Elaine.

"If I were you, Karen," he said quietly, "I'd go home, keep my mouth shut about the whole thing. This is the kind of publicity I don't like for International people."

Karen glared at Paul. "I don't see why I have to keep still about it. I wanted to tell the judge that Lee threatened both John and me with bodily harm. I don't see why I have to keep still about that. I think I should have a bodyguard. Why can't I see those reporters?"

Paul steered Karen to John and said: "Take her home and keep her locked up until this thing blows over. She's got a new picture opening at Sid Grauman's next week and we don't like this kind of stuff. She's supposed to be the dignified type. Keep her mouth shut—and put some beefsteak on that eye of yours."

Paul was bristling with anger when he turned away from them and looked at Elaine.

He stepped up to her and shook his head. "What a racket." Then he looked at her as if he hadn't seen her for years, and when he spoke again his voice was soft. "Hello, Elaine."

"Beautiful day. No rain, or anything."

She started down the steps to the street.

"Can I drop you some place or have you your car?" Paul asked.

"I taxied down, but Ellison said he was going to be here." She looked up and down the street. "Maybe he ran into a horse and is talking over old times at Santa Anita."

Paul laughed. "My car's down the block."

They walked silently to his car, and after she had gotten in and they were driving through the Los Angeles business district, he glanced at her.

"They tell me you've left International?"

"That's right. But the parting was amicable."

"I wish you'd have let me known," Paul said. He paused. He paused. "Annie told me it was because of Lee."

"Not exactly. I—I guess I was just getting fed up. I need a change of scenery."

"Going back to New York?"

"I don't know exactly. I like Hollywood, all right. But I guess I'm not cut out to be 'movie'."

Theye were silent the rest of the way back to her apartment house. After Paul had pulled the car into the wide drive and stopped, he turned to her, lighting her a cigaret.

"You left your Oscar on my desk," he said. "I'll send it over—if you wish."

"There's no rush," she answered. "You can keep it for a paper weight. Sort of a souvenir from me to you."

"Look, Elaine," he said, his voice urgent. "We've been dodging the question. Lee is free of Karen now—why don't you take him?"

"He hasn't asked, for one thing". She was about to continue when she saw the taxi swing in behind Paul's car and Lee get out.

Paul saw him in the rear vision mirror. He straightened around in the car seat. "I guess I'll go."

"Well, I see I made the Times' second section. You're a pretty good press agent, Mason. You keep things out of the papers pretty good."

"Not especially for your benefit," Paul said.

"Okay, so I threatened to punch one of your stars in the nose. She's a heel."

"You have the same complex, I believe," Paul said, starting the car motor.

Elaine opened the door and slid out. She looked at Paul. "The weatherman says we won't have any rain for quite awhile."

Paul glanced at Elaine and smiled. Then he was gone.

"Never mind, slugger. What's on your program now? A career in the ring?"

"Okay, so I've got it coming to me. But every time I see Warren mooning over Karen I get sick inside."

"I know the feeling," Elaine said.

Lee looked at her, puzzled, then said. "I—I pulled a deal the other day. I sold 'Golden Night' to Hall Production."

"How wonderful, Lee."

"Yeah," Lee mumbled. "Only I didn't tell them you were co-author. I sold it to them as my play alone. I need the cash. You don't mind, do you?"

Elaine listened to Lee's voice drone on, but didn't hear the words. She was thinking that you couldn't trust Lee. You couldn't trust him at all.

She heard herself say, "No, I don't mind. Keep the whole check." She walked away from him, sick of being used by him again, sick of him—and desperately lonely for Paul.

It was a surprise, of course. Even to Hollywood, with its many geniuses and "men who are in on the ground floor." They didn't know the Japs would bomb Pearl Harbor, although they would huddle up in a corner with you and tell you that someone in Washington had tipped them off that something was bound to happen. They sounded vaguely important only to themselves.

Elaine was with Paul that Sunday afternoon, watching it rain from the game room at the Branns. Every now and then she would look at her hand, gaze luxuriously at the magnificent diamond ring.

He had given it to her just before Minnie served dinner. It was to be a quiet little party, Minnie told Elaine, just she and Paul and maybe Sam Lewin and his wife. Sam, Minnie told Elaine, was leaving International. It might be nice, she said, for the man who was taking over to give /him a little party.

Minnie may have understood Hollywood better than most of them.

She had been sitting in the game room, watching the rain beat against the windows, when Paul had come in. They had been together frequently since the time Lee struck Warren, but there had never been any serious moments. Usually Ellison was with them, or someone else from the studio.

Paul had sat down beside her, taking hold of her hand. "That weatherman of yours is strictly B material," he said.

"He has absolutely no heart for a poor girl trying to get along," Elaine agreed.

"He's a cad of the first rainwater," Paul said, and Elaine groaned.

They had been silent for the next few moments, turning and sitting on their knees on the wide davenport to watch the rain.

"You know," Paul said, "I've been thinking about that rain check. I've decided to make it good again. Would you be interested in cashing yours in?"

"I'd be very interested," Elaine said, sitting down again. "But are you certain, Paul?"

He watched the rain some more before he answered. "I'm only certain that it's no good without you. I know all my lines will sound corny, but I get to thinking that I'm stubborn and what if you pull out of Hollywood and I never see you again."

"You made it rather clear to me once, Paul, that you didn't want to see me again."

He was sitting down beside her. "Sometimes you get filled with a thought..you keep building it up..bigger than it really is. And then your thinking is warped. You get wrong about some ideas and it takes you a long time to straighten yourself out. Maybe I don't make myself very clear, but...." He shrugged.

"It's very clear, Paul, darling. It's very clear and very real."

"I don't care, Elaine, if you still do love Lee. I want to marry you—I think I can give you more happiness than he ever could. I know that being with you is like having a little piece of heaven tucked away inside you."

When Brann walked slowly into the game room, intent on filling his pipe, the grayness of the day shadowed the davenport. He had lit his pipe and was looking casually around the room before he saw Elaine and Paul and the ring on the hand that was tightly pressing Paul's face to hers.

But the radio that afternoon shattered their happiness. They stopped talking as if struck with heavy blows and listened quietly and nervously and with asterrible hate growing inside them.

ODEX SOAP

The ODEX boys are quite well versed
In "bathroom technique"—they come first
Because they love the fresh, clean smell
Of ODEX SOAP—they think it's swell.

And leisurely they scrub their necks
And wash their hands with rich Odex.
Buy ODEX at your favorite store.

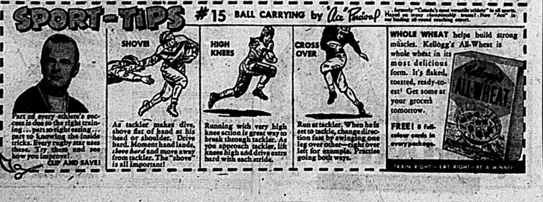
NOT THOROUGH ENOUGH, CHUM! HE HAD IT TAPED UNDER HIS ARMPIT ALL THE TIME! WHEN I SAW HIS HANDS MOVE, I JUMPED... LITTLE TOO SLOW, I GUESS!



SPORT-TIPS #15 BALL CARRYING by "Ace" Percival . . . formerly "Canada's most versatile athlete" in all sports. Played on many championship teams! Now "Ace" is our leading all-round coaching expert.

SHOVE! As tackler makes dive, shove flat of hand at his head or shoulder. Drive hard. Moment hand lands, shove hard and move away from tackler. The "shove" is all important!

HIGH KNEES Running with very high knee action is great way to break through tackler. As you approach tackler, lift knees high and drive extra hard with each stride.

CROSS OVER Run at tackler. When he is set to tackle, change direction fast by swinging one leg over other—right over left for example. Practise going both ways.

F.A.O. Delegates Enter Planning Phase of Parley

By CLYDE R. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Oct. 19 —(CP)— Delegates to the United Nations Food and Agriculture organization today faced the long-range planning phase of the conference which opened Tuesday. So far, the conference has been occupied with the business of procedure and hearing reports from technical committees and from delegation leaders on the problems of their individual countries.

Today comittees will be set up to arrange the program of work which will be entrusted to the permanent machinery of the F.A.O. Yesterday the conference was urged by Dr. G. S. H. Barton, Deputy Agriculture Minister and Canadian delegation leader in the absence of Agriculture Minister Gardiner, to make this planning as useful as possible in meeting the food and agriculture problems of the immediate future.

However, the main objectives will be long-range planning to encourage and give leadership to the improvement of production throughout the world, efficient distribution methods, and conservation of forests and fisheries.

Only major nation which has so far failed to take an active part in the proceedings is Russia, which, with a delegation of about 25, has not yet assumed any official status here.

It is understood however, the Russians are waiting definite word from Moscow which may arrive at any moment. Vasili Sergeev, Soviet delegation leader, said yesterday that he would certainly sign the constitution, but he has no information as to time.

Churchill Recovers From Indisposition

London, Oct. 19 — (Reuters) — Winston Churchill was understood today to have recovered from a throat indisposition which kept him confined to his home earlier this week and is preparing for a heavy spell of parliamentary work next week.

The former Prime Minister, nearing 71, plans to be the principal opposition speaker in the demobilization debate scheduled for Monday and in the debate on the interim budget Wednesday.

Mr. Churchill today lunched with Anthony Eden, former foreign secretary.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 19 —(CP)— Industrials recorded a substantial advance in the early session of the Toronto Exchange today and other groups were slightly weaker. Volume was 1,549,000 shares for the first three hours.

Liquors were strong. Distillers-Seagram firmed 3 points.

In the golds the market was strong for Bear, Giant, East Sullivan, Eldona, Preston, Pickle Crow, Macassa and San Antonio. Francoeur gained about 15 cents.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 19 —(AP)— Selected stocks continued their climb to new eight-year peaks today although many leaders, particularly "blue chips," were subjected to light offerings. Steels, motors, liquors and specialties were in demand. Gains of fractions to two points or so predominated near the fourth hour.

In the "new high" division were Distillers Corpn., Schenley and Paramount Pictures, spurred by earnings and boosted dividend prospects; U. S. Steel, Mid-Continent Petroleum and General Realty.

Fractional advances were recorded by Canadian leaders at midday. McIntyre was ahead with a gain of 1-2 while Canadian Pacific and Lake Shore were up 1-4 and 1-8 respectively. Dome Mines lost 1-4.

HOGS

Toronto, Oct. 19 — (CP) — Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today: London $17 plus transportation, Barrie $17.65 delivered, Hull $17.40 delivered, Stratford, to farmers $17.50, to truckers $17.65, delivered.

Fruit Growers Promised Fruit Marketing Act

Halifax, Oct. 19 — (CP)—While Progressive Conservative candidates for the Oct. 23 Nova Scotia election attacked the Liberal government policy and manifesto, Premier Angus L. Macdonald last night promised Annapolis Valley fruit growers that they could have a fruit marketing act at the next session of the Legislature if a majority favored it. Both the C.C.F. and Progressive Conservatives have promised to implement such an act.

Replying to Progressive Conservative Leader L. W. Fraser, who recently charged the premier had returned as a "friend of Mackenzie King and central Canadian interests," Mr. Macdonald said he came back simply as "a friend of Nova Scotia." He added that, nevertheless, he considered Prime Minister King as his friend "even though I don't always agree with his policies."

Mr. Macdonald's relations with Mr. King came under discussion at a Progressive Conservative rally at Dartmouth when R. A. Donahoe said he didn't believe the Nova Scotia premier was on 'good terms' with the Prime Minister. He charged that Mr. Macdonald, then Naval Minister, stayed on during the cabinet crisis last September "thinking that he was helping to hold the Liberal party together."

Mr. Donahoe, criticizing the Liberal platform, said it read more like that of an opposition party, since it was concerned mainly with "an outline of badly needed improvements."

Gloster Fastest Plane Being Made At Present Time

Toronto, Oct. 19. (CP)—The Gloster meteor jet-propelled airplane is "the fastest, hard-hitting airplane in full quantity production in the world", British aircraft designer W. W. W. Downing said in an interview today. It would remain so for two or three years.

Downing, who has made two jet planes ready for an attempt at a world speed record at Herne Bay, England, arrived here recently with Sir Roy Dobson of the Hawker Siddeley Company which will take over the plant of Victory Aircraft, Ltd., at nearby Malton.

Downing said that jet-propelled planes, as fighters in the late days of the war, achieved speeds "well in excess of 500 miles an hour.

McDougal; Ivan DeNure of Peterboro; Mr. Holgins, a former member of Smith's Falls Lodge for short speches, joining hands around the table and singing Auld Lang Syne and They are Jolly Good Fellows brought a very pleasant evening to a close.

CHINESE TROOPS LANDED

Shanghai, Oct. 19 —(AP)— Seventh Fleet headquarters announced today it had landed units of the Chinese 70th National Army at Kiirun, Formosa, in the first major Sino-American amphibious operation.

The landing was without incident and the surrendered Japanese were co-operative in handing over their arms, headquarters said.

DEBATE ON UNITED

Expresses Opinion

"I would wish that it could be otherwise, but, as it is, in my opinion inevitable, we might as well come right out and say so, and the time to say so is right now," said Mr. Beaudoin.

"Often during the recent war Canada has been criticized in the United States because while they had universal compulsory military service, we in Canada, favored the voluntary system for overseas service together with conscription, but only to the extent that it was necessary," said Mr. Beaudoin.

"The only system which could be followed from now on its universal peacetime military training and universal compulsory wartime military service."

Any form of isolation from now on was impossible. Neutrality was practically incompatible with the prescriptions of the Charter. Any further conflict would be the battle for "our very existence."

If a compulsory system became necessary it should be practical as well as effective. Training should be combined with a physical fitness program, with trainees having their military training reduced in proportion to time spent in physical education classes.

The expansion of cadet corps and the establishment of 'French-styled' navy, army and air force and physical education schools was urged.

Claims Provisions Contradicted

Mr. Low said he found no provision in the Charter for the preservation of the "Christian principle of the sanctity of human personality," no bill of rights, no protection against tyranny. The preamble contained noble sentiments but its professions were contradicted in the body of the Charter and the facts of the world situation.

The Atlantic Charter has been set aside as a guide and not a pact. Canada had joined Britain in going to war to keep a solemn undertaking to Poland. The price of victory for Poland was to lose a large part of her territory to Russia, a member of the proposed security council and with the concurrence of the other four permanent members — Britain, United States, China and France. The rest of the country was to be subject to Russian domination.

"While the cry of 'Peace, peace' goes up from millions of war-stricken victims, there is no peace" he said. "Hatred, despair, suspicion and intrigue are rampant among the ruins of what was once European civilization.

"Totalitarianism is as strongly entrenched as ever, only it is red totalitarianism now instead of the black variety of the Nazi-Fascist Axis. And where totalitarianism in any form exists there is a constant threat of violence and aggression. And what makes all Veto Powers Objectionable.

Both Mr. Low and Mr. Coldwell found the veto power given the big powers on the security council objectionable. Mr. Coldwell said that provision stemmed from the suspicion which existed before the war and was in evidence at San Francisco as between nations.

"My hope is that our wartime and peacetime associations may make Russia more liberal in her political structure and the western democracies more democratic in their economic activities," said Mr. Coldwell.

While parliament had to adopt the charter as drafted he felt that the development of the atomic bomb had made a new agreement a necessity.

"And that agreement will have to recognize that no nation great or small can safely continue to retain its own independent, unlimited authority and jurisdiction in its external affairs," he said.

"In our own interests it must agree to a limitation of its sovereign power to do as it pleases, for its own security requires that the power of its neighbor to do as it pleases must be limited also. And that involves no real loss of sovereignty but an extension of it."

Many Support Charter.

Support for adoption of the charter came from Mr. Pinard, Mr. Church, Mr. Fleming and Mr. Bradette, with most of them agreeing that while the document was not perfect it should be adopted now and changes made later.

Canada was chosen by destiny to be an interpreter and her duty in that capacity was steadily expanding, Mr. Fleming said.

Canada first was an interpreter between Britain and the United States and now as one of the leading secondary nations in the world the role of interpreter was expanded. Mr. Fleming said he would not support the United Nations charter if he felt it would weaken the ties between the British Commonwealth. He believed the ties would be weakened if Canada did not adopt the charter.

Britain gave unanimous approval to the charter. The approval in the United States was practically unanimous. He hoped Canada would give it unanimous approval.

Allies, Too, Need Help

Our Allies in liberated countries need food, clothing and other supplies to relieve suffering and distress, and they look to the United Nations, including Canada, to help them.

The money for all these things must be raised through the sale of Victory Bonds. And Hastings County is asked to once more rally to the call and do her share.

Of that there is no doubt. But everyone, man woman and child who can possibly do so, must lend their shoulder to the wheel if success is to be attained.

Factory Worker Admits Butchering Companion's Body

Savannah, Ga., Oct. 19 —(AP) —Police held on a murder warrant Thursday a factory worker who, they said, confessed butchering the body of a companion and burying the pieces over a wide area.

The Detective said McKethan described how he quarreled and fought with 17-year-old George Luther Ades, a shipyard worker, and tried to conceal his crime when he found he had killed him.

The macabre torso slaying occurred 11 days ago, but it was not until yesterday that the police "broke" the case and arrested McKethan.

The two youths went to a roadhouse. When they returned to Savannah, McKethan missed his wallet and accused Ades of taking it. They fought. McKethan left Ades in the street, and went home, two blocks away.

Returning to the scene, he found Ades dead. He carried the body home in Ades' car and hid it under the house. The next day he went to work at a bag-manufacturing plant.

That night he removed Ades' clothes and buried them. Then, with a butcher knife and saw, he dismembered the body. The next night he sprayed the pieces with a hose, placed parts of the body in cloth sacks and hid or buried them in scattered parts of the city.

He went to exclusive Daffin Park here to bury the head and arms. After he had buried the head, a police car searching for prowlers flashed its spotlight on him. He dropped the arms he was holding and fled. The police, however, failed to see the arms.

FIFTY KILLED IN REVOLT OF VENEZUELAN ARMY

Japanese Atrocity Trials May Start Within 60 Days

500 Suspects in Custody Total Will Likely Be 4,000

By JAMES LINDSLEY

Tokyo, Oct. 20 — (AP) — War trials for the first of 2,000 Japanese on charges including sickening atrocities are expected to begin within the next 60 days.

"Approximately 500 suspects now are in custody," said Col. Alva C. Carpenter, who is directing preparations for one of history's great criminal trials.

"More are being taken in daily. No, we will not wait until all are arrested to start the trials. We could start with class three cases within three weeks."

Class three cases are those of Japanese accused of actually committing crimes such as beheadings, often done at the direction of superiors. These Japanese are regarded as small fry.

Col. Carpenter, chief legal officer of Gen. MacArthur's staff, said prospects for the criminal list make it likely the total will be double the present figure of 2,000.

Among those already in custody are such well publicized personages as Hideki Tojo, Japan's premier when the war in the Pacific began, members of his cabinet and such war leaders as Lt.-Gen. Masaharu Homma, accused of responsibility for the brutal death march on Bataan.

Will be Public

The trials will be public. They will be held in the largest suitable places. Col. Carpenter said supreme authorities wished to permit the attendance of the largest possible number of Japanese "who, I believe, are extremely interested in the proceedings."

The two leading figures in the forthcoming trials, Tojo and Shigenori Togo, are improving steadily. Tojo has about recovered from the pistol wound inflicted in a bungled attempt to kill himself. Togo, who was Tojo's foreign minister, is recovering from a heart ailment.

Col. Carpenter has requisitioned 300 occupation officers for the job of preparing evidence and within a month, more than 1,000 persons will be at work on trial details.

The death penalty could be invoked in every instance but Col. Carpenter pointed out that the prosecution merely presented the evidence with the military commission handing down the verdict and degree of punishment. The commission will consist of at least three judges with as many more as may be appointed by Gen. MacArthur.

"We will appoint defence counsel," Col. Carpenter said, "and the defendant may select whatever additional legal aid he wishes."

Girl's Picture On Film Leads To Man's Arrest

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 20 — (CP)—A girl's picture on a roll of film in a camera found near the scene of a robbery in Niagara Falls, N.Y., led to the arrest of Curvin Friesman, 24, of Hamilton, Ont., by police of Niagara Falls, N.Y., on an open charge; it was revealed Thursday night.

At the same time police said they had toured 15 Toronto pawn shops and recovered several hundred dollars worth of loot taken from recent robberies in Niagara Falls, Ont., and Niagara Falls, N.Y.

Police related that they developed the film found in the camera, identified a picture of a Niagara Falls, Ont., girl, traced the owner of the camera with the girl's assistance and took Friesman into custody. He admitted dropping the camera and said he had robbed five homes in Niagara Falls, Ont., police said.

Clare E. Hilborn Held for Murder

Toronto, Oct. 20 (CP)—Clare E. Hilborn, 43, was arrested Friday at Toronto East General Hospital on a charge of murdering his eight-year-old son, Brian, by giving him an overdose of sleeping tablets.

Hilborn's wife, Alice, 19, and her two step-children, Clare Jr., 10, and Sandra, five, are recovering in hospital.

Hilborn, who was the first to regain consciousness, three days after his family was found unconscious and Brian dead in bed at their Willow Avenue home in East Toronto, was removed from the hospital to a police station. Later he was taken to the Don Jail where a guard was maintained about him in the jail hospital.

The survival of the children was said by doctors to be "almost miraculous." They were in a coma, both in oxygen tents, in the Hospital for Sick Children, while physicians put up a fight to save their lives.

One of Nazi Crew On Trial Tries To End Life

Hamburg, Oct. 20 — (CP)—One of five U-boat crew members charged before a British military court with having massacred helpless survivors of the S. S. Peleus after the ship was sunk in March, 1944, attempted to commit suicide in his cell here last night, but jailers' vigilance foiled him.

It was not revealed which of the accused tried to take his life.

Defence counsel made final plea today before the court investigating events following the sinking of the Peleus in the South Atlantic. Defence is trying to prove that U-boat commander Heinz Eck ordered his men to fire on the wreckage because of military necessity. The other four defendants were described as having acted under compulsion of their commander's orders.

German defence counsel Todsen, summing up his case, said Eck had to destroy the wreckage of the Peleus because he knew he was in a zone where four U-boats had been sunk.

UNITED NATIONS CHARTER PASSED BY PARLIAMENT

No Dissenting Voice When Vote Called, Charter Now Goes To the Senate

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 20 — (CP) — Canada's elected representatives of the people yesterday gave their stamp of approval — without a dissenting voice — to adoption of the United Nations charter.

The approval in the Commons came after Justice Minister St. Laurent, acting under secretary of state for external affairs, expressed belief that the "great majority, if not the unanimity of the people wish Canada to be a member of this United Nations organization and to do whatever may be required to be a full partner."

Mr. St. Laurent said there were things in the charter which everyone deplored and which "we hope will not remain there for all time."

Answering a question of Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel), Mr. St. Laurent said he doubted if the military agreements under which member states pledge forces to the security council would be ready for parliament at the next session. That would be desirable but the organization would not likely be sufficiently advanced.

Neutral Nations Not Represented.

Neutral nations had not been represented at San Francisco because neutrality was incompatible with sharing responsibility for maintaining peace. A nation could not be a full member without being prepared to contribute of its human and material resources to stop those who might wish to disturb the peace of the world.

Debate on the charter brought from John Diefenbaker (PC-Lake Centre) the suggestion that Canada ask for the holding of a United Nations conference and a new charter that would take into account the discovery of the atomic bomb. He urged the government to declare whether, in the event of another war, Canada's forces would be raised by the voluntary method or by a national service system.

Many Speakers Heard.

Other speakers included Alistair Stewart (CCF-Winnipeg North) who urged that the secret of the atomic bomb be shared by all United Nations; Joseph Bradette (L-Cochrane); Fred Rose (Lab. Prog.-Montreal Cartier); Gladys Strum (CCF-Qu'Appelle); Norman Jaques (SC-Wetaskiwin); Maxime Raymond (BP-Beauharnois-LaPrairie); and J.F. Pouliot (Ind. L.-Temiscouata).

The debate was temporarily interrupted while J. M. Macdonnell (PC-Muskoka-Ontario) replied as chief official opposition critic to the budget speech made last week by Finance Minister Ilsley.

Shortages in Potatoes, Some Fruits, Oils Major Problems for Housewives

By The Canadian Press

Meat rationing and a shortage in potatoes appeared today to be the major problem of the Canadian housewife for preparing meals but there were various reports of shortages in onions, some fruits, shortening and salad dressings and oils.

A Canadian Press survey showed the potato shortage was general in practically all areas and was blamed largely on poor growing conditions, along with a scarcity of labor for pickers. In some districts potatoes were imported from the United States.

Other vegetables were said to be generally favorable.

Meat supplies were plentiful enough to fill demands of coupon holders — except pork, left short by added commitments to the overseas market. As a result, there was a general scarcity of shortening, a pork by-product.

Domestic fruits were generally reported scarce except grapes and some peaches. The season for pears was short while apples in many places were unobtainable. Tomatoes were variously good and poor by districts.

Imported oranges and grapefruit were said to be becoming progressively plentiful, but lemons were scarce.

In Ontario, all local fruits were scarce but vegetables, except potatoes, were reported plentiful.

"We don't know where or when our next lot of potatoes are coming from," one wholesale dealer said.

Dairy products were plentiful, however, despite the heavy rainfall that retarded the vegetable season. Outstanding shortages in grocery stores were those of prepared salad dressings and oils.

Poultry, as in most other districts, was plentiful but eggs were fairly scarce.

U.S. Offers to Mediate Native Rebellion in East

New York, Oct. 20 (AP) — The United States offered today to participate in attempts to settle peacefully the rebellion of natives in French Indo-China and the Dutch East Indies.

John Carter Vincent, director of the State Department's Office of Far Eastern Affairs, made the offer in a speech before the foreign policy association forum in which he also:

1. Said that the United States, recognizing Russia's interests in the Far East, expects the Soviet Union to understand the United States has a stake there too
2. Laid down the policy that the United States regards China as a "bridge"—not a "buffer" — in Far Eastern relations with Russia.
3. Found fault with the division of Korea between Russian and United States occupation troops and suggested instead an international trusteeship until Koreans are ready for independence.

Mr. Vincent's statement on Indo-China and the East Indies was the first form a state department policy-making official since native unrest flared.

He said the United States does not question French sovereignty in Indo-China or Dutch sovereignty in the East Indies.

"It is not our intention to insist or participate in enforceful measures for the imposition of control by the territorial sovereigns," he said, "but we would be prepared to lend our assistance, if requested to do so, in efforts to reach peaceful agreements in these disturbed areas."

Mr. Vincent recalled a policy declaration by former State Secretary Cordell Hull last year that countries should help depedent peoples in their charge "to prepare themselves for the duties and responsibilities of self government and to attain liberty."

In his reference to China, Mr. Vincent said:

"We will all agree, I believe, that the bridge concept is pre-eminently preferable, and that it should be our policy to make it a fact ..

"It will be our policy to co-operate with China and the Soviet Union for stability in the Far East. We will co-operate with neither of them in any policy antagonistic toward the other."

PRIEST TESTIFIES OF 'NEAR MIRACLE' CURES BY FARMER

72-Year-Old William McCaffery. Near Hull, Charged With Illegally Practicing Medicine

Hull, Que., Oct. 20 —(CP)—An "astounding" number of persons had reported cures after visiting William McCaffrey of nearby Farrelton and some were "near miracles," Father F. J. MacGregor, McCaffrey's Parish priest, testified yesterday in police court here.

The 72-year-old farmer appeared on a charge of illegally practising medicine laid on complaint of the Quebec Royal College of physicians and surgeons. Magistrate Roland Millar reserved judgment to Oct. 26.

Testimony was heard from two college investigators, Mrs. J. A. Beaudin and Mrs. Leon d'Avignon of Montreal, in addition to Father MacGregor and McCaffrey.

Father MacGregor said he had known McCaffrey many years and he was "a very upright, practising Catholic—a real Holy man spending his time doing all sorts of good for all peaple."

People came "from miles around" to see him, some reporting cures "so near ot miracles that I have spoken to my archbishop about them."

Stating McCaffrey "never practised medicine," the priest said oils and relics could be used as "sacrimentals . . . by the laity as well as the clergy."

He had spoken to Archbishop Alexandra Vachon, who now is visiting Mexico, when the Archbishop paid a pastoral visit three years ago and he had agreed that McCaffrey should be allowed to continue his work.

Any money which McCaffrey received "was used for masses", some going to parishes in various parts of Canada.

"Why people were brought from so far away as Montreal to destroy the character and good will of this man is something I cannot understand", Father MacGregor said. They were "a blind" for "the real cause of the prosecution".

F.O.A. LAUNCHED ON THE TASK OF WORLD PLANNING

Russian Credentials Not Presented Although Said to be in Quebec

By CLYDE R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Oct. 20 — (CP) — The United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization's first conference today was fully launched on its task of world planning for the adequate sustenance of all peoples but, so far, without the active participation of Soviet Russia.

The unexplained delay in the Russian delegation's assumption of its rightful status as a full member of the organization continued to overshadow proceedings otherwise enthusiastic and single minded.

Soviet Russia was one of the 44 United Nations which initiated the oganization idea at Hot Springs, Va., in the spring of 1943. It had been expected that Russia would be one of the first to approve the constitution drafted by the Interim Commission set up at Hot Springs, and signed by some 30 delegations when this conference opened.

On the opening day Russia had a delegation of a dozen officials here and as many more as staff. It was seated next to the United States at the conference table. But the delegation leader, Vasili Sergeev, did not present his credentials to the appropriate committee and his delegation has not been specifically mentioned in any of the preliminary formalities.

Credentials Not Submitted

Up to this morning, Russian credentials had not been submitted although it had been reported through the secretariat that they had arrived in Quebec through the Soviet Ambassador in Ottawa.

All the 10 working committees were appointed yesterday and Russia is on none of them. When the general conference committee was set up earlier this week a vacancy was left on the vice-chairmanship, presumably for Russia.

But yesterday, when vice chairmen were being named for the all important committee on agriculture of which Canada's Dr. E. S. Archibald is chairman, a Russian delegate urged in vain that these appointments be left open for later consideration.

Five of the delegations whose credentials were not complete in time for signing the constitution on opening day, are awaiting an opportunity to sign. It is understood the supplementary signing ceremony was being delayed awaiting the expected presentation of Russian credentials so that Mr. Sergeev could take part in it.

Yesterday Rt. Hon. Philip J. Noel Baker, Minister of State and leader of the United Kingdom delegation, spoke eloquently of his country's faith in the F.A.O. and its determination to make it succeed.

"We are confident that its success will mean much to our generation and to all succeeding generations," Mr. Baker said.

GIRL'S STRANGLER MAY HAVE BEEN A ROD RIDER

Intensive Search for Ruddy-Complexioned Youth Being Carried On by Police Posse

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 20—(CP) — Police threw a dragnet over this bustling Northern Ontario steel centre and surrounding areas today in an intensive search for a ruddy-complexioned youth believed to have strangled 18-year-old Theresa DeCourcy on her way to a school dance after he had molested two other women.

As the manhunt spread over adjacent sections of Algoma district and Michigan's upper peninsula, investigators advanced the theory that the slain girl was the victim of a sex maniac. The comparative infrequency of sex crimes in this district suggested the killer may be a transient who made his way to the city by "riding the rods" of a freight train.

The body of the attractive blond technical school student, was found yesterday in a cluster of brush near a railway siding 200 yards from the technical school and just north of the centre of the city.

Every Available Means

Led by Chief of Police Irvin L. Robertson and Detective Fred Rowe of the city police investigators are using every available means to run down the killer before he can strike again.

Miss DeCourcy was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. E. L. DeCourcy. Her father is registrar of deeds for Algoma district.

Police established the time of the slaying as between 8 and 9 p. m. Thursday. The girl set out to attend a student dance at the technical school but did not reach the school.

Taking a short-cut to reach the dance, the girl had followed a dark shrubbery-bordered pathway across the railway property frequently used by students going to and from the school.

Put up Desperate Fight

It is believed that as she hurried through the gathering darkness, she met the killer who seized her and attempted to strangle her with a strong butcher cord. Footprints found later in sand near the siding showed, that the girl put up a desperate fight but was unable to beat off her assailant.

Oily marks found on her legs indicated she was dragged across the tracks of the siding, then over 80 feet of rocky terrain to a cluster of brush.

All Forms of Gambling in Montreal With Barbotte Being Most Popular

Montreal, Oct. 20 — (CP) — Some chance-takers say Montreal is a place where you can win a pot of gold or lose your shirt any old night and if you heed J. Omer Asselin gambling can't be stamped out here unless a force of 5,000 men battles it exclusively.

The chairman of Montreal's 6-man executive committee— whose position is more powerful than that of Mayor Camillien Houde — made his statement in an interview replying to criticism on the streets and in newspapers of gambling conditions in Canada's largest city. The present Montreal police force numbers about 1,400 including office staff and all.

Mr. Asselin cracked back at churches and service clubs for "encouraging" certain types of gambling. He mentioned bingo games for Parish support, lotteries by service clubs and publication of race results by newspapers.

But of all the forms of gambling to be found in Montreal the most popular is barbotte. You meet barbotte players everywhere.

Barbotte, a game played with dice and said to have a faster turn over than craps, came to Montreal about 20 years ago from the United States. Since then its popularity has increased, with houses operating in many parts of the city. The morality squad of the city police have made raids on some of these establishments, and some have been padlocked — at first from one to three months, but latterly for a 12-month period.

In playing barbotte, the thrower wins if he rolls any of the following combinations: 3-3, 6-5, 5-5 or 6-6. Should be roll 1-1, 2-1, 2-2, or 4-4, he loses. Other combinations do not count.

Mr. Asselin said there was a "lot of hypocrisy" concerning gambling on the part of "certain important Montrealers." Then he added: "If certain people want to stop gambling so badly, why don't they set an example? Do you know how many constables we woul dnee dto d fl would need to stop gambling of all kinds in Montreal? Well, just about 5,000 men, that's all.

"Do you know that I receive invitations each day of the week to subscribe to one lottery or drawing of some sort? I find one ticket, perhaps two, and often 10 or 12. Naturally the purpose of these drawings is charity, but it still remains gambling.

"Everyone buys sweepstake tickets. Everyone buys tickets on new up-to-date and ultra-modern houses. Everyone buys lottery tickets. Everyone plays bingo. Everyone plays poker. Everyone plays all sorts of gambling games. Everyone plays the races.

"I am opposed to gambling at home or in public places, nationally. Let us start by putting a stop to some of these bingos which I admit, help to pay the debt of a parish, but however are against the law."

Bingo games have been sponsored by many Roman Catholic parishes in the past, but in recent years there has been a considerable decline in this activity. Where once bingo games were weekl yaffairs in most parishes, now they are rather the exception than the rule.

Seven-Man Junta Ruling Country, Promises Election

President Medina Unseated When Junior Officers Rebel

By C. ALLAN STEWART

Panama, Oct. 20 —(AP)— The Tachira radio station in western Venezuela said today Gen. David Lopez Henriquez had assumed command of loyal government forces and was preparing to march on Caracas to oust rebellious forces from the capital.

Tachira is 400 miles west of Caracas.

The announcer said the states of Tachira, Trujillo, Merida, Falcon, Varinas and Lara were remaining loyal to the government.

Caracas, Venezuela, Oct. 20. — (AP)—A revolutionary Junta tightened its grip on oil-rich Venezuela today after unseating President Isaias Medina Angarita in a bloody uprising which cost 50 lives and left 100 wounded.

The seven-man Junta, which promptly promised a general election by direct, secret vote, announced it would follow a pro-Democratic policy.

The Junta came into power after young army officers, ranging from the rank of major down, rebelled against the Adinos, a military clique which had dominated national politics for a century.

(Bogota dispatches said the Andinos still claimed control of the western states of Tachira, Merida and Trujillo. Whether these states possessed sufficient armed strength to threaten a counter-revolution was called "conjectural". Persons with a knowledge of Venezuelan politics predicted the Andinos "will never voluntarily back down".)

Some Under Arrest.

President Medina and Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contrerars, former president who had announced his candidacy for the 1946-51 presidency, were reported under arrest and scheduled to face a swift trial.

(Bogota advices, quoting Caracas radio, said the trial would be on charges of graft and fraud. They added that the former government leaders would be given an opportunity to explain the source of their fortunes publicly.)

A state of siege existed in Caracas, which had been isolated from the rest of Venezuela. Newspapers were censored, radio stations closed, transport paralyzed and electric current shut off.

Reinforcements from insurgent-held Maracay, 30 miles east of the capital, were reported en route to restore order. Thousands of armed civilians had begun to loot Caracas homes shortly after the Medina government fell.

Stations Return to Air.

(Bogota dispatches said the Caracas radio stations returned to the air and announced that the Junta would maintain permanent relations with all countries, especially the United States, Britain, the Soviet Union and Latin American powers.)

(In another Caracas broadcast, which was heard in Bogota, a Junta domestic-policy commentator said a "government by the workers, farmers and middle class" would be established and one of its prime objectives would be to cut living costs while raising the standard of living.)

The revolution began shortly after 2 p.m. Thursday, when young officers seized the Miraflores Palace and the military Academy. Several high officers and cabinet officials who had been lured to the palace were seized as hostages.

Bombs Are Dropped.

Shortly before noon yesterday seven army planes from the Maracay airbase dropped bombs on San Carlos barracks and flew over police headquarters. The police surrendered, depriving Medina of his last local support.

Medina surrendered along with several members of his cabinet. Education Minister Rafael Vega took refuge in the Mexican Embassy.

(Foreign sources credited Medina, second president after the 26-year-Gomez dictatorship ended in 1935, with having brought Venezuela far along the road to democracy. They indicated the question of elections might have played a part in the uprising. Under the present constitution, the president is elected by members of Congress. There had been a growing demand for direct election of a president and the Junta promised such an election in one of its first pronouncements.)

British Gloster Exceeds 600 MPH.

Gloucester, Oct. 20 (Reuters)—One of the British Gloster meteor jet-propelled planes which in a few days will make an attempt on the world speed record off Herne Bay, Kent, during a test run near here exceeded 600 miles an hour—the highest recorded speed ever attained in level flight.

Piloted by Sqdn. Ldr. Philip Stenbury, 24 year old Battle of Britain pilot, the machine will fly at Herne Bay Monday, if weather conditions are favorable.

ASSESSING OFFICERS MEET IN CITY

Addresses on recept changes in the assessment act passed at the last session of the legislature were heard in Belleville earlier in the week when delegates from District No. 5 of the Association of Assessing officers for Ontario met at the city hall for their annual Zone convention.

Delegates from the five counties included in the association were present at the meeting which was addressed by A.J.B. Gray, Deputy Minister for the Department of Municipal Affairs for Ontario and J. P. Coombe, supervisor for the above department.

Max Sloan, assessment commissioner for the city of Peterboro, acted as chairman for the meeting with Mayor Frank S. Follwell extending the official welcome of the city to the visiting delegates. Guest speakers were introduced by Fred J. Wilson, M.P.P., Warden for Hastings county.

BROKEN CULVERT BLOCKS MUDCAT LANE

With a wooden culvert on Mudcat Lane, two miles east of Foxboro breaking through Friday afternoon when crossed over by a heavily laden truck, this road will be closed to through traffic until repairs are made, it was stated today by County Engineer Larry Langlois. Local traffic however will be able to use the road up to the point where the culvert is out. Repairs to the culvert will be effected as speedily as possible although it is expected there may be difficulty securing the proper type of timbers.

INVESTIGATION SHIFTS TO NORTH OF COUNTY

Provincial Police are investigating the activities of some youths in the northern section of the county with regard to the breaking and entering or summer cottages on Roblin's Lake, in Ameliasburg.

The depredations which occurred recently including the breaking and entering of the cottages and the theft of a number of articles. From one cottage was taken silverware, linen, and cases of canned goods. Entering a second cottage the intruders got away with gasoline lamps, gasoline and other articles.

Investigation of the police officers saw the trail lead to the north country and developments are expected momentarily.

Scouts and Cubs Raise $550

The Boy Scouts and Wolf Cubs of the city think the residents of their home town are a "pretty swell bunch of people". For didn't they respond to the lads' "Apple Day" with the amount of $780 gross which after all expenses were deducted, netted some $550 for the scouts and cubs work here.

And two of the proudest boys in the city yesterday were Scout T. Allison, of the 4th Belleville Troop and Cub Larry Langman of the 4th Belleville Cub Pack who topped their fellows in the prize list for the best decorated baskets. Other winners were: Scouts Bill Spencer, 1st Belleville; Albert Newman, 4th Belleville; and Gerald Schryver, 1st Belleville. Taking the other prizes in the Cub division were J. Brownell and Bobby Bateman, 1st Belleville Pack; Jim Nighswander and Ronny Belnap, 4th Belleville Pack and B. Ervine of the 1st Belleville Pack.

Scout and Cub officials were loud in their expressions of appreciation of the response to their appeal by the general public, also to Mr. Leo Riggs for the use of his showrooms and the Scouters and their assistants for their help.

Mooseheart Home Explained To Moose Members

On Thursday evening last upwards of fifty members of Belleville Lodge No. 1004 Loyal Order of Moose and their friends, gathered at the Hotel Quinte to welcome Brother Harry G. Fester, past governor of West Toronto lodge and former chairman of the Moose war activities committee for Canada.

Bro. Fester, himself, orphaned at an early age contrasted his early struggles to obtain an education, with the educational prviliges of the 837 children now resident at Mooseheart, the child city, maintained by the Loyal Order of Moose.

Of interest to Canadians is the fact that Mr. D. Teinwedder, General superintendent of Mooseheart, and one of the country, most eminent child psychologists is a Canadian being born in Stratford, Ont. During the war the United States army, knowing of the high standard of health of Mooseheart, sent their experts to Mooseheart to study their diet and the same was adopted for the U. S. army. Of the 690 Mooseheart, graduates, who enlisted with the army and navy 520 have obtaiend officers commissions.

Bro. Fester spoke briefly of the work being done at Moosehaven, the home for the aged of the Order in Florida where this year one half million dollars are being spent to modernize the home.

Reports on Work.

Reporting on the work of the Moose war activities committee he reported that $38.000 worth of clothing was purchased and sent to Great Britain for the relief of Bombed out by the lodges throughout Canada.

A letter was received from a little lad in England, thanking them for the clothing received, stating that he was better clothed now, than ever before. Ten thousand dollars in cash was also sent and 1.800 pairs of boots.

Arrangements had been made for homes in Canada. for 300 children and for another 300 in the United States which however could not be carried though as the British government stopped sending children out of the country, after the bombing of the ship, which was carrying children to Canada.

After Bro. Fester's address a hearty votes of thanks was given, refreshments were served and a social hour was spent.

Frank M. Haffey, Trenton Merchant Dies Suddenly

Trenton, Oct. 20 — Mr. Frank Michael Haffey, prominent merchant of Trenton for several years and a member of the town council, passed away suddenly at his home early Wednesday morning. He was in his 63rd year and only a few hours before his death he complained of illness.

Mr. Haffey came to Trenton from Toronto and had built up a prosperous drug store business in the town. Last December he was elected to the town council and was elected chairman of the Court of Revision. He took a keen interest in his work as a councillor and advocated many civic improvements.

He was a C.C.F. candidate in West Hastings for the Provincial House last June, and received a substantial vote although he was not elected. In religion he was a member of the Church of St. Peter-in-Chains. His wife, the former Mary Ellen Egan, passed away about four years ago.

The late Mr. Haffey had a wide circle of friends in Trenton and district who have learned with keen regret of his demise.

To mourn his loss Mr. Haffey leaves two daughters, Mrs. Cumberland of Whitby, and Miss Katherine, at home; and four sons John, Clyde, Michael and Neil.

The funeral will take place on Monday morning to St. Peter-in-Chains where solemn mass will be said. Interment in Mount Calvary Cemetery.

"Schmidt Document" To be Submitted To King Leopold

Brussels, Oct. 20 —(AP)— Jacques Pirenne, King Leopold's private secretary, will leave Brussels for Geneva today, carrying with him a copy of the "Schmidt Document" for submission to the exciled king.

A government communique has described the document as an account of a meeting which took place between the King and Hitler at Berchtesgaden in November, 1940. It was compiled by a Dr. Schmidt, Hitler's interpreter.

Anti-Leopold groups consider the document a death blow to the King's hopes of returning to his throne.

TEDDER TO HEAD AIR FORCE

London, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Air Chief Marshal Sir Arthur Tedder will become head of the Royal Air Force next Jan. 1, the Air Ministry announced last night. He succeeds Air Chief Marshal Lord Portal of Hungerford who will retire. Lord Portal is 52. Sir Arthur is 55.

Air Force Stations in County Well Over Loan Objective

Once again indicating that the armed forces personnel in Hastings County are well aware of the savings value represented by Victory Bonds and proof of Air Force members' willingness to assist in financing Canada's vast rehabilitation program, the various air stations in the county are already over their respective objectives in the 9th. Victory Loan campaign, it was announced today by Air Vice Marshall E. E. Middleton, commanding officer of No. 1 Training Command at Trenton.

With a combined objective of $325,000 the three air stations in Hastings, namely, No. 1 Air Training Command; Trenton Air Station, and No. 6 Repair Depot are already far over their objectives despite the fact the campaign officially has not yet commenced.

Objective at Trenton main station was set by County Victory Loan officials at $165,000, with personnel at No. 6 Repair Depot asked to raise $100,000 and staff members and other workers at No. 1 Air Command asked to subscribe another $60,000. Actual figures of subscriptions at the various air stations in the county will be available for Monday, it was stated.

Air station personnel in the county were highly commended today by officials of the Hastings County Victory Loan committee for their over-subscription in the Victory Loan even before the campaign had commenced. Members of the Air Force in previous loans had always come through with flying colors insofar as subscriptions to the Victory Loan are concerned and it is felt by campaign officials that their record thus far in the 9th. Victory Loan will prove a splendid example to civilian subscribers throughout the county.

'Smokes' Sent To Returned Veterans Given to Others

"Just a note to express my appreciation for the 300 cigarettes which were received this morning. I was sure mighty glad to get them," writes former Bellevillian George Gibson to the local Kinsmen Club. "I note in the Canadian papers of a cigarette shortage in Canada. I don't know what they call it over here, shortage or famine. Whatever it it there just isn't any."

George hopes that he will be able to get back to Canada soon but expects his turn to be repatriated will not come until next March or April.

Even when servicemen to whom cigarettes have been addressed have returned to Canada, the "smokes" are not wasted as is evidenced by a card received by the local Kinsmen Club from the wife of FO. D. L. Lattimer. "Thanks for the cigarettes which were forwarded on to me as my husband had returned to Canada," wrote Mrs. Lattimer. "I have sent them on to one of his Canadian friends."

Thus in the face of a "smokes" shortage which makes cigarettes practically non-existent on the overseas civilian market, Kinsmen cigarettes are really appreciated. Kinsmen "smokes" will continue to go overseas as long as Belleville boys are away. A contribution to the Fag Fund will assist in keeping them going.

The following Belleville boys were each shipped three hundred cigarettes by the Belleville Kinsmen Fag Fund:

Apples in Good Demand on Market

A few hampers of Northern Spy apples offered on the local produce market Saturday were quickly picked up by eager customers with vendors quoting $3.50 the bushel. Gideon apples sold at $3 the hamper while MacIntosh sold at 50 cents the half peck.

Price of eggs held firm at 52 cents the dozen on the inside market with mediums fetching 50 cents and pullet eggs 45 cents the dozen. Fowl was quite plentiful with well finished capons bringing as high as 50 cents the pound and individual birds up to $3 each. General price for fowl ranged from 40 to 43 cents the pound.

On the vegetable market potatoes sold at $2.38 per bag with peck lots fetching 58 cents. Beets sold at 40 cents the peck, parnsips at 25 cents the half peck and cauliflower up to 30 cents. Carrots were 35 cents the six-quart basket, and tomatoes 50 cents basket

A few farmers offered apple cider at $1 the gallon. Blue grapes brought 60 cents the basket. A few of last season's hickory nuts sold at 35 cents the quart. Hickory nuts are a complete failure this year, farmers state.

Mixed dry cordwood was quoted at $11 the cord while hemlock slabwood sawed into stove length was available at $6 the half cord. Young pigs were quoted generally at from $7 to $8 each, although larger shoats were quoted at $10 each.

NEW RADAR SCHOOL

London, Oct. 20 — (Reuters) — An Empire radio school for Commonwealth Air Forces to ensure progress in radio instruction and to train signals officers, instructors and signals and radar leaders, is being formed at the R.A.F. station at Debden, Essex, England.

TRENTON

Donations Still Coming in For Clothing Drive

Trenton, Oct. 20 — Further returns from the National Used Clothing Drive in Trenton for needy peoples of Europe reveal that over 21 tons of clothing and shoes have been contributed by the citizens. Although the drive officially closed last Saturday in Trenton, donations have been left every day this week at the railway freight sheds and these have been packed and shipped by volunteer workers. The collection is taking place this week at Batawa and it is learned that the Bata Shoe Company will contribute one thousand pairs of new shoes.

In Glen Miller and Frankford, complete returns are not yet available. Chairman Norman Banfield, of the local committee in Trenton, is highly pleased with the response made in Trenton, and Mayor Cory terms it a magnificent job for a worthy cause.

May Hold Clinic.

Suggestions that a toxoid clinic for children of school and preschool age, for immunizations against such contagious diseases as diphtheria, also that a kindergarten class should be established in the public schools, were made to the Trenton Teachers' Association on Wednesday afternoon, by J. H. Ormitson, guest speaker. The task and responsibility of the teacher in moulding the character of boys and girls in early years, the speaker said, should be recognized by educational administrations, and when considering the question of salaries, trustees should take into consideration not only experience and ability but the fact that teachers are called upon in many cases to lay the very foundations of Canadian citizenship.

Two District Plants Over Loan Objective

Always among the first industrial plants in the county to achieve their respective Victory Loan objectives, Trenton Bridge Company of Trenton and the Canada Cement Company at Point Anne, have again beaten the gun and have already surpassed their payroll savings goal in bond purchases in the 9th Victory Loan. Announcement of the plants surpassing their objectives was made by plant managers today through the county Victory Loan headquarters at Belleville.

Victory Loan objective at Trenton Bridge was surpassed Friday afternoon with plant officials stating canvassing still to be completed, while at Canada Cement the objective was achieved Saturday although no figures of subscriptions by employees was yet available.

Plane Piloted By Group Captain Forced Down

Kitchener, Oct. 20 — (CP) — A Beechcraft airplane flying from Trenton to Centralia made a forced landing six miles southwest of nearby New Hamburg yesterday and escaped with only one of the wing flaps torn off in a crash through a fence.

The craft was in charge of Group Capt. G. Fullerton Commanding Officer at Trenton, who was recently transferred from Centralia. An airman was with Capt. Fullerton.

STORM CAUSES DAMAGE

Chicoutimi, Que., Oct. 20 — (CP)— An electric storm in the Saguenay River district yesterday caused considerable damage and disrupted electric service in Chicoutimi and nearby Arvida. A bolt of lightning struck a 15,000-volt power wire between the two municipalities and service was interrupted for several hours.

Quintena Rebekahs Hold Installation Night for Lodge

On Tuesday evening, a very impressive event took place when Mrs. Mildred Morrow, District Deputy President of Belleville District No. 30, installed the officers of Quintena Rebekah Lodge No. 133.

District Deputy President, Mrs. Mildred Morrow; Deputy Marshal, Mrs. Ethel Duffin; Deputy Warden, Miss Evelyn Bailey; Deputy Recording Secretary, Mrs. Eva Hicks; Deputy Financial Secretary, Mrs. Gladys Elliott; Deputy Treasurer, Mrs. Edith Utman; Deputy Inside Guardian, Mrs. Retta Wilson; Deputy Outside Guardian, Mrs. Grace Vandervoort; Deputy Musician, Mrs. Laura Shortt; Deputy Chaplain, Mrs. Mabel Megginson; Soloist, Mrs. Hazel Heagle; Guard of Honor, Mrs. I. Good; Mrs. Florence Maynes, Mrs. Mabel Heath, Mrs. E. Fox, Mrs. Annie Warren, Mrs. Evelyn Finkle.

The officers installed into their respective stations were:

Junior Past Noble Grand, Miss Phyllis Twiddy; Noble Grand, Mrs. Georgina Charlton; Vice Grand, Miss Evelyn Frost; Warden, Mrs. Jean Kolver; Conductor, Mrs. Lena Belnap; Recording Secretary, Mrs. Annie Philips; Financial Secretary, Mrs. Lena MacMillan; Treasurer, Miss Delia Johnston; Right Supporter, Noble Grand, Mrs. Jennie Redner; Left Supporter of Noble Grand, Mrs. Ruth Charlton; Outside Guardian, Miss Helen Miller; Inside Guardian, Mrs. Mary Fluery; Right Supporter of Vice Grand, Mrs. Irene Aman; Left Supporter of Vice Grand, Mrs. Jean Maudsley; Chaplain, Mrs. Luella Dulmage; Pianist, Mrs. Dorothy Harwood; Degree Staff Captain, Mrs. Irene Aman, assistant, Mrs. Eva Turvey.

After the opening ceremonies were concluded the D.D.P., Mrs. Morrow was introduced by Mrs. Jennie Redner, Past Noble Grand, and at the same time, Mrs. May Thomas, of Oshawa Rebekah Lodge, No. 3, Past President of the Rebekah Assembly of Ontario was introduced by Mrs. Ethel Sandercock, P.D.D.P., and Mrs. Grace McEwan, P.N.G., introduced Mr. Gordon Miller, District Deputy Grand Master of Belleville District I.O.O.F.

Officers Welcomed.

The officers were officially received and welcomed by the Noble Grand, Miss Phyllis Twiddy, and were escorted to the platform through an arch of roses, carried by a guard of honor—Mrs. Mabel Bray, Mrs. Irene McMartin, Mrs. Jean Kolver, Mrs. Mary Fluery, Mrs. Jean Maudsley and Miss Helen Miller.

The installing of the new officers was then portrayed in a very efficient manner; the charges were very capably rendered and the floor work carried out in a very dignified manner. The ceremony was made much more impressive by the beautiful rendition of 'My Task", "The Lord's Prayer", and the "Twenty-third Psalm", by the Soloist, Mrs. Hazel Heagle.

After the installation the general orders of business were dealt with by the newly installed Noble Grand, Mrs. Georgina Charlton.

Addresses Given.

During the evening addresses were given by the D.D.P., Mrs. Morrow; Past President, Mrs. Thomas, and the D.D.G.M., Mr. Gordon Miller and visiting members from the other lodges.

The new Noble Grand, Mrs. Charlton, received a beautiful bouquet of roses from her husband and sons, presented to her by Mrs. Mabel Bray, and a bouquet of chrysanthemums from her aunt and cousins, Mrs. Ruth Charlton, Mabel Bray and Irene McMartin and presented by Mrs. McMartin.

During the evening, Mrs. Charlton, Noble Grand, and Miss Phyllis Twiddy, retiring Noble Grand, wore corsages of roses, which had been presented to them by the Foursquare Club.

The D.D.P., Mrs. Morrow, received a beautiful pair of crystal candlesticks from the Lodge, presented by Miss Phyllis Twiddy and Mrs. Noakes. Mrs. Morrow very graciously thanked the members of the Lodge for their gift.

Dainty Refreshments Served.

After the closing of Lodge, refreshments were served in the upper hall. Two tables were tastefully decorated with Autumn flowers and tall tapers of pink and green emblematic of the Rebekah Order.

Tea was poured by Mrs. E. Neate, P.D.D.P., Mrs. E. Sandercock, P.D.D.P., Mrs. Irene Aman, P.D.D.P., and Mrs. Grace McEwan, P.N.G. The refreshments were served by a number of members under the supervision of Mrs. Anne Cherrie and had been prepared by the refreshment committee the convener of which was Mrs. Maude Patrick.

Ferns and potted baby 'mums made a lovely setting in the lodge hall for the installation ceremony. This and the beautifully decorated tables were due to the efforts of Mrs. Anne Cherrie and Mrs. Jennie Redner.

The very enjoyable evening was brought to a close by a hearty vote of thanks which was moved by Mrs. Morrow, D.D.P., and seconded by Miss E. Bailey, P.D.D.P., to the Quintena Sisters for their kind hospitality.

Longview, Wash., Oct. 20 — (AP)—Coroner Gordon Quarnstrom said last night a 14-year-old boy disclosed that Barbara Conrad, 12, drowned Sunday while bathing nude in a local reservoir and that embarrassment from witnessing the death had kept the boy's lips sealed for five days.

Need More Helpers On Monday Night To Pack Clothing

With huge piles of clothing destined for the war destitute of Europe awaiting baling and packing, officials of the Belleville National Clothing Committee are direly in need of assistance.

Chairman Jack White today issued an appeal for helpers to assist his committee in readying the tremenous quantities of clothing and foot apparel for shipment.

Those desirous of assisting in the work are requested to report to the Armouries at seven o'clock Monday evening.

The need is urgent, and as many hands make labor lighter, or in other words "the more the merrier" as many people as can possibly do so are asked to assist in this important work.

Remember, the Armouries at 7 p.m. Monday.

CHILDREN PADDLE NAKED IN ICY DESCHUTES RIVER

Bend, Ore., Oct. 20 — (AP) — The temperature was 17 degrees above zero and police were a bit incredulous when telephoned to go after four children who were supposed to be paddling in the icy Deschutes River. Investigation proved the report accurate. The five - year - olds were paddling about naked and oblivious of the cold.

CHARGE OF MURDER

Saint John, N.B., Oct. 20 — (CP)— A charge of murder was laid against Mrs. Josephine Winnifred McLean, 21, in police court here yesterday. The charge arose from the death of her 10-months-old daughter. The accused was remanded to Oct. 25 for preliminary hearing.

GIRL'S STRANGLER

Following announcement of the discovery of the body, Rev. A. G. Donald of St. Andrew's United Church reported to police that two women members of the church choir had been molested on their way to choir practice Thursday night near the C.P.R. tracks less than a mile from the scene of the slaying. Police interviewed the two women and obtained a description of their assailant.

Ducked Between Legs

One of the choir members, an 18-year-old girl, said the man grabbed her by the legs and attempted to throw her to the ground near the railway tracks.

"I am shorter than he is and I managed to duck between his legs," she said. "I screamed and he ran away."

She said the man was "quite young," about five feet eight inches tall, with high cheek bones and a ruddy complexion.

A less detailed description was given by the other choir member, a woman aged 30, who said the man grabbed her by the arms.

"Being bigger than he was in stature, I challenged him and told him to leave me alone and beat it," she related. The man fled.

Search for the killer recalled the hunt a few years ago for a "hugger" who terrorized Sault women for weeks and was finally caught after police detailed several members of the force to dress in feminine garments and act as decoys.

UNITED NATIONS

Mr. Diefenbaker made his suggestion while calling for unanimous approval now by the House of the charter despite some of its shortcomings.

A government declaration on how Canada's fighting forces will be raised in the event of another war should be made now, Mr. Diefenbaker said.

The people of Canada had a right to a "frank" statement from the government now on the extent of the Canadian contribution to the organization's armed forces. If the charter was approved without such a declaration, it would only be the acceptance of the "shadow" and not the "substance" of the charter.

Parliament had a right to know if the "Canadian contribution would be "qualified and restricted" or if it would be an "all-out" effort.

Advocates Opening.

Mr. Stewart urged that the charter be lived up to and that the nations provide better treatment for minorities. He advocated the opening of Palestine to the Jews.

Mr. Bradette said there should be no mental reservations in the new United Nations organization. If there were, the new organization was doomed to the same failures which resulted in the fall of the old League of Nations.

Mr. Rose singled out critics of Russia and said many people now were attempting to make it appear that the Soviet rather than Germany and Japan was the real enemy. On the basis of "unfounded suspicious" Russia was being blamed for everything.

Mr. Jacques said that those who were doing the most talking now about collective security were the ones who were for the destruction of the only force of collective security that existed in 1939—the British Empire.

Mr. Raymond said Canada would gain nothing by remaining out of the United Nations organization. If she remained out she would undoubtedly be effected by decision in which she had had no voice. The charter as it was was better than nothing and Canada should accept it with the hope of improving it later.

Now Divided.

Mr. Pouliot said that outside of Switzerland and Sweden Europe now was divided into two parts, one decadent, one barbarous, and civilization would no longer come from the east. Civilization would go from the west. erica would have to tell Europe to stop making trouble in the world.

Canadians could not say they were united or that the kind of conditions prevailed in Canada which should prevail through the world.

The "stupid strike" at Windsor and other labor troubles were not peculiar to Canada. They were due to the fact that a few greedy persons tried to gain and hold power and wealth.

Cyrus Eaton Success Story

(From Newsweek Magazine, New York)

Cyrus S. Eaton, at 61, is an old hand at climbing the success ladder because this is his second trip up. Few men in American finance have had more spectacular rise or a more complete failure. Like Humpty Dumpty, he had a great fall, and his Midwest industrial empire broke into just as many pieces.

Cyrus Eaton, however, did not break. Perhaps because of the inherent toughness of his Nova Scotian character, perhaps because of the tranquility of spirit brought by a lifelong study of religion and philosophy, he bounced—and is still bouncing.

A partner in Otis and Co., Cleveland investment bankers, Eaton has his fingers in many pies. Last week he stuck them in another; the automobile-building partnership of Henry Kaiser with Joseph W. Frazer, president of Graham-Paige. Otis and Co. emerged as the principal sponsor of the $17,000,000 of common stock the Kaiser-Frazer Corp. will try to sell the public at $10 a share ($1 par). As an earnest of good faith Kaiser and Graham-Paige each bought $2,500,000 worth, at the same figure.

They have leased from the Reconstruction Finance Corp., the main manufacturing and assembly buildings of the fabulous Willow Run near Detroit, and will soon start using the lines where Ford turned out bombers to produce the Frazer, a new medium-priced automobile, as well as tractors and farm implements. Later, the low-priced Kaiser is to be produced.

Only three weeks before, Eaton had appeared with Robert R. Young, the railroad financier, in an offer to buy for $75,000,000 the sleeping-car business of the Pullman Co. Eaton, in fact, has been a silent partner in all of Young's successful efforts to piece together an integrated profitable railroad system out of the wreckage of the Van Sweringen empire.

If Cyrus Eaton were superstitious, he might well believe his affinity with success stems from the fact that John D. Rockefeller gave him his first job. Eaton's uncle, the Rev. Charles A. Eaton, was pastor, at the turn of the century, of Euclid Avenue Baptist Church in Cleveland, which Rockefeller had attended since boyhood. Young Cyrus, a native of Pugwash, Nova Scotia, had come to Cleveland from Toronto, where he studied for the ministry. Instead of preaching he went to work for Rockefeller's East Ohio Gas Co.

His first job was to pacify citizens who objected to having their lawns torn up for gas mains. His bright blue eyes and winning smile were so successful that he soon was touring the country for a syndicate buying up utility franchises. When the panic of 1907 caused the syndicate to cancel franchises, Eaton took them himself and combined them into the Continental Gas and Electrical Co.

When the Trumbull Steel Co. fell on evil days, Eaton, who had joined Otis and Co. in 1916, moved in. He knew about it; he had studied it from the outside. The ailing firm needed $18,000,000. Eaton walked in cold on the owners and offered to raise the money, casually adding: "If you doubt my ability to underwrite it, just call the Cleveland Trust Co. and ask if my check for $20,000,000 will be honored." Out of Trumbull and similar small mills he built Republic Steel, third biggest in the country.

His device of control was the holding company, Continental Shares. He sold millions of dollars of its stock to the public. He got huge loans from banks ($7,000,000 from Chase of New York alone). He moved in on Samuel Insull, that other ill-fated master of holding companies. (A stock joke of the '30s: "Eaton must have diabetes, because he's taking Insull-in.") He was well into the Insull empire when the New York banks called his loans and brought about his collapse.

Historians may well find that the depression would have ruined Eaton anyway, just as it did every other financial pyramid builder. There was a suspicion, however, that the bankers were harsher to him than they might have been out of dislike for his trouncing of Eugene Grace and Charles M. Schwab in their efforts to merge Youngstown Steel and Tube with Bethlehem Steel.

Eaton has always maintained that his attempts to build a Midwest industrial empire were based on the idealistic desire to make that region independent of New York financial control. He says he resented the way "New York" squeezed the Seizerlings out of Goodyear Rubber and tried to take over Henry Ford.

Eaton's battle cry, on his second trip up the ladder, has been: "Down with New York!" He has represented himself as the champion of little men fighting the big "insiders" and in doing so has astutely managed, more than once, to enlist of the New Deal. When he fought for, and won, the right to open up new utility financing to competitive bidding, no less a personage than Harry S. Truman, then a senator testified in his behalf. With Halsey Stuart and Co., of Chicago he has time and again matched juicy refinancing plums from Morgan Stanley and Kuhn, Loab. He has won directorates on Young's rich Chesapeake and Ohio, on the powerful Cleveland ore-and-steel combine of the Cliffs Corp., on Sherwin Williams paints, and on the National Refining Co., which he put on its feet. In return for investing big money in the Steep Rock Mining Co. (Canadian iron ore), he got 1,300,000 shares at a penny apiece. They are now worth more than $2,750,000.

Eaton was a Roosevelt man throughout. In 1940, when all three Cleveland papers supported Wilkie, Eaton wrote Secretary Ickes that Cleveland badly needed a new paper. His inherent idealism cropped out at the outbreak of the war when he wrote the papal delegate in Washington urging the Catholic Church to oppose the "pagan forces" of the Axis. Recently, in an article for The Antioch Review, he titled a lance against professors who wrote "gibberish," cited an horrific example: "Empirical historians must eschew the tacit teleology of unilinear evolutionism."

THE trail has been a long dark way.
At times it seemed we might not see the day;
But now at last the rising sun is ours
And with it comes new challenge to our powers.
Was war naught but a game to win by score
And, having won, to cheer, and strive no more?
If that be all for which our men have died
Then we have lied.

O Canada, most favoured of the lands,
Review whereon our right to victory stands;
Our vow to free and succour those oppressed—
Provide for those who fought and are distressed,
Who risked without reserve all they could give
To break our foes that we might freely live.
If we now stop to haggle at the cost
Then we'll have lost.

If we play square with those who fought our fight,
And work with them to shape our world aright;
Postpone our buying things we little need—
Prevent inflation growing through our greed;
Co-operate in peace as well as war
By loaning to our cause a little more . . .
If we keep faith until the job is done
Then we'll have won.

"Sign Your Name for Victory"

What the Dominion's gallant sons and daughters went to defend, and achieve has come about, victory and peace. Many of the service men and women are home and more are coming back by every boat and train.

Victory and peace imply obligations and now for the first time since the triumph of Allied arms in this year 1945 over the military might of Germany and Japan Canadians are asked to buy bonds in the Ninth Victory Loan drive which opens Monday, October 22nd.

The history of loans in the more than six years that have passed since the war began has been one of increasing public interest and participation and with the inspiration of the returned veterans and the anticipation of welcoming the rest of those who are returning, it is confidently expected that the Canadian people will give the most magnificent demonstration of their wholehearted financial interest in this loan which means the raising of money to carry out the great program of rehabilitation as one of its chief objects.

As this is the only loan to be launched in the next twelvemonth, there being none next spring, there is every assurance that Canadians will give the highest proof of their gratitude for what the Allied cause has achieved and will make the bond sale unusually successful. Everyone remembers that the Eighth Victory Loan reached the highest in the history of the Canadian people and realizes that the citizens of the Dominion will make heavy purchases of the Ninth Victory Loan issue.

Conditions have changed greatly since the Eighth Loan. Victory over the Axis states has been achieved and the collapse of the enemy has thrust immediately forward the problems of rehabilitation. In the past few months many thousands of members of the Canadian armed forces have come home and have been welcomed back to their civilian places with the warmth of heart that does the Canadian people proud. The immense task of bringing home so many veterans from so many fields of conflict is taking a great deal of money and the planning for their rehabilitation into civilian ranks will take means which will be best served now by the buying of Victory bonds.

Never have Canadians had such an opportunity for showing their gratitude to those who have served as they have today for the victory has been won over two powerful enemies who threatened the future of the entire world. It has meant peace and the return of loved ones from the battles in the cause of the Empire, Canada and humanity the world over. We all realize that all that Canadians are and possess depended upon the defeat of the Germans and Japanese. The rejoicings over victory and with the return of thousands of young Canadians were sincere and expressed the very soul of the people. Canadians are grateful and will continue to show their gratitude for what has been done.

Canadians were proud of their sons as they fought and they are proud of them as they see them return, the very flower of young manhood, with a rich treasury of optimism and the brightest hopes and confidence in the Dominion. This spirit of the veterans is one of the happy auguries for the future and their bright hopes will not be dimmed for the Canadian people are going to prove — though it does not need proof to the returned men — that they are with them with all their heart and soul and all their material resources in the great task yet to be achieved, the full rehabilitation of the returned men and the realization of their fondest hopes for the Dominion and for the world. These young men are the cream of Canadian life. They left on many a field comrades they will never forget. Together they fought the enemy and triumphed and their memory of these who fell and of those who suffer from the wounds of war inspires their hearts. In these men rests Canada's true and great hope. Success of the Ninth Victory Loan will prove that they are receiving a square deal for all that they have achieved.

So Canada at this time with the financial obligations of war and victory and the task of rehabilitation on her hands will fulfil the pledge given when the men went away on service. The war is over, but it leaves many burdens, pensions to be provided for the families of the fallen, care of the wounded. These will be honorably met.

The service folk who went from this district have made a noble record of heroism and fortitude. The people too have shown their worth by the magnificent support of every effort in the war and will do so in the times of peace. This County of Hastings has done well. Her sons have served nobly and the home front has also served in loyal support of all calls and now is fully prepared to carry out all the obligations by support of the Ninth Victory Loan.

The fact that there will be but this one loan issued in the coming twelve months is a reason many people are planning to repeat in this loan what they did in the two previous loans together. There is on every hand the confidence of successful achievement of the objectives. Hastings County's is set at $3,600,000 and Belleville's, set at $1,448,000.

It is a far recollection to the success of the bonds sales after the previous world war when this district and city made the greatest demonstration of all. That they will show this spirit of full participation again in the coming weeks is no faint hope. This can be made the greatest bond sale in local history.

The motto is "Sign Your Name for Victory." Those words recall the sacrifice and the achievements that have brought back peace again to earth and they also impress the thought that the fruits of victory are yet to be achieved in all their fullness in this era.

When a man signs his name he means himself. This the people will mean too.

Salvage

During the war the Great Lakes gave up huge quantities of scrap. Several hundred tons were salvaged from the abandoned quarries on Kelly's Island. One barge-load was made up of 50 tons of rusted steam shovels and aged machinery, The Lake Carriers' Bulletin reports.

The old passenger ship, City of Erie, succumbed to the nation's wartime hunger for metal. Built in 1894 at a cost of $375,000, she was the pride of the lakes in her day.

And let it be said, on behalf of lakes seamen, that the needs of their nation came first. In all that raking and scraping of the lakes from top to bottom, the $100,000 cargo of kegged Scotch that went down with the Regina in 1913 still is unsalvaged, untapped and still aging — so far as is known.

War Vocabulary Sometimes Weird

(New York Herald Tribune)

General George C. Marshall's biennial report disclosed the code words which military forces used to cloak big operations.

Four of the big operations never came off:

Sledgehammer — Emergency premature invasion of France if German victories in Russia necessitated it.

Dracula — Seizure of Rangoon.

Olympic — First invasion of Japan this autumn in southern Kyushu.

Some of the operations which did come off were:

Husky — Invasion of Sicily.

Overlord — The 1944 invasion of Normandy.

Galvanic — Seizure of the Marshall Islands.

Grapeshot — The 1944 spring drive that captured Rome.

Newspaper Facts

A striking trend in recent advertising has been the emphasis on giving the public facts and information about business problems and achievements.

According to a scientist, the higher the sugar content the redder the maples in the fall. Judging by the doleful lack so far of autumn color this year, it almost looks as though sugar rationing had been extended to the forests, the Ottawa Journal suggests.

WHEN FISHING IS GOOD

The season wasn't very good,
Bass never bit the way they should.
And, what caused anglers oft to fret—
Minnows and worms seemed hard to get.
But still I heard old-timers say:
"You should have been here yesterday!"

The more the year I think about,
It wasn't good for rainbow trout.
The fishing through the spring was bad
And little luck with flies I had.
But still the natives let me know:
"You should have come a week ago."

From lake to lake I went in search
Of pike and pickerel and perch.
Though now and then I caught a few,
'Twas not the old-time sport I knew.
But this they wrote me to my sorrow:
"You should have waited till tomorrow!"

Two Schools of Thought On Atomic Energy Control

By J. M. ROBERTS, JR.
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

The House of Representatives Committee studying the control of atomic energy was told yesterday that there are two schools of thought on the subject, one favoring production for peaceful ends and the other wanting more bombs "so we can blast the hell out of Russia before Russia blasts the hell out of us."

First it must be said that the witness, Dr. Leo Szilard of the University of Chicago, was by no means advocating such a policy against Russia, but was bringing into the open what he considered a dangerous attitude. As a matter of fact, it is extremely doubtful if you could find anyone who would advocate use of the atomic bomb against Russia, or anyone else, today or any given day. But it must be admitted that Dr. Szilard was describing a vague current attitude of fear and distrust of Russia which is complicating relations with our wartime ally. It is an attitude which may as well be looked at for what it is worth. There is some indication that reluctance to discuss it openly in the past has heightened its appeal to some people.

During and since the war Russia has taken the attitude that, regardless of worldwide peace efforts, she had to first look after spots which might directly trouble her. Whether a charge of imperialism can be made to stock on this question is at least debatable.

To talk about going to war with Russia now, because of certain acts which violate the western conscience, is to condemn the long view without giving it a chance. When we are inclined to pop off about things that irk us today it is just as well to remember that the Russia attack on Finland in 1939, no matter how regrettable, took on an entirely different hue in 1941 when Russia was holding the Germans back from world conquest.

This is not an apology for Russia. It is just to point out that few nations, like few people, ever are in position to pass absolute judgment on others; that the Russians are sensitive, still resentful of past ideological encirclement, and that talk of "blasting hell" out of them can only handicap sincere people everywhere in their search for international solutions.

GUILTY OF MURDER

Barrie, Oct. 19 — (CP)—Lloyd Wellington Simcoe, 17-year-old Indian, last night was found guilty of murdering Freeman Walker, night watchman at the plant of Vilas Enamel, Orillia, Ont., last March 17. He was sentenced to hang Dec. 20. The jury deliberated one hour and 20 minutes.

NEW STATION AT SARNIA

Sarnia, Ont., Oct. 20 (CP) — The Sarnia Broadcasting Company Friday announced a 5,000-kilowatt radio broadcasting station is under construction here. H. M. Hueston is president and A. D. McKenzie, secretary-treasurer.

Labor Blocks Move To Limit Controls

London, Oct. 20 (CP) — Labor Friday blocked a move of the Conservative opposition to limit the government's price controls under the bill for a five-year retention of full wartime economic powers.

Commons defeated 212 to 83 an amendment by Capt. Oliver Lyttelton, former Minister of Trade and Production, which would have bound the government to make regulations only to ensure "fair prices."

A second amendment by Capt. Lyttelton to prevent control that would allow government discrimination against business was voted down 232 to 98.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 20 (CP)— The brother act of this session of parliament agrees in most things including politics but not in the spelling of the surname. They are the Gours or Gourds—short, lean, sharp-featured and 10 years apart in age.

Coming from a St. Lin, Que., family they have a distant relationship with Sir Wilfred Laurier. Fifty-year-old Omer Gour, Liberal member for the nearby farm riding of Russell, says he dropped a "D" because it hindered his ease in writing the name.

Sixty-year-old David Gourd, Liberal member for the mining riding of Chapleau in northwestern Quebec, says he added the "D" because it made the name look better.

Neither helps in the argument as to whether it was "Gour" or "Gourd" originally. Omer says his father used the name with the "D" and David says his father used the name without the "D". Both claim credit for the addition or subtraction.

They occupy twin benches in the Commons Chamber and share the same office on the fourth floor of the centre block—but the names marking their benches and office carry the different spelling.

Before they were elected to the House they saw each other once a year, for the 600 miles between David's town of Amos, Que., and Omer's town of Casselman, Ont., made reunion inconvenient.

As far as the French meaning of both words goes, there is little to choose between them. Gour is an archeological term for a disappearing plateau, while Gourd means to stiffen with cold.

MUSK MEAT: The men planning the army cold weather exercise across the top of Canada this winter likely will welcome a meeting with the big, shaggy brown and yellow animal after which their expedition is named —muskox. He would provide them with juicy steaks to relieve the monotony of rations dropped in cannisters from an air supply train.

The matter of this aerial supply system is one of the most important experiments to be conducted on the three-month expedition. Planners in the capital are studying the possible use of war surplus gliders—which would be expendible.

But they also may try a new glider development by which a piloted supply trailer is loosed from a transport to the column below and then picked up "on the fly" such as a mail bag is whisked into a baggage car by a moving train.

R.C.A.F. headquarters here also are working on a radar gadget—called Rebecca Eureka for no special reason—by which the air supply train will be able to spot the ground expedition more than 100 miles away. This will be used in blizzards and is so accurate that the ground men will have to stand clear of the snowmobile carrying the radar beacon equipment to ensure they won't be hit.

CONFUSION DEPT.: Air Commodore Johnny Fauquier, multi-decorated Canadian master-bomber, told reporters about an English member of one of his Pathfinder crews who contributed to German confusion even while engaged in the dangerous job of evading capture. The crews were warned that if they were captured they would be "worked over" by the heavy-handed Gestapo and not by the German army.

The Englishman was in a crew that crashed and made a successful getaway. Finally reaching Denmark he boarded a car ferry Sweden-bound. The Gestapo was hot on his trail so he ducked into a baggage car. There he found the personal effects of several German commanders in the Norwegian peninsula.

"So," said Johnny with a wide grin, "the lad whiled away his time changing all the labels."

Packsack and Axe Clue for Police

Fort St. John, B. C., Oct. 20 — (CP)—An abandoned packsack and axe near a timberline cabin at the remote headwaters of Manson Creek was one of the few traces found by British Columbia Police following a 150-mile search of the northland for Frank Johnson, 65-year-old trapper and prospector.

In their search for Johnson who had left his cabin Sept. 6 to go hunting grizzlies police discovered a starving pack dog riddled with porcupine quills. It had chewed moose and cariboo hide coverings before falling victim ot a porcupine.

Evidence along the trail showed Johnson had shot 37 grizzlies and evidently met another during a blizzard. Apparently he was too numb with cold to win this last battle.

Aged Woman Burned to Death

Miss Holmes was discovered lying in the front hall of the home —her niece's—with her clothing burned off and her body badly charred. The woman was alone in the house at the time of the accident.

Dr. J. Heurner Mullin, chief coroner, is investigating but it was not learned whether an inquest will be held.

WHAT GOOD IS AN ANTISEPTIC?

Antiseptic means opposed to sepsis or septic. Sepsis means a poisoned state caused by absorption of disease-producing germs or their products from a region of infection into the blood stream. Septicemia means sepsis in the blood—"blood poisoning." Infection means invasion of the tissues by disease-producing germs. Germicide means germ-killing. Disinfectant means removal of infection. Sterilize means to free from all germs. Disinfection applies to wounds, say the first aid application of tincture of iodine to a fresh wound, and to utensils or objects, say the disinfection of dishes with chlorine solution or disinfection of a clinical thermometer by washing it with cool water and soap or with alcohol or with any germicidal solution.

Most practical and reliable way to sterilize anything is by heat, say boiling water for five minutes, boiling milk for five minutes, subjecting bandages and dressings to superheated steam under pressure, passing a needle or other metal implement thru a blue flame. Ironing anything that has been properly washed makes it practically sterile.

If you are going to open a blister or a pimple or a boil or try to dig a sliver out of the skin or attempt any minor surgery such as paring corns you will be on the safe side, in my opinion (as a one horse-and-buggy doctor), if you plunge the needle or knife into a cake of wet soap two or three times just before the operation begins, and of course paint the immediate field of operation with mild tincture of iodine to disinfect the skin.

Plain soap, any make suitable for kitchen or toilet use, is perhaps the best all around disinfectant and antiseptic we have for most purposes where a good disinfectant or antiseptic is required.

To the best of my knowledge and belief the first aid application of a disinfectant or antiseptic or germicide to a fresh wound is the only justifiable or necessary use of germicide or antiseptic. Once a fresh wound has been disinfected the healing of the wound will proceed more rapidly if no further applications of antiseptic or germicidal agents are made.

The care the wound requires (aside from whatever surgical treatment the doctor gives) after the first aid disinfection is simply rest, protection and no meddling.

It is childish to imagine any known antiseptic or germicide will make a wound heal faster than nature will heal it if you let it alone. But letting a wound alone is an art which most laymen and some doctors do not understand. We'll chat about that some day.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Left-Handedness

Why is a child left-handed? Is it advisable to punish or correct the child? (R. V. J.)

Answer—Approximately one in every twenty-five children is born naturally left-handed. Why, I have no idea. It is better not to interfere in any way with the child's preference in my opinion.

No Snipping

Son, 14 months old, has a string of flesh running from upper lip to gums between front upper teeth. Friends say this must be snipped out or else the second teeth will be too far apart.

(Mrs. S. M.)

Answer—It is probably normal. However, don't worry about what your friends think—ask your physician or dentist about it.

Dictaphone

I am a stenographer. Dictaphones have been installed in our office. Is the use of these injurious to hearing? (H. F.)

Answer—No.

Home Sanitation

Dresser used by person who had Hodgkin's disease. How can it be sterilized or disinfected so that it would be safe to use?

(Mrs. C. S. J.)

Answer—Hodgkin's disease is not contagious or infectious. No matter what disease the former user may have had, ordinary soap and water washing is sufficient disinfection to make the furniture perfectly safe for any one to use.

LITTLE HOPE FOR RATIONED CIVILIAN TIRES BEFORE 1946

Kitchener, Oct. 20 —(CP)— George Sawin, president of the B. F. Goodrich Rubber Co., of Canada, Ltd., said in a statement here that he held out little hope that civilian tires would be unrationed before 1946. He stated he believed truck tires would be released on an unrationed basis before passenger tires.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Do all salmon die after spawning?

These are nearly a dozen different known species of salmon. Only the members of a species common along the Pacific Coast is known to die immediately after spawning.

The odd thing about this is that all members of the species, the males as well as the females, die after the females get through laying their eggs.

As the spawning season approaches these fish work their way as far as possible up streams. Some of them, before depositing their eggs, work their way up into brooks so shallow that their backs stick out. During this season the salmon get very thin, their eyes become sunken, their appetites grow less and less, their throats begin to narrow and their stomachs shrink until they become entirely incapacitated for receiving food. When they have spawned they turn over and die, leaving windrows of rotting carcasses on the banks of the creeks and rivers.

The members of other species of salmon do not all die after spawning, but large numbers of them, especially the males, do not survive the spawning season.

Which is correct, Siam or Thailand?

For hundreds of years the country in southeastern Asia was known to foreigners as Siam. This name was also used by the government as the name of the country in external affairs. Siam, or Sayam, as the general name of the region dates back at least a thousand years.

But the inhabitants themselves generally called their country Muang T'ai, which means literally "land of the free" and figuratively "land of the Thai race." In English Muang T'ai becomes Thailand, pronounced "TIE-land."

On June 24, 1939, Prince Aditya Dirabha, regent of the country, affixed the royal seal to a decree changing the official name from Sayam to Muang T'ai, and all foreign governments were notified of this change.

On February 18, 1942, Richard K. Law, British undersecretary for foreign affairs, told the House of Commons that instructions were being issued to British officials to use "Siam" instead of "Thailand" so far as is practical.

currency or securities in payment of applications for bonds of the Ninth Victory Loan.

ON MONDAY MORNING a great wave of Victory Loan enthusiasm will sweep across Canada. For this time, as we enter the Victory Loan period, the dark shadows of war have melted away; the danger to our loved ones is past. Victory is ours, and the 9th Victory Loan is a Victory Loan indeed. So let us make this loan a loan of rejoicing and thanksgiving.

Although war expenses are being reduced just as rapidly as possible, Canada will require $1,500,000,000 during the next twelve months to pay the unpaid costs of victory. The proceeds of the 9th Victory Loan will be used to help the men and women of our armed services to establish themselves in civilian life, and to provide the special training they need to equip them in their life's work; to pay gratuities, re-establishment credits and pensions; to help heal the wounds and mend the broken bodies of those in hospital; to assist in sweeping the seas clear of mines; to provide co-operation with our allies in freeing liberated lands from famine and disease; to pay our share of the billions spent in developing the atomic bomb; to support our army of occupation.

In this the first loan since victory has been achieved on all battlefronts, you will be happy to do your full share. When the Victory Loan salesman calls, sign your name for victory.

$1,500,000,000 IS NEEDED

Previous loans have supplied funds for war expenses for six months. After the 9th Victory Loan there will not be another Victory Loan for a whole year. Every Victory Loan to date has passed its objective. Let's make this the most successful loan yet.

WEDDINGS

GILMOUR—HILL

A quiet wedding was solemnized on October 13, at 10.30 a.m., in St. Michael's Church, when Eileen Anne, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. W. R. Hill, Westmount, Que., became the bride of Raymond John, son of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Gilmour, Point Anne. Rev. Father O'Donnell officiated.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, wore a two-piece dressmaker suit of ice blue wool gabardine with matching feather hat. She wore a white sheer blouse, and had black accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses. The groom's sister, Miss Mavis Gilmour, was the bride's attendant, wearing a two-piece woollen ensemble of coral pink with matching feather headdress. She wore black accessories and a corsage of white carnations.

The groom was attended by Mr. John Irvine, formerly with the H. and P.E. Regiment and recently returned from overseas. For the wedding breakfast at the home of the groom, the bride's mother wore a two-piece ensemble of airforce blue with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother wore a two-piece dress of mauve silk crepe with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses.

The wedding breakfast was served buffet style with Mrs. Ralph Payne Point Anne, assisted in serving. Mr. Douglas Chandler provided music. The home was beautifully decorated with a variety of Autumn flowers.

The groom's gift to the bride was a gold locket and chain, and to the groomsman, a Morocco leather wallet. The bride gave her attendant, a lovely crystal dresser set. For a short motor trip through Ontario, the bride donned a tailored black wool coat trimmed with Persian lamb over her bridal dress.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Fred Clarke, Belleville; Mr. and Mrs. Eric Guernsey, Bloomfield, Mr. and Mrs. D. Chandler, Montreal; Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Gilmour, grandparents of the groom.

Women of Moose Hold Meeting

The regular meeting of Belleville Chapter 435, Women of the Moose, was held in the Saco Club Room on Tuesday afternoon. Senior Regent Lena Connell presided. Two members were reported sick, and it was moved that plant, and fruit be sent.

Congratulations were received from Pilgrim Alice McKelvie, of Kitchener, Ont., for the increase in membership and progress of the Chapter. An invitation was extended from Brockville to attend the Second Anniversary meeting of their Chapter. Two new candidates were initiated into the Defending Circle. The Sunshine prize donated by Co-Worker Crewson was won by Co-Worker Thrasher.

At the close of the meeting, supper was served by the Homemaking Committee, teacup reading and social hour, with gifts for two members having birthdays this month. The weekly Bingo was in progress during the evening with a good attendance.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 20. (CP)—Many letters have been received by the Agriculture Department Consumer Section lately from women who want to know how to use honey to replace sugar in cooking. Here is the answer; straight from Laura Pepper, section chief.

"Honey can be used successfully to replace part or all of the sugar called for in a recipe.

"If the amount of sugar called for is small, as in muffins, an equal amount of honey may be used instead. Where larger amounts of sugar are called for,: as in a cake, it is better to replace only half of the sugar with honey.

"Use one cup of honey to replace one cup of sugar and in baking reduce the liquid in the recipe by 1-4 cup for each cup of honey used. Don't use soda unless called for in the original recipe.

Liquid honey is easier to measure and blend than granulated honey. Granulated honey may be liquified by setting the container in a pan of hot water.

"A greased measuring cup makes measuring honey or other syrups easier".

The cup-of-water method of measuring small amounts of shortening does not work with granulated honey since some of it will melt and be discarded with the water.

The importance of green leafy vegetables in the diet receives a good deal of attention from nutritionists, including those at the Health and Welfare Department, who tell us the dark green vegetables now being harvested are particularly good eating.

They are a source of vitamin A and iron and also contain some calcium and smaller quantities of other minerals. All in all, they're a good bet, even though the yellow vegetables like carrots and sweet potatoes contain more vitamin A.

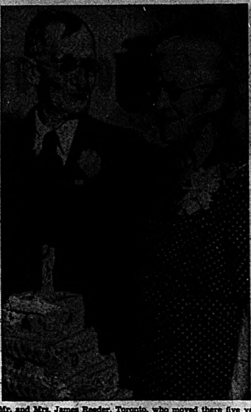
The darker the green the higher the nutrition rating. Dark green, crinkly-leafed cabbage found in the stories now is a good bargain in nutrition.

Those delicious blue grapes will soon be disappearing from the market for another year. Have you had your fill of them, and what about grape pie, grape roly-poly and cottage pudding with grape sauce?

The season can be lengthened several days by farsighted homemakers who use the last grapes to make up what the Agriculture Department home economists call a Basic Grape Mixture which can be used for any of the grape dishes mentioned above.

Basic Grape Mixture: Stew, wash and measure five cups of grapes, preferably the blue ones. Press pulp from the skins. Heat pulp to boiling point and boil gently for five minutes, then rub through a sieve to remove seeds, add skins to pulp and cook together for five minutes. Store in a covered jar in the refrigerator where it will keep for several days. To use, blend 1-2 cup of sugar, two tablespoons of cornstarch and a dash of salt with a little of the grape mixture, add to the remaining mixture and cook, stirring frequently until thick.

Wed Half A Century



Mr. and Mrs. James Reeder, Toronto, who moved there five years ago from their former home in Belleville, celebrated their golden wedding anniversary the other day.

Bali Girls Are Extremely Modest Despite Native Style of Dressing

By HAL BOYLE

Den Pasar, Bali, Oct. 20 —(AP) —Sweater girls couldn't make the grade out here because of the competition. They don't wear sweaters in Bali.

When you first come to Bali you have the uneasy feeling that you've walked into the third act of a burlesque show. That's because people in the Western World are reared with the idea that the half of the feminine torso is something to be displayed mainly in art galleries, night club shows and maternity wards.

In this sunburned, carefree island in the Dutch East Indies, however, bare bosoms are more common than bare feet, but after a few days they are hardly more interesting.

You fall into the viewpoint of the natives themselves, that after all there isn't anything permanently startling about the human body, nude or clothed.

Before we stopped here en route to Australia our airplane crew was eager-eyed with anticipation. The crew members decided to play that old childhood "beaver" game, only in this case they were to tabulate feminine bosoms instead of manly beards.

We hadn't gone a quarter mile from the airfield until we spied a dignified, middle-aged Balinese woman walking along the roadside with a basket on her head, but bare to the waist.

Everybody saw her at once.

"Beaver! Beaver!" they shouted. At this strange outcry as the truck swept past, the native lady switched her betel nut from one side of her mouth to the other and smiled at us through stained teeth in pleasant astonishment.

After that, the "beavers" came thick and fast. When we reached our hotel and compared tallies I was high man.

Balinese girls are light brown in color, delicately featured and have marvellous posture developed by the custom of carrying burdens atop their heads. They are extremely modest.

One foreign white artist who has spent 14 years in Bali painting native life used one feminine model all those years and never portrayed her in a nude study. He said he would hesitate to embarrass her by asking her to pose without benefit of her half-length sarong.

"These people are unbelievably shy," he said.

His bosom landscapes, however, are extremely popular with visiting tourists. I asked him if he weren't weary of painting them for 14 straight years without a vacation.

"No, I never tire of this subject," he replied, seriously. "I am an artist."

Women's Activities

FOXBORO W.A.

The general meeting of the Women's Association was held on Thursday afternoon in the S.S. rooms with the President, Mrs. W. Scott, in charge.

Kilpatrick; Treasurer, Mrs. S. C. Gay; Pianist, Mrs. J. W. Daniels; Visiting Committee, Mrs. M. Empey, Mrs. H. Stewart, Mrs. G. Hicks, and Mrs. J. G. Sills; Parsonage Committee, Mrs. W. Wickett, Mrs. C. Shorey and Mrs. S. Sherry; Dishes Committee, Mrs. W. Prentice and Mrs. W. Hodgen; Silverware Committee, Mrs. E. Tummon and Mrs. W. Rombough; Refreshments, Mrs. A. Gough, Mrs. H. Badgley and Mrs. A. Wickett; Linen Committee, Mrs. H. Stewart.

PLAINFIELD W.M.S.

The regular meeting of the Plainfield W.M.S., was held on Oct. 17, at the home of Mrs. Horace Palmer.

Mrs. Clarence Marshall, 1st vice president, presided assisted by Mrs. Clarence Hall.

Mrs. Arthur Hall and Mrs. Clarence Hall were appointed as delegates to the Sectional Rally, at Mount Pleasant.

Mrs. Erle Denyes gave a splendid paper on Temperance and Christian Citizenship.

Those assisting Mrs. Denyes were Mrs. Fred Prindle, Mrs. E. Carleton, Mrs. Clarence Hall, Mrs. Archie Meeks, Mrs. Clayton Hall.

Worship service was conducted by Mrs. George McKenzie. The theme used being "Praise we the Lord". Mrs. Fred Hall assisted.

Group Leader, Mrs. Charles Beatty took charge of the Study Book Chapter being on "Africa". Mrs. Ralph Wilder gave reading in connection with Study Book. Mrs. Horace Palmer gave a reading on the life of Abraham.

The hostess and her assistants served refreshments and a social half hour was spent.

CARMEL Y.P.U.

The opening meeting of Carmel Y.P.U. was held on October 10.

After a program on Christian Missions by Luella Homan, a committee was appointed to choose the officers for the ensuing year.

It was decided to have League this year every other Friday night and at the homes.

BLAMED ON BOILER

Portland, Ore., Oct. 20 —(AB) —An explosion in the mess hall of a boys' boarding school yesterday left one youngster near death, injured 13 others, and wrecked a military academy building. The explosion was blamed on a water boiler which burst through the building walls.

RAWDON

Lorne Watson Honored by Class Sunday School

Rawdon.—Mr. and Mrs. Burton Morton opened their spacious home on Tuesday evening, in honor of Mr. Lorne Watson, groom-to-be.

The Wellman's 'Wide-a-Wake' Sunday School class sponsored the affair and nearly all members were in attendance. The guests included the Watson family and over forty gathered on this auspicious occasion—the first boys' shower held by the class.

Rev. T. F. Townsend presided over the recreation period and special games were enjoyed, along the line of economy.

Presented With Gifts

At this juncture Mr. Lorne Watson and his intended bride, Miss Ana English, were given seats of honor. Mrs. B. Morton made a speech and then introduced the young couple to the Brush Family. The eleven brushes were decorated with crepe paper, wearing real clothes and false faces, a suitable poem was attached to each brush and this was unique in itself.

Lorne and Ana graciously thanked their friends for the lovely gifts and all sang "For They are Jolly Good Fellows".

Miss Faye Fleming, president of the class presided over a brief program which opened with community singing. Mr. Gerald Clancy read "Musings about Marriage". Mr. Ted Pollock read "The Snoring Husband".

"Quick Breads" Have Many Uses

For breakfast, luncheon or dinner, for afternoon tea, for a pleasant and easy-to-prepare snack when company is coming, the group of good old standbys known under the general term of "quick breads" have few rivals indeed.

Especially these days when busy housewives have to depend more and more on their own ingenuity in the kitchen, and are constantly on the lookout for tasty recipes which require few rationed items, "quick breads" deserve more than ordinary attention.

The recipes given below are the result of tests made by experienced home economists in the endeavor to find welcome variety in the daily diet. They are all easy to make and can be served on almost any occasion and at any meal of the day.

WHEAT SCONES

1 1-2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
2 tablespoons sugar
5 tablespoons shortening
2 Nabisco Shredded Wheat biscuits, finely rolled.
1-2 cup milk
1 egg, beaten

Sift together flour, baking powder, salt and sugar. Cut in shortening until fine as meal. Add the finely rolled biscuits. Combine the egg and milk and add to dry ingredients. Mix to a soft dough. Roll out on lightly floured board to make a circle 1-2 inch thick. Cut in 12 pie-shaped wedges. Place on baking sheet. Brush the top of each with cream. Bake in hot oven (450 degrees Fahrenheit) 12 minutes. Makes 12 scones.

WHEAT GRIDDLECAKES

1 1-2 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
2 teaspoons sugar
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 cup shortening
3 Nabisco Shredded Wheat biscuits, finely crumbled
2 eggs, beaten
2 cups milk

Sift flour, baking powder, sugar and salt together. Cut in shortening until fine as meal. Add Nabisco Shredded wheat. Combine egg and milk. Pour over dry ingredients and mix only until blended. Let stand five minutes. Drop by spoonfuls on lightly greased hot griddle. Spread batter. When cakes puff and bubble turn and brown on second side. Serve hot with honey. Makes 14 large cakes.

NABISCO SHREDDED WHEAT MUFFINS

1 1-4 cups sifted flour
3 teaspoons baking powder
1 teaspoon salt
1-4 cup brown sugar, firmly packed
1-4 cup shortening
4 Nabisco Shredded Wheat biscuits, finely rolled
1 cup milk
1 egg, beaten

Sift together flour, baking powder and salt. Add sugar. Cut in shortening until fine as meal. Mix in Nabisco Shredded Wheat crumbs. Combine milk and egg and add to flour mixture. Stir only until blended. Fill greased muffin pans 2-3 full and bake in hot oven (425 degrees Fahrenheit) 25 minutes. Makes 12 muffins.

MANY ARTICLES ON MARKET

Vancouver, Oct. 20 —(CP)—Many British - manufactured articles will be on the Canadian market by the middle of next year, A. M. Wiseman, senior British trade commissioner in Canada, said in an interview here yesterday.

BEAUTY By HELEN JAMESON

If you cherish the notion that the girl of unnatural slimness is the ideal figurette, you have but to watch girls in uniform to dispel the idea from your mind. There are, these feminine soldiers, full-chested, broad-shouldered, firm of step. Certainly an improvement on the fragile one whose shape could be clothed with an umbrella case. Not so long ago bones were considered beautiful. Artist are forever talking about beautiful bones. By that they do not mean that elbows should be sharp enough to cut bread with, or that collarbones should protrude.

Extreme emaciation must not be considered lightly. There should be a medical checkup to see if the condition is caused by ill health. If one gets a good report from the doctor, much can be done to put on pleasing curves where curves should be. When undernourishment is present, there is a loss of muscular development, and this creates faulty carriage. The chest sinks in, the spinal column forms a bow, the abdomen, of course, is thrust forward, producing ugly lines. The girl who is so afflicted should try this exercise:

Strand straight against the wall. Flatten out the shoulder blades. Keep the head balanced. Take a deep, slow breath, drawing in on the abdominal muscles. As you do this, the chest will rise, fill out, assume its proper position.

Thin girls use up energy faster than they can create it. They are usually on the go all the time, inclined to be over-animated and nervous. If they will bring themselves to normal weight and proportions, they will look better, feel better, and will not become fatigued so easily.

By mapping out a daily plan for wooing adipose tissues, any healthy young woman can take on the necessary tonnage. In six months she'll be getting one-size-larger frocks. It is much easier to gain weight than to lose it, and there are no dietary deprivations to fret and vex one.

It is vitally necessary that one should have the right kind of groceries, eat at regular hours. If appetite is lacking, gentle, outdoor exercise will restore it. No strenuous efforts, mind you, just enough activity to cause one to air-wash the lungs, give the muscles a workout.

Food elements that build fat cells and create energy are sweets, fats and starches. Add a little more of these to each meal. Cut down on salty foods and acid viands. Use plenty of olive oil in the salad dressing. Start the day with fruit and fruit juices and a serving of cooked cereal, garnished with plenty of sugar and cream. You don't like cereals? Well, you don't like your unpadded bones either, do you? Take your choice.

Long hours of sleep are what the doctor orders; during sleep nature rebuilds and makes repairs.

If they will bring themselves to normal weight and proportions, they will look better and feel better.

Fashion Flashes

A BIG FAVORITE in the world of color schemes, brown with white is used for an attractive swagger topper of brown woollen lined with white curly lamb.

COMFORT AND BEAUTY combine nicely in the new wool frocks. Emerald green wool makes a nice street dress. The collarless bodice has a curved side fastening that continues down the skirt. The skirt has a curved lap-over. Gilt buttons are set in black and self belt has green buckle.

DELICATE and lovely is the theme of some of the new hats made with delicate handling of lovely fabrics and colors. Pale pink felt swathed in pink and blue maline and accented with fuchsia ostrich feathers is used for a beautiful afternoon hat.

The best way to achieve the appearance of a slim waistline is through contrast. That is the reason for the success of the coats made with huge, flaring fur borders and big cuffs. Black woollen is used for a coat made with adjustable tied waistline and finished with a double skin rippled border of silver fox. Collarless neckline, smooth sleeves, huge fur cuffs.

A big dash of Scotch appears in youthful fashions, what with tartan skirts and dresses of various authentic clan tartans. A charming campus frock is of smooth woollen in a bright plaid with high neckline, long tight sleeves and back fastening. Belt is trimmed with a gold-studded horseshoe, both belt and horseshoe in dark green leather.

How wonderful it is that today's bride is apt to have a traditional church wedding rather than the hurry-up affair that was obtained in war-time. Leg-of-mutton sleeves give an Old World look to a lovely wedding gown of white satin with deep yoke of transparent net and panels of rose point lace to match a rose-point and net veil.

The most originality this year is displayed in furs made for budget appeal. Natural muskrat with leopard binding edging the tuxedo front and pockets is used for a handsome coat with doublet sleeves and very flared cut.

Sure-fire hit is black with gold touches. Black rayon crepe makes an afternoon dress which has extended shoulders that form short sleeves. Shoulders and deep armholes are banded with gold sequins in greek key design. Same sequined design edges the skirt hem. High, rounded neckline and casual-tie self belt.

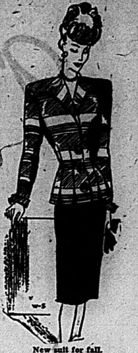
Smartly Striped



New suit for fall.

By VERA WINSTON

Stripes have plenty of dash and appear in some of the early autumn clothes. Striped surah in such brilliant colors as magenta, turquoise, green and purple is used for the jacket of this smart suit which has inverted tucks to slim the waist and hips. The tucks terminate in hem slits. The skirt is of black woolen and has a center seam in front and back.

Are you hankering for a roast of beef? The far-sighted housewife will realize that under meat rationing her family of four can enjoy a Sunday roast, and the other meals of the week too, if she budgets her coupons with care. By parting with two coupons and five tokens you can procure a four pound rolled rib roast of beef from Group B. A Yorkshire pudding and good brown gravy should ensure enough of it being spared to slice cold for Monday. And for Wednesday, a roly poly is a tasty way of utilizing the remnants. Just season the ground meat, moisten it with gravy or vegetable juices, roll it up in your best biscuit dough, bake in a hot oven, and serve with a zestful tomato sauce. For Tuesday veal cutlets are appetizing exchange for five tokens. . One pound of lamb chops for Thursday will require four tokens, and with unrationed fish for Friday you will have two tokens left from your week's allotment. A savoury spaghetti dish highlighted with the season's green peppers, tomatoes and mushrooms and topped with well-browned sausages would make a substantial main course for Saturday. And of course off-the-ration items such as cold sliced tongue offer solution to luncheon problems.

Dock Strikers May Return to Work This Week

London, Oct. 20—(CP)—Thousands of London dock strikers, angered over stalemated wage negotiations, marched through traffic-snarled streets to the Tower of London Friday in a mass demonstration as the country's food stocks ebbed.

Despite the strikers' cries of "stick it out", the British Press Association's Labor correspondent reported work might be resumed this weekend.

At Birkenhead, big shipping centre near Liverpool, dockers voted two to one to return to work tomorrow. However, the strike spread to Belfast, Northern Ireland, where 350 quit, and Greenock, Scotland, where 700 walked out.

Labor Minister Isaacs, criticizing the strikers "For repudiating their agreement", told Commons that 38,750 were idle.

Negotiations between employers and the Transport and General Workers' Union ended last night with both sides agreed no settlement could be reached while the authorized strike, now in its fourth week, remained in effect.

The strikers' principal demands were for a $5.50 daily wage, an increase of up to $2.20, and a 40-hour week.

Meanwhile some 4,000 troops struggled to do the work of the thousands of strikers in unloading critically needed food.

Allied Advisory Commission Meet Postponed 7 Days

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Oct. 20 —(AP)— The State Department has announced a seven-day postponement of the first meeting of the Allied advisory commission on Japan . Russian attendance is in doubt.

The official reason for the postponement was that some of the invited governments would not be able to get their representatives here in time for the scheduled session Oct. 23.

Therefore, the announcement said, "it has been decided to hold the first meeting of the commission Oct. 30."

It was obvious, however, that this delay allows additional time for the efforts now evidently under wey by President Truman and presumably other "Big Three" officials to resolve some of the difficulties dividing the Allied powers and assure Russian attendance.

Ten nations are supposed to be on the commission. It has been officially announced for the United States, Britain, China, the Philippines, Australia and Canda will be represented.

'Angel of Colombo' Name Given English Woman by Refugees

By G. MILTON KELLY

Colombo, Ceylon, Oct. 20—(AP)—The foresight and generosity of an English woman is making possible pathetically joyous scenes of reunited husbands and wives as thousands of refugees separated by the Japanese invasion of Malaya begin rebuilding their lives.

The refugees call Mrs. Joy L. Donald the "Angel of Colombo."

When residents of the peninsula fled in panic before the invader, Mrs. Donald realized the difficulties they would encounter when they tried to re-establish contact with their families. She built a program of care for repatriates which has become a co-operative operation financed by the British government.

Mrs. Donald's information service provides liberated prisoners and internees with word of their loved ones. Sometimes relatives of dislocated persons wait here for their reunions.

Witnesses wept at one such scene in which a British couple, who had lived in Singapore but who had been without knowledge of each other since the city's fall in 1942 and the husband's internment, met by chance in a barracks.

His wife, who had escaped the Japanese and had been a refugee in Australia, had come to Colombo hopeful of getting word of him.

The two faced each other dazedly on the steps of the barracks for many moments before them embraced, weeping.

Anybody's Guess Who'll Take N.H.L. Honors This Season As All Teams Have Strengthened

Toronto Leafs and Boston Bruins Have Added Plenty of Material

By JACK MITCHELL,
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 20 — (CP)—From a mixture of returning servicemen, rookies and regulars, National Hockey League teams in training camps have a postwar season coming up with some of the boarding house qualities of hash so far as quality of starting ingredients is concerned.

Normally, Toronto Maple Leafs as Stanley Cup winners and Montreal Canadiens as defending league champions would be the teams to beat. But with rosters sprinkled liberally with new talent and players making a postwar comeback, the relative strength is uncertain.

For instance, Boston Bruins who could do no better than fourth last season, will have the old Kraut line of Bobby Bauer, Porky Dumart and Milt Schmidt back after service in the R.C.A.F. that, says manager Art Ross, will be enough to lift the team near, if not to, the top.

New York Rangers, who sank to the bottom during the latter years of wartime play, will have ex-service stars back as will Chicago Black Hawks. So far, Detroit Red Wings have shown little change from the team that finished second last season but manager Jack Adams had some 60 candidates from which to brew a contender.

Leafs Have Abundance

Leafs have an abundance of players from which to select a starting team and coach Dick Irvin has already gone on record as saying he is "forced to admit the superiority" of his Canadiens.

Leafs hope for release of centre star Syl Apps from the Canadian Army before long. They still have such stalwarts as Billy Taylor, Gus Bodnar, Pete Langelle and Ted Kennedy as centre candidates. Bob Goldham and Wally Stanowski, who played part of last season, are expected to bolster the defence with Gaye Stewart, another ex-serviceman, expected to fit right back in at left wing.

Dick Irvin, with his regular Montreal defence of last season, has Mike McMahon, Cliff Goupille and Wilf Field from which to choose. He intends to play a pat hand on his forward wall, with the addition of Joe Benoit, a pre-war star.

Basing Hopes on Wares

Black Hawks base their hopes mainly on acquisition of Eddie Wares from Detroit and reunion of the forward line of the Bentley boys, Doug and Max, and Bill Mosienko. Doug Bentley led the Hawks to a 4-2 victory over the New York Rangers with two goals in an exhibition tilt.

Among returned Rangers are Neil Colville, Alex Shibicky and Murray Patrick and manager Lester Patrick is hoping for the return of his other son, Lynn, and Mac Colville soon. Edgar Laprade, star of many years in amateur ranks, is another Ranger acquisition.

Manager Adams thinks his Red Wings lack some strength down the middle, where veteran Syd Howe, Joe Carveth and Murray Armstrong are candidates. To speed up the attack, he has shifted his lines and put Mud Bruneteau in with Red Lindsay and rookie Jim Conacher, from whom he expects big things. Steve Wochy has replaced Bruneteau on the line with Carl Liscombe and Howe.

FIGHTS LAST NIGHT

(By The Associated Press)

New Orleans—Candy McDaniels, 135 1-4, Cincinnati, decisioned Ace Miller, 140 1-2, Columbus, O. (10).

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 20 — (CP) — To the average fan, watching the white lights beat on the canvas of wrestling rings in Montreal and Ottawa, Felix Miquet probably is just another heavy-handed curiosity who likes to earn his money the hard way. But Miquet the wrestler and Harry Balit his manager are characters out of the ordinary.

Their memories are shadowed with grim images of the Gestapo, recollections of a touch-and-go existence when death or torture lurked around every corner and terror walked with hobnailed boots.

Balit, a French Syrian, was promoting boxing near Paris when the war started. He spoke six languages — English, French, Turkish, Syrian, Arabic, Italian — so he arranged through the resistance movement to work as linguist and interpreter for the Nazis. Every chance he found, he worked against the enemy — sometimes by inserting typewritten dots (indicating static) to record a message from a foreign station which might aid his employers.

But Balit's big job, he told Elmer (Montreal Herald) Ferguson, was to furnish his resistance friends with reports for underground papers. He had to be wary. He wrote only at night, using the thinnest paper. In case of a sudden search, he folded his manuscript tightly in a small tin aspirin box and suspended it by a thread outside his window.

Next day, as Balit walked to a train for Chantilly — near Paris— he met a "friend" who received the manuscript clandestinely. The copy was printed in underground newspapers which Balit distributed on his off-days — with the help of a pass carrying highest Gestapo authority.

He had close calls. Once, on a visit to the Maquis, he foiled arrest by knocking off a Gestapo officer with a blow to the chin. Balit spent that night strapped to a tree by a leather belt he still wears.

Later he took ill, went to hospital and was exposed when the resistance leader — a 55-year-old lawyer known as Taillefer — was captured with a book containing Balit's name. For months a doctor who proved to be a friend of the underground prevented the Nazis from beating Balit, using devices such as a drug which induced fever and stimulated heart action.

But after 42 days the Nazis came in force, brought Taillefer before the sick man and asked if he knew the resistance leader. Balit said yes, Taillefer had sold him black market butter. Infuriated, the Nazis stripped Taillefer and tortured him with electric shocks. Two of Balit's teeth were drilled off, but he wouldn't talk.

Then the Nazis left, "taking Taillefer who had collapsed," Balit told Ferguson. "A few weeks later, he was dead in an internment camp."

Balit escaped the night of the torture when friends from the underground helped him from his ground-floor confinement while an armed guard slept outside.

The Frenchman, safe now on this continent, still is reluctant to talk of his experiences although the war is over. He prefers to mention how Miquet the wrestler, as a member of the Maquis, helped kill Germans.

He has reasons for being wary of the Gestapo.

"Is the Gestapo really dead? Or has it just gone underground? and if I talk too much, some night will I be stabbed in the back?"

N.H.L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

Lester Patrick, manager of New York Rangers, tells how National Hockey League referees avoid displeasure of offside-hating fans:

Until a few years ago, fans watched the puck carrier closely and seldom noticed when another player skated over the blue-line ahead of the play. So the N.H.L. instructed the referee who called the offside to point his finger at the culprit. With their attention drawn to the offender, the customers usually feel satisfied that the whistle blowing is warranted. Psychology, eh?

Latest reports from the Canadiens camp in Montreal are that Floyd Curry 20-year-old Kirkland Lake, Ont., right winger, may be farmed out to Montreal Royals of the Quebec Senior League.

Terry Reardon suffered a serious shoulder wound with the 1st Canadian Army in France. He did not think he'd be able to play hockey again. But he's back in the Boston Bruin lineup now with Bill Cowley and Herb Cain, says the shoulder isn't bothering him.

It happened in the Toronto Maple Leaf dressing-room at Owen Sound, Ont. Somebody was reading aloud a newspaper prediction by Lester Patrick that N.H.L. teams sooner or later would play an 80-game schedule.

"It's a good idea", said Babe Pratt. "But I wonder if Patrick is going to pay $8,000 a year salary for 80 games?"

"If a guy gets $5,000 a year for 50 games, he should be worth $8,000 for 80 games".

Canadiens have been plagued by a flurry of injuries. Wilf Field has a bruised hand; Ken Mosdell is nursing a Charley horse; Howard (Rip) Riopelle has a pulled groin muscle; Murph Chamberlain limps on a cut leg.

Neil Colville has been chosen captain of Rangers, Patrick announced last night. Born in Edmonton, Colville started as a centre player with Rangers in 1936-37. This year, at 31, he's been converted into a defenceman.

Fight Manager Surrenders Self To the Police

By The Canadian Press

Fight manager John Napurano of Newark, N.J., surrendered to police there yesterday to face the charge he had attempted to bribe Freddie Fiducia, Newark heavyweight, to throw his bout with Fred Schott. Fiducia is alleged to have told the New York Boxing Commission he had been offered $3,000 and 10 per cent of Schott's purse if he would lose. The bout took place in Madison Square Garden Sept. 10.

Fourteen horses were entered for the $75,000 Hollywood Gold Cup race at Inglewood, Calif., today, the promised favorite being Mrs. A. L. Rice's Sirde, winner of two stakes recently. Bull Reigh and Paperboy were also liked.

Manager Connie Mack of Philadelphia Athletics commented yesterday that ball players generally quit in October and change their minds in February on the report first-baseman George McQuinn had announced his retirement.

Chatham Collegiate Institute lost all hopes for a W.O.S.S.A. senior rugby title this year as St. Thomas Collegiate gridders walked away with a 31-1 victory at Chatham yesterday. It was Chatham's third defeat against one victory and eliminates them from title chances.

In the W.O.S.S.A. game yesterday at Simcoe the Simcoe High School kalsomined Ingersoll high by 18 to 0. It was the second straight game in which the locals had blanked Ingersoll.

Yankee Stadium will have night baseball next season and the contracts will be signed within the next week or 10 days. With the Yanks ready to turn on the light and the Boston Braves making similar plans, the only remaining all-day parks would be Wrigley Field in Chicago, Briggs Stadium in Detroit and Fenway Park in Boston.

BOSTON BRUINS TEAM TO BEAT SAYS DIT CLAPPER

Team Has Good Goalie, Strong Defence and Three Forward Lines

By PIERRE LE MOYNE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Oct. 20. (CP)—Aubrey (Dit) Clapper, coach of Boston Bruins, speaking with a chip on his shoulder:

"So Montreal's Dick Irvin believes only an atomic bomb can stop his punch line of Maurice Richard, Elmer Lach and Toe Blake eh? Will you tell Irvin the Boston Bruins have this atomic bomb—the Kraut line—and it will explode no later than October 24 when Bruins open the National Hockey League schedule in Boston against Chicago Black Hawks, and when they meet Canadiens at Boston Nov. 4."

Clapper told what he thought of his team's prospects as he watched his players go through a fast scrimmage at their training centre in Quebec City.

"We have a good goaltender, a strong defence, three well-balanced forward lines and what's more we have plenty of rserve so nothing can stop us from being in their battling for first place all year along".

Paul Bibeault will be in the Boston nets again this season.

Bennett Spare Goalie.

Harvey Bennett, 21-year-old graduate from Oshawa Generals who played a few games for Bruins last season, will be spare goalie.

On defence will be Veteran Johnny Crawford, whom Clapper considers the outstanding rearguard in the League; Pat Egan, who "is still improving at 27", according to Clapper, "but if he could only keep his temper!" Murray Henderson, 23, who joined Boston in the middle of last season; and "Old Dit" himself—for an all-time record of 19 consecutive seasons with the same team.

Clapper feels that he has at least one more good season in him. "Why, I'm only 38," he grinned.

Kraut Line Intact.

The Bruins' prize package, the Kraut Line, may be the surprise of the year. Judging by the way they have been travelling in practice, Bobby Bauer, Woody Dumart and Milt Schmidt may end all controversy as to whether returning servicemen can take up where they left off in hockey.

The second line, Boston's Kid line, will have three ex-servicemen with previous N.H.L. experience: Don Gallinger, 20, Bep Guidolin, 20, and Bill Shill, 22. An unexpected return to the Boston lineup is Terry Reardon who will be on the third line with Veterans Bill Cowley and Herbie Cain.

JANIRO DEFEATS GUIDO EASILY

New York, Oct. 20. (AP)—Tony Janiro, the clever Youngstown, O., welterweight contender, today held the edge over Al Guido of New York, and was aiming to do the same against Montreal's John Greco Nov. 9.

Guido and Greco have been the only fighters to pin a defeat on the baby-faced Ohioan who has won 41 of his 43 fights.

Janiro came back to beat both Guido and Greco and last night he took the rubber match from the New Yorker with the greatest of ease.

Janiro was awarded the unanimous decision of thre officials who credited him with all eight rounds. Janiro, who outweighted his opponent 145 1-2 to 140, kept Guido off balance with rapid-fire lefts and several times rocked his rival with hard rights although he couldn't floor him.

Janiro will tangle with Greco in Madison Square Garden and a crowd of some 15,000 is likely.

In the first Anglo-French boxing feature since the war, Marcel Cerdan, French middleweight, knocked out Tommy Davies, Welsh champion, in the first round at Paris last night.

New York State yesterday voted $12,000 to recondition the Olympic bobsled run at Lake Placid on which the North American and Amateur Athletic Union championships will be resumed this winter following a three-year layoff.

The Guelph Intermediate Hockey Club has received a setback in the departure of three star players. Lloyd Finkbeiner has turned out with Buffalo Bisons; Swat Mason is a candidate for the Hamilton senior O.H.A. team and Ted Hilson is a prospect for a Toronto club.

HUNTER RECOVERING

Missoula, Mon., Oct. 17 —(AP) —A deer hunter who got in the way of a companion's gun is recovering here today following an emergency operation on his right arm by an army paratrooper. Capt. Amos Little of Marlboro, Mass., parachuted to the spot where the wounded man lay in the rugged timberlands southwest of here and performed the operation.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

The war is really over. Or hadn't you heard about it. Down in lil Old N'Yawk the old Maestro Mike Jacobs is chattering through new ventures about a three million dollar gate which he hopes will materialize if and when Joe Louis meets Billy Conn, the lad who had the Brown Bomber beaten for 13 rounds on June 18, 1941 only to let down his guard for a fraction of a second and the next fifteen minutes rest in peaceful oblivion.

While Mike was dreaming about repetitions of the gates that attended the Dempsey-Tunney fights years ago, Conn's manager threw a monkey wrench into the Jacobs machinery by refusing to sign a contract that called for no warm-up exhibitions. It seems that Jacobs with three million simoloens in the offing is taking no chances on the boxing geese with the golden eggs getting mussed up in a three-round go with some backwoods palooka. No siree. M'sieu Jacobs doesn't want all those ex-service guys and gals plus thousands of others who will be willing to lay one hundred smackers on the line to see a bout that is definitely of pre-war vintage to take rain checks, or refunds. The post-war dessert is too rich in sugar to be sidetracked and disappoint a crowd whose war time boxing appetite in the alleged big time has been stuffed with olives and macaroni.

So M'sieu promptly shouted "No Soap" and the battle was on. And Mr. Ray, who is the managerial expert of the Conn interests (for the special interest of assembled sports scribes) yelled Blue Murder and tramped out of the Jacobian offices in high dudgeon, (taking care the reporters got the usual eye and earful).

Three million dollars, as Exterminator put it when he gobbled the Brussels Sprouts, "That aint hay, brother", is a lot ommazuma. And what with the blue clouds of the future into which Mike gazes with dreamy eyes, holding visions of television rights, movie rights, radio etcs plus the fact that the brawl will likely put the famous Dempsey-Carpentier "Battle of the Century" into the slight skirmish class insofar as the fight-hungry populace is concerned, there is a strong possibility of the box-office receipts reaching heights previously unattained.

As Arthur Daley of the New York Times put it as for the fight itself, no one can tell. If you rate it off the last one it will be brilliant and spectacular. But you just can't be certain of such things. Many a repeat performance of a savage bout has degenerated into a slow waltz. Yet as long as one of the contestants packs as much dynamite in his fists as Louis does, it never can be too dull. In fact, that's its guarantee of sensationalism.

Five long years will have passed since their last meeting on June 18, 1941. And time never adds more weapons to a fighter's equipment. The Dark Destroyer will be 32 when he puts his crown on the line once more. The Conn Man will be crowding 29 and packing at least a dozen more pounds than the 174 which made him razor-sharp and a will-o-the-wisp the last time out.

Louis looked slow and cumbersome in comparison to the flashy Conn. He was heavy-footed and heavy-armed. You can't hit what you can't catch and the Brown Bomber rarely could catch the dancing master who spun about him in growing confidence and — unfortunately for him—in growing disdain.

Fearless Fighter.

As they moved into the twelfth the cocky Conn threw caution to the winds. What a contrast this bold youth made with some of the timid souls who had mingled fearfully with the Dark Destroyer in the past! Near the round's end he crashed over a pulverizing left hook to the jaw and the uncertain Louis actually clinched while pandemonium broke loose out in the darkness beyond the ring's dazzling lights. No one had ever seen that before.

In the thirteenth round Conn progressed, the fight won. Two of the three officials had the challenger ahead on points and the other scored them on even terms. Billy had only to stay away for the rest of the way and William David Conn would be the new champion of the world. But he is a stubborn and proud youth. He didn't want to win by a decision. He wanted the flourish of a knockout.

In he stampeded for the kill, swarmed over Louis — and it happened. Conn left a tiny opening and the Brown Bomber found it. A right cross rocketed through, a mite too high on the head for an instant knockout. But Billy's knees buckled and he was on his way. A murderous barrage sent him toppling and a gallant bid had come to a sudden end, a scant six minutes and two seconds from the scheduled finish.

The Royal and Ancient Golf Club announced at St. Andrews last night the British Open championship would be staged early next July and the amateur tournament in the last week of May.

LESSON NO. 811
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

If you like double dummy problems, you will no doubt go for this one from the Bridge Forum:

NORTH

♣ 5 2

WEST	EAST
♠ K Q	♠ J 10 9 7
♥ None	♥ None
♦ K J 7 4	♦ 6 5
♣ 8 7	♣ K Q

SOUTH
♠ 5 4
♥ 6 4 2
♣ A 9

South was declarer at a contract in hearts. Five tricks have been played. In each hand are left the eight remaining cards not yet played in that deal.

South is in the lead and must take all the remaining eight tricks. The problem is to discover the series of plays that will permit south to take the remaining tricks.

It is assumed that all the players see all the cards. Therefore, the opponents will study each card and compare it with the cards that are left. Therefore, they will put up every possible defence.

There are three sure trump tricks, a sure trick with the ace of spades, a sure trick with the ace of clubs, and two tricks by taking the diamond finesse.

Thus, one more trick must be discovered by some method of play or series of plays. The puzzle is to figure out the way to get in that eighth trick in spite of anything the opponents may do.

Lead from south the nine of diamonds. West will cover with the jack to force your north hand to use the queen. When the north queen wins, take the next trick with the diamond ace.

On that diamond ace, sluff a spade from your south hand. Then lead a club from dummy and win with your south ace of clubs. After that, lead two of your south trumps.

This leaves your south hand with a spade, a trump, and a club. North holds his two spades and a diamond. South now leads the last trump and west is caught in a squeeze. So is east.

Neither east nor west can protect two suits. Lay out the cards that are left and see for yourself. It is good practice.

In Manhattan

By MICHAEL O'MARA
Canadian Press Staff Writer

New York, Oct. 20 (CP)—Three of the most successful women of the American theatre—actress Eva Le Gallienne, director Margaret Webster and producer Cheryl Crawford—have joined forces to split another lance against one of the toughest windmills in New York show business—the establishment of a financially-sound repertory theatre.

Ever since 1933, when Miss Le Gallienne's civic theatre called it quits after six heart-breaking years, Broadway angels have feared to rush into repertory undertakings. But the present optimistic triumvirate have announced that this time the idea will work—and are sinking hard cash in the venture.

The mistakes made in the last attempt won't be repeated, they say. The theatre then was on 14th Street—about 30 blocks from Times Square—and too far off the first nighters' track. The prices—$1.50 tops—were too low. The entertainment business was not at its present financial peak.

Present show business here is "for best-sellers only; it precludes many interesting and stimulating new plays. It provides no permanent hope for the great literary classic nor for the revival of the better efforts of more recent writers. . . ."

Similarly, she says, the United States—alone among the great nations of the world to lack one—needs a national repertory theatre to take its place beside national libraries and nationally-acclaimed symphony orchestras.

In London there now are two highly - successful repertory troupes—playing the dramas of Shakespeare, Chekov, Congreve, Shaw, Ibsen and Maugham, they do better at the box office than many first-run companies.

The company which is to try to set that right will open operations in September, 1946, in a Broadway theatre yet to be selected. The group will be financed to the extent of $325,000, Miss Crawford said.

It will be called the American Repertory Company and will launch a second company to tour the major United States cities in 1947.

FILE LARGE CLAIM

Toronto, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Albert DePalma, Toronto investment broker, yesterday filed a claim at Osgoode Hall for $100,000 damages in a libel action against Collier's Magazine. The claim arises from publication of an article by Lester Velie in the July 21 issue. DePalma alleges that the article in its "ordinary and natural meaning" is defamatory to himself personally and as carrying on business as an investment broker.

LONGSHOREMEN SENTENCED

Montreal, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Twelve longshoremen were sentenced to three weeks imprisonment yesterday for possessing bale hooks, considered by the court as offensive weapons, during the recent meat strike disturbances in front of the T. Eaton Company Department Store.

Attlee Says Labor Party Out to Build A New Society

Musselburgh, Scotland, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Prime Minister Attlee announced today that Britain's ruling Labor party is "out to build a new society — a society of peace, freedom and social justice."

"We are asking the House to get through a program of legislation unexampled in its peacetime history," the Prime Minister said in an address to a conference of the Scottish Labor party.

Announcing that "we are working on a long-term plan," he urged Labor party adherents to a high degree of self control, to assure that the timetable of the Labor program would not be upset, and "that at a later stage we shall not be confronted with opposition which might frustrate our efforts."

He warned members of the Labor majority that they "will have to disciple themselves to concentrate on a limited number of measures and to resist pressure that will be put up for immediate short term reliefs which, however excellent in themselves, will prevent progress being made with our main plan."

"We are seeking by carefully thought-out reforms to make the machinery of parliament more efficient without excluding just claims of opposition to criticize and without impairing its functions as a deliberative assembly," Mr. Attlee said.

"That does not in the least mean that the parliamentary party of our people in the country should be a mere passive agent carrying out without thinking the demands of the government," he added. "On the contrary, the plan requires the most vigorous co-operation of all."

ROBBERY REPORTED

Ottawa, Oct. 20 — (CP)—Government sources said last night that 5,000,000 pounds of meat canned in Canada were being shipped to France as well as potatoes and horses for farm work.

23 Nazi Leaders Served Formally With Indictment

Nuernberg, Oct. 20 (AP)—Indictments were served Friday on leaders of high Nazis and German militarists and industrial leaders. Their reaction was varied.

Walter Funk, former Economic Minister and President of the Reichsbank, broke down when the indictment was handed to him.

Col.-Gen. Alfred Jodl, Chief of Staff of the German army, calmly asked:

"From what category does counsel come? Do I choose a criminal lawyer or an international lawyer."

He was told any lawyer would be acceptable.

Shaggy-haired Joachim Von Ribbentrop, the champagne salesman who became German Foreign Minister, speaking in English said:

"I would like to think this over before saying anything."

Streicher Particular

Julius Streicher, Nazi editor of the anti-Jewish newspaper Der Sturmer, asked immediately:

"When can I see about counsel?"

He was handed a list of approved lawyers, several of whom had Jewish names.

"This is for somebody who is anti-semitic?" he asked. "I could not ask a Jew to defend me. I do not know these gentlemen. Under German law, the defendant has the right to reject prejudiced judge. Is this true in America?"

He was told he could discuss the point later.

Robert Ley, Nazi labor front leader, asked:

"When should I request counsel? Is it necessary for me to reply to the indictment?"

Funk in Tears

Crying like a baby, Funk said: "I would like to see some officer appointed by the court in order to discuss my defence. I can request counsel at once, can't I?"

Told he would have every chance to see counsel, Funk shouted through his tears:

"I am trying to preserve my health. I have the greatest interest in the conclusion of this trial."

"I would like to get in touch with my brother-in-law, but he has not replied to my letters. He lives in Hannover and I want him to choose my counsel for me."

Fritz Sauckel, General of the S.S. and S.A., said: "I would like to communicate with my family. Is it all right?"

He was told yes.

"You have to do your work in daylight," he was told.

All electrical fixtures have been removed from the cells to prevent prisoners from using them for attempting sucide.

Billy Westfall KO's 'Newfie' Champion, Frankie Morton Of Napanee, in the Third Round

Frankie Morton, Napanee, holder of the army welterweight championship of Newfoundland, met his match at the Hume Arena Friday night when Billy Westfall, clever Trenton, boxer knocked him out after 47 seconds of furious fighting in the third round of the main bout.

Morton, who was holding his own in the first two rounds, wilted when Westfall pushed a powerful right to the stomach in the third, sending the 'Newfie' champ to the canvas for a count of six. He came up smiling and Westfall cornering him in the ropes, sent a one-two again to the stomach and the Newfie champ buckled and slid to the canvas as Referee Fred Parry counted out the fateful ten.

The main bout while it lasted was productive of some better than average fighting insofar as a main go is concerned, with the principals going all out from the opening bell. Westfall, unafraid of the opposition's reputation, carried the fight from the opening gong and the first round was a typical slugging match with little or no science shown. It was a typical slugging match with each trying to wear the other down and afterwards endeavoring for the K. O.

Took the Count

The first two rounds of the five-round go, were productive of some real toe-to-toe slugging. In ed the Newfie champ for the count of six. A minute later he repeated and the Napanee lad laid there and took the count. the third Westfall diverted his attack to the stomach and floor-

There was some objection on the part of Morton's supporters to the effect that the knockout blows were low but these were disqualified by the referee and by Morton himself, after the bout.

"Give me two weeks to get into my proper condition and I'll give Billy a real go" said the loser after the bout.

In the semi-final Glen Dafoe in a bout that was far more entertaining than the headliner took a decision from Ronnie Mansfield after five rounds of torrid milling. The boys slugged it out toe-to-toe and the faithful roared its approval.

Downes Defeated

Another highlight of M'sieu' Harold Kurtz' card was in the fight between Jerry Downes, Belleville, and Jimmie MacDonald, of Trenton. Smiling Jimmie, who fights in a crouch, had reach and weight on the popular Belleville boy and slashed and fought his way to a decision. Incidentally this bout was a "filler-inner" for one that failed to materialize.

The remaining bouts saw Jerry Tyler, Trenton, win a popular decision over Don Shore of Belleville. Pete Lewis drew with Bill Hannah, Trenton, and red-trunked "Bing" Cross eked out the decision over "Soup" Whitney.

In the early bouts, Bobby Vieau got a decision from Bobby Cook, local product, and Billy Tyler, Trenton, decisioned Jerry Whalen of the Gardens A.C.

As an added attraction, the management threw in two good boys, Cliff Westlake, Trenton, and Gerald Seamark, Belleville, which ended in a knockout for the former.

CHAPTER 30

That was Pearl Harbor Day, 1941, and it was the day Elaine and Paul talked about a marriage that wasn't to be for a long time—that almost was never to be.

Elaine stood silently in Paul's office, watching him empty his desk drawer. He had a worried look on his face and he worked rapidly.

"Are you sure you'll be all right here?" he asked Elaine for the one thousandth time.

"Darling, I shall be most lovely here, waiting for you to marry me some day."

Paul paused in his work, looked at her. "I only wish I knew what they wanted with me in Washington. As soon as I find out I'll send for you. You won't marry one of Ellison's horses in the morning, will you?"

"I have a crush on the one with the green eyes. But I shall be true to you."

Paul grinned, then looked serious. "What do you suppose they want with me. . . .?"

When the telephone call from Paul came three days later she had to fight the sobs down while she listened to him.

"Darling, they're sending me to England right away. I can't tell you exactly what it's for, but I'm in a different kind of exploitation department."

Elaine had to take a deep breath before she could speak. "When will you be back?"

There was a slight hesitation from Paul. Finally he answered: "I don't know. I really don't. It may be next week—or next year. It's sort of an important job. I—I can still turn it down, Elaine. .

She shook her head vigorously at the telephone. "Oh, no, Paul, no. I'm proud of you. I'll miss you darling. I'll miss you with all my heart."

"I'll be back, darling."

"I'm worried. You're the best fullback ever. . . ."

She walked around her little apartment, trying to wipe out the numbed feeling in her brain, quiet the torment in her heart. She felt dry, horribly dry and drained inside. She had cried a wretched sobbing cry for a long time after Paul had hung up.

Now it was late and she fell across her bed, exhausted, afraid to think, afraid even to sleep, staring at the telephone and listening to the echo of Paul's voice, feeling suddenly old. . . .

She signed a new contract with International the next week, because she felt she needed something steady to keep her mind occupied. And because a lot of writers were entering the services or going to Washington to work for the various bureaus as public relations men.

She had gasped with surprise the morning Ellison kicked open her office door and strutted in his army officer's uniform.

"Ellison, you're a captain!"

"Sure, I'm a captain. I'm smart, I am. I know horses with red eyes."

"Be serious, Ellison. Did you get that from wardrobe, or are you really in the army?"

Ellison perched on the edge of her desk. "I'm being serious, Elaine. Quite serious. I had R. O. T. C. in college. I just got called up. So now I'm off to do battle."

He stood up and saluted her. "Take care of my old manuscripts and daily double tickets until I get back, kid. I'll miss you. I was going to get around to ask you to marry me, but . . ." He shrugged. "I'll probably make a better hero than I would a husband, anyway." He had the door open. "You know," he said slowly, his face suddenly very young and a little handsome. "I hope I turn out to be a hero. It would be sort of nice."

He closed the door quietly behind him and Elaine never saw him again. He was killed when his jeep overturned in a southern training camp. He never got to be a hero.

Brann loaded Elaine's schedule with three top productions. It was enough work to keep her busy for a year without a break. She accepted the work with the understanding that the moment Paul returned she would be free to go to him.

But the year was nearly up before Paul returned. She received many letters from him, several cables, but not once did he mention that his assignment was over and that he would be home. On the other hand, he kept inferring that he had more work to do, that she should be patient.

She was thankful for the work ahead of her. It made the time pass more quickly.

But there were nights when even the stars in California can shine too brightly. Those were the times when she would turn out all the lights in her apartment and sit on the window seat in the bedroom and watch the traffic on the street below and the umbrella of stars above. Most of Los Angeles was blacked-out.

One night while she was reading over the synopsis of a book to be adapted for the screen, Lee telephoned that he was on his way over. She tried to discourage him but he was insistent.

She made coffee and waited for him. He was sober when she let him in, but his eyes were hard and bitter. He flung his hat on a chair and paced nervously about the room, smoking a cigaret with intensity.

Finally Elaine asked: "What's the matter now?"

"Karen and Warren were married this afternoon. At Santa Barbara."

Elaine sat down, stared at the objects on the coffee table before her. "Oh," was all she said.

Lee finally stopped his pacing and sat down opposite her. He sighed heavily. "I suppose I should feel relieved. At least it ends the long chase, you might say."

"You still love her, don't you?"

"I hate her—and I still love her. So where does that get me?"

Elaine leaned forward. "Lee, you've got to stop thinking about her. She no longer belongs to you. She's a married woman now. The world is full of other girls. My goodness, it isn't as if you were so old and crippled. . . ."

"The army thinks I'm crippled."

"Well, you drank too much."

Lee gestured impatiently and stood up. "So what? So what about any of this? I just get a contract with Hall Production lined up—I resolve to save my money and quit drinking—I think maybe Karen will come back. What good is it all?"

Elaine was standing beside him, holding his arm. "Lee, you mustn't feel this way. You must go on and do all this that you were talking about."

He looked down at her, his eyes hard. "What do you know about it? You've always been a success. You've always had what you've wanted."

"Have I, Lee?" She looked at him, stared deeply into his eyes.

He walked to the window and stared into the night, his hands clenched.

"How long has Paull been gone?"

"Nearly a year," she answered.

"That's a long time. You still love him?"

"Very much."

"But a year's a long time. You can't really tell." He turned to her. "What would I have to do to get you back again?"

Elaine smiled a little. "You'd have to turn back time three or four years, Lee. I'm afraid that's impossible."

"That's what I thought," he said and picking up his hat. "Thanks for listening." He left the apartment.

Elaine looked at the closed door for a long time, letting her mind ramble. What would he have to do? Once it would have taken only a look, a little smile, a whispered word. She shook her head as if to shake away the thoughts. She had Paul. He was fine and gentle and loving. He was better than Lee, and she had him.

What would he have to do? the thought persisted.

She stood up, the restless feeling surging through her, and walked to the windows and waited—for what she did not know.

But she was not surprised when the telephone rang and it was Lee calling from the drug store on the corner. She listened to his words silently, hung up and walked into her bedroom for her coat.

When she was at the apartment door, ready to turn the lights out she caught the reflection of her face in a mirror. She read the mounting shame in them, the burning humility that was growing within her.

Gently she rubbed the diamond ring on her finger and slowly turned away from the door, walking back to the bedroom and taking off her coat, knowing that Lee would soon get tired of waiting for her to meet him and would either go home or get drunk.

She slept peacefully that night, the restlessness gone. . . .

It was the winter of 1943 and Paul was on his way home. Elaine had the cable stuffed in her purse as she drove down Wilshire toward the smart dress shops. She needed a new wardrobe, one that would do things to her full-back.

It had been a long wait for him, but she knew his job had been vital, that he had lined up corps upon corps of men who could take over the job of informing people in occupied countries what it really meant to work on the side of the Allies. Once he had made a parachute jump inside France to meet with underground members. He almost didn't get back.

The army doctors said he would always walk with a slight limp and when it rained the knee where the stray bullet had hit would always be a little painful.

Elaine was slipping into the blue dress when she heard Karen's voice behind her.

"Darling, you look simply atrocious in that."

Elaine poked her head on through the dress and looked into the opposite dressing room. Karen was admiring herself in a full-length mirror.

"Oh, hello, Karen."

"Blue does nothing for you, darling," Karen said as a seamstress pinned a hem in a skirt she was wearing.

Elaine looked at herself in the mirror. Karen was right, but she said: "Paul likes this color."

Karen made a face. "Are you beginning to dress for Paul already? You aren't married to him yet, darling. After all!"

"Don't you dress for John?" Elaine asked, buttoning up the dress.

"Don't be ridic," Karen smiled. "I don't worry about what John likes."

"When do you start work on Michael's new production?" Elaine asked.

"I don't."

Elaine's eyes widened a trifle. "Oh?"

"Hadn't you heard, darling? I'm going overseas to entertain the boys. It should be thrilling, don't you think? And good box office." Karen watched the seamstress for a moment. "John is dreadfully set against it. He has a chance to borrow me for a picture he's producing at American. He thinks it will put him on top. Imagine, having to borrow one's own wife."

What to Do With Big Oil Pipelines

(From Newsweek Magazine, New York)

Into them went $142,776,000 of the U. S. taxpayers' money, mile upon mile of steel, and the labor of thousands of men. Out of them for three years came an endless stream of oil — 500,000 barrels daily—from Texas to Atlantic Seaboard refineries. "Big Inch" and "Little Big Inch" they were called—the 1,254 miles of pipeline which American know-how had laid almost overnight to help win the war and to amaze the world.

Now that the war was won, it appeared American ingenuity could find no further use for "Big" and "Little Big Inch." Oil companies who have a large investment in tankers, preferred to ship by sea and, with the Government releasing their war-drafted tankers, had already resumed doing so. Talk of utilizing the pipelines to bring the East natural gas—much of which is at present wasted as a by-product of Western oil-well operation—brought shudders to the railroads, whose every third car now carries coal.

Moreover, even if oil companies wanted to utilize the pipelines—which can carry oil considerably cheaper than tankers—no one firm was big enough by itself to keep them running at capacity, the only economic way to operate them. If several companies pooled to use them, they would risk prosecution under anti-trust laws.

So many ifs, so many objections, boil down to the probability. Big Inch, will flow no more, unless another war requires it. The Reconstruction Finance Corporation, which owns the pipelines, is expected shortly to order them drained. It is considering filling them with water, compressed air, or some other substance, to preserve them, and let them lie idle. The final answer rests with Congress.

Chicago, Oct. 20 — (AP)—Two youths were shot to death by police, two others were wounded and a fifth was captured last night in a running gun battle. Police said the five invaded a garage, slugged a Negro attendant, and stole an automobile. Shots were exchanged as the police pursued the quintet.

New York; City of Vertical Transport

By FRANK S. ADAMS
In The New York Times

New York City's daily tempo, like its far-famed skyline, is largely the result of its vertical transportation system. Every day 43,440 elevators—one-fifth of all those in the United States, and more than exist in any continent except North America — carry about 17,400,000 passengers.

This is more than twice the city's population and three times as many as ride in the subways, elevated lines and street cars combined—a seeming paradox that is explained by the fact that every one who goes up must come down, and that many individuals —salesmen and mail carriers, for instance—spend a large part of their day going up and down.

So efficiently and reliably do modern elevators work that hardly anyone realizes how essential they are to the city's life until a strike disrupts their operation as one did last week; then the stenographer's aching feet and the business man's staggering economic losses make them both painfully aware of the importance of the missing factor. But in normal times, they travel uneventfully 125,000 miles a day — enough to take them to the moon in two days—through shafts whose combined lengths would stretch 1,600 miles—from New York to Denver, Col.

A staff of seventy inspectors in the city's Department of Housing and Buildings keeps constantly busy, checking all passenger elevators every three months and freight elevators every six months. This constant vigilance, combined with the ingenius safety devices that have been worked out by engineers, make elevators one of the safest forms of transportation in the world.

The city records show such astonishing rates as one passenger injured to 40,000,000 carried; one in 196,000,000 killed.

The world's fastest elevator rises 826 feet to the sixty-fifth floor of the RCA Building at a speed of 1,400 feet a minute, using 11.7 cents worth of electricity on each round trip. The highest-climbing elevator is a freight car that rises 986 feet from the sub-basement to the eighty-sixth floor of the Empire State Building. To get to the 102d floor observatory of the Empire State Building, the world's tallest structure, entails the use of three elevators, unless you care to walk, as two service men and a merchant sailor did last week.

The largest elevator in the world is also in New York, in the Port Authority Building at Eighth avenue and Fourteenth street. Its platform, 17x34 feet in dimension, is big enough to lift four loaded ten-ton trucks at once. When it was brought into the city it stopped all traffic in the Holland Tunnel for two hours, negotiating the passage with just two feet to spare.

Modern elevators are not quite a century old. The first one on record was constructed by Henry Waterman in this city in 1850, but it was a very crude affair, merely a platform hoist operating between two floors. Two years later Elisha Graves Atis began manufacturing elevators in Yonkers, and at the Crystal Palace Exposition in Bryant Park in this city in 1854 he thrilled thousands of spectators with the first demonstration of an elevator equipped with a safety device.

After his contrivance had been hoisted up by a puffing steam engine, he dramatically cut the rope that suspended the box in which he rode. To the amazement of the crowd, the box remained in place without any visible means of support.

Otis installed the first passenger elevator in 1857. Two years later the old Fifth Avenue Hotel announced the installation of a "vertical railway," operated by means of a worm gear built up to the height of the shaft. The sentiment of the day was expressed by one editor, who vowed that he hoped "the inventor's claim of safety is justified, although we, personally, do not.

Relative of Hamilton Lady Wrote of Nursing in Crimea

Interesting Record of Horrible War Conditions Less Than a Century Ago — Sufferings of Neglected Wounded Men Grim Beyond Words — Women Brought Humanizing Influence

The progress which has been made in the care of sick and wounded men during war may be impressively compared by contrasting today's provision for men in the services with some of the conditions described in Reminiscences of Scutari Hospitals in the winter of 1854-55, less than a century ago, which were written by one of the nursing sisters who went out with Florence Nightingale's little band to the Crimea. The writer of these reminiscences was Miss Sarah Anne Terrot, a family connection of Mrs. M. J. McGarvin of Hamilton who has a copy of the book published in 1898, reports a writer in Hamilton Spectator.

Revealing Details

Some of the conditions of those days are tragically told in extracts from her writings. Comments on Miss Nightingale's influence strikingly show her kindliness of heart.

"Miss Nightingale sent us to the corridor leading to our quarters, which had hitherto been an empty passage......cold, damp and draughty. Here we found a quantity of straw and sacking made up hastily into beds, and we were desired to sew them up and see them arranged, as wounded patients were immediately expected....Just as our beds were made up and arranged on each side of the passage the patients came in, mostly walking, though their pale faces and severely wounded bodies showed they were scarcely able for this effort. We had a good supply of war water, lint, oilskin and strapping, and each had a basin so in a short time each patient had not only the comfort of having his stiff and painful wounds dressed, but of a good wash besides, and of a clean shirt—luxuries indeed to men who for weeks had neither the means nor the time to wash themselves or their clothes. It seemed a hard rough place to lie down in, this noisy, windy passage, on a bundle of straw laid on the cold pavement, but to the poor men these hardships seemed luxuries, and they all expressed gratitude and delight. I wish all grumblers could have witnessed the scene and learnt endurance from these brave men. This is something like home. The very sight of a woman does us a world of good, it makes us fancy we've got home to our mothers,' they would comment."

Pathetic Details

Continuing to describe some of their experiences with the sufferers, Miss Terrot told of meeting a soldier staggering along the corridor one night as the nurses were returning to their quarters. "We spoke to him and found that he had landed that night with a number of sick, but not being able to keep up with the others, had fallen behind, lost his way, and now knew not where to lay his weary aching limbs. We took him from ward to ward until we found an empty bed. On returning to our quarters, we found ourselves shut out, as the nurses had retired to rest. However, on our ringing, Miss Nightingale herself opened the door, and on hearing our story, she searched out some provisions and sent us back with them to our poor exhausted friend and remained up to let us in on our return. She looked, I thought very sweet and kind, though delicate and worn out."

The near hopelessness of the nurses to achieve the recovery of their patients as a reward of their care was shown by the comment:

"I sometimes longed for a little change, to see some rally and recover, to help to restore some to their friends and country, for all we seemed able to do for our poor sick seemed to be merely to cheer and prolong their dying hours. Very few would return, their constitutions were ruined; a few months had done the work of years—in mind, character and constitution, they were aged men, though in years they were but boys.

Horrible Conditions

"One poor dying fellow seemed to be neglected by the orderlies because he was dying," she writes. "He was very dirty, covered with wounds, and devoured by lice. I pointed this out to the orderlies, whose only excuse was —'It's not worth while to clean him; he's not long for this world.' I washed his face and hands, cut away his hair, and tried to make him a little less uncomfortable, and he was so grateful, he would scarcely let me leave him. His eyes were inflamed, and I gave him a little soft cambric rag for them as he injured them by rubbing them with his dirty hands; in fact, by conveying bad matter from his wounds to his eyes and face, they had got into a fearfully painful state. His flannel shirt was dark, and seemed moving with lice; it stuck into his bed sores; he needed a woman's constant care, but I was unable to return to him."

Of the orderlies of that day, Miss Terrot writes, after a brief description at some of their grumblings when patients were brought in: "It may seem such conduct in the orderlies, considering that they were fellow-soldiers of the poor sufferers, was most unfeeling and inconsistent with the general character of the soldiers, (and, certainly all orderlies were not selfish and heartless), but, on the whole, they seemed to me very inferior in character to the other soldiers. I think the finer and nobler men scorned the inactivity and safety of hospital life, and preferred much the danger and hardships of the camp before Sebastopol, to such woman's work as nursing and sweeping, so that they were rather the dregs of the army who became orderlies, and their motive being selfish safety. They had no real love for their duty.. It is either unduly depressing or hardening and demoralizing for the wild buoyancy of youth to be thrust into such scenes. I have seen lads frolicking about by the bedside of their dying comrades, caught them even at leapfrog along the feet of a row of sufferers, some in anguish, some in the awful stillness of death; and if reproved. 'We can do them no good, poor fellows; we must keep up our own spirits a bit,' was the answer."

After various further details on the orderlies of the day, she says, "I do think one great use of the nurses was their influence on the orderlies in checking their carlessness and roughness; in encouraging, cheering, and directing the more attentive and kindhearted, and in watching that the very weak were not neglected. I did see neglect in those parts where there was no woman, which no nurse would have allowed, and which the doctors who went through the wards, but did not remain in them, were not cognizant of."

Referring to the attitude of some of the doctors of the day, the writer comments, "I often observed that the kindest and most zealous doctors sometimes seemed exasperated by the death of their patients and vended their disappointment and vexation on any one who came in their way. I found this so much the case, that I avoided my doctor as much as possible when any patient he was interested in was dying."

Shirked No Horrors

At one of the times when many of the patients were dying, the writer comments on Miss Nightingale. "She afterwards went into the deadhouse with Mr. M. (second in charge of hospital), where above ten who had died that day lay. It was an awful place to visit at any time, and as I waited at the door and saw her calmly uncover the faces of the dead and look on them as they lay far from wife or mother in that dreary place, it seemed strange to see one so frail, graceful and refined standing at the dead of night alone amid such sad scenes of mortality.

"About this time, the end of November, Miss Nightingale took me with her one night to distribute shirts to some of the patients. All to whom she gave shirts were without any, and she asked each what had become of his. Some said they had worn theirs till it was so filthy and full of lice they had to take them off and have them burnt; others told us they had taken them off and given them to comrades who had none, and were ordered to get up, and they needed them more than those still in bed.

"The men rejoiced to have a nurse, and told me I was much cleaner and gentler than the orderly, who used, when the doctor was engaged, to wash several patients' wounds in the same water. I began operations on a fearfully filthy and shattered leg of an Alma Irishman, who shouted out, "Och! the blessing of the touch which covered that winter of 1845-55, Miss Terrot tells of her experience with Florence Nightingale when she made a certain request: "Miss N, very kindly granted my request, and indeed in all my personal intercourse with her the impression she gave me at first of kindness, firmness, and wisdom was fully realized. I was about to learn her value in a deeper degree, to know how dear she was to the sick, how her sweet voice and gentle words could cheer and soothe the heart when sinking in that most depressing fever, sickness."

PRIEST TESTIFIES

Mrs. Beaudin said that many people were waiting to see McCaffrey when she visited him for treatment of a "sore arm" last July 8.

She said McCaffrey showed a crucifix, made crosses on her forehead and hand with oil and offered prayers. When she asked if there was a fee, McCaffrey had shrugged his shoulders. She noticed a large bowl containing money and deposited two dollars.

Mrs. D'Avignon said she visited McCaffery on the same day complaining of a sore ear. He had rubbed her leg, poked his finger into the flesh and said there was "something wrong with your kidneys". She said McCaffery said he would take "anything at all" when asked if there was a charge, and she had left one dollar.

Testifying in his own defence, McCaffery said he had always lived in the district, was well-known as a devout Christian and that large numbers came to him for "bodily comfort". He often had to leave his work in the fields to attend to them.

Never Advertised.

He said he never had advertised himself as a "faith healer". He obtained holy oils from St. Joseph's Oratory, Montreal, and used a crucifix containing the "relics of eight saints". The only medicine he had ever recommended was "patent medicine", he said, adding that any money received was used to have Masses said.

August Lemieux, defence counsel, protested the prosecution had no right to produce a court record of a previous conviction on similar charges on Oct. 8, 1941, before judgment had been rendered.

Japanese Orders To Kill Allied POW Are Seized

By DUANE HENNESSY

Tokyo, Oct. 20—(AP)—Written Japanese army and navy orders that called for the killing of Allied prisoners of war on the slightest provocation were captured in combat and are held in files at Allied headquarters, it was learned Friday.

These orders made such an impression on the troops that one member of the Japanese 53rd infantry regiment reminded himself in his diary, now in Allied files:

"Kill as many prisoners as possible. If the situation allows, make them work."

"Should any doubt arise in connection with the treatment of prisoners, those who display hostile feeling should be disposed of vigorously and without mercy."

In June, 1942, the commanding officers of the Japanese 15th independent engineering regiment wrote a circular now in Allied files sharply rebuking his men for not ruling prisoners harshly enough."

"You must have sufficient self respect to place yourselves on a higher level. Use them like Canton coolies...."

With Canada's Naturalists

Explanation Given For Brilliant Coloring in Fall

Toronto, Oct. 20 (CP)—In no country on earth is the glory of color more spectacular than in Canada on an October day. Maples flaming red, birches dropping showers of golden leaves, oaks a symphony of purple tones and brown, wild asters and goldenrod making every country lane and woodland fringe at once the joy and despair of artists — the Canadian fall festival of color has inspired admiration not only at home, but enthusiastic praise from visitors whose native lands can show no autumn splendor to equal it.

Jack Frost is the artist usually credited with the grandeur of color in autumn foliage. It is a pretty concept but lacks scientific confirmation. Not the dip of the temperature but nature's preparation for winter chill is behind the color-change.

Leaves put on their fall finery and eventually drop when the supply of sap is cut off. Chlorophyy, the chemical that makes them green, needs a constant flow of moisture. When it ceases the green tint fades out.

Carotin, another pigment present in the leaves all the time but masked by the green, then comes to the fore. Carotin is the substance that gives color to carrots and makes butter and the yolks of eggs yellow. It gives the vivid orange hue to the leaves of the sugar-maple and makes the birches golden when the chlorophyll departs.

And when the green of oaks, other species of maples, and the ashes turns crimson, scarlet or purple, it means that the chlorophyll has given place to a sugar-chemical in the residual sap of the leaves called anthocyanin. So, the whole brilliant pageant of autumn commences when nature plugs up the plumbing as it were, by sealing off the tiny pipes that carry the sap to the leaves.

Not common in the autumn woods of Canada is a flesh-colored fungus bearing a rough resemblance to the human ear. It has a formidable scientific label, of course, but its popular name is "Judas' Ear." It is often found on alder trees, and alder, according to tradition, was the wood of which the cross of Calvary was made.

Just back from war service in Europe, a Canadian soldier whose home is in the Muskoka District, tells of the thrill he had when, almost under the shadow of St. Paul's Cathedral, amid the rubble of a bombed building, he saw the magenta-colored flowers of the fireweed (willowherb) which springs up and flourishes in burnt over areas.

"I never expected to see the fireweed again until I got back to Canada," he said. "Those flowers growing there in the middle of London were like a special message from home."

Introduced into Ontario waters experimentally about eight years ago, the Kamloops trout, delight of anglers in the lakes of British Columbia, appears to have made itself at home. One Toronto angler caught seven fine specimens in Lake Bernard, about 180 miles north of Toronto on a recent day's fishing. All seven were close to 20 inches long and weighed two pounds each. He describes the Kamloops as being as beautiful as the rainbow trout, as good to eat as the speckled, and as game a fighter as the small-mouthed black bass.

IMPORT APPLES FOR CIDER FIRST TIME IN HISTORY

Kitchener, Oct. 20 — (CP)—For the first time in the history of Waterloo County, farmers in the St. Jacobs area are importing apples to make cider and apple butter.

Man Confesses To Shooting Wife

Denver, Oct. 20 (AP)—A hysterical partly disrobed girl Thursday night told police a story which resulted in arrest of a recently discharged soldier as he crouched in a car beside the body of his dead wife in a cornfield in Aurora, a Denver suburb.

The sheriff, Charles Foster of Araphoe County, said Joseph Desrosiers, 25, confessed to the shooting of his bride of 10 months, Catherine, "because her mother made life a hell for us."

Police said Marie Woidell, 28, told them she met Desrosiers earlier in the night at a Denver tavern, that they drove in her automobile to East Denver where the veteran met his wife and that she drove the couple about for some time before finding herself in Aurora.

As they drove along an Aurora street, Desrosiers shot his wife, police quoted the girl, and forced Miss Woidell to drive to a cornfield where the car became mired in a ditch.

Miss Woidell told police Desrosiers ordered her to disrobe and she related that she removed her outer clothes and then snatched his jacket from him, hailed a cab and went to the Denver police headquarters.

Following Desrosiers' arrest he was quoted by detectives as saying, "I would have killed myself while I was sitting there but my gun wouldn't work.

Desrosiers told police he and his wife were married last January and that his mother-in-law opposed the marriage.

ELEVEN INJURED

Montreal, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Eleven persons were injured last night in a collision between two street cars on Park Avenue near Duluth Street. All suffered minor cuts and bruises and were allowed to return home after treatment at hospital.

Preserve the sweet taste of Victory!

When the bugles blow and the flags fly, when the bands play and the crowds cheer . . . VICTORY IS SWEET!

When the throng gathers at the railway stop, and the soldiers spill off the train, and tears and laughter all run together . . . VICTORY IS SWEET!

We had a war before . . . and we won . . . and Victory was sweet. Later, Victory tasted bitter in the breadlines; Victory looked strange selling shoe laces.

BRITAIN'S LAWMAKERS EAT CAFETERIA-STYLE NOW

British M.P.'s are shown waiting in line for lunch in the new cafeteria which was recently opened in the House of Commons. Without private fortunes like many of the M.P.'s in the previous parliament, the Labor members balked at paying prices asked in the tonier House dining-room and, before the cafeteria was opened, it was not uncommon to see a Labor M.P. sitting in a corner, unashamedly eating sandwiches brought from home. The new quick-service system is not only very popular, but has solved one of the government's vital feeding problems.

Churchill Urges Speeding Up of Demobilization

'Task of Holding Germany Down Will Not be Hard'

London, Oct. 22 — (CP)—Winston Churchill, urging Britain's Labor government to accelerate demobilization of the armed forces, declared today that "the task of holding Germany down will not be a hard one — it will be much more difficult to hold her up."

Mr. Churchill, speaking in Commons as the leader of the Conservative opposition, said the occupation of Germany and the Low Countries should require no more than 40,000 troops with the same number required for the Mediterranean zone.

He contended that the R. A. F. should be reduced to a personnel of 40,000 and that the Navy should be brought back to its pre- war strength of 1,330,000.

In his first major attack in Commons upon the policies of the new Labor government, Mr. Churchill said he was disquieted by the slowness of the government's demobilization policies — one of the issues upon which the Conservative press has been concentrating in recent weeks.

Wants Wheels Turning Soon as Possible

"Whatever view may be taken on Socialism or free enterprise," he said, "it is common ground that we should get the great wheels as well as the little wheels of life and industry turning as soon as possible. For this we need the men."

Recovered from a throat ailment which had stilled his voice on the floor recently, the former Prime Minister urged that speed be put into carrying out the demobilization program which was forged under his leadership.

It was as Minister of National Service in Mr. Churchill's coalition cabinet that Ernest Bevin, now Foreign Secretary, worked out the demobilization plan which, with slight modifications, still is in operation. Demobilization has been classed as Britain's No. 1 domestic problem.

In reference to the argument that homes are lacking to house demobilized soldiers Mr. Churchill declared:

"Use billeting wherever necessary. Take land for houses if you need it."

'If You Need It'

As cheers arose from the Labor benches, Mr. Churchill paused for a moment, and then repeated:

" . . . if you need it."

On solution of the demobilization problem hangs the fate of many other pressing issues linked up with the manpower shortages — including the matter of providing coal this winter.

Chancellor of the Exchequer Hugh Dalton is expected to place his interim budget before the lawmakers tomorrow.

Sources close to the government expected the new finance program to include reduction of cigaret and beer taxes and restoration of prewar exemptions on earned income; a possible reduction in the basic taxation rate of 10 shillings to the pound ($4.50) and tax exemptions for industrial replacement of new machinery for old to hasten reconversion. Not even the most optimistic, however, expected wholesale tax cuts. Britain is still spending more than twice her income despite the end of hostilities.

WOMAN KILLED AS POSSE HUNTS JAIL BREAKERS

Special Constable Faces Charge of Manslaughter at Parry Sound

Parry Sound, Ont., Oct. 22 (CP) —While police continued today the hunt for five jail-breakers, special Constable Roy Land faced a charge of manslaughter after a bullet from his rifle was believed to have killed Mrs. Adam Burnside.

The fatality occurred Saturday when, apparently due to a misunderstanding, Mrs. Burnside's son Roy drove the family car through a police road block.

Members of a posse called on the car to stop and when it did not a shot was sent after the car. It pierced the back of the vehicle and went on to strike Mrs. Burnside in the head. She died instantly.

The Burnsides were returning home from a shopping trip. After the shot had been fired the car came to a halt and young Burnside came running back, sobbing, "Oh, you've shot my mother".

After investigation a manslaughter charge was laid against Land and he was released on bail.

The incident stemmed back the Parry Sound jail of five men convicted of house-breaking in

—PRINCE KONOYE

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Oct. 22 — (AP)—Prince Fumimaro Konoye, working on a draft of a new Japanese constitution at the suggestion of Gen. MacArthur, said today Emperor Hirohito was anxious for a stronger parliament capable of guiding influence on the country's political affairs.

Konoye, who said yesterday Gen. MacArthur had suggested that Konoye lead a Liberal political movement, said in an interview today that the necessity of senior statesmen around the Throne gradually would disappear under contemplated constitutional revisions.

The prince, thrice premier of Japan and himself one of the most influential of these senior statesmen, said there was a "strong possibility" that the Diet, or parliament, would eliminate neel for the powerful clique in the shadow of the Throne.

Increased power of the Diet will be one more safeguard against the future "misuse of the constitution," he added.

Konoye, who was premier when Japan opened its war on China in 1937, already had said that one question to be pondered in remaking the constitution was a provision for abdication of an Emperor.

Several Japanese higherups have said that in their opinion Hirohito has no intention to abdicate, but that he was aware of world-wide discussion of the possibility that he might step down in favor of the Crown Prince.

Konoye, conceded in high government circles to be the central figure in the state affairs of Japan today, said he had been approached on the matter of forming and heading a new political party, but was undecided.

The Prince said that in two ecent interviews with Gen. MacArthur he had explained his official activities since 1937, and the Allied commander had said "in a general way that I should lead a Liberal movemnnet in Japan."

QUEEN ELIZABETH SAILS FOR CANADA, 12,600 ABOARD

Starts First of Series Canadian Repatriation Sailings; Battles Stiff Wind to Get in Stream

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Southampton, Oct. 22 (C.P. Cable) — Twelve thousand Canadian servicemen and 600 civilians today began the voyage to Halifax as the 85,000-ton troopship Queen Elizabeth left here on an ebbing tide, starting the first of her series of Canadian repatriation sailings.

For 1½ hours, however, 10 tugboats battled a stiff stern wind to get the Queen Elizabeth out into the stream. They lost so much space that the Elizabeth drew perilously close to the British hospital ship Chintilly moored nearby and wooden piling crumbled against her great, steel sides.

Thousands of men from many parts of Canada massed on the stern decks as the big ship moved into the stream. She is due in Halifax Friday. On the return voyage she is expected to carry British personnel brought across Canada from Vancouver following Far East service.

Prime Minister Sends Message.

Prime Minister Mackenzie King, now in London, sent a message to the Canadian commandant aboard Col. John Wallis of Montreal, saying:

"Will you please accept for yourself and convey to other officers and members of Canada's Allied forces aboard the Elizabeth my best of wishes for a pleasant ocean voyage and safe return home.

"I regret it has not been possible for me to be at Southampton to see the party off and even more not to have an opportunity to share with you all the voyage across. You will need no assurance of the national welcome which awaits one and all."

Lt.-Gen. John Murchie, Canadian chief of staff in London, viewed the departure.

Pennies and half-crowns were tossed from the ship to dock workers by the Canadian troops.

The Duke and Duchess of Sutherland also are aboard the ship. The Duke said he would stay in Ottawa with Pensions Minister Mackenzie who had made arrangements for his crossing—"a personal business trip to see my Canadian property."

'Fairly Good Number' Television Stations On Air in 1946

Washington, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Federal Communications Commission experts forecast today that a "fairly good number" of television stations will go on the air during 1946.

Within four weeks FCC hopes to announce rules and regulations for television broadcasting.

The next step will be to process the 140 pending television applications then station construction can get under way.

Under study by FCC engineers is a proposal by the television Broadcasters Association, Incorporated, to provide more television channels through the use of directional antenna which aims radio signals in a chosen direction. The Association claims this would provide at least 401 television stations in 135 metropolitan districts — 59 more than is believed possible under the present N.C.C. allocation plan.

QUISLING PETITIONS FOR PARDON

Oslo, Oct. 22 — (Reuters)—Vidkun Quisling, Norwegian Prime Minister under the German occupation who was condemned to death by a Norwegian court Sept. 10, has petitioned for pardon, the Norwegian telegraph agency reported today. A previous appeal to the Norwegian High Court was turned down.

7,000 Canadians Still Are Listed As Missing

Halifax, Oct. 22 —(CP)—Teams of experienced investigators are searching every corner of Europe for some trace of the 7,000 Canadian airmen still listed as missing and presumed dead after operations.

Sqdn. Ldr. G. E. J. Welsh of Toronto, a member of the R. C. A. F. casualty branch, returned to Canada yesterday aboard the Ile de France with a group of overseas casualty experts who are going to Ottawa to assist in consolidating casualties work at air force headquarters.

He described the widespread search as one of the greatest manhunts of all time.

NINTH VICTORY LOAN CAMPAIGN OPENS IN CANADA

Graham Towers Confident Minimum Objective of $1,500,000,000 Will be Reached

Ottawa, Oct. 22—(CP)—Parades and rallies fired the opening salute of the ninth victory loan across the country today as loan headquarters announced the first large purchases toward the minimum objective of $1,500,000,000—higher than that of any of the eight wartime loans.

First large purchases were of $22,500,000 by the London Life Insurance Company with headquarters at London, Ont., and $1,250,000 by the Robin Hood Flour Mill's, Limited of Montreal and Moose Jaw, Sask.

Fifty-two army motorcycle despatch riders carried operation orders "Victory Nine" today to civilian committees throughout Manitoba.

Operational orders addressed to each unit chairman, drawn up on the identical plan used when troops are in action, bore the signature of Brig. R .O. G. Morton, District Officer Commanding M. D. 10 with headquarters at Winnipeg.

Were Crash Helmets

3 Youths Held After Holdup In Toronto Home

Toronto, Oct. 22 — (CP)—Three Toronto youths were arrested Sunday night and charged with the armed holdup of Maj. Charles Chandler, his wife and daughter, in their home Saturday night. Police said most of the stolen valuables, including jewelry, had been recovered.

Three armed men, two of them covering the lower part of their faces with handkerchiefs, entered the Chandler home and held up the three family members while ransacking the residence.

Police considered it one of the boldest armed robberies here in months. Three men knocked vigorously at the door of the Chandler residence in North Toronto and were answered by 'teen-aged Virginia Chandler because her parents had retired.

The men entered at gunpoint and the commotion attracted attention of Maj. Chandler who called downstairs. Two of the bandits then ran upstairs and herded Maj. Chandler and his wife into a downstairs room along with their daughter.

At almost the same time, another trio of youths held up laundryman Mack Ming in his Bathurst Street store and escaped with $50 —and a quantity of laundry.

Police believe the same gang responsible for the armed robbery of several Chinese merchants here during the last few weeks.

REVOLUTIONARY JUNTA IN CONTROL OF VENEZUELA

10-Man Cabinet Pledged To Democratic Ideals Headed by Former Newspaper Columnist

By PHILIP CLARKE

Caracas, Oct. 22, (AP)— A cabinet pledged to democratic ideals took over the reins of government in oil-rich Venezuela today under sponsorship of a revolutionary Junta which stamped out all important resistance to its coup d'etat in a tumultuous weekend of armed conflict.

Romulo Betancourt, 37, former newspaper columnist, assumed the duel role of President and Interior Minister with a pledge that his government had assumed power only to provide Venezuela with "free, direct universal suffrage by secret ballot".

Betancourt promised that Venezuela would take an energetic part in preserving hemispheric unity.

"We want to be good neighbors not only on Pan-American Day, with flowery words and phrases, but in deeds as well", he said.

The new president, a one-time communist who later renounced the party, announced his government would respect the rights of foreigners and their investments.

The last major opposition to the new regime ended yesterday as the Andean States of Tachira, Merida and Trujillo swung over to the rebels. Resistance also ceased in the mountainous State of Zulia, whose oil fields are the basis of Venezuela's economic life. Fighting ceased when the government announced it was not opposed to the Andinos, a western military clique which has dominated national politics for a century.

A small force loyal to deposed President Isaas Medina of Angarita, still held out in the southeastern section of Caracas but Junta leaders predicted its speedy liquidation

The new government promised "fair and speedy trials" for Medina and Gen. Eleazar Lopez Contreras, whom revolutionary leaders accused of malfeasance of public funds. An investigation into the affairs of other former public officials was underway.

Ruiz Pineda also announced the new government had abolished press censorship for the first time in Venezuela's modern history, started reorganization of the police force, and would begin preparation of a new election law.

(Clark Brown, Allentown, Pa., business man, said last night on reaching the United States from Venezuela, reports were current before he left that "between 2,000 and 9,000" persons were killed in the fighting.)

U-BOAT PENS DESTROYED

Hamburg, Germany, Oct. 22—(AP)—Nazi U-Boat pens which took four years to construct at a cost of 21,000,000 marks ($8,400,000 at pre-war exchange) were destroyed by British Engineers in two seconds yesterday with 32 tons of explosive.

FATALLY INJURED

Peterboro, Oct. 22 — (CP) — Fred McNeil, 34, of Manvers township, died in hospital yesterday from a fractured skull received when he fell from a load of clover. The horses took fright and bolted and McNeil was thrown to the ground and suffered severe injury.

Wins Popular Victory in Two-Pronged Election

Fourth Republic Will be Based on New Constitution

By RELMAN MORIN

Paris, Oct. 22 — (AP)—France's first general election in nine years today placed an almost unqualified stamp of approval on Gen. deGaulle's plans to found a fourth republic on a new constitution drafted by the people's chosen representatives.

Figures announced today by the Interior Ministry 12 hours after the closing of the polls showed Gen. deGaulle had won an overwhelming victory in a two-pronged election which decided that:

1. A constituent assembly—designated at yesterday's election — will draft a new constitution rather than attempt to rebuild the government on the 1885 document which was the foundation of the Third Republic.

2. Executive power will be vested in a provisional government during the seven months the assembly sits rather than in the assembly itself.

With approximately half of the ballots counted, the first issue was carried by a margin of 10,694,197 votes to 729,409 — a 96 per cent affirmative majority, according to the official figures.

For establishment of an interim government, the vote so far was 7,448,129 to 3,980,441 against — a 65 per cent majority.

A Potent Factor

The election witnessed the emergence of the resistance - born popular Republican Movement — (M.R.P.) as a potent factor in French politics. Socialistically inclined, the M.R.P. is headed by Foreign Minister Georges Bidault, who is considered close to Gen. deGaulle.

Unofficial computations based on virtually complete figures from Metropolitan France showed this lineup in the Assembly for the major parties:

Socialist Coalition 143 seats, Communist 143, M.R.P. 140, Moderate Rightists 26 and Socialist 19.

Less than 20 per cent of the remaining assembly seats were distributed among minor parties. The Assembly will have 522 members from France and 64 more from the Colonies.

The Communists — before the election considered the dominant political group — were assured of 13 seats.

Electoral Endorsement

Gen. deGaulle won electoral endorsation all down the line. Sixteen of his present "Council of Ministers" sought election to the Assembly and 15 were victorious. Only Rene Mayer, his Minister of Transportation, was defeated.

Gen. deGaulle himself and four other ministers did not seek election to Assembly posts.

Government statistics indicated between 20,000,000 and 25,800,000 persons voted in the National elections — the first in which women were eligible.

Weather Forecast

Manitoba: Tuesday, a few light scattered showers or snowflurries, chiefly in southern districts.

U. S. Strikes At-a-Glance

By The Associated Press

Strike idle at approximately 217,400 — almost halved during weekend. Slated to drop another 16,700 during week with return of laid off steel workers affected by coal strike.

Public Utilities — C.I.O. Michigan State Utility Council orders members back to work after 14 of 22 locals vote to accept wage increase.

Shipping — Gulf shipping tied up along Texas coast by strike of 3,500 A.F.L. longshoremen and warehousemen; C.I.O. West Coast longshoremen threaten strike Oct. 29 if "living cost" wage demand not met.

Glass—Some 15,000 glass workers in 10 cities strike in deadlock over wages and other issues.

Returning to Work — A total of 228,900 composed, excluding the coal miners, of 3,000 at General Motors' Packard electrical plant at Warren, 5,000 AFL ship repairmen in the Los Angeles area; 1,500 at the General Electric X-ray Corporation in Chicago; another 1,400 at the Revere Copper and Brass Company, Chicago, and 2,000 Michigan utility workers.

Off their jobs or due to leave—15,000 glass workers in 10 cities; 5,000 steel workers idle as a result of a walkout of 144 transport workers at Republic Steel's Canton alloy division, Canton, O.; and 1,500 Western Electric employees, Kearny, N.J.

Still idle — 61,700 Northwest Lumber and Sawmill workers; 1,700 bus drivers, 7,000 moviemen, 9,300 cotton and textile employees and 3,500 A.F.L. Gulf Coast longshoremen with the balance of the total made up in strikes ranging from 25 persons upward.

WEREWOLF LEADER CAPTURED ON FARM

Lueneburg, Germany, Oct. 22—(AP) — Hans Colling, an organizer of the abortive werewolf movement and a Nazi leader of the Hitler youth group, has been captured on a farm near Lueneburg where he was working as a laborer.

Colling, whose alias is Hans Koch, was found cowering in a room. In the lining of his clothing, police found four phials of poison and papers said to outline plans for the werewolf movement.

About 20 British security police raided the farmhouse early Friday morning. A farmer attacked a British lieutenant with a club and was killed.

Detroit Car Manufacturers in Race For Low-Priced Car Market

Detroit, Oct. 22 (AP) — Detroit motor car manufacturers are engaged in a hot race for the low-priced car market, with General Motors alone setting aside $50,000,000 for research and engineering.

This fact came from Charles F. Kettering, director of research for General Motors. He would not go into details as to how the money would be spent, but it appeared obvious that it would include the actual making of machine tools for a car priced under either Ford or Chevrolet.

On the surface, Detroit manufacturers have been concentrating on producing as many improved 1942-type cars as quickly as they can but with most of them scheduled to sell for more than 1942 prices, the idea of a lighter, cut-rate car is getting plenty of attention.

The Ford Company, which got a break in wartime contract cancellations and was the first to get into actual production, has kept its plans secret, but is known to be spending millions on research in the lower priced car field.

The Henry Kaiser-Joseph Frazier threat to build a car that would undersell the old-line manufacturers has apparently been a factor in the situation.

DOOR SMASHED BY PASSING CAR

Ivor Butler, Grier Street, escaped possible serious injury only by inches Saturday when after parking his car on North Front St. he opened the driver's door to emerge only to have it jerked out of his hand by a passing car driven by Yvon Gaudreau, of Mountain View. Door of the car and fender of the Gaudreau auto were both damaged.

Gaudreau informed police that two autos coming from the north had prevented him giving the Butler car sufficient clearance as he attempted to pass. No one was injured as a result of the accident.

CONGREGATIONS URGED TO SUPPORT LOAN

Designated as Victory Loan Sunday by officials of the National War Finance, the opening of the Ninth Victory Loan was officially heralded yesterday by special messages from pulpits in all city churches. Members of the various church congregations collectively were urged to support the Victory Loan and thus assist in raising the money which will be needed to rehabilitate the thousands of Canadian veterans who through their sacrifices made peace possible.

As in previous Victory Loan campaigns one of the first city firms in the group payroll section to achieve its objective, Trudeau Motor Sales has already gone "over the top" in the Ninth Victory Loan, it was announced today. Campaign headquarters announced employees of this firm had already over subscribed their total and had attained 149 per cent of their objective.

INEBRIATES AND MINOR TROUBLES KEEP POLICE BUSY OVER WEEKEND

Apprehension of persons who had imbibed too freely of "wobble" water, together with numerous minor incidents kept the local police department comparatively busy over the weekend with a half dozen or more inebriates being lodged in the cell blocks.

A Boswell Street resident complained of money disappearing from her milk bottles while a Grier Street resident complained to police that his wallet containing $36 had disappeared during a visit to a local beverage room.

METROPOLITAN OPERA STARS TO BE HEARD AT TRENTON STATION

Metropolitan Opera stars from New York will form the feature attraction of a grand Victory Loan Rally being held in the sports hangar of the Trenton Air Station tonight (Monday) according to public relations officers of the station.

Mr. Lansing Hatfield, renowned singer, and Miss Betty Spry, Canadian girl who got beyond the portals of the "Met" to make decided success in operatic circles will be in attendance with a number of other concert luminaries.

The rally will start at 8 o'clock and air station officials extend a cordial invitation to the public to attend.

Thousands Visit Bata Shoe Plant Near Frankford

Under ideal weather conditions that were more like those of Spring than Autumn, upwards of ten thousand people took advantage of the invitation to "Open House" held at the Bata Shoe Company's plant, Batawa, on Sunday afternoon.

Shortly after one o'clock, the scheduled time for opening, practically every available parking place was filled to capacity. People milled through the spacious grounds, visited the "village" where the compact houses and well-kept grounds were consistent sources of interest, or waited patiently till hard-working plant policemen allowed them through the turnstiles to visit the plant proper.

Entering the plant in single file where they signed large guest books, the crowd good-naturedly went through the large plant, tirelessly climbing stairs to visit the many departments in the main building.

Here they saw the things that "make Bata tick," the large and small machines and the many intricate phases of manufacture that form an important place in the plant operation. They saw machinery that makes machinery and many other interesting things.

In the large cafeteria on the second floor, plant waitresses worked tirelessly all afternoon to provide the thousands with refreshments. A public address system provided music during the entire afternoon.

Rector Conducts Youth Service At Christ Church

At a youth service in Christ Church, Sunday night, the rector, Rev. J. Grant Sparling, told the congregation that one of the difficulties in life was to line up priorities with the will of God. "At adolescence," he said, "when choosing a vocation children have to decide between making a living and making a life."

Members of the A.Y.P.A. assisted in the service with Ed. Waterhouse and Charlie Staples reading the lessons while Ronald Button, Harry Fry, James Wright, Herb Dean, Sid Welsh and Bob Ragsdale acted as sidesmen. During an interval in the service Helen Flindall was installed in the office of president; Agnes Wright as treasurer, and Charles Staples as secretary. The Rector was assisted by the Rev. Everett Smith and Lay-Reader Geo Meades. After Evensong a youth foum was held in the Parish Hall when Charlie Staples led a discussion on the Kenora Conference and Gordon Leggat gave a report on the recent conference at London. Several new A.Y.P.A. songs were learned.

At eight a.m. there had been a corporate communion for the young people which was followed by a breakfast party in the Parish Hall. At eleven at the family service and morning prayer the rector preached on the Christian family and described God's way of holding people together and of giving them a basic training for community living.

Wolves Plentiful Around Read

Wolves are so plentiful and bold down around the Read district that they come out on the highway and snarl defiance at mere man.

The other day Harold Mastin, Read, was driving his heavy truck down a road near his home when he spotted a large grey wolf ambling along the roadside. He "stepped on the gas" and Brer Wolf apparently chose to escape via the road rather than the woods. Mastin managed to strike the animal with the front wheels of his truck and injure it sufficiently to slow it down so it could be despatched with a gun. The hide measured five feet eight inches from tail to nose.

According to Mastin there are plenty of the animals in his district. On Sunday he went out on a hunting party and saw several wolves but could not come close enough for a kill.

Ontario Industrial Fatalities Higher

Toronto, Oct. 22 — Industrial fatalities throughout Ontario for the first nine months of 1945 total 358, the highest number of fatal cases during the same period of time for the past 15 years, reports the Industrial Accident Prevention Associations from records of the Workmen's Compensation Board. During the same nine month period of 1944 and 1943 the figures were 272 and 322 respectively.

Last month (September) there were 9,602 accidents reported, including 23 fatalities. For the same month the Board awarded $788,325.68 for compensation and medical aid, of which $115,271.20 were for medical service.

Graduation Ceremonies At St. Michael's H.S.

Friday, October 19th, will live long in the memories of the 1945 class of Saint Michael's High School, for it was their graduation day. The exercises commenced at 8.30 a.m., when the faculty, graduates and entire student body assisted at Mass celebrated in the parish church by the pastor, Right Reverend Monsignor Nicholson. At 4 p.m. the students with their parents and friends assembled in the auditorium of St. Michael's Academy for the presentation of prizes and the conferring of diplomas. The stage, banked with autumn leaves, flowers and ferns, was a lovely setting for the happy young people — the girls in white graduation gowns with corsages of red roses, the boys in their dark suits with buttonhole bouquets of white carnations.

The office of chairman was capably filled by George Wilson. In presenting the prizes donated by the Holy Name Society, Mr. Edward Buckley, secretary, reminded the students of the privilege they enjoyed in attending a school such at St. Michael's which prepared them to be worthy citizens of a fine city.

Mr. M. J. Callaghan, Grand Knight, with a few genial reminiscences of his relations with them as a member of the School Board, congratulated the graduates and presented the prizes donated by the Knights of Columbus.

Miss Wilkinson, Valedictorian.

After the conferring of the diplomas by Rt. Rev. Monsignor Nicholson, Miss Mary Agnes Wilkinson as valedictorian, in a manne rcharming in its gracious simplicity, reviewed the pleasures and the difficulties of the school career just terminated, and thanked all who had made possible this beautiful ceremony of graduation.

The address to the graduating class was then delivered by Rt. Rev. Nicholson. After congratulating the graduates on their achievements, Monsignor reminded them of their responsibility as educated Catholics to detect and avoid the influence of the false ideologies of the world; he referred to the recent return to the fold of the one-time Communist editor Louis Budenz, contrasting the permanence and stability of the church with the shifting sands of Communist propaganda. Finally, the speaker urged the young people no won the portals of life to follow the star of faith that will ever shine on the horizon of their future.

Rev. Father Harold Murphy, of the Scarboro Foreign Mission Society, who has spent several years in missionary work in China, where he intends to return very soon, urged the students to strive to realize how singularly blessed they have been; first for having been born in Canada, a land of plenty and freedom, and secondly, for having enjoyed during their whole school life the best that could be granted them in material and especially in spiritual things. Father Murphy said that his parting words to the graduates were an admonition to be loyal to the traditions of their school.

Father S. Lesage, P.P., of Stirling, then spoke a few words of congratulation to the graduates, and advised them to have before them some goal toward which to strive. That goal, he said, might never be attained, but the consciousness of it would serve to carry a young person high on the ladder of success.

A part of the program greatly enjoyed by the audience was the singing of St. Michael's High School Glee Club in three selections: "When You Wish Upon a Star"; "All Hail Saint Michael's", and "For the Sake of Alma Mater".

At the conclusion of the program refreshments were served to the students and their parents by the ladies of the Catholic Women's League, under the presidency of Mrs. George Wilson. The day was brought to a close by an "At Home" given in honor of the graduates and sponsored by the Catholic Women's League.

Frauleins Poison G.I.'s Minds Against Russians

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

Berlin, Oct. 22—(AP)—A United States soldier columnist said today that German girls, taking their cue from Goebbels, were poisoning the minds of American troops against the Russians, and warned that unless counter-measures were taken soon American-Russian cooperation would be endangered.

Columnist Harold Kempner, writing in "Grouper," weekly newspaper of the American Military Government, declared the frauleins were making all manner of accusations.

"Some G.I.'s have been taken in by this vicious and persistent propaganda campaign against our Russian comrades," the writer said, "Combat troops who fought their way through Germany and hated the krauts are being replaced by men who are being slightly affected by the flattery and bull thrown by the frauleins.

"This effort to blame everything on the Russians, if allowed to blossom out unchallenged, may eventually nullify some of our aims and make cooperation with our allies an even more difficult job. The Russians have fought hard in this war, just as we have, to crush our common enemy and bring about a unanimous victory."

The tactics of German girls, Kempner said, are to flatter the American soldiers and then "embark on the familiar tirade blaming everything on the Russians," charging that "the Russians raped their sisters and mothers and looted their homes."

"Where Goebbels' huge propaganda machine failed in splitting the allies," he continued, "the frauleins have taken the cue and are hell-bent to accomplish it."

ALERTNESS OF STORE MANAGER RESULTS IN ARREST OF TRIO

Alertness of a local clothing department store manager here Saturday night resulted in the arrest by city police of three men who are alleged to have been an organized gang of short change artists.

The men are Leonard di Fabio, Montreal; Edwin Carling, Vancouver, and George Ridgeway, Saskatoon and Toronto. They were arrested when the actions arounsed the suspicion of the clothing store manager. It was stated the men had entered the store and wandered around as if "casing" the place. When questioned as to what they wanted they failed to give satisfactory answers.

Police were notified and the men were apprehended in a crowded cafe by Police Sgt. Ellis and Constable Moore. The men answered the description of a gang wanted by Cobourg police and they have been taken there to answer charges. Ridgeway is stated by local police to be wanted in Western cities on several charges.

Charged in Cobourg.

Cobourg, Oct. 22 —(CP)— Charged with theft of $10 in a short change racket, Edwin Carling, Toronto; Leonard di Fabio, Montreal, and George Ridgeway, Toronto, were remanded for a week when they appeared in court today. The trio was arrested in Belleville over the weekend and brought to Cobourg.

NINTH VICTORY

Each rider's departure was timed so that the despatches were delivered to unit chairmen at National War Finance Headquarters throughout the province at 9 a. m.

The R.C.A.F. airmen who are getting their discharge at No. 4 Release Centre, Toronto, have already invested more than $1,300,000 in victory bonds by assigning gratuity money and deferred pay. More than $100,000 has been cash purchases.

Growers Good Buyers

Ontario's Norfolk County tobacco growers were good buyers. county canvasser Mrs. Dorothy Fort, whose husband returned last week after five years overseas, reported she had already obtained 120 per cent of her quota "so I can give all my time to my husband."

With a telegraphed message on the importance of their success from Graham F. Towers, National Campaign Chairman, to give them added impetus, other loan canvassers across Canada were eager to meet the first day's minimum quota. First estimates on how well they succeed will not be available from Loan Headquarters until tonight.

Mr. Towers' confident message said early reports indicated that "the Ninth Victory Loan will be the outstanding performance in a series of accomplishments" by loan workers from coast to coast.

Realization that the loan would be used "for constructive purposes of peace rather than the destruction of war has resulted in wide public acceptance," Mr. Towers' statement said. Canadians "are determined to prove their gratitude for the cessation of battle and for their escape from the many trials endured by other countries."

The Eighth Victory Loan realized $1,569,000,000, well over the objective of $1,350,000,000, astronomical by pre-war standards of public finance.

Loan officials are hopeful that what they call the "two-in-one" feature of the Ninth loan will do much for its success. While previous loans were based on 6 monthly payments, the Ninth Loan will be the only public appeal in a 12-month period and individuals who maintain their same monthly investment will buy twice as large an amount.

Canuck Survived After Being Shot By Firing Squad

Ottawa, Oct. 20. (CP)—Pte. Leslie Canivert, 24-year-old Ottawa soldier of Canada's Hong Kong garrison, told today one of the war's strangest stories—how he survived after being struck by four bullets from a Jap firing squad and was left for dead.

Pte. Canivert, who arrived home last night, secured Chinese clothes from an English civilian after the fall of Hong Kong and hid in the hills with 11 other Canadians. His jaw injured by shrapnel, he had nothing to eat and was finally captured by the Japanese who thought him a spy. With other "suspicious" Canadians he was lined up before a firing squad.

Pte. Canivert said he was hit by four bullets and left for dead. But he wasn't. After the squad left he got up and decided to try to reach the Red Cross Hospital at Hong Kong.

He made it and for eight months was given medical treatment in Bowen Road Hospital by Canadian medical men. Then he was moved to a camp on the Kowloon side of Hong Kong where the fare consisted of rice and green grass.

"We even ate chrysanthemums," he said. "I think they're much better in the garden."

Pte. Canivert said the Canadians broke their prison camp long before their liberators, in the form of R.A.F. infantry, arrived and they were the first to hoist the Union Jack in Hong Kong.

"We knew peace had come a few days before, when we saw a Jap private beat up a sergeant."

Former Soldier Dies on Gallows

Vancouver, Oct. 20 — (CP) — William Hainen, 29, former soldier died on the gallows at Oakalla Prison Farm today for the murder of Olga Hawryluk, 23-year-old Vancouver waitress.

Hainen, described as a model prisoner, went to his death passively. Prison officials said he slept almost up to the time of the hanging at 6 p.m. P.S.T. (9 a.m. E.S.T.)

Miss Hawryluk's battered body was found in the surf at English Bay beach last May. Miss Hawryluk came to British Columbia from the Peace River district of Alberta.

Pte. Cyril Pattin's Sentence Reduced

Farnborough, Hampshire, England, Oct. 20. (CP Cable)—Pte. Cyril Lawrence Pattin, 24, of Kingston, Ont., originally sentenced in the field at Ghent to three years, penal servitude and discharge with ignominy for being 55 days' absent without leave, today had his sentence reduced to six months detention by a court martial which retried the case.

The prosecution at the retrial said the original sentence had never been confirmed. Pte. Pattin, a member of the Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa, was released after 43 days in a discipline camp, then arrested again for retrial.

U. S. Accepts Bid To Conference on Telecommunications

Washington, Oct. 20 —(AP)—The United States announced today acceptance of Britain's invitation to a telecommunications conference in Bermuda Nov. 19.

The conference will consider telecommunications questions outstanding between the United States and the members of the British commonwealth.

Representatives of Canada and the other British Dominions as well as of the London government will attend.

American interest is:

1. To try to break down British Empire controls of cable communications.
2. To obtain agreements on low international rates.
3. To persuade Britain to accept the principle that communciations between any two points in countries represented at the Conference should be by the shortest and cheapest route.

5 MEMBERS OF CREW CONVICTED

Hamburg, Oct. 20 — (AP) — Five crew members of a German submarine were convicted by a British military court today of having massacred helpless survivors of the British freighter Peleus, torpedoed in the South Atlantic in March, 1944.

The prisoners, one of whom attempted to commit suicide in his cell last night, maintained they had followed the orders of their commander, Heinz Eck, who ordered the crew to fire on the wreckage to which survivors were clinging. Counsel for the commander claimed he had attempted only to sink the debris so as to leave no trace of the submarine's activities.

KICKS ROBBER WHO FLED

Windsor, Oct. 20 — (CP)—Maurice Swartz, grocery store proprietor, told police two strangers accosted him as he left his store at closing time last night. One wore a white handkerchief and pointed something at him, but in the darkness he could not tell whether it was a gun. Swartz said he kicked one of the holdup men, who appeared to be about 20 years old, and both robbers fled.

THE VICTORY LOAN SALESMAN will call only once
IN THE NEXT TWELVE MONTHS

The Victory Loan Salesman calls on you so that you may make your purchases in the way most convenient to yourself — unhurried and in comfortable surroundings. Plan for his visit, and be ready for him when he calls. There will not be another Victory Loan for twelve months; so plan your savings on a yearly basis. The same rate of saving as previously will buy you twice as many bonds this time. In thankfulness for Victory — for rehabilitation of our returned men and women — as a nest-egg of savings at good interest — let's make this 9th Victory Loan the biggest yet.

4 WAYS TO BUY

(1) You may give your order to the Victory Loan Salesman when he calls on you, (2) Place your order with any Bank or Loan or Trust Company, (3) And you can also buy through your Employer for cash, or (4) on the Payroll Savings Plan.

Any one of these agencies will give you every assistance in completing your application.

Bonds may be bought in denominations of $50, $100, $500, $1,000 or larger.

A SOUND INVESTMENT

What is the security back of Victory Bonds, that makes them such a worthwhile and sound investment? They are backed by all the natural wealth of this vast Dominion — all the resources of forest, lakes, rivers and mines. Too, Canada has never yet failed to pay, in full, a Dominion Bond obligation. Victory Bonds pay you good interest now, they are marketable any time you urgently need money, and return their full value at maturity. Buy, and hold, Victory Bonds.

Let's Make Sure of the Roof

After the best architect has produced plans for a beautiful home, the most skilful contractor does not reflect the full beauty of those plans until he has completed the roof and has finished the inside trim.

Capable planners designed a secure financial house to shelter Canadian people during war time. It was built by the Canadian people with eight Victory Loans. Although lacking many conveniences, it compared favorably with shaky war time financial structures of many other nations.

The Ninth Victory Loan may well be viewed as the roof and inside trim, the finishing touches on a financial structure which will transform the house to provide comfortable living for the vast majority of Canadians in years following the war.

A successful Ninth Victory Loan will provide the means by which the country can help sailors, soldiers airmen to resettle in civilian life with minimum discomfort and to do her share in the great world task of creating order out of disorder and of hastening a resumption of international trade so necessary for continued prosperity in this Canada of ours.

Having done such an excellent job on the foundation and the walls of this Canadian financial house, let us make sure that the architect's plans for the roof are carried out equally well. They will be if each individual citizen buys Ninth Victory Loan Bonds as enthusiastically as he bought in the previous eight campaigns.

For the Suffering in Europe

The hearts of the people are sound. No one can believe otherwise when he thinks of the donations of clothing and footwear which have been given to the cause of the war-stricken peoples of Europe who in this seventh winter since the beginning of the scourge which Hitlerism and Nazism brought upon mankind are in dire need of clothing and shoes as well as shelter and food. Everyone who can help has been anxious to give what he or she can to lessen the plight of these heroic peoples who include so many millions of little children.

The people of every part of Canada whether in city, town, village or the countryside are alert to the need. They know what the world's "brother's keeper" signify and they realize that the obligation rests upon everyone who can assist this drive to do so to the very limit.

They have responded as people of heart will always respond. The unfortunate people are their brothers, they are the heroes who went through the hell of Hitler aggression, defiant of the Nazis though they themselves were weak, and faced with hunger and the danger of torture and death from the atrocious Germans.

These gifts can be the cup of water given in love for suffering humanity.

Trafalgar Anniversary

The first Trafalgar Day anniversary since the end of the war finds Canadians much more deeply interested in the event that day marks than they have ever been before. For Nelson and Trafalgar mean more today to the world and especially to the British Empire. The recent struggle saw the power of the fleets of the Empire with those of the United States keeping open the seaways which allowed the greatest sea transportation effort in history to be carried out with endless convoys bearing their mighty cargoes of food and grain and as well the vast Allied armies and production of the great Allied industrial plants which were so necessary for the maintenance of the struggle.

For Canadians the day has more than usual interest for this Dominion has developed a great navy, her growth on the sea being relatively greater than that of any other power. This is an augury for the days to come for it means that Canada has become a world sea-going power with merchant marine and fighting navy. Of local interest it is a wellknown fact that the youth of Belleville and the immediate district surrounding the city made a name for themselves in the number of enlistments to serve on the high seas and in their heroic service in navy and the merchant marine.

At Nuernberg

The men who stood high in Nazi Germany are approaching their trial. Their aims were overthrown by the Allied victory, now the men themselves face the bar of justice and order in a world that will be ruled by order and principle. The men for whom the world seemed almost too small when they were in height of their Nazi glory now are confined in one prison and are faced with the most serious charges that can be brought against men.

When Hitlerism was in its spectacular growth, men high in office in Hitlerite Germany could not have believed it possible that they would some day face such a tribunal for they thought they were all powerful and above law. How futile was their effort is seen in the fact that now they are held and charged as war criminals in the first great event of the kind in history. Reports from the prison show the seriousness with which they view the coming process of justice.

The indictments against these men charge unparalleled atrocities. The picture of the crimes which the indictments reveal as charged against the accused is one of aggression and barbaric atrocities on a scale unknown in all history up to their time, and devastation. It is a record of horrors. Nazi outrages it is charged include the slaughter of nearly ten million persons who were helpless, both civilian and prisoners.

In the indictments can be seen the horror of the Nazi evil, the most terrible and sinister development accompanying the Naxis' attempt to dominate all mankind.

Canada Helps Russians

Since Nov. 6th., 1942, when the Canadian Aid to Russia Fund was established the people of the Dominion have given $9,393,683 in cash and goods for the relief of the people of the Soviet Union. Of this the fund received up to Aug. 31st, 1945, donations in cash and in goods $7,193,683 and this year the Fund was given as a member of the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund an allocation of $2,200,000 from the financial campaign conducted last March by the Canadian Red Cross.

Up to the end of August, 1945, the fund shipped to the Soviet Union a large variety of purchased and donated relief supplies to the value of $7,263,481.30 while purchased goods waiting shipment total $712,295 and those purchased now under negotiations amount to $600,000.

Reports show that the goods arrived without loss and were distributed to civilians in the areas liberated from the Nazis. No cash has been sent to the Soviet Union, Canadian donations of cash being expended in purchases made in Canada.

Both the purchased and donated goods were approved by the Soviet Embassy at Ottawa as those most needful for the people of the Soviet Union.

This is something in which Canadians may feel pride. It is an interesting fact that many of the donated garments and bed clothing were the handiwork of individuals who sewed and knitted as well as of groups.

The expense of collecting, administering and disbursing the fund from its inception to the end of 1944 constituted only 2.55 per cent of the total in cash and goods.

The list of goods sent was a careful selection, such as axes, blankets, buttons, canteens, caps, serge and blanket cloth, coats, cocoa, cigarettes, dehydrated food, doublets, dresses, furs, kimonos, lighter flints, medical supplies, hospital bed units, including 680 beds, oil stoves, overalls, pillow slips, nutrim cereal food, powdered milk, puttees, saws, vegetable and grain seeds, sheepskins, sheets, shoes, shirts, skirts, soap, socks, sweaters, boys' and women's suits, tobacco, trousers, underwear, woolen gloves and mitts.

In addition to these were the 1945 purchases from the allocation of $2,200,000 funds.

FAREWELL AND HAIL

Soon the fishing season closes,
Soon the picnic joys depart.
Fading now are garden roses,
Next the banquet speeches start.

Baseball's off the sporting pages.
Football has its little reign.
Basketball the youth engages.
Winter golf is here again.

Gone to sleep the spider-spinners
Of those webs at eave and ridge,
Now begin nine-thirty dinners,
And that awful party bridge.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

OCT. 22ND, 1925

William B. Northrup, K. C., ex-M. P. for East Hastings, died unexpectedly early today at his home in Ottawa. He represented East Hastings in the House of Commons for many years and retired in 1917 after which he made his home in Ottawa and was appointed Clerk of the House of Commons. He was born in Belleville on Oct. 19th, 1856 and was the only son of the late A. G. Northrup. For many years he practised law in this city and was a member of the city council in 1886, representing Ketcheson Ward. He was a member of St. Thomas' Church.

Mrs. S. Benson spent the week end with friends in Stirling.

Mr. and Mrs. Allan Meagher are spending a vacation in Buffalo, N. Y.

Mr. Arthur Bird, Toronto, was home to spend the week end.

Mrs. Frank Naylor of Toronto is visiting friends here.

OCT. 22ND, 1915

The Prince Edward County Council has made a grant of $3,000.00 to the British Red Cross Society.

Mr. F. Davey Diamond, Inspector of Weights and Measures is in Bancroft on official business.

The ladies of Holloway Street Methodist Church held a very successful tea yesterday afternoon in the church parlors. During the afternoon Mrs. Lassond was presented with a case of beautiful silver as an expression of appreciation of her valued aid to the church. She is leaving shortly with her husband to reside in Cleveland, Ohio. Miss Marie Lassond was presented recently with a volume of Longfellow's poems by the 'Golden Circle' Bible Class in connection with the church.

40 YEARS AGO

OCT. 22ND, 1905

A banquet cooked by men, served by men and for men only was held in the Sunday School rooms at Bridge Street Methodist Church by the members of the two men's bible classes of the school. It was a most enthusiastic and entertaining affair and it was one o'clock in the morning before it was over. It was the first of a series of banquets to be given by classes taught by Mr. F. E. O'Flynn and Mr. Henry Pringle. Mr. O'Flynn was chairman and Mr. Pringle occupied the vice chair. They had as guests the members of the Quarterly Official Board of the church and the trustees of the church. The following programme was carried out: Prayer by the pastor, the Rev. J. P. Wilson; "Our King", the National Anthem; "Canada and the Empire," Messrs. David Price, William Hopkins, W. Smith and F. Weeks; vocal solo, Mr. Stephen Burrows; vocal solo, Mr. Fred Sprague; "Our Church and Sunday School," Rev. J. P. Wilson, Messrs William Johnson, James Coulson and C. P. Holton; Discussion, "Shall we have a young men's club?", lead by Messrs B. E. Sills and F. S. Deacon; vocal solo, Mr. W. A. A. Chown; Mr. Grant McClatchie read a number of letters from former members. "To members abroad," Messrs W. W. Chown, C. M. Reid and W. B. Deacon; "Our Educational Institutions," Albert College, Messrs Copp and Radley; Ontario Business College, Messrs McClatchie and Carr; Belleville Business College, Mr. J. A. Tousaw; Belleville High School, Mr. H. J. Clarke and Mr. Newton Alford; "The Ladies", Mr. Sanford Burrows and Mr. James Reeve; "Our Own Classes," Messrs Leigh Doxsee, Frank Wallace and Arthur Marsh.

The three-masted schooner, Queen of the Lakes, passed up the bay this morning with all sails set. Captain N. Allen, formerly of the schooner, D. Freeman, was in command.

Mr. Thomas Gurneyea left today for Toledo, Ohio.

Mr. Geo. A. Reid of the Intelligencer business office, has returned home from Rochester, N.Y., where he spent a week's vacation.

A team of horses owned by Mr. R. P. Hamilton, ran away this afternoon near the market. They broke a window in Mr. Byron Way's feed store and damaged the wagon.

ARGENTINE GOVERMENT SWORN IN, BUT SHORT LIVED

These men, having ousted Col. Juan Peron from office when this picture was made, were the heroes of the hour. General Farrell, left, is swearing into office Vice-Admiral Hector Vernengo Lima, right, as new minister of the navy. In the centre is General Aduardo Avalos who manoeuvred the short-lived coup. Not many hours later Col. Peron staged a comeback, with Generall Farrell at his side. Now the status of Gen. Avalos is much in doubt and Admiral Lima is under arrest. Tomorrow — you guess!

JAPAN'S PREMIER

Baron Kijuro Shidehara is pictured in Tokyo as he gave his first interview since assuming his office. Japanese hunger marchers who paraded to Gen. MacArthur's headquarters clamoring for food also marched past Shidehara's official residence, announcing a program to abolish all Japanese royalty with the sole exception of Emperor Hirohito.

Police Believe Slayer of Girl A Sex Maniac

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 22—(CP) — As the search for the strangler of attractive 18-year-old Theresa DeCourcy entered its 4th day, police expressed hope today that a $1,000 reward offered by city council would help them run down the killer.

For the last three nights, the city has lived under the dread threat that the killer would strike again. Parents kept children off the streets after dark and housewives made certain doors were locked.

Police who said they believed the slayer was a sex maniac could give no assurance that the man was not hiding somewhere within the city or had taken temporary refuge in wooded country to the north or west.

This community which has long prided itself on freedom from violent crime has been shocked and horrified by the fate which overtook the popular girl student on her way to a school dance.

"This is one of the most brutal slayings in the history of the city," asserted Mayor W. J. McMeekin. "We have instructed the police department to spare no effort in finding the slayer. We have every confidence in Chief (Irvine L.) Robertson and are sure he will do everything he can."

As the investigation advanced, Chief Robertson expressed the theory that the killer used a piece of clothesline rope to throttle the girl after dragging her into clustered brush near a railway siding.

What appeared to be a valuable clue was a citizen's report that a clothesline had been stolen from a backyard in an area in which a stranger was seen.

Police questioned dozens of suspects during the weekend and are pressing their search for a ruddy-faced young man described by 2 women as an assailant on the night of the slaying.

EDUCATIONAL CHANGES ORDERED IN JAPAN

Tokyo, Oct. 22 — (AP)—Allied headquarters today ordered sweeping changes in Japan's educational system, substituting instruction in the ways of peace for the teachings of feudal militarism and similar war-breading ideologies.

WHAT TO DO WITH ANTISEPTICS

Well, here I am again. Of course it's pretty early—that talk about antiseptics has not yet had time to get to the vice-president in charge of public instruction.

In the treatment of wounds, one first aid application of mild tincture of iodine immediately, to disinfect the wound and the skin immediately adjacent, is the only necessary or justifiable antiseptic or germicidal treatment —aside from whatever surgical treatment the doctor gives. As for some throt, tonsilitis, laryngitis, quinsy, rhinitis, coryza, sinusitis and other acute respiratory infections, just between ourselvise if I were the patient I wouldn't give you a plugged nickle for all the antiseptic or germicidal remedies in the world —and I am not unmindful of the sulfa drugs.

You see, I know the most powerful antiseptic or germicide we have—just what it may be I don't know, but let's assume we have one that is extremely powerful—and remember, we're taking about self-treatment or home treatment—can't have the slightest influence on disease-producing germs that have invaded the tissues of the throat, the lining of the nose, the tonsils or other structures, even if one could keep a concentration of the stuff right there in the throat, the nasal passages, the larynx for five or ten minutes. To imagine that a momentary washing of the surface with any such agent can bother the germs which have invaded the tissues is too childish for any one but a Wiseacre.

Frequent use of mouthwash, gargle or nasal spray of antiseptic character when you have any acute respiratory infection is not entirely useless, I suppose. It probably gives innocent bystanders more protection than they would have otherwise, by disinfecting the medium through which you spread your cri—the moisture spray given off when you cough, sneeze, laugh or talk.

I am still taking a horse-and-buggy view of the place of antiseptics in home or domestic medicine and self-treatment. If you want an opinion on the value of sulfa as a first aid disinfectant I'm not prepared to give one. Of the value of sulfa drugs applied under medical or surgical control no one can have any doubt. But there is great deal of doubt, at least from my viewpoint, whether the sulfa drugs are safe enough or effective enough for a layman to use in any circumstance. In the lapse of another year or two perhaps the hullabaloo and the stampede of subsidized or publicity-hungry doctors to publish reports of cases of whatever treated with sulfa drugs—with indifferent results—will have passed and we can get some rational knowledge of chemotherapy with the sulfonamides. Meanwhile, so far as first aid and home treatment of wounds go, as long as we have Mild Tincture of Iodine USP for immediate application to cut, wound or abrasion, sterile gauze pad or a freshly laundered and ironed handkerchief or a bit of sterile absorbent cotton and a bandage or a strip or two of adhesive plaster to hold the dressing on the wound, we need no other antiseptic, for the home treatment of such minor wounds.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Heavy Lifting

Son, 17, college freshman, offered position which requires lifting cartons weighing a few hundred pounds each. His father died of coronary thrombosis. Is heart disease inherited? Would such work injure the boy's heart? (Mrs. R. H.)

Answer—Heart disease is not inherited. If the work requires constant lifting it might cause strain of the heart. If only occasional effort, it would be all right.

Peroxide

Does the use of peroxide as mouthwash have any bad effect on the teeth? (Mrs. F. K. S.)

Answer—If used occasionally it is harmless. If you mean to use it regularly or frequently, better ask your dentist.

Yawning

Cause of excessive yawning during the day, especially around 10 a.m. and 2 p.m.? I usually get 8½ hours sleep. (R. C.)

Answer—Common causes are anemia, hypoglycemia (lowering of blood sugar level below normal), insufficient ventilation. Try a pause for some fruit juice or some sweetened tea, some crackers and milk mid-forenoon and mid-aft.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is meant by a merchant marine?

All the merchant vessels registered, enrolled, or licensed under the laws and flags of a country, whether privately or publicly owned, constitute the merchant marine or the merchant fleet of that country.

The term is general and embraces all ships engaged in trade, whether operated by the government or private citizens, to distinguish them from naval and military craft.

The U. S. merchant marine comprises the total number of public and private vessels sailing under the U. S. flag.

Sometimes the merchant flag of a country is identical with the national ensign and sometimes it is a distinctive flag flown for that purpose.

"Merchant marine" is also applied to the personnel of the merchant marine service as a whole.

"Able seaman" is a shortened form of "able-bodied seaman," abbreviated "A.B." The underlying thought is that a merchant sailor is an able-bodied seaman only after he has had the required training and experience.

The United States Maritime Service was created in 1936 to provide training and other benefits to officers and sailors in the American merchant marine, which comprises all offshore, coastwise and Great Lakes merchant ships and the crews that man them.

Things I Can Give My Child

)By Constance L. Foster in "This Week" Magazine)

Educators are worrying about the effects of the war on the next generation. They remind us that it is a hard world for a child to grow up in. It set me to recalling my own childhood in a more stable period of history.

What did it give me that I can't give my own child today in a war-torn, tortured world? The question made me take inventory of the things that have stood me and my generation in good stead. To my delight I discovered that every one of them is still available for parents to pass along to this younger generation which we are told is in danger of being "lost."

The verities of life remain much the same regardless of troubled years. They are merely apt to get lost sight of in the turmoil. I'm for retrieving them, dating them off and bequeathing them to our young ones in the sure knowledge that no matter what lies ahead, these heritages from a quieter past will steady and fortify them against a too-easy despair.

I can still give my child a belief in God. It's the "be still and know" of my early training that has so often quieted me in time of trouble. My child must have this same calm, sure faith so that when the going gets rough, he can turn to something bigger than himself. He will need it if he is to escape frustration and cynicism.

I can still give my child faith in prayer and familiarity with the Bible. The person who can pray is not alone in the world and without hope. And the words of the Bible can comfort and reassure my child in any future dark hour when they may mean the difference between staying steady or going to pieces.

Every evening after dinner my father used to say to one of us "Bring me the Book." He read aloud to us, sonorous begats and all, chapter after chapter. When I am hard-pressed by trouble or pain, the right verse always pops miraculously out of the past. "Let not your heart be troubled, neither let it be afraid.." "Faith, hope, and love, but the greatest of these is love..", "A new law I give unto ye, that ye love one another.."

I can still give my child the graciousness of grace at table before meals, with head bowed in recognition of the goodness and abundance of the universe. Giving thanks instead of griping is largely an emotional habit. The child who learns early to count his blessings is seldom found later in the grumble seat of this world.

I can still give my child the great hymns of the past. I grew up loving and singing "A Mighty Fortress is Our God," "Abide With Me," and "Rock of Ages." In black hours the old tunes come back and hum themselves to my heart, or I hear one of them over the radio and am lifted out of depression. My child has a right to this same dear nostalgia when he is grown older.

I can still give my child the treasure of remembered poetry. A Lost Generation takes sleeping pills or develops insomnia with its chronic resultant fatigue and neurosis. My generation can lull itself mentally by murmuring:

"Over his keys the musing organist
Beginning doubtfully and far away,
First lets his fingers wander as they list,

I can still give my child the knowledge that he is loved. Nothing else ever quite takes the place of it. If you learn it young, you go on taking it for granted all through life and somehow, in this particular instance, you seem to get what you expect. You aren't always looking for people to let you down. And so they don't. Any parent can give this priceless heritage to any child, provided it's true. I'm quite sure that no sincerely, deeply loved child ever goes very far wrong. He can never belong to a Lost Generation.

I can still give my child discipline of hard work. True, there are no longer rails to split or woodboxes to keep full. But the regular responsibility for watering the flowers, weeding the garden, mowing the lawn, feeding the pup or shining the family shoes is a fair substitute. Shovelling a path through a tall snowdrift can teach modern young fry all the virtues of pioneering which strengthened our forefathers and helped mold their firm character.

I can toughen my child against the exigencies of an admittedly hard world by not picking him up in the car every time it showers. Occasional wet feet are wiser than molly-coddling.

I can still give my child a tough but tender heart. There are certain advantages about being brought up as I was on the doctrine of original sin. Today we have a different name for it — complexes, phobias, neuroses — but switching names hasn't changed the fact that people aren't angels yet. To know that he is bound to meet up with a lot of plain cussedness from others as he goes through life, saves a child the shock of disillusionment later. It makes him tolerant toward the evil-doer, but adamant against the evil-doing. It gives him a stout but gentle heart.

During days of troubled sorrow and world strife, I cannot hope to give my child the ordered peace and quiet serenity of the uneventful 1900's into which I was born. But the things that shaped me and my generation and have armed us against harm — these things I can still give him today. For they are the everlasting values that are the same yesterday and tomorrow. Airplanes cannot fly above them or submarines beneath them. Neither can the bombs destroy them. They are for keeps. And who keeps them is kept—kept from ever being too badly hurt or lost.

Cashiered Officer Held for Treason

London, Oct. 22 — (CP)—Norman Baillie-Stewart, cashiered lieutenant in the Seaforth Highlanders of the British Army, who once broadcast Nazi propaganda over the German radio, was formally charged with high treason today and his hearing was set for Nov. 1.

Baillie-Stewart was arrested last May in a luxurious hideout in Austria and was flown to London from Brussels Saturday. A Scotland Yard agent said the prisoner, informed of the charge being filed against him, declared:

"I am not guilty, and I cannot be guilty."

Baillie-Stewart, court-martialled in 1933 on a charge of selling information to a German agent for £50, was sentenced to five years' imprisonment and dishonorably discharged.

The British Secret Service said that after his release in 1937 he went to Austria where he worked for an Austrian tourist agency and later helped smuggle arms into Austria for the Germans. He renounced his British citizenship in 1939.

"When I was told I would be charged, I was also informed of the death of my mother," Baillie-Stewart told the court. "I have no one to turn to now and should like to apply for legal aid."

His application was granted.

Mrs. W. Miller, with her daughter, Sharon, Toronto, is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. George Patrick, West Moira St.

Miss Mary Stone, Toronto is in Belleville this week on business.

The many friends of Mrs. James Donovan, Cannifton Road, will be pleased to hear that she is recovering at her home from a major operation performed at the Belleville General hospital.

Miss Eleanor Finkle, University of Torono, spent the weekend at her home and attended the Toronto-Queen's Rugby game in Kingston, Saturday. She was accompanied by a group of eleven college friends.

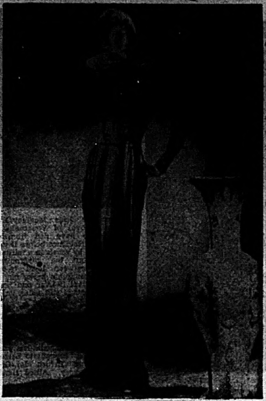
On Tuesday evening, Mr. and Mrs. R. Hall and Mr. and Mrs. Elwin Hartt, called on Mr. and Mrs. Phil Ray and presented them with a lovely table lamp and Jimmie and Donna, with identification bracelets on behalf of Centenary Community. Phil and Bernice heartily thanked their friends for the gifts.

A delightful tea was held on Friday at Queen Alexandra School by the executive of the Home and School Club for the mothers of the kindergarten and primary pupils. The tea was under the direction of Mrs. A. Wilkes and Mrs. Melville Clarke, assisted by social convener, Mrs. R. W. Smith. Mrs. G. Wishart and Mrs. R. H. Gibson received the guests at the door. Mr. Anderson welcomed the guests on behalf of the school, while Mrs. Gilbert Scott performed this duty for the Home and School Club. The aims and objects of the club were outlined by Mrs. R. B. Morden, district organizer for the organization. Mrs. Gordon Anderson poured tea, while Mrs. Richard Hart, Mrs. D. Osborne and Mrs. C. Riddell helped serve.

HELP FOR TORNADO VICTIMS

Pittsburgh, Texas, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Help was on its way today for the injured and homeless victims of a tornado which struck near this northeast Texas town last night. At least 14 persons were injured and 25 homes were destroyed.

Medieval Beauty



By ALICE ALDEN

IT IS INTERESTING to recognize the detail by which some designers "sign" their creations. If it is a rope and tassel decor, chances are that New York designer Eta created the model. Shown here is one of her graceful and charming dinner dresses, the fabric a soft purple crepe. Shoulder and hipline emphasis slims the waistline. The tassel is in purple and gold. The "bracelet" is jewel-embroidery on one of the sleeves. The creation, like so many of the new collection, harks back to pictures of ladies fair of the 12th and 13th centuries.

WEDDINGS

MOTLEY—MOORE

A quiet wedding was performed by Reverend Mr. Douglas in the Wesley United Church, Fort William, when Evelyn Vera Moore, Fort William, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Curzon Moore, Picton, became the bride of Jack Esping Motley, Fort William, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred Motley, Belleville.

The bride wore a two-piece suit of "forbidden gold" and a white blouse with high ruffled neck. Her accessories were brown and she wore a corsage of red roses.

The couple were attended by Mr. and Mrs. J. Padosky, of Fort William. Mrs. Padosky wore an ensemble of lime green crepe with black accessories and a corsage of peach roses.

For the wedding trip to Minneapolis and Duluth, the bride donned a black Chesterfield coat over her suit. On their return Mr. and Mrs. Motley will reside in Fort William.

BARR—PAGE

St. Thomas' Anglican Church, Belleville, was the scene of a pretty Autumn wedding, Sept., 24, at four p.m., when the Rev. A. B. Payne, united in marriage Clara Myrle Page, only daughter of Mrs. Florence Emma Page, of Belleville, and Bernard Almont Barr, second eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barr, of Camden East.

The pretty bride, who was given in marriage by her uncle, Mr. Hector Jordan, wore a lovely floor-length gown of white brocaded satin, made on princess lines, with a deep lace yoke trimmed with embroidery, a sweetheart neckline, and long sleeves forming points over her wrists. With this she wore her Grandmother Westlake's lustrous three-strand pearl necklace and silver slippers. Her finger-tip veil of white net was held in place by a halo, studded with pearls. She carried a bouquet of red roses, maidenhair fern and bouvardia. She also carried a white prayer book given to her by the groom's sister, Mrs. H. Clifford, of Camden East.

Mrs. Audrey Hill, Belleville, was her only attendant. She was attractive in a floor-length gown of pink net over pink taffeta with shoulder veil held in place by a shirred cap. She carried a bouquet of pink and white carnations, maidenhair fern and bouvardia.

Mr. Harvey Baker, of Belleville, was best man.

The bride presented the bridesmaid with gold evening slippers. The groom's gift to the bride was a silver tea-service and to the best man, a calfskin leather billfold.

Following the ceremony, a buffet luncheon was served at the home of Mrs. Grain. The dining room was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers, white bells and flowers. The guests were received by Mrs. Page, mother of the bride, wearing a dress of lime green and mauve crepe with black accessories and corsage of red roses. Mrs. Barr, the groom's mother, who also received, wore a black wool dressmaker suit with black and white accessories and corsage of red roses.

Later the bride and groom left by motor for Watertown, N.Y., and several other points, the bride travelling in a brown tailored suit with lime green blouse and brown accessories.

The out-of-town guests included Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Barr, the groom's parents; Mrs. Helen Clifford and sons, Wayne and Bernie; Mrs. Doris Wood and daughters, Rosemarie and Eleanor; Mr. and Mrs. Godfrey Barr and daughters, Elaine and Thelma, and the groom's grandmother, Mrs. M. Barr, all of Camden East; Mrs. U. Vautrin and Miss Victoria Hannah, of Kingston, and numerous friends and relatives of the bride of Belleville and district.

Mr. and Mrs. Barr are residing in Belleville.

LUNDBERG—HAGGAR

Pink and white carnations, pink and white 'mums and ferns formed the background for a very pretty wedding solemnized in St. Andrew's Andrew's Presbyterian Church, at one o'clock, on Saturday, October 20, when Geraldine Helen, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. A. W. Haggar, Belleville, and formerly of Smiths Falls, was united in marriage to Raymond Oscar Lundberg, eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. Carl Lundberg, Belleville. Rev. J. G. Hornsby performed the ceremony. Mrs. John Deacon played the wedding music and during the signing of the register Mr. Wm. Colclough sang "O Promise Me".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, looked exquisite in her floor-length gown of Duchess satin with sweetheart neckline, fitted bodice and the sleeves tapering to points over the wrists. Her floor-length veil of tulle fell in soft folds from a Mary Queen of Scots headdress. She carried a shower bouquet of pink Delight roses and bouvardia. Her only ornament was a string of pearls, gift of the groom.

Mrs. Jack Lundberg was matron-of-honor and was charming in a floor-length gown of orchid silk jersey with deep mauve feathered headdress and a matching shoulder-length veil. She wore deep mauve gloves and carried a nosegay of Talisman roses and pom 'mums.

Miss Inez Lundberg was bridesmaid and was lovely in a floor-length gown of apple green silk jersey with deep mauve feathered headdress and a matching shoulder-length veil. She wore deep mauve gloves and carried a nosegay of Johanna Hill roses and pom 'mums.

Mr. Jack Lundberg assisted the groom and the ushers were Mr. Melvin Haggar and Mr. Douglas Ashley.

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the Quinte Hotel, Mrs. Haggar receiving the guests wearing a navy blue two-piece dress with navy accessories and a corsage of Briarcliffe roses. She was assisted by Mrs. Lundberg, who wore a Queen's blue two-piece dress with black accessories and wore a corsage of Briarcliffe roses.

The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake and a vase of pink roses and bouvardia on either side. There were about 50 guests present.

The bride's gift to the groom was a gold signet ring and to the attendants gold earrings. The groom's gifts to the best man and ushers were cigarette lighters.

Later Mr. and Mrs. Lundberg left on a motor trip to Niagara and the United States, returning by way of the Thousand Islands, the bride travelling in a brown gabardine suit, beige blouse and brown accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. On their return they will reside at 47 Yeomans Street.

Out of town guests were present from Napanee, Frankford, Brockville, Toronto, Ottawa, and Smiths Falls.

Lovelier-than-ever wedding gowns are here to elaborate beautiful peacetime weddings. Our favorite is a wedding dress with a bodice completely covered with pearl embroidery, and a very full skirt of heavy white satin.

Fine detail distinguishes many of the new afternoon frocks. A simply-cut, shirtwaist dress of coin gold wool has shiny black satin inserts making an interesting all-over pattern against the colorful wool background.

Big favorite for afternoon bags is satin—pending the return of fine suede, which is expected for Spring. Black satin makes a neat little bag which has large winglike side folds and a tailored pearl bracelet effect across the top centre.

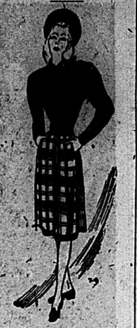
Coming in already are hats of winter-white felt. Such off-white shades as oyster and white wine are done with deft touches for smart afternoon wear with dark clothes. One postilion hat of off-white fur felt has its tall crown tied with narrow gold ribbon, and has a thin black lace veil edged with gold cord.

Favorite companions in this season's color schemes are black with electric or royal blue. Frequently this combination is used for slim suits with skirts of wool, and snug jackets of the bright, deep blue trimmed with inserts or bindings of black braid or black satin.

Word from the west coast is that movie star Don Ameche has withdrawn from the Los Angeles club of the All American Football Conference. He's planning to produce pictures and can't finance a football team at the same time.

The bulky look is seen in many simple but effective untrimmed coats. Smooth woolen in coin gold is used for a coat which buttons up to a high rolled collar. Deep armholes, and big patch pockets are features of this coat which has gathered fullness at the back below the belted waistline.

A New Line In Campus Clothes



Popular ensemble for college girls.

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

SLOPPY JOES are doing a fast fade on the campus as a neater, nicer look takes over. Here is the sort of outfit that has received the major share of applause at school and college girl fashion shows. The shoulder has the smooth, rounded look of the new fashions, as well as the tiny waist. It has a small collar and seaming marks the shoulder yoke. The sleeves are full. The jacket is of black wool, and the skirt is of red, white and green tartan plaid. There are slit pockets at the hips, and an inverted box-pleat in front.

BARRAGE BALLOON SHOWN

Toronto, Oct. 22—(CP)—A 40 foot barrage balloon similar to those used during the war to help defend London from enemy aircraft stole the show yesterday at ceremonies which unofficially launched the ninth victory loan here.

Twins Christened Aboard Missouri

St. Louis, Oct. 22 — (AP) — Twin baby girls, born in St. Louis on VJ-ay, were christened yesterday on board the battleship Missouri at anchor off Norfolk, Va., at the exact spot on the deck where the Japanese surrender terms were signed. The girls are Susan Virginia and Janis Loraine Wills, daughters of Capt. and Mrs. Charles E. Wills of St. Louis.

Are Men Overworked?

There was, perhaps, never a time when so many men were overworked, both mentally and physically, as at present. For many it has been a long hard pull. The strain has come from worry and anxiety as well as overwork, until the nervous system is worn down.

The chronic fatigue affects the inside nerves and upsets digestion and other bodily functions. Headaches and loss of sleep, fatigue and lack of energy, get you down.

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food can be of great benefit to any man or woman suffering in this way. It acts as a "pick-me-up" to help you to better health.

If you have never used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food you have a surprise coming and a very pleasant one. Ask your druggist for the new economy size bottle of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

GOOD MANNERS

Welcome Home Party

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. My sister and her husband (both in the Navy) were married at a Navy base by the Chaplain. None of our relatives or friends attended the ceremony. Now they have both been discharged, and we would like to give a reception for them. Would this be proper?

2. We would also like to know the best kind of invitation to send, and how the invitations should be worded.

A. L. H.

1. It will be a perfect idea for you to give your sister and her husband a "Welcome Home" party....not necessarily a formal "reception," but, of course, it may be this, if you wish. Usually this kind of party is an informal one; including as many relatives and friends of the couple as you can assemble; serving a simple menu; and given, say, from four-to-seven o'clock on either a Saturday or Sunday afternoon.

2. Why not write friendly little notes of invitation? They are charmingly personal and appropriate for all but the most formal of occasions. For example, your mother (or whoever is to be the Hostess) may write:

Dear Margaret:

In honor of Tom and his wife, Doris who are now out of the Navy and are visiting us, we are giving a Welcome Home party at our house on Sunday, October 28, from four to seven o'clock. And it will make them and us very happy if you and Bill will come in sometime during those hours to greet them. Please tell us, "Yes, we'll be there."

Affectionately,

Wedding Anniversary Plans

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

1. On our Silver Wedding anniversary my husband and I are planning to invite about seventy-five guests, relatives and friends, to our house for a buffet supper. Would it be correct for me to wear a long dinner dress, even if my two daughters and my daughter-in-law wear street-length dresses?

2. What is the proper way to receive the guests? My son and son-in-law, both in the service and on furloughs, will of course be in uniform. My son is our oldest child. Would he stand next to me or next to my husband, or doesn't this particularly matter?

3. What kind of invitations should I send....should I have them engraved, or would ready-made cards be all right?

E. N. G.

1. Yes, since you will be the hostess of this important occasion, it is proper for you to wear a long dinner dress....even though your daughters and daughter-in-law don't wear long dresses.

2. The customary way is for you and your husband, hostess and host, to stand together to receive the guests. You two may receive the guests alone; or, if you wish, your daughters and their husbands and your son and his wife may stand with you. I suggest that your husband stand first in the receiving-line; then you, at your husband's right; next to you, your son; then your two daughters; then the in-laws.

3. Since a buffet supper suggests a more or less informal party, engraved invitations would not be necessary, but you may have them if you particularly wish them. Cordial notes of invitation would be suitable, and, because more personal, in better taste than "ready-made" invitations.

Enemy of Your Complexion

Be Color Wise

Color fear is as old as the hills. It is a handicap in the beauty race—almost as depressing as self consciousness, if it isn't really a mild form of that affliction. Our foremothers, way back when, had a bad case of it, handed down by the puritans, who may have been very proper, modest and correct, but who certainly couldn't have had much fun.

Your grandmother will tell you that her grandmother's prize possession was a Sunday-best dress of black silk, as stiff as a board. Every woman had one. How righteous these demure dames must have felt in their funereal draperies. Black was respectable. To wear a red frock would have been to put oneself outside the social circle. Well, a lot of water has run under the bridge since then. It is the opinion of your good-looks reporter that every woman should have at least one red dress or hat for the sake of her soul. Yes, even if she is sixty in the shade and looks it.

Gay clothes make a woman feel as spry and chirpy as a robin. They're lovely for blondes, brunettes, redheads, the betwixt-and-betweens, the naive little ladies with drab hair. One must, naturally, find colors that are flattering.

You'll find plenty of gay offerings in your search for winter trappings. Keep in mind, that Woman is a spectacle—on parade in the home and everywhere on the face of the globe. To be kind to the human race, she should be easy on the eyes. If she puts herself into glad raiment, it will help her to forget a lot of things—the balance in the checkbook, the changes in the lady in the looking glass the trivial annoyances of human existence.

Some women have a reputation for lacking charm and vitality. They get their drabness of character from their clothes, many times. They select cold greys, mothy-looking browns, dismal, uninteresting green shades. What's the idea, anyhow? Dress is an interesting subject and always will be. To educate oneself sartorially, one must learn to appreciate beautiful colors and graceful lines. They're thrilling. Why be blind to them?

Black is fashionable this season. But remember this; a black coat or frock must be beautifully cut, carefully designed. If it isn't, it is likely to be dowdy. How different with a gay printed frock. With it, lines are not so revealing. That's what color does. It flatters.

To make a happy dress selection, your purchase must excite you. If it is just something to cover your bones, don't touch it; it is not for you.

Fashion Flashes

CLEVER NOTIONS abound in the new collections. One house showed a wonderful dinner costume, the long, slim skirt of softest black and white tweed, completely covered in black sequins, creating a steel-gray color tone. Worn with this was a soft black jersey blouse.

BIG DEMAND, say the furriers, for the fitted, dressmaker-type coat. This is answered by a coat of black Persian lamb with a snug, basque bodice that has a full, easy skirt. The skirt hemline is deep—with the skins worked vertically to give a handsome effect.

VERY CLEVER accessories are designed to make it easy to dress up the simplest of gowns. A triangle scarf of off-white taffeta embroidered at the border with a fern and flower design in multicolored sequins, with little white knots of flowers here and there, would do things for any afternoon or dinner dress.

NEW LINES appear in the new clothes. A black wool coat with upstanding collar and wide cuffs of mink, has smooth, normal-width shoulders, and a semi-full barrel skirt with graduated bands to focus width at the hipline.

NEW IDEA is that of matching a pin with a compact. A new compact is decorated with a rhinestone and gold-plated Diana Goddess of the Hunt. This figure is reproduced in a matching pin.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

He Wants Her to Wait For Him

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I've been going with a young man who is 22 and I am 21 years old. He says he's in love with me and asked me to wait for him until he can offer something besides love. He has just come home from the army, and is starting on a new job.

I do like him very much and enjoy his company, but something seems to hold me back. I can't explain what it is, but it stops me from telling him I love him. I want to be absolutely certain he's the one for me.

I have a good job, and right now am earning more than he is. I want to travel—have always dreamed of that. I like nice clothes and expensive things. I know it sounds cold-hearted and selfish. I thought some day I'd settle down to a home and a family, but not until I have had what I want out of life, or until I find someone who will give me what I want.

Do you think I'm right, or will I regret not having taken him seriously? I haven't given him any answer.

Kay.

With the uncertainties you harbor concerning what you want in life and the present inibility of this young man to give them, you are to be congratulated on being sufficiently sensible not to rush into matrimony. You say you have a good job, you want to travel, and you like expensive things. It would be very unfair to the nice young man, I think, who is honest enough to say he has nothing but his love to offer.

He Can't Forget His Girl Friend of High School Days

Dear Miss Fairfax:

When I was still in high school I fell in love with a girl in my class, but made the mistake of showing her how much she meant to me and she lost interest. I was very good to her and gave her gifts and took her out to school affairs and movies. It just about broke me all up when she told me she was interested in someone else. That was two years ago and I know she isn't married and that she doesn't go with anyone in particular.

I haven't forgotten her, although I never see her, and think I still love her. I'm 21 now and she's 20. I've gone out with lots of girls, but don't care for any of them. I'd like to take her out again—would it be all right if I went over to see her? I know she did like me a lot at one time.

F. G.

Of course, it would be all right for you to try to regain this girl's affection. Perhaps the reason she hasn't tried to see you is that she's ashamed of the way she acted in turning you down. If she does decline to renew your friendship, don't let it make you unhappy. Go out with other girls. Time can wear away love affairs even as the constant dripping of water will wear away a rock.

The Marry Go Round

The Sweet And Lowdown

Marrying a man is sometimes a woman's way of revenging herself on him. But don't marry him just in order to take the EGO out of him. It is probably indelible and won't come out, anyway.

Love never stands still. By the time it ceases to have growing pains, it is beginning to get hardening of the arteries.

Telling a girl that you are marriage-proof, and that she can never be anything but a beautiful episode in your life, is practically burning your bridges before you.

young couple, who seem to enter young couple, who seem to enter marriage as they do the theatre—and immediately look around for the nearest exit. Most of us go into matrimony, these days, hoping that it will last for life.

A modern man doesn't ask much of a girl. All he wants is just a sweet, old-fashioned gal, with all the pep of a debutante, the efficiency of a business girl, and the glamour of a Screen Star—just a miracle!

Before marriage, when a girl says "What do you MEAN?" it embarrasses a man into telling a lie, after marriage, it frightens or bores him into telling one.

Many a playboy travels so fast in the pursuit of romance that he whizzes right past it—and skids into the arms of the wrong girl.

A woman has reached the sweet Age of Serenity, when she has gotten "beyond the breakers"—that is, where no man can break her heart and nothing can shatter her illusions.

You can warm over a cold dinner or heat up cold pudding; but once a man's love has begun to cool, there seems to be no way of de-frosting it.

You can't go "ALL-OUT" If you feel "ALL-IN"

These days most people are working harder, worrying more, sleeping less. This strain on body and brain makes physical fitness easier to lose—harder to regain. Today's tense living lowers resistance—increases body and mental fatigue. Overwork; hasty meals; irregular hours; worry—any of these may upset proper kidney action.

When kidneys get out of order, excess acids and poisons remain in the system. Then backache, headache, rheumatic pain, disturbed rest or that "tired-all-the-time" feeling may soon follow. To help keep your kidneys in good order—to help guard against physical let-down—use Dodd's Kidney Pills, for over half a century a favourite remedy for faulty kidneys. Ask for Dodd's Kidney Pills at any drug counter. Look for the blue box with the red band. 126

BUILT BY CO-OPERATION

"I came to build"... said Calvert 300 years ago

CALVERT, famous 17th century English statesman and Secretary of State to King James I, founded pioneer colonies in Newfoundland and Maryland over three centuries ago.

"All have co-operated," said Calvert of the early settlers in 1622. Thus, many generations ago, Calvert, man of vision, planted seeds of co-operation between the Old World and the New.

History has proven Calvert's wisdom ... demonstrated today in the strong partnership between the British Commonwealth and the United States of America for the benefit of all mankind.

Co-operation between nations will build the future

England and America must continue to co-operate for the future security of the world. We of Canada are best fitted to preserve the great partnership between Britain and the United States ... for we are their mutual friend, the interpreter of one to the other.

Every Canadian can help guarantee lasting peace by fostering co-operation between the British Commonwealth and United States.

Parry of Queens and Copeland Of Argos Play Hero Roles in Football Games of Weekend

Four Teams Eliminated From Grey Cup Competition by the Results

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Sports writers sought new superlatives today for Jack Parry and Royal Copeland, a twinkle-footed twosome who have helped place the fabulous 40s on a par with the roaring 20s as a golden age for sporting heroes.

Recently released from military service, Parry (RCAF) and Copeland (Navy) earned football's 1st nominations for the "super-star" designation awaiting outstanding post-war athletes by their performances Saturday in a six-game program which stripped four eastern teams from Grey Cup contention and marked resumption of college football after a five-year wartime hiatus.

Parry, making his first start since he left the championship Toronto RCAF Hurricanes in 1942, tossed a touchdown pass and sprinted about 130 yards collectively for two others as Queen's University surged from behind a 910 first-quarter deficit to defeat University of Toronto 19-15 at Kingston. Jack Milliken, Parry's speedy running-mate from Regina converted all three touchdowns and kicked a single.

Stu Scott and the Lawson brothers from Hamilton, Gord and Mel, carried the offensive burden for Varsity but it was the sensational speed and guile of Parry, 23-year-old DFC winner from Windsor, Ont., which captured crowd imagination.

Last-Half Assault

In the other intercollegiate contest, University of Western Ontario Mustangs opened defence of their 1939 crown by fashioning an 18-point, last-half assault to conquer McGill University 20-7. Majors scored by Pete O'Neill, Bob McFarlane and Jack Coles spearheaded a Western club strongly favored to prevail in the four-week college schedule.

At Toronto, 22-year-old Copeland waited until the final three minutes to make dramatic use of the speed which won him acclaim as the East's top freshman prospect two seasons ago. With Toronto Argonauts trailing Hamilton Tigers 10-8, Copeland streaked into the clear on an extensive play, battered past three tacklers and weaved 70 yards for a touchdown which gave Argos a 13-10 victory.

Knocked Off Stride

"Cope" was knocked off stride at the Hamilton five, stumbled and sideswiped a goal post as he staggered across the line. Doug Smylie's convert attempt failed, but the extra point wasn't needed to topple Tigers from Big Four competition.

Ottawa Rough Riders set the stage for play-offs against Argos by ousting Montreal Hornets 28-5 at home. Four touchdowns, all but one converted by George Fraser, enabled Riders to keep pace with Argos at the head of the I.R.F.U.

In the Ontario Union, Toronto Indians and Toronto Balmy Beach similarly cleared decks for post-season eliminations. Indians thumped Windsor's winless Rockets 33-0 at Windsor and Beaches, sparked by Bobby Porter, battled from behind to edge Hamilton Wildcats 11-8 at Hamilton. The results eliminated Wildcats and the idle Ottawa Trojans.

RED WINGS WILL HAVE YOUNG TEAM IN N.H.L. RACE

Thirteen Are Holdovers From Last Year's Squad and Seven Fresh From Armed Services

Written For The Canadian Press
By DOUG VAUGHAN

Detroit, Oct. 22 — (CP) — Expansively but with wholesome respect for the opposition, manager Jack Adams predicts a "very good" future for Detroit Red Wings in their 1945 - 46 National Hockey League schedule which opens here next Sunday against Boston Bruins.

"We'll have a pretty young team and without being overly optimistic, I think it will be a pretty good one," said the dean of N. H. L. managers who steered Red Wings into last season's unsuccessful Stanley Cup final series against Toronto Maple Leafs.

Twenty-two players are still in camp grooming for the opener, reduced from the more than 80 candidates on hand for Detroit's first practice. Thirteen are holdovers from last season, seven are fresh from the armed services and there are two candidates not long out of amateur ranks.

To Carry 18 Players

Adams intends to carry at least 18 players. Thus he figures he's done a "pretty good job of pruning" in paring the original turnout down to 22. With the surplus he's already stocked two minor league farm teams, Indianapolis Capitols of the American League and Omaha Knights of the United States League.

The 1944-45 veterans include Harry Lumley, sensational young netminder from Owen Sound, Ont. defencemen Earl Seibert, Bill (Flash) Hollett, Bill Quackenbush and Hal Jackson; and forwards Joe Carveth, Mud Bruneteau, Eddie Bruneteau, Syd Howe, Carl Liscombe, Ted Lindsay, Murray Armstrong and Steve Wochy.

Players back after varying periods of military service are Jack Stewart, all-star defenceman three years ago; Doug McCaig, hard-hitting rearguard from Brantford, Ont., and forwards Harry Watson, Jimmy Conacher, Adam Brown, Johnny Holota and Cliff Simpson.

Couture to Play

The two others are Gerry Couture from the University of Saskatchewan and Fernand Gauthier from Montreal Canadiens. Couture was hoisted from Moose Jaw Canucks, last year's Memorial Cup finalists, to play a couple of games in the Stanley Cup series against Leafs while Gauthier was obtained last week as final payment in a deal whereby Canadiens acquired Billy Reay, former playing coach of Quebec Aces in senior amateur circles.

Adams says Stewart — "the best rearguard in the N.H.L. for my money" before he entered the RCAF — has looked "exceptionally good" in practice. McCaig also was showing to advantage. In fact, said the Detroit manager, the club has so many good defencemen "we'd even consider making a trade for the right kind of a forward if we can get one."

No decision has been reached on forward line combinations. The veteran line of Syd Howe - Mud Bruneteau - Carl Liscombe has been broken up, each player being fitted into different units.

"We've got no fewer than four good left wingers and I plan to keep juggling the fellows around until I find out where they fit best. Jimmy Conacher, with Omaha before he went into the army, has looked exceptionally good. So has Harry Watson, whom we acquired from the defunct Americans."

"As for Ted Lindsay and Steve Wochy, rookie stars of last year, I think they are good enough to stick with us despite the return of so many veterans."

'Reply Paid Earning' Big Dividends For George W. Carroll

New York, Oct. 22. (AP)—George Washington Carroll, the half-pint horseman, proved long ago he was "market wise". Now he again has confirmed that he knows all the answers where horses are concerned, because his "Reply Paid" is paying big dividends.

Less than a half dozen years ago, the diminutive trainer was scuffling, as horsemen call it—just getting by. He hooked on with Lou Tufano, who was starting a stable, and in a deal with Mrs. Dodge Sloan's Brookmeade stable, picked up a colt named Market Wise for $500. Under Carroll's expert handling, Market Wise went on to earn $221,140.

He means Reply Paid. George and Tufano split up last Spring, but just about a year ago, at Laurel, Carroll claimed for Mrs. Louis Rabinowitz a juvenile named Reply Paid for $6,000. To date this season, the colt has earned slightly more than $68,000.

Record Betting Total Set up At U.S. Tracks

(By The Canadian Press)

More turf wagering and attendance records were established at U.S. tracks Saturday. Closing day brought 46,713 patrons to Jamaica Park to set a new mark of $4,349,835 in betting on a seven-race card. At Hollywood Park there was a record turnout of 55,621 fans who tossed $3,843,301 into the pari-mutuel wickets. Even at Sportsman's Park, a half-mile oval, there were 17,599 people who had $1,178,117 for their choices.

At eight tracks throughout the country, a total of $13,318,467 was wagered by 2200,286 customers.

Unbeaten in 12 previous games in the big ten football conference, Ohio State succumbed 35-13 to Purdue Saturday in a startling upset. Even with halfback Charlie Thrippi, recently released from the army, Georgia was blanked 32-0 by Louisiana State. Notre Dame, however, walloped Pittsburgh 39-9.

Sirde, the 7-5 favorite, finished third to Challenge Me and Bull Reigh in the Gold Cup $75,000 feature at Hollywood Park Saturday. Challenge Me paid $17.20 to win and collected $48,230 while Second Place was worth $20,000 to Bull Reigh. Paper Boy also ran.

Detroit Lions trimmed Chicago Cardinals 26-0 in a Sunday fixture of the National Pro football League at the Motor City. Chuck Fenebock, former California halfback released from the armed forces, tossed three scoring passes to tickle 32,644 fans.

Welland Bluebirds captured the Ontario Baseball Association Bantam championship at Hamilton, Saturday when they edged out the Waterloo final 6-5. Both teams previously won shut-out victories in the best-of-three series.

The Football Pool Promoters Association yesterday announced the offer of £100,000 yearly out of betting proceeds to help finance the British Soccer Leagues. The offer, equal to one per cent of payoffs, is expected to be turned down by league officials.

In other games Green Bay Packers trounced Boston 38-14 in a league match played at Milwaukee, Cleveland Rams overpowered Chicago Bears 41-21, Philadelphia took a 24-14 defeat from Washington and Pittsburgh set back New York 21-7.

London Majors won the fifth and deciding game of the Senior Ontario Baseball Championship Series Saturday, at Welland, with a 9-2 victory over Atlas Steels. Windsor Meretskys copped the Ontario Senior Softball honors by winning their second straight game 5-4 against Cadmiums at Toronto, Saturday, in a 12-inning tilt.

Wally Stanowski Abandons Flashy Clothes and Hats

Looks Forward to More Successful Season Than Last One

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Owen Sound, Oct. 22 — (CP)—Wally Stanowski is still the whirling dervish of the National Hockey League but he's no longer its flashiest dresser.

"I guess I really earned my zoot-suit reputation by the way I dressed when I first broke into the N.H.L.," says Stanowski, currently preparing for the 1945-46 season with the Toronto Maple Leafs. "But I gave that up long ago although some of the sports writers still like to kid about it."

The 26-year-old Winnipeg-born defenceman — who has shed his wide-brimmed hats and loud-checked suits for such conservative garb as light grey trousers and a light windbreaker — looks forward to a much more successful season than last when he made a mid-season comeback after more than two years in the RCAF.

"I found it tough getting back into the game last season," he said. "For one thing I was away behind everybody else in condition and it was hard to catch up. I missed the pre-season training session.

"Then, when I reported I was about 10 pounds under my normal weight of 170 to 175 pounds and as a result I was weak as a kitten. It was not until the end of March that I had regained my normal strength. This season I should be all right. I weighed just 175 lbs. when I reported and I've got all my strength.

"I found too that the style of hockey had changed and although I had been playing with the Air Force I had to learn all over again. For one thing the playing pace was hotter. On the air force team we hadn't really been making good use of the centre-ice red line and I had to learn about it."

Stanowski found the red line had worked a big change in the game as he knew it before joining the air force in 1942.

"I think hockey has become more like basketball. The puck is passed in any direction and you have got to watch your man. It will develop more that way if they ever take out the blue lines and just use the centre line for offsides."

TWO MAIN BOUTS AT ARENA THURS. NIGHT

Featuring a special double bill, (two main bouts) the Hume Arena mat program will be on Thursday this week. The change in date has been necessitated by a Maple Leaf Gardens date change, for this week only. Belleville wrestling fans gain immensely by having the match here on Thursday night because of the talent promotor Frank Tunney has been able to attract for the two main bouts.

The first of these will be a rematch between Irish Pat Flanagan and Jacknife Joe Jackson, each of whom is fully recovered and eagerly awaiting another clash.

The other main bout, Promoter Tunney brings on his first visit to Belleville one of the most popular wrestlers in the whole world. He is no other than velocity Vic Christie, the spectacular California Comet. Christie has agreed to come here in one of the two main bouts and will wrestle Sgt. Walter Sirois, the fighting Frenchman. Belleville fans have repeatedly asked for the appearance of Baby-faced Vic, and at last will get a chance to see this colorful young giant in action. Standing about 6' 3", and weighing around 230 lbs., the widely popular and glamorous Christie is one of the biggest box office attractions in the United States. Promoter Tunney had already signed a rematch between Jackson and Flanagan, when he found he was going to have Christie on his hands on Thursday night. He immediately asked Christie if he could be in Belleville on Thursday. Vigorous Vic, who likes to be on the go at all times, agreed. Because of Christie's box office standing, the match had to be a main bout.

It all works out fine for mat addicts of this neighborhood and should give everyone a mighty thrill when the California smoothy steps into the Hume Arena.

Maich last week, gets an exceed-

Aaron Stein, a winner over Joe aMich last week, gets an exceedingly tough assignment in meeting Sandy O'Donnell, the mighty Missourian. This O'Donnell is a whirlwind of power and vitality, and never fails to impress the mat fans. All in all next Thursday's wrestling fare shapes up as about the finest of the whole season's program.

HOCKEYISTS MEET TONIGHT

Hockey matters developed rapidly over the weekend in certain quarters what with the boys some of them at least exhibiting a yen to play in the Van Horne Series at Kingston. The powers that be have given an extension of time until midnight tonight to forward an entry and a special meeting of all players interested has been called by Clare Williamson at the YMCA at eight o'clock.

..The team, if and when it is formed, Williamson said yesterday will operate on the player system similar to that being run by the Oakwood Indians football squad of Toronto. However that can be discussed later and in the meantime, you hockey fellows, get around to the "Y" tonight and talk things over. Any one is eligible and the boys think the have the nucleus of a fairly smart organization. So get busy and trek down to the "Y" and see wht is going on. The time is set for 8 o'clock.

BEARS, HORNETS BOTH CHALK UP DOUBLE WINS

Hershey and Pittsburgh Teams Keep Unbeaten Records Intact

(By The Canadian Press)

Hershey Bears and Pittsburgh Hornets both chalked up double victories over the weekend to keep their unbeaten records intact and remain atop the American hockey standings as the first week of the A.H.L.'s schedule came to a close.

The high-flying Bears whipped St. Louis Flyers 6-1 Saturday night and came right back with a 4-3 decision over New Haven Eagles Sunday. A pair of first period goals by Bill Gooden shot Bears into an early lead they never relinquished as they coasted to an easy triumph over St. Louis. Hal Cooper came through with the pass-off tally midway in the final stanza to break a 3-3 deadlock giving Hershey the verdict against New Haven.

Pittsburgh banged home two counters late in the third period to beat Buffalo Bisons 7-5 after the Bisons had twice come from behind to tie up the see-saw battle Saturday. Wally Wilson paced Hornets with two tallies while McKay registered twice for the Bisons. In a Sunday fixture Hornets broke a 3-3 tie in the final period on a brace of unassisted goals by centreman Johnny Mahaffy with Marcel Bessette adding another in the closing minutes to make the final count read 6-3.

St. Louis Flyers managed to come out even in the weekend activities when they defeated Providence Reds 3-2 by virtue of a goal by bespectacled Billy Thompson 18 seconds before the final whistle. Last Wednesday's all time Providence hockey attendance record was broken as 6,416 fans jammed into the Rhode Island auditorium for the Sunday night contest.

N.H.L. Training Notes

By the Canadian Press

It's just a possibility that before the season ends New York Rangers may present a family combination. Neil Colville is already being used behind the blue line and manager Lester Patrick says he may be teamed with brother Mac, recently returned from overseas. Mac expects a discharge or leave of absence from the army.

Montreal Canadiens of the National Hockey League and a Montreal Royals-Ottawa Senators all-star team from the Quebec senior league duelled to a 3-3 draw in an exhibition benefit game at Ottawa Saturday. The all-stars aided by the Ken Mosdell-Bob Filion-Leo Gravelle forward line from Canadiens, came from behind a 3-1 count in the second period to produce the tie.

Manager Jack Adams will bring his Detroit Red Wings and their Omaha farm team to Galt, Ont., for an exhibition game Wednesday. Omaha has four graduates of Galt junior ranks in Gordon Howe, Lee Foglin, Bernie McCathary and Barry Sullivan.

It is definite now: Syl Apps will be available for hockey with Toronto Maple Leafs this season. There were a lot of premature reports about the great centre player having received his army discharge last week and Syl's military status isn't certain even now, but his appearance at the Owen Sound, Ont., training camp Sunday made it certain he'll be with the Leafs, either on discharge or through a leave of absence.

Chicago Black Hawks defeated New York Rangers 5-2 at Winnipeg Saturday to take both ends of a doubleheader and sweep their three- game exhibition series. Both teams were tired after an afternoon game which Hawks won 6-1.

Johnny McCormack, youthful centre from Edmonton who starred for Toronto St. Michael's college juniors when they won the memorial cup last season, is in hospital after an emergency operation for appendicitis performed in Toronto Sunday. McCormack, trying out with Toronto Maple Leafs, took ill at Owen Sound.

Traffic Mishaps Fatal to 8 Persons During Weekend

By The Canadian Press

Eleven lives were lost in Eastern Canada accidents during the weekend. Eight persons died in traffic mishaps, a woman was shot after her son drove through a road block set up by a police posse hunting five jail-breakers, a boy was killed by a souvenir revolver in the hands of a chum, and a policeman was fatally shot as he cleaned a gun.

Police charge Roy Land, of Parry Sound, Ont., a special constable with manslaughter following the death of Mrs. Adam Burnside, shot Saturday night during the manhunt four miles from her home.

In Ottawa, Philip J. Raby, 14, was killed Sunday when accidentally shot through the head by a chum, 15 - year - old Thomas Shields, who was proudly showing him an automatic pistol his father, Maj. Thomas (Tommy) Shields, former sports editor of the Ottawa Citizen, had brought from overseas.

Cpl. James Stapleton, a member of the Quebec City Police Force for more than 20 years, was found dead in his room Sunday with a bullet through his head. Police said he had been cleaning his gun.

Paratrooper Killed

Thrown to the roadway near North Bay, Saturday night when his light delivery truck somersaulted after hitting a ditch, Paratrooper Osconio Cousineau was killed. Veteran of D-Day, he had made many parachute jumps with the 1st Canadian Airborne Division.

Daniel Kelly, 5, died after he ran into the path of a street car in East Toronto Saturday.

William Dahmer, 66, of R.R. 1, Elmira, Ont., was killed Saturday when the bicycle he was riding was in collision with an automobile police said was driven by Richard Couling of Galt, Ont.

Knocked off his bicycle 2 miles east of Hamilton by a hit-and-run driver, William Reynolds, Bartonville, Ont., was fatally injured Saturday night.

Crashes into Abutment

Daniel R. Stevens, 28, of Windsor, died Sunday in hospital from head injuries received when the car he was driving crashed into a bridge abutment 12 miles east of Windsor.

Robert Stewart, 71, of Cobourg, was killed Saturday when struck by a car police said was driven by Joseph Naiberg of Toronto. Stewart had been walking on the highway near Cobourg.

Guy Bourbonnais, aged four, was killed Sunday when he fell from an automobile driven by his grandfather, Emile Bourbonnais, and was struck by another car passing alongside.

Joseph Roderick Gillis of Livingstone Cove, Antigonish county, was killed Saturday and six other people were hurt when the automobile he was driving smashed into the rear of a truck near Kenzieville, 25 miles from New Glasgow, N.S.

Rawdon—Mr. and Mr. Don Johnson attended a community gathering at Foxboro Monday evening in honor of Mrs. Johnson's brother Mr. R. Hollinger.

Several folk attended Burnbrae Anniversary on Sunday.

Rev. and Mrs. T. F. Townsend attended the 75th anniversary of Grace Church, Trenton.

On Monday evening about eleven p.m. over thirty folk of the fourth line gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Ernest White and tendered Percy and his wife a noisy charivari, all were invited in and enjoyed a treat of salted peanuts, pop corn, cake, prune plums and grapes.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Sine and Doris attended anniversary at their old home church at Salem and spent the day with Mr. and Mrs. Delbert Sine.

Mr. and Mrs. Don Holbert and Pauline of Moira were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Merle Spencer.

Pte. Ormel MacMullen has recently enjoyed a ten day leave to Scotland where he visited at Edinburgh, Aberdeen, Dundee and spent five days with Mr. and Mrs. Kiddie at Forfar. Mr. Kiddie is the father of Mr. David Kiddie of Moose Creek Ontario and Dave was well known at Mount Pleasant during the years he resided in our midst.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Spencer entertained for Thanksgiving Mr. and Mrs. Ernest Spencer and Marion, Mr. and Mrs. George Rowe and Mrs. R. Ashbury, Toronto. Mrs. Harry Rowe, Mrs. H. Landon and Miss Margaret Guernsey, Campbellford.

Mrs. Elam Wescott, Oshawa spent a few days visiting at Mount Pleasant.

The ladies of Mount Pleasant Rawdon had a busy day on Friday when they served over two hundred a chicken dinner. It was the occasion of the 20th annual Sectional Rally.

The special guests speakers were Mr. Kenneth Stewart, West Huntingdon, Mrs. Ernest Thomas and Miss Constance Chappell of Toronto.

Mount Pleasant Mission Band delighted with an old hymn. Over forty were present from Mount Pleasant, among the guests were Mrs. John Rannie, president of Seymour W.M.S., at Hoard's Station and Mrs. Walt Sharp. Mrs. Rannie brought greetings on behalf of Seymour W.M.S. and Cobourg Presbyterial.

The day was ideal for the Rally and both church and hall were decorated with potted plants, flowers and Autumn leaves.

The two silver cups won by Mrs. MacMullen and her group in 1942 on behalf of the Young People's Union were on display.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 812
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Good bridge players horse around a lot during a game. Confidence in their ability enables them to do so without spoiling their play. But in all their fun, the laws of bridge are taken seriously.

Even in shuffling or cutting or dealing of cards, they will stand for no breach of procedure outlined by law. The cards must be dealt from left to right, like the hands of a clock move.

The cards must be dealt one at a time to each player in rotation. They will not stand for two cards going to the same player at the same time. Nor for any card out of regular rotation to any player.

Accidentally, two cards may come off the pack to the same player. In that case, the dealer may correct the error before dealing another card.

It seems that a dealer gave two cards to a player. Before dealing another card, he took back one of the cards and gave it to the next player, where it belonged.

One of the other players said: "You took the wrong card. It should have been the other one." Obligingly, dealer switched cards.

But an opponent spoke up with: "I don't know which card belongs where. Deal over." Based on his seeming rights under the laws, dealer refused. They asked me to decide and I showed the full law.

That law reads: If dealer deals two cards simultaneously or consecutively to the same player, he may, before dealing another card, rectify the error, provided he does so to the satisfaction of his opponents.

It was not to the satisfaction of opponents. So, dealer had to comply with the request for a new shuffle and cut. After which, the opponents got this pair of hands:

SOUTH
♠ 6 2
♥ A 8 7 4
♦ K 3
♣ A K Q 9 5
♥ K Q 9 6 3
♣ 4 2

So I beat it.

Bata Shoemakers Defeat Juniors By 5 to 4 Count

First Game for City and District Ball Title Played at Alemite Field

Under ideal weather conditions the Bata Shoemakers in what might be the final game of the season defeated the Speedy St. Louis' Juniors in the first scheduled game of a three-game series for the championship of the City and District Baseball League at the Alemite Field on Saturday afternoon. The score was 5-4.

The game developed into a hurling duel between Muffett of the Shoemakers and Bobby Bunton for the city squad. Muffett restricted the St. Louis men to six hits over the nine inning pastime three of them being bunched in the second, when the kids scored two of their four runs. He struck out seventeen and walked three. Bunton on the other hand whiffed five and walked none.

There was some discussion after the game among league officials and managers regarding the date and venue of the second game, but nothing of a definite nature was decided.

Bata got off on the rigth foot in the first innings when three consecutive hits by Cook, Solmes and Aquino sent a brace of runs across the plate. They went scoreless until the fourth, when a trio of smacks by Peacock, Brisco and Leveque and Dafoe who was hit by the pitcher accounted for two more markers.

Aquino's two-base clout in the ninth decided the game, when Peacock's third hit of the pastime sent him across the plate with the winning run.

Juniors evened the score in the second innings, when hits by Bunton, Fitzpatrick and Bush plus two walks resulted in two runs. The other markers came in the eighth, when two walks, Bush's hit and a couple of Bata miscues sent two runners home.

Bunton and Bush led the Juniors attack with two hits each with Peacock getting three for Bata and Aquino and Solmes two each.

The teams—Bata—Cook, Solmes, Aquino, Peacock, Muffett, Stojan, Brisco, Dafoe and Leveque.

Juniors — Bush, Fitzpatrick, Strahan, Goyer, Reeves, Semark, Kelleher, McCabe, Bunton, St. Louis.

Umpires—Cy Young, Townsend.

Allan Mills

Allan Mills — Mr. and Mrs. Thos. Webb visited Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Barnum on Thursday.

Mrs. Wilson Reid, Mich., U.S.A. was a recent visitor of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Reid and Mrs. Clarence Heath.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Gibson of Batawa were weekend visitors of Mr. and Mrs. Chas. Benson.

Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Heath are visiting friends in Montreal.

Mrs. Sarah McKeown returned to her home at Sine, after visiting Mr. and Mrs. Fred McKeown.

Mrs. R. Wellman returned home Friday after spending the past week with her mother Mrs. Kew and family of Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Clarke Haig of Peterborough spent the weekend with friends in this vicinity.

SIX SHOTS FIRED

Toronto, Oct. 22 — (CP)—Following a high-speed chase thru West Toronto last night, police fired six shots before capturing Laurence Martel, 18, of Mimico, whom they charged with car theft. A companion escaped. Police said Martel was in an automobile which Ralph Jones of Mimico reported stolen earlier in the evening.

By SYE BOSSEN

During 1946 Alan Young, the Canadian comedian now on the USA networks, will make two films, the first with Jeanne Crain. Ruth McKinney, who wrote "My Sister Eileen," is doing the story. Young, who can turn down the script or change it under his contract, will not do his radio specialty but appear in a type of comedy of his own choosing . . . Walt Disney is going in for television. His next feature film, which will be a mixture of live people and inked ones, is "Jack in the Beanstalk," with Edgar Bergen and Charlie McCarthy . . . Television will be in color, the process being discovered recently. But they haven't yet found out how to broadcast television beyond 60 miles or so and a set is useless unless you live near a studio.

• • •

The famous old cartoon strip, "Jiggs and Maggie," is coming back to the screen for the first time since 1928. In that year Jiggs was J. Farrell MacDonald and Maggie was the late Marie Dressler . . . Answering a comment about the color of her hair, Lucille Ball said to an interviewer from the New York Times: "Peculiar shade, isn't it? It ought to be — I made it up myself. A bottle of this, a bottle of that—" . . . Beatrice Lillie was a guest at the White House recently . . . Marlene Dietrich will make a film in Britain . . . Jimmy Stewart's first role since his discharge from the army will be in the late Eric Knight's "The Flying Yorkshireman." Doesn't seem to be his sort of thing but Hollywood will probably fix that by fixing the story. Maybe they'll change the locale to Brooklyn.

The best European films dubbed with English dialogue will be distributed to all theatres within the next few years by a Hollywood company. One of these is "The Last Chance," made in Switzerland and said to be one of the most unusual films in years . . . Observation by a Hollywood lady star: "A woman is only as old as she looks before breakfast" . . . Property damage to Canada's 1,298 theatres by fire during 1944 was only $75,000, an indication of their safety . . . The National Film Board will spend $1,853,340 for films during the 1945-46 fiscal year. More of its films will be issued in color . . . No successor to John Grierson has been named yet as national film commissioner.

One of the greatest films ever made is "The True Glory," a British and American story of the war in Europe from invasion to victory. It has tremendous appeal, explains the entire action and dwells on planning and heroism rather than the horrors of war . . . Fred Astaire wants to retire from acting roles and make dance appearances only. He's been asking for a release from his contract . . . Bing Crosby spent some time in the hospital recently with a wrenched back. . . . Young folks are always asking how to become photoplay writers. The answer usually is to get a local reputation and Hollywood will send for you. Now a practical course in motion picture script writing has been opened at Cleveland College.

AT THE CAPITOL — When Betty Smith's sensational best seller "A Tree Grows in Brooklyn," comes to the screen of the Capitol Theatre tonight, moviegoers will be quick to recognize what has been acclaimed as the greatest casting achievement to come out of Hollywood in many years. The memorable characters of the merry, tender and heart-warming 20th. Century-Fox film appear above. On the same program "U-Boat Prisoner," a first Belleville showing attraction.

GOVT. LIKELY TO SHARE

Toronto, Oct. 22—(CP)—Mayor R. H. Saunders of Toronto said last night on his return from Ottawa that a "real probability" exists that the Dominion government will share in the 138,000 Toronto already has spent on housing conversions and in a probable future expenditure of $100,000.

SIAMESE ASSEMBLY TO BE DISSOLVED

London, Oct. 20 —(CP)— The Bangkok radio said today the Siamese National Assembly will be dissolved and a new one elected within 90 days.

Vatican City, Oct. 20 —(AP)— Pope Pius XII will receive a group of Catholic women next Sunday and he will speak on "Women's duties in social and political life." Reliable sources forecast the Pope will stress the necessity of women taking an active part in politics without, however, forgetting "their principal duties" as mothers and wives.

CHAPTER 21

Elaine was studying a creamy gabardine suit. "I should think you'd want to help John."

Karen gestured impatiently with her head. "I don't care whether he gets on top. I once found him useful—but that was once upon a time, as they say. In fact, darling, I'm beginning to find him a bit stuffy and boring—and rather a deadweight to me. I hate deadweights. They pull you down so, unless you get rid of them."

Elaine watched Karen step out of the skirt, glance at herself in the mirror, bend to adjust the seam in her hose. She wondered how many men Karen would find deadweight and discard after they had served their usefulness to her. She wondered if Warren would fight back.

The big army bomber settled slowly down to the runway on La Guardia Field. It was New Year's Day, 1944, and the New York snow was swirling across the field. Elaine stood on tiptoes outside the administration building for no reason at all. There was no one in front of her. She only thought she could see Paul better that way.

It seemed like the earth moved when she saw him climb down from the plane, reach in for his suitcase and limp toward her. It seemed like all time stopped when she melted into the circle of his arms, his lips hard against hers.

The air forces colonel stood a few feet away and watched them, a broad smile on his boyish face. He coughed quietly and Paul released Elaine, turned to the young colonel and signed the release papers. The colonel saluted Paul and then winked at Elaine.

"Who, me?" He picked up the cane. "Don't be foolish. That's the style these days. I always carry a cane. You just haven't been very observant."

She studied his face with hungry eyes and feasted on every minute detail of his features. "Darling, darling. I haven't had a chance to observe you for over two years. Remember, you left me in the winter of '42."

"That was the year we had the big show in Catalina." His arm was around her, holding her tight. He was kissing the side of her forehead, her cheek, her ear. She tingled with the warmth that comes from possessive lips.

"Paul, tell me. You have been hurt. There's something wrong with your leg." Her eyes were fearful.

"Where?"

"In France." He went on rapidly before she could get the surprised words out of her mouth. "Now, that's all military intelligence will allow me to say."

"Hang G-2, or whatever Ernie Pyle calls it," Elaine pouted. "I'm your bride-to-be, and I've got a right to know."

Paul was silent for a moment, biting his lips. "Let's just say your fullback got tackled while he was carrying the ball."

"But you're a civilian, Paul. What were you doing in France?"

"I was temporarily commissioned a major. People saluted me for a couple of months. And I saluted people. It was very boring."

Paul leaned down and kissed her, but she pulled away.

"You make me so mad," she pouted. "You won't tell me anything." She smiled up at him, her heart shining through her eyes. "Paul, did you score a touchdown when you were carrying the ball?"

"Well, let's say I made a good gain. Now, let's talk about you. What have you been doing?"

"Darling, I write you every day. You know everything I've been doing. It's you I want to talk about."

Paul leaned back in the seat, pulled Elaine back with him, and sighed. "All right, but remember I was a major once and if you get out of line you'll have to salute."

Elaine bit his chin. "What I want to know first," she said, "is when do we get married?"

"Sweetheart, that sounded much the same as if you'd asked 'when do we eat?' Can't you put more feeling into it?"

"Stop going Hollywood on me," Elaine retorted. "I'm not growing any younger. People are beginning to talk. I'm nearing the spinster age."

Paul chuckled. "You probably aren't old enough to vote, but anyhow, the whole thing is up to Washington."

Elaine sat up. "Washington! Now they're going to tell me when I can get married. That Man!" she wailed.

"I understand how you feel," Paul said, his voice serious. "But you see I'm assigned to some pretty touchy work. We've got a date in Europe—the army, that is— and well, I'm on military mission now. It may be several months before I'm released to return to Hollywood. I may have to go back to London. So, honey, we'll just have to wait."

Elaine sighed and sat back. "All right. I'll wait, I guess. But I don't like it." She looked up at him. "I've missed you terribly, darling. I want you with me."

The cab drew up before the hotel where the Branns were waiting for them, and the driver hopped out and opened the door. He looked in and then very politely closed the door and turned his back, casually whistling while Paul did a thorough job of kissing Elaine.

She spent a week in New York with Paul and when he flew on to Washington she returned to Hollywood with the Branns. Minnie and Andie spent most of the trip arguing about whether Elaine should have married Paul while they were in New York or wait until he returned to Hollywood. Elaine was rather glad when the trip was finished and she was back to work at the studio.

It was the night of the Academy Award banquet that she dined at Ciro's with Lee and Wilson Hall, head of Hall Productions. She really did not want to go to the night club after the banquet, but there was no way she could gracefully refuse the invitation.

She considered it unfortunate that Karen and Warren should arrive there shortly after she and Lee and Hall did. But Lee merely glanced at Karen and the Oscar she had won for the year's finest work of acting. He continued his conversation with Hall after only a minute pause.

Ciro's was crowded and there were no vacant tables for Karen and Warren. Elaine had the feeling that if Karen saw Lee and the table they occupied they would ask to sit with them.

She was right. Karen waved grandly and walked to their table. "Hello, darlings! You have so much room you won't mind if we join you."

Warren seemed ill at ease, and said little for the better part of an hour. He paid little attention when Karen asked Lee to dance with her, kept his eyes away from the dance floor while they were pressed together on the crowded space.

When Karen and Lee were dancing through a second number, Warren turned to Elaine and asked: "When will Paul be back?"

"In about a week," he said.

Warren smiled. "I hear he's been doing great things with the army. He's a fine man, Elaine. I'm very happy for you."

Warren's voice was gentle and his eyes were a little sad, as Elaine had seen them before. Karen and Lee returned to the table, and Elaine saw the slight flush of excitement on her cheeks, the faintest glow of brightness in her eyes that was not there when she and Warren had come in.

Wilson Hall touched his neat grey moustache with a finger and leaned toward Karen ... Elaine did not like Hall, although he was a shrewd producer. There was something brittle about him. He was tall, grey-haired, athletically built. He was an expert at crowding a six-weeks' shooting schedule into three. That was the way Hall Productions operated. She hated to think of what they were doing to "Golden Night."

Hall was asking Karen: "When do you start overseas?"

Karen shrugged. "I don't know. John is being dreadfully stupid about it. He doesn't want me to go. He wants to use me in a picture at American. I think he's very selfish, don't you, darling?"

Warren's face turned red. "I think you are the selfish one, Karen. It would only be a matter of postponing your trip six or eight weeks. You could at least do your own husband that much of a favor."

Karen's eyes hardened. "Don't be dull, John. I really don't care if you never get that picture produced. And I certainly shan't postpone my trip."

Warren's hands were tightly clenched and his lips drawn back in a thin line. "You're rotten, Karen, clear through," he hissed.

Warren looked up at Lee, his lips curled back in a snarl. "You two are great together," he rasped. "The greatest pair of double crossers Hollywood and Broadway ever knew."

Karen was standing, her face ashen. "Take me home, please, Lee."

Elaine watched them disappear through the milling crowd near the table, heard the murmur of voices, one or two people laugh. Then the orchestra began playing and the people sat down again in their chairs or moved back to the dance floor.

It was the kind of hot day that makes you feel disgruntled at everybody and everyone. It was still, quiet in the mid-morning. No air swept in from the ocean or down from the mountains. There was nothing but a baking heat that enveloped Los Angeles.

Elaine rolled uncomfortably in her bed, stared at the bright sun pouring through the window. It was Sunday morning and she could hear the rasp-rasp of tires against hot asphalt on the street below.

She was staring at the clock, not really seeing it, just staring at it, when the phone by her bed rang. It startled her and after the second ring she lazily reached over and answered it. She could hear Brann's voice, excited and pitched. Her eyes were still focused on the little clock on the end table, but this time she was looking at it, not beyond.

It was 9.36 when Brann told her the police had found Karen's lifeless body lying across her bed.

"What! What did you say?" Elaine exclaimed, sitting up.

"I said, the maid couldn't get the door open so she called the police. They found Karen dead, a towel stuffed down her throat. I said, somebody killed Karen .."

Somebody killed Karen.

The words rang through her mind, rang and rang until she put her hand to her forehead. She felt horribly sick at the pit of her stomach. She got up and walked to the bathroom and splashed cold water on her face. Then she returned to the bedroom and sat down.

Somebody killed Karen.

Elaine sat very still and listened to the words ringing through her mind.

Bd. of Education to Make Survey To Care for Future Expansion

Possible needed future expansion of the educational system in Belleville was discussed by members of the Board of Education at their regular meeting Friday evening when a committee was formed to survey the city to determine the advisability of securing control of land which may be needed for future school expansion.

The question of possible increased school accommodation in Belleville was broached by board member, W. H. Finkle, who put a motion that a committee of the chairman of the Board, the chairman of public school management, the chairman of finance, and the administrator be appointed to look into the matter.

The above committee will survey the present educational accommodation of the city from the viewpoint of future requirements and report on the advisability of securing control now of land that may be necessary and which should be required for future public school purposes.

New Staff Members Introduced

New staff members at the various city schools were introduced by their respective principals to the board members. Principal George E. Currie, of the Collegiate, introduced Miss Dorothy Schwalm, formerly of Meaford; Mrs. O. R. Thompson, Belleville; Miss Bernice Nugent, formerly of Picton Collegiate; Mr. Harry Bates, formerly Queen Mary School; J. F. Wilson, Port Arthur; J. J. Bowden, of Timmins, and C. A. Brown, formerly acting principal of King George School.

New public school teachers introduced included Miss Doreen Goodfellow, Brighton, and Miss Helen Govette, Demorestville. The above teachers were introduced by Major E. Fairman, of King George School. Principal Anderson of Queen Alexandra School introduced Miss Catherine Morton, formerly of Cobourg.

To Consider Building Improvement

A special committee was named to consider the request of the Queen Mary Home and School Association that certain building improvements be made to that school. The resignation of Miss Ana English, teacher at Queen Victoria School was accepted by the board. Miss English is resigning her position to be married.

The Home and School Association of the Belleville Collegiate was granted the use of the collegiate auditorium for their meetings on the third Monday of each month, and the Canadian Legion was granted the use of the auditorium for Nov. 23-24. Executive committee members of the Collegiate Home and School Association will be invited to the next meeting of the Board of Education which will be held the second Friday of November.

Upon recommendation of the Collegiate principal, Mr. Currie, the advisory committee approved the installation of three new lathes for the machine shop with construction of the necessary pipe benches. The school principal also recommended that the services of a stenographer be acquired to assist Miss Cronk with clerical duties in the Collegiate office.

Approval of the board members for the installation of a pay telephone in the front entrance of the Collegiate was given. This would be a convenience for both daytime students and for the public using the building during the evening. Indiscriminant use of the staff telephones was deemed as unwise.

Attendance, Health Statistics.

Attendance at the public schools for the month of September was slightly below the record for September, 1944, according to the report of Inspector - Administrator Lawrence Kells. The average attendance percentage was 94.79 with Queen Alexandra having 94.66, King George 94,28, Queen Mary 95.67 and Queen Victoria 94.81.

Twenty-five children had X-ray examinations at the travelling chest clinic which recently visited the city it was reported by Mrs. Watt, school nurse. Dental health cards have been sent home to parents of all pupils in Grades 7 and 8 while over 1,400 pupils in the lower grades had been examined by the school dentist. Dental work began at King George School on October 19.

Home visits during the month totalled 23, with First Aid treatments numberin g139. All children who have not had diphtheria toxoid whether they have had whooping cough or whooping cough immunization are to be treated with clinics to start Oct. 23 ,at the Kiwanis Centre.

Use of Collegiate Campus for Sunday Ball Practice Banned

Members of the Belleville Board of Education are agreeable that the Collegiate campus be used for recreational purposes during weekdays but when it comes to the grounds being used for football practice on Sundays with result that annoyance is caused church-goers then things are going a bit too far.

At least that is the gist of the complaint received at the police station over the weekend from H. B. Fetterly, chairman of the Board of Education, who asked that police constables look into the matter. Principal Currie of the Collegiate believed that youths using the grounds on Sunday were not students of the school and were doing so without permission. Instructions were given to constables on Sunday duty to give the matter their attention.

Church St. Armouries Again Houses 34th Field Battery

The Church Street Armouries, long the pre-war home of the 34th Field Battery, Royal Canadian Artillery which during the war housed the Ontario School for the Deaf, has been returned to its former military occupants, it was learned today.

Captain Steve A. Sword, present officer commanding the battery formally accepted the building on behalf of his unit from RCE and other army officials of Military District No. 3. Captain Frank Murtagh, A.L.I. adjutant presided over a board of officers during the official handing over ceremonies. RSM. A. Guthrow, Kingston represented the Royal Canadian Engineers.

The field battery, since the beginning of the war when its quarters in the Church Street were taken over for civic purposes has been doing its training and administrative work in the Argyll Light Infantry armouries, in quarters that were hardly adequate for the purpose.

With the entry into its former armoury, training will be greatly facilitated while the sergeants and officers of the unit will be able to take advantage of their own messing facilities.

Plans are under way for an unofficial "house - warming" at which many ex-members of the unit who served overseas will be special guests.

It is expected the battery will be moved in its entity to the new quarters by the first of the week.

WOMAN KILLED

the Parry Sound area. The men are Mervyn Fisher, Vincent Labrash and Ronald Biliski of Parry Sound and Leroy Warren and W. McMillan, said to be from Burks Falls.

They, knocked out turnkey John Hudson, gained his keys and made good their escape. Hudson had been releasing one of the prisoners from his cell to take a shower when he was struck over the head with a broom handle covered with a length of rubber hose.

Immediately police blocked all highways around Parry Sound, calling in police from Barrie, Gravenhurst and North Bay. Deputies and special constables were sworn in to help watch roads and stop all cars.

REPRESENTATIVES OF UNITED NATIONS MEET AT QUEBEC FOR DETAILED PROBE INTO WORLD'S FOOD PROBLEMS

An organization affecting production, distribution and consumption of food the world over took definite shape in Quebec City last week. The constitution of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization was signed by 30 nations. At left Canadian delegates register for the FAO conference. L. B. Pearson, (above), Canada's Ambassador to the United States who was elected conference chairman greets the head of the delegation from India. In this photo, Charles Tanguy-Prigent, France's young Minister of Agriculture, addresses a session. Ann Figueroa of Porto Rico is shown above as she searches among great masses of baggage on the opening day of the conference.—(NFB Photos by George Hunter.)

Few Traces of Fascism in Britain

Remnants of British Fascism linger in the members of the banned organization who wear black bow ties, Marcel Wallenstein writes from London to The Kansas City Star.

When William Joyce, the Lord Haw Haw of the German radio, stood trial for high treason at the Old Bailey, four young men whose black bows advertised their allegiance to Sir Oswald Mosley's British Union were chased from the front of the courthouse into a side street by a crowd and were rescued by the police.

Soldier on Trial

Simultaneously, at a London military barracks, another former member of the British Union of Fascists was being tried by British courtmartial as a spy. He is Pte. Theodore Schurch who, after his capture by the Italians in North Africa, joined the enemy and crossed to the British lines to obtain information. Later, in Italy, he was placed in British prisoner of war camps to get information from British officers, who believed he was one of them.

In other courts-martial former members of the Mosley organization have been tried, or are soon to be tried, for going over to the German side after being captured. At least one has been convicted of becoming a member of the German SS and of wearing the uniform of an SS officer.

Says He is Swiss

Schurch, in the same manner as Joyce, claims foreign nationality. He insists he is a Swiss and owes no allegiance to Britain, as Joyce insists he is an American citizen and always has been. The refuge in foreign nationality is something new in British Fascist dodges, since the organization posed as super nationalist, super-British. Joyce, throughout his association with Mosley, sneered at everything American and wrote vitriolic articles against the United States in The Blackshirt, a Fascist publication.

It has come out in evidence at one of the courts-martial that certain members of the British Union were "directed" to join the armed forces and "carry out instructions." What these instructions were and whether they were concerned with operations in aid of Germany and Italy, have not been divulged.

Links With Mosley

It is true, however, that a majority of the men tried for treason since the end of the war are accused of some connection with the Mosley organization. Joyce had severed his connections with Mosley when he fled to Germany on the eve of the war in August, 1939.

No charge of treason has been brought against Sir Oswald Mosley, the political curiosity who was in turn a Conservative, Socialist, leader of the New Party and then organizer of the British blackshirts. He married, as his second wife, the Hon. Unity Mitford, the daughter of Lord Redesmere, a British pier. Unity Mitford spent much of her time in Germany, became a member of the Nazi Party and openly declared her love for Hitler. She shot herself in the neck after the declaration of war and was returned from Germany to Britain. She has not been prosecuted and today lives in retirement.

Her sister, the present Lady Mosley, was frequently in Berlin in the days of the Nazi rule, and was known as a friend of Goering, Goebbels and "Putzi" Hanfstengel, the American-born Nazi who, at one time, was a Hitler favorite.

"Protective Custody"

Mosley and his wife were arrested and spent a considerable time in prison under what in Germany would be known as "protective custody." They were finally released on the grounds that Mosley's health was bad. He bought a house in the country where he now lives with his wife and family, taking no open part in politics. His first wife was a granddaughter of Levi Leiter, Chicago millionaire, and from her Mosley is said to have inherited a fortune.

At the outbreak of war Mosley published instructions to his members to do nothing that would embarrass their country. The fact that a majority of cases of treachery in the British army and air force have been brought against members of his organization has caused questions to be asked here about the status of the banned organization. The wearers of the black ties are few in number, apparently a diehard remnant. Fascism as envisioned by Mosley and Joyce can have no hope of revival in Britain.

Domino Dots Gave Braille His System

A little over a century ago more than 95 percent of the world's blind were paupers, beggars or confined to institutions, Mort Weisinger writes in Coronet. That these pitiful conditions no longer exist is due in great measure to Louis Braille, born in 1809 at Coupvray, France, the son of a poor harness maker.

Blinded at the age of three Louis was enrolled in the Paris institution for blind children when he was 10. There, older students frightened the impressionable boy with predictions that he would become a beggar. As a result he became passionately studious and mastered the violincello, reading the notes with his fingertips from sheets of music that had been high embossed.

Made Experiments

As he grew older, Braille wondered whether a practical system of reading could ever be invented for the blind. Grappling with the problem, he went to fantastic lengths. Once, daring the unknown horrors of the outside world, he slipped from the institution and begged in the streets of Paris. With the few coins he collected he purchased a supply of leather thongs. These he wound into a series of knots, so that one knot would stand for the letter A, two for B, and so on. For a while he amused his fellow students, teaching them how to send simple messages this way; but the system failed because it was too cumbersome.

His exceptional aptitude as a student finally earned Braille the position of instructor in the institution. But it was the simple parlor game of dominos which finally gave young Braille the answer to the problem that obsessed him.

Counting the dotlike indentations on each domino with the fingertips was a simple and rapid progress. Recalling how easy it was to read embossed musical notes, he reasoned that the dots of the domino could be detected more easily if they were raised instead of depressed. Then if the domino dots could be arranged into various combinations so that each represented a letter of the alphabet he would have a practical system.

Inspired, Braille went to work, and finally perfected the code that most blind persons use today. Yet, after months of labor, he knew no reward for his great invention. Officials at the institution refused to listen to a word in its favor. "A separate alphabet for the blind would set them still further apart from the normal world," they argued, and the Braille system was forbidden to be taught.

Secret Classes

Secretly, Braille held classes in his room, teaching the new code to students. Next, he contrived a device that would teach them to write. This consisted of two zinc plates joined together with a hinge so that one fitted over the other. The upper plate was perforated with lines of small squarish openings. In the lower plate, under each opening was a set of indentations corresponding to the six dots of the domino.

The writer merely had to insert a sheet of paper between the two plates and, working along from opening to opening in the upper plate, punch the paper down with a blunt awl into the indentations in the lower plate, which in turn spelled out the words in Braille. There was just one drawback—the fact that the raised dots appeared on the bottom side of the paper made it necessary for the writer to work from right to left, so that when the paper was turned over the elevated dots could be read from left to right. Consequently, each letter had to be written backward. Yet so eager were Braille's pupils that this obstacle proved only a minor handicap.

Patrols Prowl Downtown Area Of Buenos Aires

By LAURANCE F. STUNTZ

Buenos Aires, Oct. 20 — (AP)— Patrol cars prowled the downtown streets of uneasy Buenos Aires early today, and police using megaphones advised a populace agitated by the swiftly shifting political scene to be calm and remain in their homes.

A short time later some of the extra police guards who had been placed over various parts of the city were recalled, but the police ordered extreme vigilance over the Radical (centre) party, where the guard was strengthened.

Street demonstrations staged by supporters of Col. Juan Peron, newly restored to political dominance, ended. Transportation was restored yesterday following Thursday's country-wide strike arranged by Peron's supporters.

Presidents of three government banks have resigned their posts, it was learned. They are Julian Martinez of the National Mortgage Bank; Ernest O. Herbin, the Argentine Bank for industrial credit, and Luis A. Polledo, acting president of the Bank of the Nation. No reasons were given.

Admiral Nelles Retires on Net Pension of $8,707

Ottawa, Oct. 20 —(CP)— Admiral Percy Nelles, former Chief of the Naval Staff and former Chief of the Canadian Naval Mission in Britain, was retired Jan. 6, 1945 on annual net pension of $8,707, it was disclosed yesterday in a return tabled in the Commons by W. C. Macdonald, Naval Parliamentary Assistant to Defence Minister Abbott.

The information was provided for H. O. White (PC-Middlesex East.)

Since VE-Day, May 8, 10,305 army absentees or deserters have surrendered or been apprehended, the army said in reply to questions by T. L. Church (PC-Toronto Broadview). There still were 17,504 at large. The return also reported 878 soldiers under sentences to imprisonment returned to Canada of which 85 now were serving sentences in Canadian penal institutions.

Yesterday was the first time within the memory of old timers on Parliament Hill that the Finance Minister was not in the Commons to hear the speech of the financial critic of the opposition. Finance Minister Ilsley is in the West on a Victory Loan speaking tour.

It came in the form of new "specialty" dishes on the menu of the parliamentary restaurant and, according to a memorandum from Sergeant-at-Arms W. J. Franklin, they are aimed at eliminating the "monotony of menus, repeated from day to day."

Justice Minister St. Laurent last night assured the Commons that any military agreement drawn up under the United Nations charter would be submitted to parliament.

Jean Francois Pouliot (L-Temiscouata) last night coined a new phrase to define Canada's stature in world affairs. Mr. Pouliot said he was "humiliated" to learn at the start of the San Francisco conference that Canada had been listed as a small power. But later the Dominion was given the status of a middle-sized power and, as Mr. Pouliot put it, "Canada had reached the navel of the big powers."

Nazi Leaders Up At Dawn to Study The Indictments

Nuernberg, Oct. 20 — (AP) — The Nazi leaders who face trial as war criminals were up at dawn this morning and looked like collegians cramming for final examinations as they dug into their indictments.

"That's the most studious group I ever saw," one guard commented.

The top-ranking Nazis read even during breakfast. As there are no electric lights in their cells and since the indictments were served late yesterday, this was the first chance they had to study the charges.

Only Field Marshal Goering seemed to have a completely detached attitude as he stretched out on his bed in what appeared to be deep thought. Asked if he had made any decision regarding his counsel, the former Luftwaffe chief replied, "I'll think if over a while."

"I don't see how you can make law after things have been done," protested Dr. Robert Ley, former head of the German Labor Front. "Even god first made the ten commandments and judged people by them afterwards."

ONE YEAR'S MILITARY TRAINING TRUMAN PLAN

Tighter Govt. Economy Faces Britons

Dalton Calls For Continued Savings And Price Controls

Will Stimulate Exports And Cut Down Imports

By JOHN DAUPHINEE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 23. (CP)—Britain's new Labor government today presented a belt-tightening financial program of continued savings and price controls backed by subsidies and called for sharp curtailment of dollar imports pending outcome of financial talks under way in Washington.

"Today and for some years to come", Hugh Dalton, chancellor of the Exchequer, gravely told the House of Commons as he brought down his interim budget, "it remains the imperative duty of each of us, whatever the size of our income and whatever our occupation, to save all we can and lend it to the government".

British representatives in Washington are discussing with United States authorities a substitute for lend-lease, abruptly cancelled with the end of the war, but Mr. Dalton said the talks have not yet "reached a provisional conclusion". h ional conclusion", He added:

"Meanwhile, pending a settlement, it is more than ever necessary to stimulate British exports and restrict imports, especially those which must be paid for with dollars".

Dominion Kept Informed.

He said the Dominions and India are being kept in close touch with the Washington negotiations. In this connection, Prime Minister Mackenzie King is in London and available for an on-the-spot report from the British Cabinet.

Discussing the Washington talks, Mr. Dalton said:

"We must make the most vigorous and the imaginative efforts as private enterprise shall be capable of to stimulate the balance of our export trade. Whatever the outcome of the Washington talks, we must make all possible efforts to re-establish as quickly as we can the balance of our external trade. We must do the job soon and recover equilibrium as soon as may be."

Stating that Britain is keeping in close touch with the Dominions and with India in connection with the Washington negotiations, Mr. Dalton said Britain must do everything possible to restore the balance of her foreign trade.

Stating that the British cost of living now is 31 per cent above the pre-war level, Mr. Dalton declared he intended to hold it at that level "for the next year at least." This would be done "even if this means an increase in the necessary Exchequer subsidies."

Last year cost-of-living subsidies cost the exchequer about £200,000,000 (about $890,000,000.) With cessation of lend-lease, subsidies would rise at least to £300,000,000 and the actual figure might prove to be considerably higher.

The Chancellor of the Exchequer made the statement as he brought down the Labor government's first budget, an interim one necessitated by the ending of the war. The regular budget will be brought down next April.

Warns of Inflation.

Warning against the pitfalls of inflation, Mr. Dalton said price controls must be retained and enforced, if necessary strengthened and extended. "In the near future," he said, "I believe this policy of price stabilization will be even more important than during the war."

Stressing the importance of the National Savings Movement Mr. Dalton said:

"We must be resolute against inflation. We must increase production of peacetime goods as rapidly as possible and be prepared to hold back purchasing power until there are enough goods to buy. The danger now is lest too much money should run after too few goods and hence the importance of national savings."

He told a packed house that the government would "shape their policy and make their five-year plan" so as to satisfy the widespread desire for tax reduction and increased expenditures upon social services."

Govt. Program

In quick succession, the Chancellor announced:

Legally-fixed minimum prices on the London Stock Exchange are to be abolished, effective today, as they no longer serve a useful purpose.

Family allowances, increased old-age pensions and other improved social insurance benefits will be paid as from next year.

Expenditures on housing, education and Colonial Welfare will be increased.

There is no hope of a balanced budget next year although the gap between expenditure and revenue will be "substantially" narrowed.

The Chancellor announced that the standard rate of income tax, as from next April, will drop slightly — from 10 shillings in the pound to nine shillings.

Relief from paying income tax was extended to an estimated 2,000,000 persons when the Chancellor announced the following tax changes:

Raising of the untaxed allowance for a single person from £80 ($365) to £110 and for a married couple from £140 to £180.

Income exempt from payment of tax was increased from £110 to £120.

Mr. Dalton said it would "not be safe" to begin for the moment repayment of post-war credits, drawn from income tax paid during the war years.

Loss to the exchequer from these changes would be £90,000,000 (about $400,000,000) annually Mr. Dalton estimated. He said: "I hope the encouragement given by the general relief from tax will lead to intensified production and therefore to more abundant revenue."

Reduction of the excess profits tax, levied on corporation incomes in excess of pre-war profits, to 60 per cent will be introduced as from Jan. 1, the Chancellor announced, estimating the loss to the exchequer at some £30,000,000 annually. He said he will continue to study alternatives to the tax.

Presentation of today's interim budget followed a Commons debate yesterday on the government's demobilization policy. Winston Churchill, former Prime Minister, led the Conservative attack.

Fliers Submitted to Such Humilities Their Names May Never be Revealed

Hankow, China, Oct. 23 — (AP) —American intelligence officers today related a story of Japanese torture of three United States fliers who were submitted to such humilities that their names never may be revealed — for the sake of their relatives.

One of the fliers, almost naked, was forced to walk through Hankow's wintry streets. One eye was virtually gouged out and he was showered with icy water. At the end of his miles long ordeal, he was showered with gasoline and burned alive, on orders of a Japanese military schoolmaster.

Two fellow B-29 crew members also were cremated, but whether they were alive when the fires were lighted has not been determined. They too, were forced to make the same tortuous walk through Hankow. The fire blackened bodies of all three have been recovered.

The incident was well remembered by scores of Chinese in Hankow because the city received its worst raid of the war only two days after the public torture of the Americans. Many believed the heavy bombing was a reprisal.

It was also revealed that the Japanese turned the Chinese Dah Pu Bank Building in the heart of Hankow into a torture and death factory. An estimated 10,000 Chinese were put through this house of torture and only about 6,000 emerged alive.

One torture instrument was used to hang a man from a beam by his thumbs in such a way that if he eased himself with his bare feet he would cut them to ribbons on broken glass.

The bank furnace was used to cremate those who did not survive.

NEW VENEZUELAN GOVT. NOW SEEKS RECOGNITION

Revolutionary Group Advises Foreign Diplomats Aims and Makeup of Govt.

By PHILIP CLARKE

Caracas, Oct. 23 —(AP)— The new government of Venezuela, established by a revolutionary movement which overran the government of President Isaias Medina Y Angarita in a four-day uprising, moved today to seek foreign recognition.

Interim Foreign Minister Carlos Morales announced the revolutionary Junta had advised diplomatic missions of all countries of the makeup of the government and its aims.

Morales said his policy in the foreign ministry would be to meet all international obligations which the previous government had made. He said he believed the new government would be recognized by other countries when they were acquainted with the character of the revolutionary movement, which he said was to provide a secret, universal vote for president.

Asked whether the Act of Chapultepec did not make it necessary for other countries to withhold recognition from governments established by coups d'etat, he said he interpreted this to mean regimes established by coercion rather than by popular will.

He made no commitment on his government's future relations with the Spanish government of Generalissimo Francisco Franco, the Dominican Republican government of Rafael Trujillo, or the current Argentine regime, but said his people were not in favor of such regimes.

The new Leftist government announced all opposition to the revolution had collapsed and order was being restored gradually through the country.

Luis Valmore Y Rodriguez, 45-year-old former United States army sergeant, will be sworn in today in the No. 2 spot in the revolutionary government.

Valmore, named to the powerful post of interior minister by Revolutionary President Romulo Betancourt, will have charge of many important functions, including the government's relations with oil companies owned by British, American and other foreign investors.

WOODBINE GOLF CLUB IS HELD UP $300 IS TAKEN

Five Armed Men Bind Stewards and Escape With 35 Cases of Beer

Toronto, Oct. 23 —(CP)— Five armed men held up the Woodbine Golf Club in suburban East York Township last night, gagged and bound two stewards and escaped with $300 and 35 cases of beer.

Police said the gunmen did not wear polka-dot handkerchiefs but that the description of the leader tallied with that of the six-foot leader of the Polka Dot gang held responsible for several safecracking and robberies in Toronto district and throughout Western Ontario in the last few weeks.

Stewards John McCracken and Howard Gendron, sleeping in an upstairs bedroom of the golf club, were awakened at three a.m. by shattering glass. Before they could investigate, five men entered the room. The tall leader carried a rifle and his face was covered with a white handkerchief. The others shone flashlights in the stewards' faces.

"They were pretty tough guys," McCracken said. "After they had cleaned out the beer and robbed the club cash register one of them suggested they knock us off but another said to leave us alone."

The stewards were forced to lie on a chesterfield. Their hands and feet were tied with their own belts, ties and shirts. The gunmen took from McCracken his wrist watch, $14 in bills — and even six cents in change.

Two of the men kept guard over the stewards while the other three entered the club bar and forced open the cash register. One member of the gang then backed a truck up to the clubhouse door and the beer was loaded.

Before entering the clubhouse the gang broke into the office of the club professional, Wid Trudelle, stole two rifles, some golf clubs and several suits of clothes. One of the rifles was believed used in the armed robbery.

After the truck drove away, McCracken freed his bonds and summoned police. Entry was gained to the club by smashing a second-storey window.

Deaf Assoc. Asks Transfer of OSD To Toronto Area

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)— The question of whether deaf children should be taught by the oral system or by a combination of signs and oral methods was discussed before the Ontario Royal Commission on Education after a brief was presented by The Ontario Association of the Deaf.

The association's brief recommended transfer of The Ontario School for the Deaf at Belleville to the Federal Government for conversion to a military hospital, and construction of a new school for the deaf at Toronto.

REPORTS INDICATE NINTH LOAN AHEAD OF ANY PREVIOUS

Ottawa, Oct. 23 — (CP) — National War Finance Committee headquarters here reported this morning that Monday's sales in the Ninth Victory Loan across Canada totalled $77,482,950 — a record for opening day sales throughout the eight previous loans. First day sales in the 8th loan last spring were $67,785,300.

Campaign workers said they were not surprised at the flying start toward the National objective of $1,500,000,000 since Ninth Loan Bonds may be paid for over the following year instead of within a six-month period and buyers have been urged to double their normal bond orders.

Workers at the British-American Bank Note Company at Ottawa, where paper currency is made, know what to do with the samples they find in their pay envelopes, 99 per cent pledging at the rate of one out of every five dollars they will make for the next 12 months.

British Columbia and Yukon centres reported successful canvassing, and many had already topped their quota.

Toronto's mayor, Robert Saunders, disclosed the city would subscribe $2,750,000, approximately $900,000 more than in any previous campaign.

Takes Big Chunk

By noon, citizens of Blythe in Huron County had bought $4,000 worth of bonds more than their quota of $64,000 to become the 1st Ontario community to report reaching its objective.

By 9 a.m. Rev. C.A.C. Spence, 75-year-old Peterboro county superannuated minister, had met one-third of his bond-selling objective and turned in $9,100 worth of applications. In other loans, Mr. Spence always has been the first canvasser in the county to reach his objective. Meanwhile, in Peterboro, four plants — Canada Packers, Akerman's, Quaker Oats and Whitaker — have reached the honor classification.

The ranching town of Pincher Creek in Southern Alberta was flying the Victory flag, the unit's first day total having gone well past the $470,000 mark compared with its quota of $460,000. The town has set up a new voluntary objective of $600,000.

Kind of Peace We Want

In the capital the drive was opened by Defence Minister Abbott who said the purchase of Victory Bonds meant "buying the kind of peace we all want," and Mayor Stanley Lewis who termed the loan "our Thanksgiving and our overture to peace."

Lt.-Gen. C. Foulkes, Chief of the General Staff, keynoted a defence headquarters rally and offered the use of the pen with which he had signed the surrender document of German armies in Holland to any soldier subscribing twice as much as in the eighth loan.

PEACETIME FORCES TO GET GOOD PAY SAYS MR. ABBOTT

Defence Minister Claims It is too Soon to Lay Down Rules as to Size And Form of Forces

By FRANK FLAHERTY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 23 — (CP)—Assurance that the men who serve in Canada's permanent peacetime armed forces will get "good pay" was given in the Commons Monday night by Defence Minister Abbott.

He gave the assurance as opposition members, on naval estimates, pressed him for more definite statements on the peacetime forces than any yet given and met with the reply that it was too soon to lay down "hard and fast rules" as to the form and size of the permanent forces.

Discussion of naval estimates marked the opening of a spell of what will be fairly steady concentration by the House on the $2,365,000,000 war appropriation bill for the present fiscal year.

The discussion will resume today after Reconstruction Minister Howe makes an attempt to get his bill amending the Trans - Canada Air Lines Act to the committee on government - owned railway, steamship and air lines. In a preliminary statement on the measure yesterday the minister said it was designed to make the government-owned airways system sufficiently flexible to take care of the rapidly-developing aviation picture.

He asks specifically for an increase in T.C.A.'s capital from $5,000,000, to $25,000,000; for power to form subsidiary companies for the operation of trans-oceanic service; power to invest in companies operating in other countries, and power to establish a new and more flexible arrangement for fixing air mail charges.

He said T.C.A. must be prepared to multiply its route mileage 5 or six times in the next few years by expanding domestic services and three long-distance operations — across the Atlantic, down south to the West Indies and Latin-America and across the Pacific.

Mr. Howe did not get his bill through first reading, although he asked that it be advanced through second reading and sent to the committee. Progressive Conservative members asked an adjournment of debate on the preliminary resolution and got it over C.C.F. protests.

Russ Secret Agent Directed Spy Ring in High Japanese Circles

By HAMILTON W. FARON

Tokyo, Oct. 23—(AP)—A fantastic story of a Russian secret agent in Japan who posed as a German newspaperman while directing a spy ring which reached into the innermost councils of the Imperial Palace and the German Embassy was reported today by the newspaper Asahi.

The secret agent, Richard Gorge, was arrested Oct. 18, 1941, shortly after he had reported to Moscow that war between Japan and the United States was inevitable before the end of the year, Asahi said. He eventually was sentenced to death.

Gorge, the paper related, came to Japan in 1933 on orders of the International Comintern, although he ostensibly was a special correspondent of the German newspaper, Frankfurter Zeitung, and a staunch supporter of Hitler.

He subsequently became so highly trusted at the German Embassy that he was appointed Chief of the Embassy Information section and much Axis and Japanese information, as well as Germany's policy toward Japan, passed over his desk.

As a result of Gorge's operations through sources which were able to report fully details of conferences with the Emperor and meetings of Japan's military leaders, "Japanese secrets at a critical time were leaking through almost completely," Asahi reported.

As an example of the accuracy of his reports, Ashi said that just before he was arrested, Gorge had "analyzed Japanese production potentialities and reported that Japanese production then had reached its peak, but that a long-term war against the United States and Britain was impossible to stop. He said that judging by the powerful voice possessed by the military in the Japanese government, outbreak of war between Japan and America in October or November was inevitable."

(Gorge missed his calculation by eight days. The Japanese started the war with their attack on Pearl Harbor Dec. 8, 1941, Japanese time.)

Arrested with Gorge, Asahi said, were Max Clausen, a German radio technician who transmitted Gorge's information to Russia; Franco de Viekelitch, a Croat, and two Japanese.

Training Should Begin Between 17 and 20 Years

Small Professional Army With Reserves is Urged

Washington, Oct. 23 (AP) — President Truman today recommended a year's military training for young men between the ages of 17 and 20 years.

Mr. Truman told a joint session of Congress that the United States must remain militarily strong. He urged that a small professional army be maintained, supplemented with a reserve of trained young men.

"The atomic bomb is of little value without an adequate army, air and naval force," the President said. "For that kind of force is necessary to protect our shores, to overcome any attack and to enable us to move forward and direct the bomb against the enemy's own territory."

Specifically he asked that male citizens enter the year's training period either at the age of 18 or at their graduation from high school, whichever is later. In any event, he said, the training should begin before the young man is 20.

Seventeen year olds who had completed their high school course would be eligible to start their training at that age if their parents consented.

All young men, Mr. Truman asserted, should be included in the training program, whether physically qualified for actual combat service or not. He urged no exemptions for occupation, dependency "or for any other reason except total physical disqualification."

"It is only by strength that we can impress the fact upon possible future aggressors that we will tolerate no threat to peace or liberty."

"The great difference between having universal training and having no training however," the President said, "is that in time of emergency, those who would be selected for actual military service would already have been basically trained.

"That difference may be as much as a year's time. That difference may be the margin between the survival and the destruction of this great nation."

"First—a comparatively small regular army, navy and marine corps;

"Second—a greatly strengthened national guard and organized reserve for the army, navy and marine corps;

"Third—a general reserve composed of all the male citizens of the United States who have received training."

The general reserve, "would be available for rapid mobilization in time of emergency, but it would have no obligation to serve, either in this country or abroad, unless and until called to the service by an act of the Congress," the President asserted.

Residents of Belleville and Trenton districts will have their opportunity of getting acquainted with the R. A. F. "Meteor" jet-propelled aircraft during the morning of October 30th when it will be demonstrated over this city, Trenton and Kingston.

On the afternoon of the same day the aircraft will be on display at the Trenton air station where the general public is cordially invited to attend. Camera fans will be welcomed to take pictures of the aircraft, it is stated.

The "Meteor", capable of speeds undreamed of by conventional type aircraft, saw operational duty over Europe prior to V-E Day. It will commence a tour of Canadian air stations starting at Ottawa this week.

Exact times of the demonstrations of the plane over each centre where it is scheduled to appear will be announced later. The demonstration, however, will take place over Belleville next Tuesday morning with the plane to be on exhibition at Trenton during the afternoon. It will be in charge of S/L D. L. Baudoux D.S.O., D.F.C.

Peanut-oil Lamps Light Up Hankow, People are Hungry

By RICHARD CUSHING

Hankow, China, Oct. 23 —(AP) —Peanut oil lamps light Hankow by night, and its hungry, chilled residents, already burning their last scraps of wood, soon may be breaking down doors for fuel.

This once-flourishing inland port city is plagued with a complete lack of coal, a shortage of housing, inflation and disease.

Chinese working like ants are repairing the extensive damage done by Allied bombs, but Hankow's ills lie much deeper than her scarred face. The city awaits a cold winter — heatless, short of water and without electricity.

The gravity of the situation becomes evident after nightfall when families huddle around the weak light of a peanut-oil flame and cook with rapidly-diminishing wood and paper.

LOAN OBJECTIVE SET AT $22,700

Victory Loan objective for teaching staff members of the Board of Education for the 9th Victory Loan campaign just commenced has been set at $22,700, teachers and other staff workers have been advised. During the last loan the objective for the teachers was set at $12,500 with actually $15,400 being subscribed.

Objective for teachers and staff members at the Collegiate in the 9th Loan has been set at $11,500; King George School $2,100; Queen Alexandra $3,200; Queen Mary, $2,400; and Queen Victoria $3,000.

EMPLOYEES TO GATHER LEAVES FROM STREETS

With Autumn's rains and frost having speedily denuded summer shade trees in the city, the local department of public works employees will begin their annual rounds to pick up leaves starting next week, it was stated this morning by City Engineer Charles Mott. The city engineer advised all householders to rake leaves on their premises to the street and leave them in piles in readiness for the pick-up which will commence on Monday. Residents were in particular urged to have their leaves raked by Monday thus eliminating the necessity of a return trip.

WATER LEVEL IN RIVER HIGHEST IN YEARS

Heavy rains in the northern and middle sections of the country have resulted in the levels of the Moira River being the highest, seasonally, in a number of years, city officials said today.

The high level at the rivermouth reaches back as far as the American Optical Company.

Officials regard high water at this time of the year as being a deterrent to flood menace in the spring. There is less possibility of solid freezing of the water in the rivermouth when such conditions exist.

NAVY LEAGUE HEAD EXPRESSES HIS THANKS TO ALL WHO HELPED

Chairman of the local Navy League, Mr. Gilbert Stackhouse, today expressed to the general public the appreciation of his committee for the splendid response during Saturday's Navy League tag day when $572 was contributed for the work of the league. Sincere appreciation was also expressed to Mrs. Neate, Mrs. Chas. Cameron, to the local school children and to all others who assisted in tagging and thereby made the success of the day possible.

POLICE COURT

Although eighteen cases were listed for hearing at city police court Tuesday morning only two were definitely disposed of during the morning's proceedings. Others were either settled out of court or were remanded to a later court.

Five cases involving intoxication, one of "having" liquor and two for overtime parking, were settled out of court, the former paying the conventional $13.00 and those charged with parking violations $2.

Vernon Orr, charged with inflicting grievous bodily harm was remanded to a later court pending mental examination, while persons involved in the recent theft of sugar from Hannah's bakery were also asked to appear in Friday's court.

Bernard Boomhour, Rossmore, charged with attempted theft of grocer J. Shannon's auto, was held in custody pending sentence following his plea of guilty, while Thomas Matthews was assessed $50 and costs on a second offence drunk count. In default he will spend the next month in jail. Robert Smith was assessed $25 plus costs of $2,50 for leaving the scene of an accident on Victoria Avenue, when he crashed into a hydro pole with such force that it was broken.

A charge of drunk driving against a Belleville resident was enlarged to a later court.

PICTON

South Marysburg Township Honors Service Personnel

Picton, Oct. 23—More than one thousand persons gathered at the village of Milford, Saturday to honor service personnel of South Marysburg Township. Taking part in the parade were the 35-piece band of No. 3A District Depot, Kingston, under W.O. 1 Jesse, 38 township men and women who had served in the armed forces and were able to be present, school children of the township wearing colorful costumes and carrying banners and flags and children on horseback, decorated bicycles, two clowns, decorated cars and trucks.

The salute was taken by Major Howard Reid, the township's highest ranking officer. Capt. Roy Dulmage, Kingston and South Bay, was in command of the platoon.

At the recreation centre, Reeve Donald Thompson extended a welcome on behalf of the township. Major Reid addressed the service personnel and R.S.M. Angus Duffy of the Hasty P's made a stirring appeal on behalf of the Victory Loan. "These men fought and sacrificed in order that the world become a better place in which to live, while victory over a common enemy has been achieved, the task has not yet been completed. Purchase of Victory Bonds means rehabilitation and reconstruction. Until this is accomplished victory is not complete, he said.

In the shed, long tables had been set for 200 and these were filled several times. Hundreds of others were served refreshments at a large tent. All parts of the township assisted with the dinner, which proved a sumptuous repast, with cold sliced chicken and a variety of delicacies.

Later there was a program of races for the children and three softball games.

Perfect weather prevailed and the event was a red letter day in the history of this pioneer village.

Pre-fabricated House May be Viewed at 7.30

To permit workers whose daytime duties prevent them from taking advantage of the "open house" at the Universal Moulded Products Ltd. plant where the Manhard pre-fabricated house is on display this week the general public will be permitted to visit the plant after the supper hour, it has been announced by company officials.

Approximately 20 persons visited the plant Sunday to inspect the pre-fabricated house, while on Monday another 40 showed interest. Decision of plant officials to extend "open house" to include the after supper hours was made as result of the feeling many workers would be unable to visit the plant during the day. The house will be on display at the plant after 7:30 each night this week.

Five Armed Men Rob Golf Club

Toronto, Oct. 23 — (CP) — Five armed men held up the Woodbine Golf Club in suburban East York Township last night, gagged and bound two stewards and escaped with $300 and 35 cases of beer.

Police said the gunmen did not wear polka-dot handkerchiefs but that the description of the leader tallied with that of the six-foot leader of the polka-dot gang held responsible for several safecracking and robberies in Toronto district and throughout Western Ontario in the last few weeks.

Obituary

MRS. FLORENCE M. COLLING

Mrs. Florence May Colling, 17 Alexander Street, widow of Robert E. Colling, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Tuesday morning. She was in failing health for the past ten months.

The late Mrs. Colling was in her 72nd year and was born in Tyendinaga Township, her parents being the late Mr. and Mrs. James Boyd. For some years she lived in Madoc and forty years ago she came with her late husband and family to make her home in this city. During the years she lived here Mrs. Colling made many friends by whom she was held in high regard and to whom her death has brought sincere feelings of regret. She was a member of the Church of England and took an active part in the women's organizations in connection with Christ Church parish, especially the Parish Guild and the Woman's Auxiliary.

Surviving her are two sons, Mr. Kenneth J. Colling and Mr. Cleo B. Colling, both of Belleville, and one sister, Mrs. Ida McFaul, Wellington. Her husband died ten years ago.

Resting at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street, until early Wednesday afternoon, then at her home, 17 Alexander Street; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

JOHN DUNCAN
(Stirling — Deseronto)

Frankford, Oct. 23 — (Special) —John Duncan, who lived in Stirling and Deseronto for some years before going to live in Toronto, died in St. Michael's Hospital in that city on Oct. 13th. He was 83 years of age and came to Canada from Leicester, England, in 1907. He was a shoemaker and was highly esteemed in the communities in which he lived. In religion he was a member of Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, Toronto.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Maria Fox; one daughter, Mabel in Toronto; three sons, William and John of Toronto and Arthur of Batawa; five grandchildren.

The funeral took place from a funeral home in Toronto on Tuesday, Oct. 16th. The service in the chapel was conducted by the Rev. W. McLeod, minister of Emmanuel Presbyterian Church, assisted by the Rev. R. J. Koffend of Evangel Hall, representing the Toronto Presbytery; the Rev. F. A. Robins, Superintendent of Missions and Biblical Education and Rev. Dr. Albert Hughes of High Park Baptist Church.

LATE DAVID W. HUNTER
(Madoc Township)

The funeral of David Wishart Hunter, Madoc Township, who died in the Belleville General Hospital on Saturday last, took place from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, 38 Everett St. on Monday afternoon to the United Church at Cooper where service was conducted by the Rev. A. Poulter, of Trinity United Church, Madoc.

Interment took place in Cooper Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Walter Pigden, M. Nicol, F. Harris, Bert McCoy, A. Hunter and Edward Blakely.

MRS. ETHEL SOUTHWORTH.
(Frankford)

Frankford, Oct. 23 (Special) The funeral of Mrs. Ethel Millicent (Lowery) Southworth, wife of Mr. Arthur Southworth, took place from her late residence here on Thursday afternoon, Oct. 18th, to the United Church where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. H. H. Lackey, assisted by the Rev. J. F. McLean, pastor of the United Church at Wellington.

Interment took place in Frankford Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs C. D. Powell, William Snider, G. W. Dickson, J. A. Warren, all of Frankford, and Allan Watson and Arthur Armourer of Campbellford.

LATE MRS. ANNIE WOOD
(Ameliasburg)

On Monday afternoon the funeral of Mrs. Annie (Sager) Wood, widow of Ferris Wood, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home Campbell Street, to the United Church at Ameliasburg where service was conducted by the pastor, the Rev. G. A. Adamson.

Interment took place in Grove Cemetery. The bearers were Messrs. Clinton Sager, William Adams, Floyd Adams, Lloyd Reddick, Clifford Carley and Clarence McMurter.

LORNE M. BRADLEY
(Belleville—Hull)

Many friends in this city of Lorne M. Bradley, formerly with the Canada Life Assurance Company here, will regret to learn of his death, which is reported in the following obituary taken from a recent issue of an Ottawa paper:

A well-known underwriter with the Canada Life Assurance Company, Lorne Mahoney Bradley, 26, died suddenly Tuesday night, Oct. 16th, at his residence 271 St. Joseph Boulevard, Hull.

Mr. Bradley was born in Ottawa, a son of Delbert Bradley and his wife, Matilda Mahoney, and for some years was engaged in the life insurance business. He attended St. James Anglican Church, Hull.

He is survived by his widow, the former Winnifred Florence McMillan; his parents; one son, Terry; one brother, Delbert, of Ottawa, and three sisters, Mrs. M. A. La Salle and Misses Joan and Betty Bradley, of Ottawa.

The funeral took place on Friday afternoon at two o'clock from the chapel of Hulse and Playfair, Limited, with Canon L. F. Crothers, of Hull, officiating. Interment was in Beechwood cemetery.

G.S. Brownwell Of Swift Company Returns to Toronto

Resident manager of the local plant of the Swift Canadian Company in Belleville for the past four years, Gordon S. Brownell, Isabel Street, will shortly move to Toronto there to take up similar duties with the company, it has been learned. The exact date of Mr. Brownell's transfer to the Toronto office is not known although it is expected to be in thhe near future.

Successor to Mr. Brownell at Belleville will be William C. Miller who at present is stationed with the company at Toronto.

In his transfer to Toronto Mr. Brownell will be moving back into more familiar territory, he having lived in that city for a period of 13 years. He has been 21 years with Swift Canadian Company Ltd.

Planned expansion of Swifts at Belleville to include the raising of young chicks to the marketing stage, is expected to commence shortly at their acquired property west of King George School, it was stated. More than one year ago plans were announced for the proposed contruction of a series of large brooder houses at the above site but inability to secure required building materials, together with other wartime exigencies, prevented commencement as planned.

Original plans of the company called for an expenditure of approximately $20,000 in the construction of special type brooder houses, but drawings have since been modified. Approximate cost of immediate planned construction was not ascertained.

Father Murphy Outlines Sports Conditions in China

The deplorable conditions existing in China from a sports point of view during the war were briefly outlined by Father A. Murphy, who spent a number of years in that war devastated country, at the Knights of Columbus testimonial dinner to the champion Columbian Squires soft ball squad last night.

Father Murphy, formerly of the Kingston Diocese, related the pitiful conditions which existed in Shanghai as compared to the opportunities afforded Canadian youth from an athletic point of view.

"In the interior of China," he said, "I found thousands of boys not one of whom knew a single thing about sport. At the first opportunity I secured some bats and balls and endeavored to teach them something about softball. I attempted to organize them. Some of them sat for two hours with the ball in their hands, just gazing at it. When thrown at them they would run away from the ball as if it were something dangerous.

"With bats in their hands they would stand three or four feet away and were afraid to hit the ball."

The situation in China is not very promising along these lines, Father Murphy said. "There is little or no recreation and the prospect for the future is very drab."

He expects to return to China in the near future.

Shannonville Man In Hospital After Two Accidents

Involved in two motor accidents in less than one hour, William Ross, 55, Shannonville, is in serious condition in Belleville General Hospital suffering from a possible fractured skull and lacerations about the face.

About eight thirty Monday evening Mr. Ross was involved in a partial headon collision near the east end of the four lane highway east of Belleville and after receiving medical attention at the hospital left the institution only to be run down by a truck as he was crossing Dundas Street.

Ross was proceeding toward Belleville when his auto collided with another owned by Thomas Hurson of Lachine, Quebec, and driven by Mrs. Hurson. Mrs. Hurson suffered a double fracture of her right hand in the accident and received medical attention at the hospital.

Stated to be intoxicated by Provincial Police who investigated the first accident, Ross was attended at the hospital and then while the officer was completing his investigation, disappeared from the institution and is reported to have run across Dundas Street in front of a truck driven by George Cowie, Lonsdale, and owned by Everett Black of this city.

The possible fractured skull suffered by Ross was sustained when he was knocked approximately 10 feet when struck by the truck. He was attended by Dr. J. J. Robertson.

With a combined objective of $325,000 for the three stations, Air Force personnel and civilian workers at No. 1 Air Training Command, at Trenton main station and at No. 6 Repair Depot have already more than made good in the 9th Victory Loan campaign, it is reported by county loan officials.

With the opening gun of the campaign booming only this morning, air station officers reported to campaign headquarters that sales of Victory Bonds to personnel of the three stations had already amounted to $546,450 It was announced Saturday that the three stations had achieved their respective objectives but subscription totals were not available until today.

Trenton main station with an objective of $165,000 has almost doubled its quota with sales as of Saturday evening totalling $300,000. No. 6 Repair Depot had topped its $100,000 objective by $60,000, and No. 1 Air Training Command with an objective of $60,000 had subscribed $86,450.

Local Nimrod Makes Tramps In Country Pay off Financially

Jack Hinchey stroked the fur of three splendid fox pelts. He looked up at a newspaperman and remarked, "there is the result of a day's invigorating tramp through the woods, the thrill of the hunt with the baying of the dogs in your ears; the keen air of an autumn morning, not to mention the ultimate financial returns."

Mr. Hinchey is a keen hunter, one who delights in the great outdoors whether the quarry be fox, wolf, raccoon or deer.

The youths of today are missing the delights of the hunt, is Mr. Hinchey's opinion. "One of the contributing factors to the increase in certain phases of wild life is the fact that the old hunters are dying off or are too old to participate in their favorite sport, while the young generation is more interested in jitter-bugging, and other forms of indoor recreation."

"Believe it or not," he went on, "I know a cornfield, not too many miles away from the city, which was more or less destroyed by the depredations of raccoons. With pelts at five and six dollars, I'm going to spend a few of these moonlight nights with a dog and see if I can knock down a few Brer Coons from their nightspots on tree branches."

He boasts a stable of five fine hounds. A few weeks ago, he had ten dogs in his canine hunting battalion, which consumed almost a bushel of food a day. Within a few weeks he will be tramping the deer-runs in the northern section of the county.

News of wolves running wild in the Read district caused his eyes to brighten with a touch of hunting fever. "Nothing I'd like better," he smiled, "than to track down some of those babies. I know an old wolf-hunter in the city who used to take a day and a couple of nights before he got his wolf. The best time for this type of hunting is late fall with a sprinkle of snow on the ground."

Jack is no mean fisherman. During the summer when the hunting slackens off, he may be found in his spare time patrolling the bay for bass.

Travelogue of Trip in Arctic Held at St. John's

"Twilight, or a trip through the Western Arctic", with beautifully colored lantern slides proved both interesting and instructive and was greatly enjoyed at St. John's Mission, Herchimer Ave., Monday evening at the closing the Junior A.Y.P.A. missionary effort for 1945. With the support of their parents and interested neighbors they will have a substantial contribution for the children of the Eskimos and Indians in the hospital up there. They also have been busy making attractive scrapbooks from discarded Christmas, Easter Halloween cards for their enjoyment while convalescing. Pictures of the midnight sun visibly portrayed the vast stillness and perfect beauty of the land.

Pictures were shown of the Hudson's Bay Company's steamer "Distributor" with the flow ice closing in, making her a prisoner for the winter. It was the same vessel on which the late Lord Tweedsmuir made the trip in 1937 with Bishop Fleming, returning by airplane, and thus saving seven weeks or more travelling time. Coal, gasoline and other supplies are now taken in by plane.

Pictures of an Eskimo schooner coming home after an absence of eleven months, with 30 Eskimos and 50 dogs aboard, gave one an idea of the hardships and adventure of the north, in contrast to the ease of Ontario.

Pictures were shown of natives dressed in caribou skins trimmed with wolf, showing the ability of these people to utilize the crude material at hand.

The travelogue was under the direction of the A.Y.P.A., Lucille Hatfield, Shirley Andrews, Kenneth Duesberry, and Miss Redner, with Frederick Meens operating the lantern and slides.

A hearty vote of thanks was given to those who so generously contributed to making the juniors' undertaking a success.

Achievement Day Prizes Awarded

Twenty four club girls and their leaders attended Achievement Day at Centre Hall on Saturday afternoon, projects completed by the girls being "Sleeping Garments" and "The Garden Brigade." Misses Verna Bambridge and Lulu Rows of the Women's Institute Branch, Toronto, were in attendance with clubs from Hillier, Mountain View, Centre and Victoria competing.

During the morning the girls judged sleeping garments and two classes of vegetables, while in the afternoon Victoria Sew and Sew Club presented an exhibit, "The Bedroom Ensemble" and gave a demonstration on the project "Sleeping Garments." Garden exhibits were commented on by F. J. Webster, agricultural representative.

Plans for the new year's activities were discussed and certificates awarded to the girls for completion of their work. The day's program was concluded with serving of a pot luck supper which was enjoyed by all the girls.

IN MEMORIAM

HANNAH — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Angus G. Hannah, who entered into rest October 23rd., 1944.

When my life work is ended, and I cross the swelling tide,
When the bright and glorious morning I shall see,
I shall know my Redeemer when I reach the other side
And His smile will be the first to welcome me.
Through the gates to the city in a robe of spotless white,
He will lead me where no tears shall ever fall;
In the glad song of ages I shall mingle with delight,
But I long to meet my Saviour first of all.

Bata Employees Open Campaign For Ninth Loan

Employees of Bata Shoe Company numbering upwards of eight hundred workers crowded into the company community hall Monday afternoon for their mass pre-campaign meeting when for them the 9th Victory Loan was officially launched.

Objective for the company workers in the Victory Loan which got underway throughout Canada on Monday has been set at $165,000, it was announced by Dave McDonald, personnel manager, who also acted as chairman for the fine musical program staged as a prelude to the official Victory Loan opening.

Heard during the musical part of the program was silvery voiced Betty Porter, W.D. from Trenton Air Station who was heard in several popular numbers, and "Dixie and Al" vocal duo, visiting Batawa for their first time. Also a newcomer on the Batawa stage was petite Lois Spencer, acrobatic dancer.

"Workers of Bata Shoe Company should be proud of their contribution to the war effort," stated W. W. Parry, vice president of the firm, as he delivered an inspiring Victory Loan message to the company workers. He stated their record of production of war materials and their purchases of Victory Bonds was known across Canada.

Mr. Parry spoke of the vital need for money if Canada's pension plan and rehabilitation of her war veterans was to be carried out. Purchases of Victory Bonds would help supply that money and would also assist in defeating inflation in Canada.

Personnel Manager Mr. McDonald called for a special welcome to some fifty former Bata plant workers who served in the armed forces and are now reinstated in their former jobs with the company. Company employees have now purchased $650,000 in bonds, he said.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

Assembly.

The period was changed from the third to the fourth and fifth this week because two pictures were to be presented. Mr. Currie asked that all announcements might be made short since the noon hour was shorter than usual and we couldn't afford to lose any time. Expectations were high and the pictures certainly were not disappointing. The scientific fog fighting weapon was awesome in its ability to show man's struggle to pit himself against the elements.

Announcements were as follows:

Scott Denton reported that the tea dance had helped out to a great extent and that money was still needed for the "Elevator."

The cadets according to Mr. Shiels, made a very good show of themselves last year being considered one of the best outfits in the district. The band was made special mention of. Mr. Shiels will open officers' training classes for all interested some time this week.

The rugby teams are getting into full swing but are in need of sweaters. Jimmy Watson's plea to hunt up your brother's old school sweaters and cleats should cause some response.

R. J. W.

Girls' Sports.

Your reporter happened to drop in on the first games played after four by the ninth grades. There was something more than slightly terrific bedlam, chaos, call it impetuous uncontrollable emotions on the part of those so young if you will but it sure smashed the honest to goodness "school spirit" that thing people speak of as though it were some far-off haunting spectre of the distant past.

A suggestion if you don't mind but did any of you notice the rather snappy looking cheer-team Albert College produced at the rugby game. Much as you'll probably hate it you'll have to admit that it sure added to the general atmosphere won't you! Well believe me a gang of those invigorated, intensley interested, wide awake kids would sure put Albert to shame. How about it? Why not get something started?

Now for the games of the past week. Starting with Monday the 15th there was one game in the 13th grades between the two A teams which resulted in Agnes Hinchcliff's players having the winning score of 29-8 over Ruth Palmer's team.

In the noon game Jean Flintoff's 11B team went down to B. Hetherington's 11A team with a final score of 33-17. After four 11A was again victorious over 11B team the score being 28-15.

Amy Fry's team had the higher score of 28-14 over 10A and 10B was the winner by 16 points in the game against 10A who scored 12 points.

On the 16th Lois McLean's team made a successful comeback and that under the handicap of playing with only six men. There was a slight mix up about the score of the first game so it was played over again with 12B this time raising their score to 27-12 over 12C. 11B during the same noon hour overcame 11C, 28-16.

THOREZ LEADING

MAURICE THOREZ

GEORGES BIDAULT

LEON BLUM

Maurice Thorez is leading in the French elections with 142 seats, trailed by Georges Bidault with 140 seats and Leon Blum with 133 seats. A Communist-De Gaulle coalition is considered likely.

10C was again victorious this time with a score of 25-9 over 10B.

Since the rugby game stopped nearly all activity in the girls' gym there was only one game played on Wednesday and that was between 9D and 9E with Carolyn Rickett's 9E team having the higher score of 13-7.

All the rest of the 9th grade games for this week were played on Thursday and the gym must still be vibrating from such a show of raucous enthusiasm. The girls not only had their pals who weren't playing out to root for them but all the boys were there, too — now that's "spirit".

After four 9F had the winning score of 20-7 over 9-E; 9C was victorious in the game with 9A, score 11-9, and 9D had the higher score of 14-5 over 9C.

Executive Chosen.

This is probably old stuff to you now since Miss Morton has had it posted on the bulletin board for the past week but the executive for the Girls' Athletic Club was chosen for the year.

President—Lois Flindall.
Vice President — Marg. Taylor
Secretary — Barb Millar
Treasurer — June Matthews.

Boys' Sports

On Wednesday the B.C.I. Juniors tacked a 12-1 setback on the Albert College squad. The game was played in front of a record crowd and both schools were well represented. The B.C.I. routers turned out in great numbers and easily out-yelled the supporters from Albert. Every member on the B.C.I. squad turned in their best efforts and as usual the "Strahan sneakers" came through for the winning touch-downs.

The next game will be played on Wednesday at Albert and the Collegiate juniors are out to make it two in a row so come out and cheer our boys to victory.

In last week's inter-form games, 9H, 10G, 9A, and 11C came through with wins.

House league basketball is well under way now, and so far very few supporters have turned out to watch these games. These boys are the future juniors and seniors of the school and they deserve all the encouragement that we can give them so how about attending the games next week? They are held in the boys' gym right after school is dismissed at 4.

Red Cross Announcements

The first regular meeting of the Junior Red Cross was held at Miss Dwyer's apartment on Monday, Oct. 15 at four thirty. The following officers were elected for the year.

President, Eleanor Newman, Vice President, Lois Greenleaf; Secretary, Lois Batchelor; Treasurer, Audrey Stewart; Press Reporter, Dorothy Ray; Wool Convenor, Marion Conklin.

The next meeting will be held in room 219 on Oct. 29. A report will be read in assembly of all the work done during the war years. Miss Dwyer served a very delicious lunch and everyone left for home feeling very interested in this worthwhile work.

Play Progress

The play, under the direction of Miss Merry, is coming along fine. The play is scheduled for sometime in the middle of November. So all you people in the school start and spread the news to the ticket buyers. Don Beavis is getting to like his part better every day now the farther he goes in the book the more he gets to like it. I wouldn't for the love of me miss this play and see Lover Boy Beavis make the girls swoon and croon. Did anyone in the audience ever read "Indians Love Lyrics" well go to Don Beavis he knows all about them! The kids in the play are really working hard and deserve a great deal of credit for their work. Jimmie Watson has a very nice part in the play, he is sort of a sucker for Beavis.

Well don't forget to get your seats early and spread the good news about the play coming sometime in November.

Our National Debt

To all our country's heroes,
Our praises we bestow
But to the Merchant Navy
Some praise we surely owe.

The part they had to play was hard
But well we find it done.
For no matter what the danger
You'll find they'll never run.

Then our Army and our Air Force
To the place where'er they were
It was through the Merchant Navy
That supplies were always there.

And when our Allies came to find
On us they all relied
It was through those valiant heroes
They came to be supplied.

When at last the victory came
Of praise the heroes boast
But remember the Merchant Navy
To them we owe the most.

Tighter Control Over Firearms Is Suggested

Ottawa, Oct. 23 — (CP)—The suggestion was made in the Commons last night that the Federal government tighten control over firearms in the possession of individuals.

R. W. Gladstone (L — Wellington South) raised the point and read reports in yesterday's newspapers of three fatalities, one of which he said was the second to occur in Ottawa in which "a souvenir gun was the cause of death"

G. K. Fraser (PC — Peterboro West) called attention to an order-in-council tabled last week under which Royal Canadian Mounted Police would hand back to individuals weapons taken in a round-up just after the outbreak of war.

Acting House Leader Mackenzie agreed more adequate controls were needed and said he would draw the matter to the attention of Justice Minister St. Laurent.

An Auspicious Beginning

Canada's Ninth Victory Loan, the first to be launched since the return of peace, has been opened auspiciously and the word from every part of the country is that of optimism and confidence in the success of the drive which it is hoped will be the greatest of the loans so far floated. One of the choicest bits of news in connection with the opening was that of R.C.A.F. men at Release Centre No. 4, Toronto, assigning gratuity money and assigned pay to put the money into the loan. The services are doing nobly and first day total sales were $77,482,950, a record.

From National Campaign Chairman Graham Towers to the last citizen there is a spirit or assurance of the success of this loan as the purpose of the effort which Canada and all the other United Nations put into the war has been achieved by victory and is on the way to achievement through the program of rehabilitation and of reconstruction. It is a peacetime flotation to bring the utmost results out of the magnificent service which young Canadian men and boys have rendered overseas and in which the people at home strove so tirelessly to achieve victory.

The coming days will bring many encouraging reports. The people reveal an intense satisfaction that the struggle has ended and that their sons have returned and are returning. They want to show their gratitude and what that means is known to everyone. It will show in the grand total at the close of the campaign.

Repatriation Sailings

The work of bringing home Canadians from Europe proceeds apace. Many thousands were brought across on the Ile de France arriving on Sunday and now the Queen Elizabeth has begun the first of her series of repatriation voyages, the present trip bringing no fewer than twelve thousand men who have served in the forces.

Prime Minister King, now in England, looked upon the fact that the Queen Elizabeth will be bringing load after load of Canadians home as an event of the greatest importance and therefore he sent a message of best wishes for safe journeys and expressed regret that he could not share the trip with the returning men.

Every part of the Dominion of Canada is having its fetes these days as the boys and men and servicewomen return and every Canadian is having the opportunity to participate in the welcome extended to these veterans.

New Radio Heating

The world's first exhibition of another revolutionary United Kingdom development — radio heating — was opened in London recently. The new development enables radio energy to heat materials ranging from wood, glue and rubber to the hardest steel, or from powders and chemicals to wool and fabrics. It is based on the principle that radio energy can be passed right through many substances which are poor conductors of heat, and that if the radio currents are large enough, the materials will heat up internally at rates sufficiently high to meet the most rigorous demands. The system was evolved by scientists of leading United Kingdom radio companies during the war for the use of the aircraft industry. In order that the immense production schedules set up in 1940 should be met it was essential that there should be no bottlenecks. Thus, means had to be found of speeding the production of glued aircraft components and other vital parts by heating at much higher rates than those possible by ordinary means. Radio heating, which neither burns nor otherwise spoils surface layers, provided the perfect solution. The new system will play a still greater part in Britain's peacetime industry.

Cost of Health

Of Canada's 1,250,000 wage earner families shown in the census of 1941, about one third were medically indigent because the family income was under $1,000 a year —according to the report of the committee on health of the Canadian Youth Commission.

In 1931, states the report, Canada's health bill amounted to around $193,000,000 (figures to the nearest million.) Of this, about $90,000,000 went to health personnel $70,000,000 on private practice fees and $19,000,000 on salaries.) Hospitals, excluding salaries accounted for some $50,000,000; drugs $51,000,000. About $3,000,000 went for medicine education. The total cost (amounting to some $19 per capita) was spread as follows: private individuals paid 72% in fees for doctors, dentists, nurses, hospitals, drugs; government bodies (federal, provincial, municipal) paid 21% — chiefly grant to hospitals and outlays for public health and sanitation; industry and philanthropy accounted for 7%.

Quoting from "Health Study" (National Committee for Mental Hygiene, Canada, 1939) the Youth Commission report states one tenth of Canada's deaths occur without medical attendance of any kind.

In 1942 Canada had 41,750 patients in mental institutions — more than the number of students enrolled in Canadian universities during normal times — yet in 1942 the normal bed capacity of all Canadian institutions for the mentally ill was overcrowded by 8,427 patients. About 22% of all first admissions to mental institutions suffer from dementia praecox, which appears during, or shortly after adolescence.

The 1942 figures showed 8,070 more beds were required for tuberculosis patients.

Youth is a comparatively healthy period of life — yet of Canada's 1,014,498 enlistees up to January 1944, only 452,348 were fit for front line service.

The committee on health of the Canadian Youth Commission points out that Canadian municipal health departments spend an average of about 51 cents per capita — one quarter of the amount generally set as the standard required to supply a complete public health program.

They Ride in These No More

Armor-plated cars used by Hitler and Goering in their war days serve them no longer and are in the United States to be used in a victory loan campaign soon to be launched. What was used by the two Huns to dominate much of Europe offered protection in not only armor but also in bullet-proof glass, Hitler's car having two-and-a-half-inch-thick glass and Goering's one-inch glass. Today these cars of the aggressor Hitler and Goering serve as trophies of the Allied victory to aid as exhibits of vanished Hun pomp and aggression the cause of rehabilitation and the building of a peaceful world, while their erstwhile owners, are, one believed dead and the other awaiting trial with other Nazis on war criminal charges.

So are the mighty fallen! In such sudden collapse they went down, they had no time to think of armor-plated cars or anything else except their own unenviable plight. Their cars could not protect them, nor could the former might of Nazi power and the boasts of a Hitler in other days.

Two-Way Celebration

We like the way Cpl. Dick Scholet celebrated getting out of the army the other day, says Christian Science Monitor. Dick had been in the Aleutians two years and in Germany six months. Naturally he was glad to get back to Cobleskill — which, in case you are ignorant, is in the foot of the Catskills, in Schoharia County, New York. So he put a double-column ad in both Cobleskill papers which read:

HEY KIDS! ALL KIDS!
I Feel Like Celebrating
Meet Me in the Park at 7:30 p.m. Friday
We'll Eat Ice Cream Cones Until the Ice Cream (Lots of It),
You, or I Give Out.
SEE YOU ALL THERE
Dick Scholet

Cobleskill is not such a big town, but 20 gallons of ice cream were consumed in 500 cones by 150 youngsters that night.

CHILDREN'S CHOICE

If it weren't for the children, who like him,
  That bark-stealing rabbit I'd shoot.
To death with a golf club I'd strike him,
  But the youngsters insist he is cute.

I'd work out a quick way to end him,
  For he eats every green thing I raise,
But the children forever defend him,
  However destructive his ways.

I tell them a trap I will get me,
  For that rabbit my garden devours;
And I would, but the youngsters won't let me.
  They'd rather raise rabbits than flowers.

New Canadian Citizenship Act Ready For House

Ottawa, Oct. 23 (CP)—The new Canadian Citizenship Act will automatically give Canadian citizenship—a status which up to now has been non-existent to native-born Canadians, aliens who have taken out naturalization papers and British subjects resident in Canada, State Secretary Martin said Monday.

Mr. Martin told a press conference that under the bill, which he hopes to introduce in parliament Tuesday, the new national status will become effective immediately upon proclamation of the act, which aimed at giving Canada a position in keeping with its place in the world.

While the act will define a distinct Canadian citizenship, it will not affect the status of Canadians as British subjects, a status which they will continue to retain.

It will mean that Canadians in giving their nationality in passports will list themselves as "Canadians" and not as "British subject" as under present regulations.

British subjects resident in Canada at the time of proclamation may forego Canadian citizenship if they wish by making a declaration. However, if they do elect to become Canadian citizens, which would entitle them to voting and other rights; they still retain their status as British subjects, as in the case of all other Canadians.

After proclamation of the bill, citizenship rights will be given to those in these two classes:—

1. Aliens who before entering the country must make a declaration of intention to become Canadian citizens, which in effect would be "first papers," and who after five years apply before a judge for final citizenship papers.

2. British subjects who after five years residence in Canada make application before a judge for citizenship papers. British subjects need not make the preliminary declaration of intention to become Canadians.

The bill will automatically repeal the Nationality Act of 1914 and the Canadian Nationals Act of 1919 and will repeal the citizenship clauses of the Immigration Act. The Immigration Act itself will continue in force.

While giving citizenship to a native-born Canadian—a Canadian born in Canada or aboard a Canadian ship—the act also will give citizenship to a child born overseas of a Canadian parent.

An alien woman who marries a Canadian also automatically becomes a Canadian, although there will be a provision whereby she may retain the citizenship of her own country. However, to avoid cases of "dual citizenship" in which persons retain the rights of two countries, she may not retain both citizenships.

The act will provide that any person who becomes a Canadian citizen and then leaves the country for six years will lose citizenship unless he maintains a "substantial connection" with Canada or registers his intention to return to Canada with a Canadian consular officer or trade commissioner abroad.

This clause will not apply to students, members of the armed forces, public servants or businessmen with interests abroad.

Farmer Novices Will be Helped By British Govt.

By JAMES McCOOK
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 23 — (CP) — An ex-serviceman who decided to take up farming in the United Kingdom has the advice of the government that he better ask his wife first and also make sure he realizes it is not an easy way to make a living.

The wife being willing and the husband determined the fields are his way to happiness, the government will not only encourage but assist.

Under a vocational training scheme the Labor Ministry has issued a booklet on farmworkers and farming pointing out the assets and drawbacks of the farmer's life for those who consider going on the land now the war is over.

The typical farmer with from 50 to 70 acres and a dozen cows as his chief source of income might expect to make on the average about £3 ($13.50) weekly before the war and this income rose during the war. The Ministry said it was anticipated the average farmer would do better than £3 a week in the future.

The male farm worker's minimum wage almost doubled during the war and now is £3 10s ($18.25) a week, while skilled workers such as cowmen receive much more. Rents are small for the agricultural worker and milk and some other foods usually are provided free or at reduced rates.

The government has undertaken to provide training and practical experience for suitable men and women from the services who wish to engage in agriculture.

Allowances paid men living at home while in training are £3 ($13.50) a week, with women receiving £2 7s ($10.35). Those training away from home are granted £1 15s for men and women £1 5s.

SCIENTIFIC NEGLECT OF MINOR WOUNDS

I hope, my dear children, that you have by now got the antiseptic nonsense out of your heads. Lest you still imagine the application of antiseptic lotions, salves and the like promotes healing of a wound, it may be well to state here a few specific facts which no physician or surgeon will have the temerity to dispute, in the opinion of the one-horse-and-buggy doctor who conducts this column. If any physician or surgeon of standing is in any doubt at all about this I'll be grateful for his or her view and of course I'll make no allusion to what such a colleague may say to me about it without first submitting anything I propose to say here for his or her approval.

One fundamental principle of good surgery and good home treatment of wounds of any degree is difficult for the ordinary layman, the practical nurse and the well-meaning but untrained neighbor or by-stander to learn: scientific neglect.

Probably you won't believe it, but having talked myself into this awkward situation I may as well make the best of it and say that, as nearly as I can learn (and don't forget I'm a plodding old horse-and-buggy doctor), once a wound, surgical or traumatic (accidental) is clean, free from disease-producing germs, it will heal best if not disturbed or tampered with for a week, more or less.

That is only one part or feature, of scientific neglect. Don't handle, tamper with, put "healing" salves or lotions on, or change the first aid dressing of the wound for several days, unless some complication arises and then leave it to the judgment of the doctor.

This scientific neglect does not mean that the wound should not have rest, whether that involves rest of the entire body or rest of the part injured, as in splints. Often the use of adhesive plaster straps or collodion gives this desirable rest to a wound or sore or fissure, as of the face or about the mouth.

Even if the dressing used on the wound be surgically sterile and the doctor or nurse trained in surgical asepsis, the merest disturbance of the injured tissues attending the change of dressings must be reckoned a setback to the healing process. That is the reason why, after a delicate skin grafting operation, for instance, the original dressing is left undisturbed for a week or more.

Proper treatment for pain, burning, smarting, feeling of tension or throbbing in a wound is strictly a problem for the physician and should never be left to the judgment of any one other than the physician.

In all ordinary circumstances, if a physician is not available, the safest course is a single application of Mild Tincture of Iodine U. S. P. (best poured on from the vial), and then a covering with any freshly ironed cloth or a pad of sterile gauze (cheesecloth) or sterile cotton (incorrectly called "medicated" cotton) which may be held in place with bandage, adhesive plaster straps or gentle pressure with fingers or hand until bleeding stops or a physician can treat the wound.

So Your Stomach Can't Take it

Until I was past thirty I never knew what stomach trouble or so-called indigestion meant. But for the past ten years I have had almost constant trouble from what some doctors call ulcer and others just hyperacidity.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What is meant by "dry farming?"

Dry farming is the raising of crops on arid or semi-arid lands without irrigation.

It consists of crop rotation, preparing and tilling the soil in such a manner as to make use of all available moisture, and raising drouth-resistant plants.

Twenty inches or more of rainfall is considered adequate for ordinary farming in temperate climates. Other factors, however, must be considered. An annual rainfall of less than 20 inches — even as little as ten inches — may be sufficient to grow abundant crops if it comes at the right time of the year.

Dry farming is usually practised where the yearly rainfall is less than twenty inches, a condition that makes special methods of moisture conservation necessary.

Irrigation or the artificial application of water to the land is not part of dry farming.

"Dry farming," says the U. S. Department of Agriculture, "has probably been practised ever since the dawn of civilization in semi-arid regions on every continent in the world. Modern dry farming is simply applying modern scientific methods and implements to the ancient problem of coercing nature into producing large quantities of plants suitable for human food in semi-arid regions where under natural conditions only relatively small quantities of plants suitable for the lower animals are produced. Conservation of the scanty rainfall for producing crops is the object sought. Crop rotation, tillage methods and the adaptation of crop plans to semi-arid conditions are the means employed."

TROOPS AND JAP P.O.W. TO WORK IN SINGAPORE

Singapore, Oct. 23 (CP)—British troops and Japanese prisoners went to work on Singapore's wharves unloading ships Monday as the vast majority of the port's dock workers continued an unauthorized strike protesting current wage-scales and avowing sympathy with the Indonesian independence movement.

Representatives of 72 Singapore labor unions, meanwhile, held a meeting at which they presented a series of demands to the British military administration—including the release of 10 union members arrested by police and an apology from the police officer who allegedly mistreated the union president.

First Cavalry Division military police stand guard over $6,000,000 worth of seized silver and platinum which was part of the $300,000,000 treasure uncovered in the Tokyo imperial mint. Seized by Allied authorities, the treasure is being held pending disposition instructions.

Associate Editor, Ottawa Citizen, Dies Suddenly

Ottawa, Oct. 23—(CP)—Ernest William Harrold, associate editor of the Ottawa Citizen and writer of the widely-read Saturday column "Diary of Our Own Pepys," died suddenly at his home here last night of a heart seizure. He was 56.

Mr. Harrold had been associated with the newspaper since he first came to Canada in 1913 from England and was a recognized art critic and authority on drama and motion picture films.

A native of Warwickshire, he began his journalistic career with the Cardiff Daily Mail. On his return from the First Great War, in which he served with the Royal Canadian Artillery, he rejoined the Citizen and readers became familiar with the initials "E.W.H." beneath editorials after his appointment as associate editor in 1923.

He began his "Pepys" column in 1930 and it immediately won a place in public regard for its warm, rambling, dryly humorous style.

Aside from his interest in art as a critic, Mr. Harrold collected paintings and did occasional work as an illustrator.

In the theatrical field, he was instrumental in founding the National Film Society and his wide experience won him appointment as a regional adjudicator for the Dominion Drama Festival.

Among those paying public tributes were Senator Charles Bishop, former chief of the Southam newspapers' Ottawa Bureau and long associated with Mr. Harrold, and H. O. McCurry, director of the National Art Gallery.

Senator Bishop said he was "a gifted writer with a broad field of experience, a splendid critic of the fine arts and literary appraisal" and was interested in "any cause which makes for human betterment."

"All his writings reflected the genial philosophy of a cultured mind," and his death would be "a great loss to the Citizen and Canadin jouralism."

H. O. McCurry, director of the National Art Gallery, said he was "an art critic of distinction and excellent judgment. In the 25 years or more he has been reviewing art at the National Gallery or elsewhere he has done incalculable work for Canadian art."

Surviving are his widow, a son, Philip, in the Royal Canadian Navy, and two daughters, Sylvia and Julia, at home.

HELD BY REBELS

General Eleazar Lopez Contreras, former president of Venezuela (shown) is one of the prominent persons seized and being held as hostage by rebel forces which upset the government of President Isaias Medina. General Contreras, who is a presidential candidate in the forthcoming April elections, was seized in the brief but bloody revolt in which 400 persons were killed in the fighting in Caracas, capital of the South American Republic.

URGES WEST INDIAN UNIT

London (CP)—A note addressed by the colonial secretary to the governors of Bahamas, Barbados, British Guiana, British Honduras, Jamaica, Leeward Islands, Trinidad and Windward Islands, suggested the possibility of a West Indian federation. The object would be to speed development of a self-governing unit within the British Commonwealth.

Iranian Premier Resigns Office

Tehran, Oct. 23 (AP)—Premier Muhsin Sadr resigned today as head of the Iranian government but consented to hold office at the request of the Shah until a new cabinet can be formed.

Sadr had served since last June 7, when the government of Premier Hakainis fell.

Earlier Monday parliament heard Foreign Minister Sepahbodi say the Allies had agreed to withdraw all troops from Iran by March 2, 1946, in accordance with the Tripartite Treaty.

EXTRA PROPELLER FOR STEADINESS

Glasgow (CP)—A ship with five propellers to be built on the Clyde if experiments with models are satisfactory.

The fifth propeller, placed between the port and starboard propellers, would be designed to give speed but the main purpose would be keeping the vessel on an even keel in rough seas.

Can,t Beat Book

London, Oct. 23 (CP)—A young Lieutenant, promoted Captain, noticed that the date of his promotion as it appeared in the "London Gazette" was April 1, 1041, instead of 1941, and applied to the paymaster for allowances dating back to the year 1041.

Weeks later he received this reply:

"Your application... has been found to be in order under King's Regulations and your account accordingly has been credited with the sum of £39,999 ($179,937)...

"Your letter proves conclusively that you are the sole officer surviving from the Battle of Hastings, where 20,000 horses of an estimated value of £2 ($9) each, were lost by negligence.

"Under King's Regulations the responsibility for payment of £40,000 therefore falls upon you. I have accordingly adjusted your account to the extent of a net debit of £1."

A war office official who told this story says there is a moral in it for every soldier—you can't beat the book.

WRITER'S FANTASY TICKLES BLUENOSE SENSE OF HUMOR

Truro Columnist Builds Dream Boats, Drills Molasses Wells in War Against Absurdities

Truro, N. S. (CP)—Dream ships sail regularly through the gently-rolling, wooded hills of Colchester county between Truro and Kemptown under the flag of the Brown Star Line, only steamship company in the world originated, owned and operated by one man. That the giant ships use the canoe-sized, meandering Salmon river for the 12-mile trip is a tribute to the out-size imagination of the owner, Edwin Sherdlou.

The imaginary line is one of the things W. B. Foster dreamed up 10 years ago when, a solidly respectable editorial writer on the Truro Daily News, he got tired of trying to instruct a cock-eyed world through the medium of editorials and turned to fantasy in a column called "Olio." The name Edwin Sherdlou is quite sensibly explained by the fact that Etaoin Shrdlu—the result of running one's fingers down a linotype keyboard—sounded too foreign.

Since Edwin Sherdlou was born in 1935, Foster, a smiling, balding fiftyish man with a puckish sense of humor has never ceased to war with belly laughs against the absurdities of modern life. With elfin imagination and sometimes bitter wit, Sherdlou has tilted with radio commentators, writers with a tendency to overwork platitudes and his favorite target, the Canadian Senate. At the same time he has dabbled in molasses wells, hair-oil factories that make Browntop Hair Tonic for the Egyptians and Patagonians, square turnips, buying the Normandie for the Brown Star Line and politics.

Long read with real enthusiasm by Maritime literary pundits, Sherdlou's comments on income tax, Senate reform and other matters of national interest have been widely quoted across the Dominion.

Has Rubber Stacks

Mainstay of the column is the dream ship Marigold. This ship, which has become so real to readers that it is nothing unusual to see them gazing at the Salmon with puzzled expressions, is powered by electric eels and has rubber smoke stacks that bend for low bridges.

Rubbing elbows on her decks are real and imaginary characters who keep readers puzzled as to which is which. For instance, Jim Graham really lives in the town of Truro but when readers see him quoted as a director of the steamship line they find it difficult to distinguish him from Here McSnuffy, an imaginary little guy whose best feat was a 27-day hunger strike, in an effort to get named to the Senate.

Most readers know that Sid Parker is a fellow townsman despite the fact that he allegedly grows macaroni, keeps hanging gardens at Londonderry Station and has perfected a seedless, perennial pumpkin. But they may be a trifle confused by the fact that while Sterling Purdy is a solid Truro businessman he also is vice-president of the Line and has signs in his office advertising the service.

Little wonder that an agricultural expert once wrote Sherdlou to find how macaroni was grown and that Mr. Purdy often has to discourage prospective trippers on the Salmon river run.

Sister ship of the Marigold is the only hair-oil tanker in the world, the Empress of Parrsboro, last reported steaming up the Nile to save the thinning locks of the descendants of the men who built the pyramids. Also part of the Sherdlou holdings are a molasses well which was closed by the Prices Board because it threatened to upset the sweets rationing program, a razor blade factory employing the freighter Montezuma and the Hotel Coronado, a 12-storey affair towering over Kemptown, population just over 500.

Feuds Come First

Poetry, fiction, fantastic oddities and feuds all have their place in the column—always accurately headed "reading time 2 minutes, 13 seconds"—but the feuds seem to come first in Sherdlou's affections. His special targets are radio commentators specializing in neighborly news. He quotes in detail the proud comments of roosters and hens praised by the radio men.

The molasses well was one of his most successful creations until the Prices Board stepped in to cap the gusher. However, directors are still selling unrationed sugar shale from the surrounding land.

One of his latest invention is an unique theatre aboard the Marigold. This picks up technicolor motion pictures from all over the world by a tower catching impressions carried on mysterious wavelengths.

A pet project of Sherdlou's ranking next to getting Herc McSnuffy named to the Senate and having Royal Commissions abolished, is to have negotiable Senate seats. They would be up for sale to the highest bidder. He also has a new name he wishes parliament would adopt for itself — "Duparlact," derived from the Russian "dumatj" to think, the French "parler" to talk and the English "act."

Traditional signing off paragraph is a variation of "and while the whistle of the Marigold echoed through the hills, a million barbers rubbed oil into the thinning locks of their customers." No one, not even Sherdlou, has figured out the significance but he figures it is as good a way to end as any.

Prussian Claims He Was in Church At Time of Shooting

Luenburg, Germany, Oct. 23—(CP)—Otto Kulessa, Prussian defendant in the Belsen war crimes trial accused of shooting prisoners at the concentration camp, testified on Monday "I was in church" at the time.

The 53-year-old guard had been growing a Hitlerian mustache for a week, and he tweaked it proudly as he gave the evidence he hopes will save his life.

Kulessa told the British military court that the shootings of April 2 of which he was accused were impossible for "at that time I was attending Easter church services at Nordnausen"—at a concentration camp several hundred miles from Belsen.

Kulessa—on trial with 44 others including "the Beast of Belsen," Josef Kramer—swore he arrived at Belsen with 5,000 prisoners a few days before the British army captured the place.

The trial entered its sixth week today, and there was some prospect the procedure might be quickened so the cases could be ended within another two weeks. Thus far only 16 of the 45 defendants have testified.

WEDDINGS

BATEMAN—BIRD

St. John's Anglican Church, Madoc, Ont., was the scene of a very pretty wedding on October 17, at 12.30 noon, when Arlie Jean Bird, eldest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Bird, was united in marriage to Burrell Grant Bateman of Eldorado, only son of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth K. Bateman. Mr. William Robertson officiated at the ceremony. Wedding music was played beautifully by the organist, Mrs. James Aylesworth. The soloist, Mrs. Robert McCoy, of Madoc, sang "The Sunshine of Your Smile" during the signing of the register.

Given in marriage by her father the bride was gowned in a lovely white satin brocade, with moulded basque and full skirt with a slight train and long pointed sleeves. Her embroidered silk veil was caught by a headdress of satin brocade and she carried a bouquet of white and red roses with maidenhair fern.

Madeline Bird, Toronto, only sister of the bride was maid of honor, attired in sky blue corded silk floor length gown with flowing skirt of matching silk net. Her shoulder-length veil of pink was caught with a headdress of pink and blue velvet. She wore matching gloves and carried a nosegay of roses and 'mums with pink streamers.

Shirley Pigden, bridesmaid, was pretty in midnight blue taffeta floor length dress with fitted bodice and full skirt, with a matching veil caught with a headdress of blue taffeta and velvet flowers, and long white lace gloves. She carried a nosegay of Talisman roses and 'mums with white streamers.

At the home of the bride's parents, the bride's mother received in a dress of turquoise blue crepe with black accessories and a corsage of Talisman roses. The groom's mother assisted wearing fuchsia crepe with silver fox furs and black accessories, and wore a corsage of Johanna Hill roses. The bride's two grandmothers attended, the wedding, Mrs. Henry Lloyd wearing a black dress with white trimmings, and black hat and gloves. Mrs. Robert Bird wore a printed crepe dress with black hat and gloves. Also attending were the groom's grandparents, Mr. and Mrs. Hyland, Napanee. Mrs. Hyland was becomingly attired in black.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes for their honeymoon in the United States, the bride donning a lime-green wool suit, with matching coat and black accessories and a corsage of American Beauty roses.

BARKER—GREEN

Marmora, (Special.) —A military wedding of local interest took place in St. John's Anglican Church, Merrow, Guildford, England, on September 13, when Lieut. N/S. Ellenore H. Green, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. L. R. Green, of Marmora, was united in marriage to James Royal Barker, R.C.A.S.C., son of Mrs. John M. Barker, of Cooksville, Ont., and the late Mr. Barker.

The ceremony was performed by the rector, Rev. E. O. Ware and wedding music was played by Miss Mavis Battersea.

The bride was wearing her uniform and a veil and corsage of pink carnations. She was attended by Lieut. N/S. Neta Hearn of Kelwood, Man., also wearing uniform and veil and corsage of red carnations. The bride was given in marriage by Mr. Arthur Allen, of Farnborough, Hants, England.

The groomsman was Mervin McConnell, of the Auxiliary Forces, of Y.M.C.A., C.A.O., brother-in-law of the groom.

On leaving the church, a good-luck token was presented the bride and groom by little two-year old Baby Brice.

Mr. and Mrs. L. Brice, of Merrow, friends of the young couple, gave a luncheon in their honor.

PORTER—HATTON

Stirling, (Special.)—Standards of pink and white chrysanthemums and Autumn leaves decorated Sherbourne Street United Church, Toronto, on Saturday, October 20, for the wedding of Betty Eleanor Hatton, only daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford I. Hatton, Stirling, and Sqdn.-Leader Chas. Husband Porter, D.F.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. C. E. Porter, of Weston, Ont. Capt. A. M. Laverty officiated. Mr. G. D. Atkinson was at the organ and Miss Ruth Bromley sang "The Lord's Prayer" and "Perfect Love".

The bride, given in marriage by her father, was lovely in a traditional white satin wedding gown fashioned with a sweetheart neckline and tight fitting bodice. The full ballerina skirt ended in a small sweep and a wreath of pearls caught her finger-tip veil. She carried white chrysanthemums and bouvardia and wore pearls, the gift of the groom.

Mrs. E. Beamish, as matron of honor, and Miss Jacquelin Moynes as bridesmaid, were gowned alike in dresses of Oriental flame with feathered headdresses of black and flame. Both carried cascades of Sweetheart roses and sweetpeas.

Mr. John Porter was groomsman and the ushers were Flt. Lt Stewart May, Sqdn.-Ldr. L. Wells, Mr. Cecil Baker and Mr. Robt. L. Hatton.

To receive at Sherbourne House Club, the bride's mother chose a becoming gown of pencil blue with French cerise sequin trimming. She wore a cerise hat, stone marten furs and a corsage of American Beauty roses. The groom's mother wore a tulip frock with matching hat and silver fox furs and corsage of Better Time roses.

For travelling the bride changed to a mist grey suit, topped with a three-quarter length coat with wide cuffs of squirrel. Her accessories were brown with an off-the-face hat and carried an apricot rose corsage.

The couple will honeymoon in Ottawa, Montreal and Quebec and on their return will reside in Toronto.

WATSON—ENGLISH

Autumn leaves, foliage and lighted candles formed a most picturesque setting on Saturday, October 20, at two o'clock in Thomasburg United Church, when Ana Josephine, elder daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Matthew English was united in holy matrimony to George Lorne Watson, son of Mr. and Mrs. George Watson, of Harold, the Rev. Bernard Heywood officiating.

The bride, entering the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Wedding March played by Mr. Fred Porter, was attired in a floor-length gown of white satin and net. The bodice was tight fitting with buttoned back, long fitted sleeves and sweetheart neckline. She wore a finger-tip veil and carried a bouquet of Better Time roses, bouvardia and fern.

Miss Margaret English, of Vancouver, B.C., sister of the bride, was maid of honor, wearing pale orchid with shoulder-length veil and carried a nosegay of Briarcliffe roses and white baby chrysanthemums.

Mrs. Morton English, Port Hope, attired in moss green crepe with shoulder-length veil, was bridesmaid. She carried a nosegay of Talisman roses and yellow baby chrysanthemums.

Mr. Don Walker, of Harold, was groomsman and Messrs. Ward and Laird English, brothers of the bride, acted as ushers.

During the signing of the register, "O Promise Me", was very beautifully rendered by Miss Mina Dracup, Harold.

Following the ceremony, a reception was held for seventy guests in Thomasburg I.O.O.F. Hall. The mother of the bride received, wearing an ensemble of fuchsia crepe, black accessories and wore a corsage of Sunbeam roses. The mother of the groom, received in flowered silk jersey and wore a corsage of Talisman roses.

A delicious lunch was served by the Women's Association of the church, the serviteurs being: Marjorie Elliott, Mina Dracup, Alice Heasman, Marion Grills, Alexandra Gilmour, Hilda Burley, Maude Burke and Leona Morton.

Immediately following the reception, Mr. and Mrs. Watson left by motor for Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo, the bride wearing a rose-colored wool suit, blue coat with cream wolf collar and matching accessories.

The groom's gift to the bride was a lovely chest of silver and to the groomsman and ushers, billfolds. The bride's gifts to the maid of honor, and bridesmaid, were earrings; to the soloist, a pin and to the pianist, a key chain.

Guests were present from: Tweed, Corbyville, Frankford, Harold, Belleville, Trenton, Toronto and Buffalo.

BRANT—FOSTER

Mohawk Reserve, (Special.) — Christ Church was the scene of an interesting wedding Wednesday afternoon, Oct. 17, when Miss Lorna Bernice Foster, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Foster, Deseronto, became the bride of Mr. Orval Drummond Brant, son of Mrs. Clayton Brant and the late Mr. Brant.

To the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin, the bride entered the church on the arm of her brother, Pte. Carman Foster, who gave her in marriage. She wore a floor-length frock of white duchess satin with inset of lace forming yoke and top of sleeves, finger-tip veil of silk tulle, and carried an arm bouquet of pink carnations and cala lillies. She was attended by Mrs. Gertrude Spencer, Deseronto, as matron of honor, wearing an attractive street-length dress of shell-pink sheer, with embroidered yoke and belt. She wore a small felt hat and veil of harmonizing shade, and carried a Colonial bouquet of multicolored flowers.

Mr. Roy Brant was groomsman for his brother.

The young couple will make their home in Deseronto. The bridegroom is a veteran of World War II, and recently received his discharge from the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment.

Women's Activities

MT. PLEASANT W.M.S.

Mount Pleasant Woman's Missionary Society were entertained for the October meeting at the homes of Mrs. Frank Smith and Mrs. Herbert Smith, with eighteen in attendance.

The service opened with quiet music played by Mrs. Ross Hoard.

In the worship period Mrs. Bert Jeffs sang a solo, and Mrs. Hoard gave a paper on the theme "Harvest".

The November meeting will be at the parsonage and the members were asked to renew their subscriptions to the Monthly.

The president reviewed the new study book on "Africa".

Mrs. Frank Smith read a selection from the new Blue book.

The offering was gathered in an African basket.

The hostess served dainty refreshments and were thanked for their hospitality.

FRANKFORD EVENING AUX.

The Evening Auxiliary met Friday evening at the home of Mrs. Harry Pierce at Batawa. The President, Mrs. H. Slingerland, opened the meeting with a poem. During the business period it was decided that the November meeting would be held at the home of Mrs. Lackey. Mrs. L. M. Coutts read an Indian translation of the 23rd Psalm. A very interesting talk on the life and work of Walter Currie of Angola, was given by Mrs. Lackey. A vocal duet by Mrs. V. Ott and Mrs. Pierce and a vocal solo by Mrs. B. Patrick were much appreciated. Readings were given by Mrs. J. E. Finnigan, Mrs. F. Ketcheson, Mrs. Harry Montgomery and Mrs. Roy Osterhout. Mrs. Lackey led in prayer. A contest won by Mrs. Finnigan and Mrs. Bennett brought the program to a close. Refreshments were served by the hostesses, Mrs. J. A. Stickle, Mrs. L. M. Coutts and Mrs. Pierce.

WHITE'S W.A.

Mrs. Wm. Yateman was hostess to seventeen members and visitors of White's Woman's Association when a delicious pot-luck dinner was served at noon. Following the dinner the meeting was opened by the President, Mrs. Leonard Young.

A vote of thanks was tendered the ladies who so kindly collected funds throughout the neighborhood in place of the usual fowl supper. It was decided to exchange Christmas gifts at the December meeting, while the annual meeting will be held in November this year. There were two donations to the "Birthday Box" and a "Happy Birthday" was sung to both ladies.

Mrs. Yateman was thanked for opening her home for the dinner, and for the quilting which was started in the morning. Following the meeting donations made by Mrs. Jeffery and Mrs. Young were sold to the highest bidders.

4TH SIDNEY W.M.S.-W.A.

The W.M.S. and W.A. held their October meeting at the home of Mrs. Geo. Read on Wednesday afternoon.

Mrs. H. Gray, president, presided over the first part of the W.M.S. meeting.

Mrs. H. Hillis assisted in introducing the new Study Book on Africa.

Mrs. E. Phillips, president of the W.A. was leader for the closing worship and then continued with the business of the W.A. It was decided to resume the regular Wednesday afternoon quiltings for Red Cross. Mrs. A. B. Woods invited the ladies to hold their next meeting at her home when the W.A. will serve afternoon tea at the close of the W.M.S. meeting. An invitation was accepted from Mrs. 'Bert' Wright to hold a W.A. quilting at her home in November.

GASOLINE FOR WAR

It is estimated that an average of one gallon of gasoline per day was needed for every soldier engaged in offensive operation.

C.G.I.T. Rally For District Held At St. Andrew's

One hundred and sixty C.G.I.T. girls from Belleville, Marmora, Wellington, Picton, Trenton and Newburgh, met together at a rally in St. Andrew's Church on Saturday. Betty Wilson presided over the morning session and Lois Greenleaf over the afternoon session. Holloway Street Church, C.G.I.T., were in charge of the registration. New ideas for projects were presented by Mrs. Arnold Dilts. Outdoor recreation was under the supervision of Miss Laura Harrison and a lively sing-song was led by Mrs. Dilts. Wellington C.G.I.T. led in worship and a group from Grace United Church, Trenton, introduced the mission topic for the year in a dramatization. A skit portraying the evolution of the C.G.I.T. uniform was presented by a group from Bridge Street Church. Mary Potter and Lois Greenleaf, Camp Councillors from Belleville, gave reports of the 1945 Camp Council at Stoney Lake.

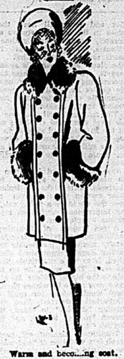
Miss Isabel Morton and Mrs. L. Buck led discussion groups on 'Etiquette"; Miss Irene Moore and Miss Ann Nicholson on "Books"; Miss N. P. Merry on "Vocations", Miss Rachel Fox on "The Stranger in Our Midst", and Mrs. A. Leonard of Picton, gave a demonstration of project work with puppets.

The rally ended with the forming of a friendship circle and the singing of "Taps". The rally was under the sponsorship of the Belleville Girls' Work Board.

IN DIPLOMATIC POST

She will be in charge of women's affairs and will act as liaison with women's organizations and social welfare groups in the U. S. She is 51 and is experienced in government work, having served in the British ministry of labor during the war years.

Fall Formula



Warm and becoming coat.

By VERA WINSTON

SLIM, STRAIGHT and boxy is the formula for this warm little coat, nice for late fall into winter. It is made of taupe woollen and is double breasted from neck to hem. It has a neat collar and cuffs of natural otter, that beautiful rich brown fur that is returning to favor after many years. The coat can be worn as a suit with a slim, straight matching skirt.

Holloway Y.P.U.

On Monday, October 23, the young people met to worship and to enjoy the program prepared and conducted by the Missions group. Ray Gunsolus and Velma Thompson led the group in worship with Margaret Hillis assisting at the piano.

The theme "The Church's Ministry of Healing" was outlined by Mrs. William Oliphant with special reference to medical missions in India.

There were nine new members present—a record number. They were welcomed by the President, Maude Burke. Announcements were made regarding the District Young Peoples' Rally to be held shortly in Tabernacle United Church.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Oct. 23—(CP)—Because he was misinformed of bus times Flt. Lt. Tom Piddington of Victoria, B.-C., was able to save the life of eight-year-old Raymond Stewart of Fort William, Scotland.

With an hour to wait, for the next transport Piddington strolled down to the local ferry and promptly saw a small boy struggling in the water.

"I dived in and when I reached the kid he was so full of water he couldn't utter a sound," said Piddington who was spending his leave in Scotland. Apparently the boy fell off the wharf while fishing.

Three Canadians flying one of the first R.A.F. aircraft to land at Saigon spent six whirlwind days as heroes in the liberated Indo-China capital. The jubilant city lived up to its reputation as the "Paris of the East" and all doors were open to the visiting fliers.

The Canadians were Flt. Lt. R. B. Thomson of Toronto, Flt. Lt. Edward Gebeau of Dacre, Ont., and FO. Vincent Horncastle of Edmonton. Their plane was damaged in landing, and repairs took six days.

The airmen checked in at a swank continental hotel, were immediately overwhelmed with invitations, saw the city as guests of French officials, received a mass welcome from the Chinese population, and were loaded down with gifts.

A little thing like rain never worried the R.C.A.F. Husky transport squadron in the thousands of hours it has flown since formation a year ago—and it was not allowed to interfere with the squadron's first formal parade in Brussels.

Occasion was the official presentation of the squadron's crest, recently approved by the King. Air Commodore W. Whitey Straight, Air Officer Commanding R.A.F. Transport Command's No. 46 Group, presented the crest to Wing Cmdr. J. A. Sproule of Toronto, C. O. of the Huskies.

"Omnia Passim" — "Anything anywhere"—is the apt motto which flanks the picture of a Canadian husky dog on the squadron's new crest. In the past year 437 Squadron has flown everything from top-priority passengers to delicacies for Mr. Churchill's Potsdam dinner.

"I am proud of you in 46 Group" said Air Commodore Straight when he presented the crest. "You have been a credit to the Royal Canadian Air Force."

Following the presentation, Wing Cmdr. Sproule turned over the squadron to a new commanding officer, Wng Cmdr. A. R. Holmes of Winnipeg. Wing Cmdr. Sproule is now in Britain as Wing Commander Aperations with the new R.C.A.F. Transport Wing.

MIRACLES of MAKE-DO

There will not be enough textiles in Canada for many months to come. That is a blunt, uncompromising statement, but it is a fact.

Conservation is the answer. More than ever, the need is to conserve, to take care of what there is, to mend, make-over and make-do.

Thousands of thrifty, fashion-wise Canadian women have already discovered the thrill of designing new clothes from old. This autumn, thousands more are taking the "Make-do Road". Here are four practical, tested ways of styling new and fashionable clothing from an outgrown or out-moded ladies' coat. Patterns are available at the stores.

THIS ADVERTISEMENT IS the third in a series published to assist Canadian women to conserve textiles. For complete information write to Consumer Branch, Wartime Prices and Trade Board, Ottawa, for your copy of "Miracles of Make-do".

TODAY'S MENDING HINT

When buttonholes are stretched and frayed, pick out all worn and ragged stitches, being careful not to pull the hole out of shape as you rip the old stitching. Join new stitching with old, carefully, so that it won't show where the repair is made.

If the entire buttonhole has to be reworked, work buttonhole stitching over gimp or several strands of thread twisted together and waxed.

PEACETIME FORCE

"Because one section of the opposition is not ready that is no reason why the business of the House should be held up," said M. J. Coldwell, leader of the C.C.F.

State Secretary Martin obtained first reading of the Canadian citizenship bill which establishes the status of Canadian citizenship and makes new provisions for naturalization.

The House also passed motions sending proposals for the ratification of the International Labor Office conventions to the Committee on External Affairs.

Too Casual is Claim

Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt (Pc-Vancouver-Burrard) chided Mr. Abbott with being "too casual" in his approach to the formation of permanent defence forces.

"If the Minister impresses others as he impresses me he won't get very many recruits," said Col. Merritt.

The man who won the Victoria Cross at Dieppe said the fact that Canada's military commitments under the United Nations Security set-up had not been determined and the atomic bomb developments were no reasons for delaying decision on the permanent forces. Canada would be responsible for its own defence and should plan its forces now.

If the men were allowed to go out of the services now, because they were not told what the peacetime set-up would be, it would be hard to get them back.

"The whole policy is one of indecision," he said.

King Hazen (PC — St. John - Albert), urged extensive research in the industrial and defence fields. Canada has been too much dependent on other countries for scientific studies.

Hon. Grote Stirling (PC-Yale) also pressed the government for more information on the naval forces, in particular on the types of ships to be kept in the peacetime navy.

Mr. Abbott, who denied that he was "casual" about his job, said it was planned to have two cruisers, two aircraft carriers, a number of destroyers and smaller craft with a total naval personnel of 10,000 of whom 384 officers and 5,625 ratings would serve afloat.

Working on Plans

Committees were working on plans for pay, allowances, pensions, gratuities and terms of service for the permanent branches of the army, navy and air force. A statement would be made before March 21, 1946.

The pay would be "good." Canadians did not want a "cheap force."

No recruiting was being carried on for the permanent forces. The big job was demobilization but an appreciable number of men were coming forward to offer their services for the permanent navy.

Mr. Abbott said Canada's first aircraft carrier, now under construction in Britain, would be available about Jan. 15 and the second about six or seven months later.

Mr. Abbott said Hon. G.G. Power, former Air Minister, had urged that the advisability of having a fleet air arm be considered very carefully. While no separate fleet air arm was yet authorized it was contemplated, said Mr. Abbott.

Russell Boucher (PC — Carleton) raised the question of men who wished to continue in the peacetime services but found that if they did they were unable to obtain immediately their re-establishment and rehabilitation credits. This was particularly hard on married men who wished to use that money to establish their families in homes or on land.

Mr. Abbott said this was a good point which he would refer to the appropriate committee. A man electing to remain in the interim or permanent force did not lose those benefits but it was true that they would be delayed.

Provisions Outlined

Mr. Howe outlined the following provisions, in addition to the increased capitalization, which he said are needed to provide flexibility:—

1. Formation of subsidiary companies controlled by T.C.A. to be authorized. It is contemplated that they would operate the major international services, either with separate companies for each or one for several services.

2. T.C.A. would be given power to acquire and dispose of the stock of such companies although it is intended the T.C.A. should be the sole owner.

3. T.C.A. is also authorized to purchase shares in other companies operating air services, so that operations in countries served by T.C.A. may be facilitated.

4. T.C.A. would be authorized to loan money to new subsidiary companies which would "for example, make it possible for the revenue from paying services to be used, if necessary, as loans to assist in the establishment of new services as required."

5. The Governor-General-in-Council would be authorized to repeal the clause in the existing act which establishes a fixed formula for the charges paid by the Post Office Department for the carriage of air mail leaving the Postmaster - General free to enter a contract with T.C.A. for air mail carriage and rates.

New domestic lines extensions contemplated as mentioned by the minister include a shorter trans-Atlantic service across the Great Lakes, the service from Winnipeg through Saskatoon to Edmonton and services from such United States points as Chicago, Cleveland, Boston, Duluth and Seattle.

Mr. Howe said it was desirable to separate the big international operations from the domestic by putting them in the hands of separate companies because each was different from others as to operating conditions, distances, and types of traffic.

NEW VENEZUELAN

Editor of El Pais, organ of the Democratic Action Party of which he is a leader, Valmore frequently has attacked foreign oil interests in his newspaper, but he gave assurances in an interview he would "respect the rights" of foreign investors.

Valmore is recognized as an outstanding advocate of hemispheric collaboration. He was reported working closely with President Betancourt on sweeping social reforms.

Reaction Favorable.

Valmore said a communication from the American State Department was received by the revolutionary junta today, but he did not disclose its contents. He said he thought hemispheric reaction to the new government would be favorable.

He assailed rumors that the new government presaged a full swing to the Left, adding that "the revolution was a big blow to the Communists, who had been recognized by and gave support to Medina."

The junta governor of the Caracas federal district issued orders today releasing hundreds of prisoners in the city, mostly police who today supported Medina in the brief revolt which cost approximately 125 dead and 350 wounded.

The junta issued a decree last night freezing the funds of all public functionaries with wealth above a certain level and forbidding the sale of their properties. Another decree forbade the seven members of the junta itself from becoming candidates in the presidential elections planned six months from now.

Not Militarist Regime

Aboard the S. S. Magallanes off Venezuela, Oct. 23—(AP)—The Magallanes, 10 days out from the Canaries, arrived today at the Puerto Cabello Naval Base, where we were told by the revolutionary government's navy that the purpose of the new regime is "to oppose all totalitarian governments, both left and right."

Luis Groce, young commander of this Venezuelan naval base, came aboard the Magallanes with Ramon Pardo, civil governor of Puerto Cabello.

"We are anxious for the outside world to understand that the young officers are not intent upon establishing a militarist regime," Groce asserted. "Only two members of the Caracas revolutioary junta are soldier. Five are civilians.

"We are determined to give Venezuela the first free elections in half a century, by April."

Groce disclosed that the young officers of the fleet's island naval base had planned their revolt for half a year. Striking swiftly last Friday, he said they arrested their superiors, including some who were appointees of the dictator Juan Vincente Gomez.

The officers then established contct with the mainland army garrison, and named Pardo, a merchant, the civil governor.

Venezuelan army officers who arrived from Maracay in a jeep today said the communists in Maracay as they did in Caracas battled the revolutionists in the streets, but were swiftly crushed.

Pardo said the revolution had been free of foreign influence.

TRAINER RESIGNS

20,000 Chinese In B.C. Waiting Ships For Home

By KATHLEEN REX
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Vancouver, Oct. 23—(CP)—Many of the 20,000 Chinese in British Columbia are awaiting ships to take them back to China. With the coming of peace, leading Chinese businessmen claim their people want to discover for themselves what has become of relatives "lost" during the 14 years of the Sino-Japanese war.

"Just as in Canada," said Lochman Mah of Nanaimo, B. C., "If you are English you would like to go home and find out what happened to the family you have not heard from in many years, and you must remember China has been at war since 1931, the invasion of Manchuria."

Although Canadian shipping agents say it will be at least a year before they can accept applications, these people don't intend to put off their journey any longer than necessary. "It would be easier for them to travel via Canadian vessels but they will seek American passage if that presents itself first," said W. H. Tsung, assistant to the Chinese Consul in Vancouver.

"I believe that American steamship companies are ready now with ships to leave for the Orient," commented Mor Cheolin of Vancouver, head of the Chinese school of language and a former Shanghai newspaperman.

At least 3,000 of Vancouver's 10,000 Chinese are expected to return to their homeland. Most of them are older people.

While it is rumored several B. C. restaurateurs and laundrymen will soon sell their business to obtain passage money, 30 per cent of the Chinese farmers around Victoria are planning to close their farms, but only while they go on a two or three year

RETURNS TRUE BILLS

Chatham, Oct. 23 — (CP) — A Grand Jury of the Ontario Supreme Court yesterday returned true bills against Harold A. ". . . and someday, WE'LL take a trip!"

SOMEWHERE in the back of your mind, there's that urge to go places. Right now it must be filed under "Future" but it's part of us as Canadians to want to discover for ourselves what the rest of the world is like—to plan for that "some day," when we'll take a trip! That's why it must be part of our planning now, to make sure such pleasant things as trips are possible in the post-war world. And they'll be possible only if we fight against inflation—fight now to keep Canada's dollar worth a full dollar!

Why is NOW so important? Because NOW civilian goods are scarce, money is plentiful. NOW is the time we must guard against paying more than things are worth—against black markets—against buying more than we need, or goods we don't need! NOW is the time we must support rationing and price controls!

Up to the present, we've kept our dollar sound. And we can continue to do so if we keep up a strong, steady fight against inflation!

If we fail in this fight, prices will rise. Wages will never quite catch up. Soon you'll pay, perhaps a dollar for a quarter's worth of goods! And that means your dollar is worth only a quarter! That's inflation.

And after inflation, comes depression. Depression means neither you nor anyone else in Canada will have trips. You'll be lucky if you have a job! So, for our own sakes, for the sake of returned men, for our children, let's never relax our struggle to keep Canada's dollar worth a full dollar!

Make this Pledge Today!

I pledge myself to do my part in fighting inflation:

By observing rationing and avoiding black markets in any shape or form.

By respecting price controls and other anti-inflation measures, and refraining from careless and unnecessary buying. I will not buy two where one will do, nor will I buy a "new" where an "old" will do.

By buying Victory Bonds and War Savings Stamps, supporting taxation and abiding by all such measures which will lower the cost of living and help keep prices at a normal level.

Plastic Surgery

By Commander Matthew Banks, Organizer of the Naval Flying Medical Service

(B. B. C. Press Service)

London, bay mail—For six years you have been reading and listening to tales of "bigger and better bombs;" of how many tons of high explosive were dropped last night on some German city (or, in the earlier years, on us): of doodle-bugs and rockets: and finally, the most awe-inspiring of all—the atomic bomb. For six years, you have contemplated destruction; that is now behind us, and I hope that my story today will be only one of many on reconstruction; it is the story of plastic surgery.

The plastic surgeon was scarcely known in the last war, and in the intervening years was popularly considered mainly as a "face lifter." But the tireless research and experiments of the few interested surgeons have resulted in a perfection of technique which will bring comfort and hope to many thousands of maimed and disfigured men and women, and even children. And the story of the maxille-facial units, as the plastic surgery teams are now called, ranks with the most interesting of this war.

The Maxille-facial unit consists of surgeons, dentists, pathologists, anasthetists, sisters and nurses; and each member must have special training for this work. The type of casualty is essentially one of injury to the face caused by blow or burns, though any part of the body may need plastic surgery, particularly the hands, on which much marvellous work has recently been done.

• • •

There are many more facial injuries in this war than the last for two reasons: 'plane and tank warfare have increased the burns casualties, and improved medical treatment of shock in severe shell wounds of face and head, and in burns, has saved countless lives.

The plastic surgeon is faced with two major problems: he must rebuild what is lost—eyelids, nose, even the whole lower jaw—and repair disfigurement to the best of his abilitp: and he must combat the mental depression so often found in these cases.

The wounded fighting man, soldier, sailor or airman, is proud of his wound, for it is the badge of his heroism: but the man with a facial disfigurement instinctively shrinks from the public gaze, and frequently develops a depression which is just as important from the point of view of treatment as his wound is. It is an unfortunate fact that a few wives and sweethearts have failed their men in this crisis, but the vast majority are only too anxious to love and honor them for their sacrifice, if only they can be given the opporunity. It is the job then, of the medical and nursing staff to bring these men out of themselves, to help subdue their sensitiveness and to face the world again.

The sisters and nurses of these plastic units are the finest in their profession, for the dressing of a burnt face needs skill and gentleness of the highest order; but they also show beyond doubt that they find nothing repulsive in the "boys" disfigurement. The boys themselves are urged to do without covering as soon as the wound permits, and as far as the unit is concerned, no notice whatever is taken of "disfigurement"; plans for reconstruction and comment on progress are discussed openly in front of them, and the man himself is soon taking a pride in his new pieces—eyelids, nose or jaw.

There is no doubt whatever that the general note of cheerfulness and "tom foolery" is far more evident in a plastic ward than in any other, and so the first step in rehabilitation is taken.

The next is more difficult—that of facing relatives and friends and the "world" in general—for they are instinctively on the watch for word or look of distaste on the part of adults, and fright in children. Fortunately, the childish mind reacts naturally, shoving either interest and sympathy or humour.

I want to show you how important it is to get these boys out and mixing with their fellow men at every opportunity. Parties, theatre, cricket, racing—all these help to amuse and interest the man who has many months of hospital attention and countless operations to face. These outings give him a chance to feel "accepted" again, and more than anything else, he wants to be able to feel just ordinary. He wants to talk to a girl and know he is not being avoided; to s it in a crowd and not be stared at: join in a conversation and not be gushed over or sympathized with: in fact, it seems to me that the most important part of our rehabilitation efforts is to teach the public and not the patient.

One of the commonest types of wound of the face is shell or bullet wound of the lower jaw, resulting in great loss of tissue and bone, or possibly the whole jaw. These cases rank among the most serious, and life is only saved by the prompt surgery and resuscitation methods of the advanced units. The surgeon has to combat infection which is ever present in the mouth and throat, and the patient's breathing and feeding requires constant attention during his journey to the base unit. All this time he is being given penicillin by injection every three hours. Even when the wound is quite healed his condition is pitiable—he can scarcely talk, must be fed through a tube, and has no control over saliva.

The work needed to reconstruct a lower jaw entails numerous operations over a long period of time—two or three years—but it can be done, and the perfection of the present technique is due to the tireless efforts of the relatively few plastic surgeons in the past years.

• • •

During World War 1 a young New Zealand surgeon serving with the British Army was impressed with the fact that the man with the severe face wound was a far more pathetic casualty than one wounded in limb or body. He knew that a mangled limb could be made whole again or at worst replaced; but the wounded face, in healing, became even more repulsive—and whoever heard of "replacing a face?" So, for a quarter of a century this surgeon devoted his whole time to the problem of building eyelids, nose, lips; in fact, the whole face, from the patient's own tissues. And he tirelessly encouraged and taught others with one aim—improvement of technique and better results.

Then came World War II, and many thousands of injured men, women and children now have cause to be grateful to this New Zealand surgeon, the true "father of British Plastic Surgery"—Harold Gillies.

But to return to the rebuilding of a lower jaw. First of all, sufficient skin has to be found to replace that lost from the face. It is an unfortunate fact that it must be the patient's own skin, for no-one else's will grow on another person. The problem is to convey it from one place to the other without it dying. This is done by means of a tube pedicle in which a large piece of skin is raised and made into a tube still attached to the body at each end. In about a month's time, when the blood vessels at the ends are strong enough to keep the tube alive, one end is cut away, and sewn on to the wrist. Another month's time, and blood vessels have grown from the wrist so that the tube pedicle can now be freed from the body and sewn on to the face. While waiting for the vessels from the face to grow strong enough, the hand must be firmly strapped to the shoulder. In about another month's time the pedicle can then be removed from the wrist and sewn to the other end of the facial wound. This huge piece of skin is now completely transferred to the face, and is entirely dependent for its blood supply on new vessels coming from the face only. As the essential thing is to get it on to the face without losing any of it by gangrene, due to insufficient blood supply, not much attempt is made to shape it. This can be done later when a good take is assured.

The next step is to give the patient a new jaw bone. This is done by taking a piece of bone from his hip and fitting it into place between the broken pieces.

Thus many months go by with the surgeon ever on the watch for gangrene or infection, particularly by the dreaded streptococcus. Should signs of this occur, as evidenced by swelling, redness, and rise of temperature, a swab is immediately taken and sent to the laboratory; and if "streps" are found, a three or five days course of penicillin is at once commenced. A "course" means the injection into the patient every three hours, day and night, of fifteen thousand units of penicillin that is about half a million units in all—a not very pleasant time for the patient; but the saving of the pedicle is the main thing. Incidentally, when British-produced penicillin was first used in the earlier parts of the war, one hundred thousand units represented a cost of about £80 and my hospital alone uses about twenty million units each month. Later, however, the massed production methods of the Americans brought the cost down.

But that is only one thing plastic surgery has been doing during these past years of war. I have said nothing at all of the marvellous improvements in the present treatment of burns—the example par excellence of "skin grafting;" of how a useful hand is made from one which has lost a thumb, by transferring one of the fingers to the thumb base; of making fingers out of toes, of the way a leg is saved which previously would have been amputated, because several inches of bone had been totally lost with a great deal of soft tissue; of the making of a nose, of making new eyelids—the greatest boon possible to the burnt sufferer whose eyes have become a constant ache through inability to close them.

So war, horrible in itself has brought to the fore a science which will be of untold value to the peacetime casualty. To give only one example: the child, accidentally burnt, will no longer have to face the future disfigured or disabled.

Wellington Nature Lover Seeks To Protect Canada's Wildfowl

Wellington, Ont—(CP)—Once a hunter who slaughtered wild ducks and geese for market, Dayton Murphy became a protector from whose hands the wild waterfowl would eat. For 20 years he has lived among them without breaking the trust.

The 67-year-old nature lover, around whom as many as 200 blue-winged teal have flocked at a time to accept scattered food, says "wild ducks are my pets." So close has been the association he has come to regard them "almost as people."

"When you live among the waterfowl and get to know those old characters and personalities you begin to wonder whether they really differ from people," he said. "In fact, the gentleness of some and the mean traits of others remind us a great deal of some people."

Murphy returned to his birthplace in this Prince Edward County village overlooking Lake Ontario after an accident cut short a career as a high-wire performer on a bicycle. He turned to earning a living by hunting, fishing and working on neighboring farms.

Twice holder of the Royal Humane Association's medal for life-saving, he never has smoked since he first tasted tobacco at the age of 18. A teetotaller, he knows he wouldn't like liquor anyway because he has "smelled the bottles." He bought his last suit of clothes in 1917, wears running shoes and old clothes winter and summer because "if I were to dress up my birds wouldn't know me."

Mix With Poultry

In his years of protecting and caring for the waterfowl, Murphy has inspired them to mix with his poultry and to take food from his lips, yet they remain wild.

One of his prizes was a white-fronted goose, a bird of the far west, which found its way to his colony in 1937 and within a week was eating from his hand. Last year, he said, it came "home with one leg nearly twisted off, probably from a trap," and Murphy had to amputate.

Murphy would like to see the whole area around this village of 1,000 declared a wild-life sanctuary. Three or four people with guns in a few minutes can undo years of work to provide a sanctuary for the fowl, he said.

"Wild ducks are going to require more sanctuaries to survive," he said. "They soon learn where they are protected and will return there year after year."

He sees the average hunter as "just plain killers" without conscience.

"I was a killer once myself, although I called it sport. I think our soldiers coming back from overseas will respect our need for conservation. They have been at both ends of the gun and I hope they will understand the problem facing our wild ducks."

MOVIE SHOWS ARNHEM EPIC

Arnhem, Holland (CP)—A motion picture depicting the airborne landings here a year ago is being made by a British film company (Gaumont British) with 200 airborne men who took part in the original drop among the actors.

The army and R.A.F. are helping in the film and air transports which flew over Arnhem and the Rhine during the war against Germany are flying the airborne soldiers from Britain.

FIGHT AND LEARN

Mombasa (CP)—One of the functions of the East Africa Command's Directorate of Education and Welfare was to assist the native troops in their letter-writing, but, says a recent report, some 70 percent of them are now literate—a striking commentary on Army education.

EFFICIENCY PLUS

Dar-es-Salaam (CP)—East Africa Military Records Fingerprints Bureau is described as a miracle of simplicity. Giving a press interview, an officer called a native soldier who happened to be passing in the street. His fingerprints were taken, and within five minutes the soldier was told his name, age, unit, home village and other details.

TOPPERS OUT

London (CP)—Boys of Westminster School are not wearing the top hats and tail coats long familiar to Londoners. Since the school returned to Westminster after evacuation to Herefordshire, school authorities have decided in favor of grey flannel suits.

War's an untidy, messy business. Cleaning up after war costs money! Seas must be swept of mines ... pestilence and famine must be prevented ... liberated countries must be restored to economic health ... armies of occupation must be paid for.

Here, in Canada, there's a whole lot to be done—for the boys coming home from war—for the fellows still in hospital—for the war-workers requiring peacetime jobs.

Victory Bonds will help us realize our own peacetime objectives. Buy Bonds to speed the clean-up ... to fight inflation ... to provide a nest-egg for yourself and family. Make sure of the necessities of peace, workers of Ontario. Make sure that Labour's magnificent contribution to Victory is matched by the help we give to assure a prosperous peace. To sign your name on a Victory Bond application, helps to complete the Victory.

You want to go on making goods. Somebody has to buy them. Three out of eight Canadian jobs depend on foreign trade. That trade depends on foreign credits—the ability of other countries to buy Canadian goods. Canada needs money to establish such credits, build bigger markets, create more and better jobs.

Every Victory Bond you buy helps to provide work. It fights inflation, too—the worker's deadliest foe. It keeps the wheels of industry spinning ... to make peace prosperous ... to assure jobs for everybody willing to pull his weight.

The workers of Ontario have made a magnificent contribution to Victory—but it is not complete until we help Canada create the sort of peace we want—and mean to have. Lend a hand to Canada. Help make sure of your own peacetime prosperity. Sign on to finish the job. Sign your application for Victory Bonds.

VIC CHRISTIE

WALTER SIROIS

Pictured above are two hale-fellows-well-met who will combine to make the two main bout affair at the Hume Arena, Thursday evening one of the mat classics of the season. They are Vic Christie, popular mat artist who struck a popular note with his performances here on previous occasions and the other is the likeable Walter Sirois, who likewise has a strong following with the faithful in these parts.

Sirois and Christie will divide the main-go honors with those two jumping Jacks of the squared circle, Joe Jackson, and Pat Flanagan, whose last two meetings here produced plenty of mat action.

The card is garnished with a strong preliminary between Sandy O'Donnell, a newcomer to Belleville, and Aaron Stein, a wrestler of more than passing ability. And please remember the date has been changed from Wednesday to Thursday for this week only. The advance sale of tickets is now going strong at Bill Cook's Tobacco Shop. Doors open at 8.15 and the first bout will get under way at 8.45.

N.H.L. Training Notes

(By The Canadian Press)

A chipped bone in the left kneecap will keep hockey's "terrible tempered Mr. Bangs", Pat Egan, out of hockey for at least ten days, Boston Bruins announced last night. Bruins hold their first practice today since switching from Quebec to Boston.

Bill Durnan, Vezina trophy goaltender of Montreal Canadiens who professes he'd rather play softball than hockey, has signed his 1945-46 contract. Hector (Toe) Blake, team captain, signed at the same time.

Bill Ezinicki, who spent the early months of last season with Toronto Maple Leafs, reported to the Toronto Camp at Owen Sound, Ont., from Camp Shilo, Man. Ezinicki will be remembered as the star of Oshawa Generals in junior ranks.

With Sylvanus Apps fitting neatly back into his old centre-ice berth, the Leafs whirled through final practices yesterday before tonight's exhibition game that will virtually close their training camp program here. Apps, working on a line with Nick and Don Metz, showed flashes of the rushing style that kept him at the top of National Hockey League stars for years until enlistment in the army. Ten training days behind the others, however, he appeared to tire fairly easily in first workouts.

Manager Jack Adams, of Detroit Red Wings last night announce dArchie Wilder, 28, veteran left wing who recently completed a four-year term in the R.C.A.F., has been given his outright release. Wilder scored three goals in an exhibition game Sunday.

Signing of five players yesterday raised total contracts held by Detroit Red Wings to 17. The latest to sign were veterans Earl Seibert, Carl Liscombe and Steve Wochy and rookies Fern Gauthier and Gerry Couture. Gauthier comes from Montreal in the deal whereby Canadiens obtained Bill Reay. Couture is a rangy right winger from Saskatoon.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct. 23 (CP)—Everyone remembers Lt.-Gen. George Patton as a fast-talking, hard-hitting military man whose flair for pearl-handled revolvers and newspaper headlines made him a colorful war leader. Few associate the newly-appointed United States 15th army commander with sport, but it is a matter of record that Patton one exercised race horses at Pimlico and attended the occasional hockey game.

From his fondness for hockey stems the latest story about Patton, a story involving a pair of complimentary hockey passes and a 32-cent tax which might never have been paid but for the gesture of a Scottish-Canadian who has reason to remember Patton with gratitude.

As the story is told at the Regina training camp of Chicago's National League Black Hawks, Patton before he was called from retirement to go on active service obtained a pair of complimentaries to one of the Hawk games. With typical gusto, Patton then breezed into the game without paying the usual 16-cent tax due on each ticket.

Publicity man Joe Farrell finally paid the tax. All Patton said was that it was a darn good game. When word reached American newspapermen overseas, Patton was approached and admitted he hadn't paid the tax.

Some time later—April 29, 1945, to be exact—forces attached to Patton's army liberated prisoners in a camp at Moosberg, Bavaria. Among those liberated was Scotty Mèlville of the Regina Leader-Post, then Lieut. Tom Melville of The Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders.

Scotty was pretty impressed when Patton stalked into the prison camp, revolvers swinging at his hips.

So when Scotty got back to Regina and Farrell told him of the outstanding 32 cents, the Scottish-Canadian handed Farrell the money. He figured he owed Patton something for the liberation, and he wasn't going to miss 32 cents.

The story is complete now except for one thing: What's Patton going to say when he hears about it?

Joe Krol sat in the press box Saturday as his new team-mates, Toronto Argonauts of the Big Four, defeated Hamilton Tigers 13-10 on Royal Copeland's 70-yard run in the last three minutes. Recently released by Detroit's pro Lions, Krol says he played only eight seconds with Lions—against Chicago Cardinals.

Chips Off The Sports Block

IN THE BIG TIME

While prospects for major sport in the city are anything but bright, at least three local boys will carry the name of Belleville into the big time in three phases of athletics. Ralph "High Pockets" MacCabe has been signed by the Cleveland Indians baseball club; Vern Goyer is with the Toronto Argonauts football squad and Walt Gerow is with the Tulsa Oilers hockey club.

According to reports from Kingston, Gus Marker, guiding light of the Oilers thinks no little of this boy Gerow. His tricky stickhandling was a feature of the daily workouts down around Kingston way and after watching the young veteran practice for a few days, Marker lost no time in pushing a pen and a contract in front of the youngster.

"Several years ago in Belleville I saw this youngster in action," Mike writes, "and even then he seemed headed for a place in the hockey sun. A tricky stick-handler and game to the core he was good enough to earn a trial with the Belleville O.H.A. senior B team and this despite the fact he had not any experience of any account.

"Gerow came to Kingston recently after many others had failed but Marker quickly selected him as being a player worth watching. The free-wheeling youngster showed Marker that he knows how to beat his check and his timely and accurate passing had opposing defencemen bewildered. This," said Gus, "is too good to be true," and he reached for pen and contract and rushed Gerow into professional hockey.

"Three years ago," Mike writes, "Gerow wasn't very big but now he weighs a lot and is well over 6 feet in height."

Where Mike saw the kid three years ago is more than we can imagine. For about that time he was in Italy assisting Don Thomas and his gang of army softballers to win the Canadian mushball title of that country.

CHURCH BASKETBALL

Previous to the war days, the Ontario Church Basketball Association did yeoman service in character building through the medium of basketball. In those piping days of peace many Ontario centres organized church basketball leagues which were successful in more ways than one.

The O.C.B.A. once more in action is endeavoring to get its pre-war organization under way. It is appealing to the many centres which it feels will be interested in a church loop for local organizations and offers the wide facilities of its experience and knowledge to anyone who might be interested.

O.C.B.A. prexy S. C. Burnes, feels that there is a leader in every community who is interested in the youth of the province and who would be ready and willing to take an active part in this type of public service.

The O.C.B.A. was formed in 1929 and has been in continuous operation. It fills a definite spot in basketball and in church sport activity. All series from bantam to senior for both boys and girls sections are operated. Winners through agreement with the O. B. A. and the L.O.B.A. can enter provincial playdowns.

Belleville has been known as a "city of churches" and the young people of the community, as we know are vitally interested in sport. Anyone wishing to enter teams or form a local church basketball association should get in touch with the O.C.B.A. secretary, Miss Joan Kelly, 13 Aikman Avenue, Hamilton, immediately.

A Generous Gesture

To Eddie Logan of this city goes orchids for a thoughtful and generous gesture. At the Knights of Columbus testimonial banquet to the Columbia Squires, Ontario softball champions last night, Mr. Logan, out of a blue sky, presented each member of the team with a suitably engraved handsome silver miniature of the parent cup. Eddie in presenting the gifts stated that as a boy he had played on a championship lacrosse team and had received nothing by way of commemoration.

"A crest, or a piece of cloth, is all well and good, but a lasting memento of athletic prowess is something that as a boy I would have greatly appreciated. I felt that the Squires would treasure something of a lasting nature and it gives me the greatest pleasure to present these trophies to the team," he said.

Mr. Logan's gesture should go on record as being one of a public minded citizen, one who appreciates the efforts of youth in bringing honor and glory to themselves and their home town. Belleville can do with more such men as Eddie Logan.

A Start, at Least

Almost a dozen hockey players of the city answered the appeal for a get-together at the Y M C A last night and it looks as though the boys might have something to start with. Reports from the meeting state that there was plenty of enthusiasm on the part of the mentorless hockey orphans, and it looks as though at least some groundwork was laid. The boys telephoned Lorne Cook, Kingston, secretary of the Van Horne series and that gentleman will have full information for the gang on Wednesday.

Another special meeting has been called at the Y on Wednesday night, and those players who were unable to be present last night are urged to attend. The meeting signifies that hockey players of the city are not going to hang around and wait until Spring for some managerial genius to take over the reins. They have displayed the proper spirit in self organization, once more proving the old adage that if you want anything done right, do it yourself. Again a reminder to all hockey players and supporters, don't forget the meeting Wednesday night. You won't be sorry.

11 Thoroughbreds Invited to Face Pimilco Starter

By The Canadian Press

The ninth running of the $25,000 winner-take-all Pimlico Special Nov. 17 yesterday became a purely invitation affair with the Maryland Jockey Club issuing bids to 11 thoroughbreds to face the starter at Baltimore. The list was headed by Polynesian, Preakness winner; Armed, which won the Washington Handicap Saturday, and two top handicap performers, First Fiddle and Stymie. Although invited, Busher, Thumbs Up, Hoop Jr., the Kentucky Derby winner, and Devil Diver, were not expected to participate.

Last year's race was captured by Twilight Tear. Previous winners were War Admiral, Seabiscuit, Challedon, Marketwise, Whirlaway and Shut Out.

The Marleybone Cricket Club announced yesterday at London an English eleven will be sent to Australia next year for a resumption of the England - Australia Test Matches.

New York Rovers, farm club of the N. H. L. Rangers, has been organized with a line-up composed entirely of players from the western provinces, with seven of the 16 members from Winnipeg alone. Rovers play their first game at Boston Nov. 2 in the Eastern U. S. Hockey League.

Tub-thumper Joe Farrell of Chicago Black Hawks loudly sang the praise of his favorite National Hockey League team yesterday—a bit prematurely, manager Johnny Gottselig thought. Farrell ran down the list of returning servicemen and newcomers as he gave out with visions of a Black Hawk spot near the top of the league next spring, instead of the fifth-place role Chicago played last year.

Gottselig said "wait until we get home a week from Wednesday before drawing any conclusions. Boston and Montreal are tough. We'll find out there."

Stiff-punching Arthur King added last night to his growing prestige by scoring a technical knockout in the third round over Paul Gagnier of Montreal, billed as Quebec featherweight champion.

El Lobo and The Fatherfoot, two thoroughbreds of the Stuart Hamblen stable, had the honor yesterday of being the first racers to be flown to a track. They were air-shipped 380 miles from Los Angeles to Bay Meadows. William Kyne, manager of the track, predicted air transportation of horses would shortly become routine.

Manager Art Chapman of Buffalo Bisons in the American Hockey League yesterday announced the purchase of defenceman Wilf Field from Montreal N.H.L. Canadiens.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 512
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

When they put you to work on a World Olympic match deal, make up your mind it is tough. So, don't go around thinking you are a palooka if you would not recognize it in a bridge game.

Take the stunt you are asked to think up in this deal:

NORTH
♠K Q 4
♥Q 4
♦K Q 5
♣J 7 5 4 2

WEST	EAST
♠7 3 2	♠8 6
♥J 10 9 2	♥A 8 7 5 3
♦9 7 6	♦A 10 4 2
♣Q 10 9	♣K 6

SOUTH
♠A J 10 9 3
♥K 6
♦J 8 3
♣A 8 3

South arrives at a contract of four spades. At an early age, east sticks in a heart bid. So, the opening lead from west is the jack of throbs.

No declarer would go into ecstasies over the prospects of the taking of ten tricks with these ducats. There is a sure loser to each red ace and two probable losers in clubs.

There are a couple of far-fetched hopes. One is to find the lone king or queen of clubs in the east. If that could be picked up by the ace, a club lead toward the jack would lose only one club trick.

Another is to find one opponent with only two trumps and also the king with a small club. In that case, the strip and end-play will save the loss of one of the club tricks.

Even so, it must be played carefully. Not more than one round of trumps should be pulled until both red aces are gone. Because a third trump might be led by an opponent.

So, when east wins the first heart trick and south wins the second only one trump round is pulled. A diamond is lost to east and a diamond return lets declarer clean up his diamonds.

Now comes the second trump round the club ace. After this, a club is led hopefully. East is forced to win with the king and finds himself endplayed with nothing but red cards to lead back.

South and dummy are out of red cards. So, when east leads one, a club is sluffed from the south hand and dummy captures with his last trump. If west trumps, dummy simply over-trumps.

If such plays give you an inferiority complex, get out of that mood. Many an expert muffed that one. And not only that one.

RUSSIAN FORCED TO SHOW HAND IN POST-WAR SPORTS

Will be Invited to Join I.A.A.F. and Must Belong Before Taking Part in Olympic Games

By JERRY LISKA

Chicago, Oct. 23 — (AP)—Russia, which severed formal sports relations with the rest of the world after 1912, soon may be forced to show her post-war sports hand.

Avery Brundage, president of the United States Olympic Committee and vice-president of the International Olympic Group, said today the I.A.A.F. "extended the hand of friendship" to Russia thru an "unprecedented" invitation to membership.

He said the recent action of the I.A.A.F. Council in Stockholm was unusual because any country previously had to apply for membership. The Group never before singled out and wooed a prospective member.

Brundage, who attended the Stockholm meeting after conferring with the International Olympic Executive Committee in London last August, said Russia has developed a huge sports program, but has shown no inclination to display it before the rest of the world.

"Two factors surround any discussion of the subject," he said. "First, Russia is an extremely proud nation and may decline to appear in international competition without confidence of victory. Secondly, such competition means fraternization with athletes of other nations, something Russia generally has not permitted."

Implied in the I.A.A.F. invitation is the requirement that Russia must adhere to the organization's rules and regulations and leave political aspirations outside the Olympic gates. Membership in the I.A.A.F. is required for Olympic competition.

Brundage said a mail vote now was in progress for selection of the 1948 Olympics site. The outcome, he said, may be announced by late December. Los Angeles, Minneapolis, Baltimore and Philadelphia are under consideration as hosts in the United States, Brundage explained, while Lausanne, Switzerland, and London are prospective European sites.

The Olympics have not been held since the memorable 1936 games at Berlin, longest lapse in the classic's history.

Brundage said the I.A.A.F. Council decided to hold the European games in 1946 at either Stockholm or Oslo.

It was doubtful, he said, whether the Pan-American Games would be held next year as scheduled. They would mean a lapse until 1950, unless interested South American countries make an effort to hold the games in 1946, said Brundage, who is president of the Pan-American sports committee.

KENYA OFFERS GIFT

Nairobi (CP)—The Legislature Council of Kenya has unanimously agreed to offer the United Kingdom government a quantity of Kenya timber for panelling and furnishing the new House of Commons, as a token of the admiration of the peoples of the colony and protectorate.

Knights of Columbus Honor Columbian Squires, Champions Of Jr. Softball in Province

Each Member Presented With Miniature Replica of Championship Trophy

Fitting accolade to worthy champions was given the Belleville Columbian Squires, Ontario's junior softball titlists at a sumptuous banquet tendered them by the Belleville Council, of the Knights of Columbus in their Front Street clubrooms Monday night.

The youthful champions heard tributes paid them by the clergy, league officials, members of the Knights of Columbus, and sports authorities of the city in brief addresses which emphasized the honors won not only by the members of the team, but those brought to the city through their accomplishments on the softball diamonds of the province.

Outstanding feature of the banquet was the presentation to each member of the club of miniature replicas of the championship trophy of Ontario by Mr. Eddie Logan, member of the Knights of Columbus here.

Mr. Logan with the assistance of Jack Doran, assistant manager of the team, presented each member individually with the handsome silver trophy and personally congratulated each player as he stepped before him, to receive the gift.

Grand Knight Presides

Following the delicious repast Grand Knight Maurice Callaghan, of the Knights of Columbus, briefly paid tribute to the champions and urged them to increase their membership during the coming year. He then turned the chairmanship over to the Right Rev. Monsignor J. V. Nicholson.

"I am indeed proud of the Columbian Squires' softball team," the Monsignor said, "they are a credit not only to themselves, but the city they represented. I am not only proud of their achievements in the field of softball but of the fact that they proved themselves gentlemen both in play and off the diamond".

Monsignor Nicholson proved himself a master in the field of master-of-ceremonies. His fluent eloquence, a ready wit and his ability as a raconteur carried the spirit of the banquet along at a high level. His impromptu stories which dealt with the individual speaker invoked long and loud rounds of applause. He was generous in tribute and eloquent in sincerity.

W. Fitzgerald, speaking for Mr. Alex. Carmichael, who sponsored the Squires and who was unavoidably absent emphasized the "man with the heart of gold. He is one of the most public-spirited citizens Belleville possesses," he said, "and he regrets very sincerely the fact that he cannot be present".

Ex-Mayor Harry Rollins, stated that the Squires exemplified the fine spirit of sportsmanship of the city. "They brought home", he said, "a title which had been sought for a long time. Boys of different faith," he said, "stood shoulder to shoulder to win a title. They both had faith in God in their own way and have shown what can be accomplished if people stand together".

Proud of Boys

Homer "Red" Townsend said "There is no prouder person here tonight than I. I tried several times to bring a title to Belleville with some of these same boys. It makes me feel proud for I still think of them as my lads. The Logan trophies bring back memories of good sportsmanship in years gone by. I wish the boys the best of luck in the years to come."

Jack Doran paid tribute to the many who assisted the Squires in their successful quest for the championship. To Alex. Carmichael, Eddie Logan, the Press, he expressed the appreciation of Jack Boyle, who with his son, Don, was absent. "He took pleasure", he said, "in publicly thanking the Squires for their efforts—and those who helped them".

Congratulations of the Belleville City Baseball League were voiced by its President Jack McVeigh.

Mr. Arthur Young paid tribute to the youthful champions, Mr. Logan for his thoughtfulness and others who assisted the Squires in bringing the title here. He felt that next year lights would be available for night sport which would give the men who work in the daytime the chance for relaxation. He hoped more honors would come to the city through the efforts of the Squires and other teams of young men.

Deplorable Conditions

Father Murphy, who has spent some time in China told of the deplorable conditions in that country as regards sport. "Chinese youth does not know the meaning of the word", he said. Father O'Donnell paid tribute to the team and especially its management. Fine teamwork and spirit brought final victory and honor and glory to the team and the city.

Flt. Lieut. the Rev. Father Mooney spoke of the fine example set by the members of the council. Other tributes were paid by District Deputy George Lee, Terry Scanlan, Sam Domenico, and Dick Barrett. Team appreciation was expressed to the Knights and Mr. Logan for his handsome gifts by Captain Dick Fitzpatrick.

The musical part of the program included selection by the orchestra, piano selections by George Desrosiers a vocal solo by Bob Lucey and a trumpet number by John Brian. Tribute to the ladies of the Catholic Women's League was paid by the Monsignor and was responded to by Mrs. Wilson, who felt that teamwork of the boys "must have been hereditary, for their mothers showed the same spirit in preparing the banquet."

N.Y. RANGERS HAVE LOT TO GAIN NOTHING TO LOOSE

Gothamites Have Only One Direction to Look and That's Up

By MERLE SUFFRIN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Winnipeg, Oct. 23—(CP)—More than any other team in the National Hockey League, New York Rangers have a lot to gain this season and nothing much to lose. After finishing out the last two seasons in the cellar with what manager Lester Patrick described as "the worst teams ever to wear Ranger sweaters," The Gothamites have only one direction to look and that's up.

When the silver fox said "they look like a million compared to our last two teams," it indicated the return of former stars has brought improvement. How much, however, is another question.

In many spots their lineup bears a resemblance to the Ranger team that captured the Stanley cup in 1939-40. They now have half a dozen members of that squad in Muzz Patrick, Phil Watson, Brian Hextall, Alex Shibicky, Neil Colville and Ott Heller. In addition Patrick expects the return shortly of Mac Colville and hopes to have Lynn Patrick and Alf Pike on the roster before the season is over.

That collection of pro puck talent has amply proved its NHL star calibre, and if Patrick's prediction that they'll be as good as ever when they get into condition comes true New York will have a club that should be right in the thick of the league leadership fight.

The rest of the team is a mixture of veterans who were the brighter lights of last year's squad along with some promising newcomers. The playing division is strong with three good centres Ab Demarco, Edgar Laprade and Phil Watson.

Big burly leftwinger Hank Goldup is back and so far has given a good account of himself by scoring three of five Ranger goals during exhibition games. Others who have signed contracts are Tony Leswick, Alan Kuntz, Hal Brown among the forwards, and Bill Juzda and Bill Moe, defencemen.

Manager Patrick, remembering times when injury to a goal-tender at a crucial time has thrown a snag into a team's chances, will probably carry both his topnotch netminders, Sugar Jim Henry and Chuck Rayner. He revealed earlier that he may try the novel idea of using both goalies in every game, either substituting them by periods or when the need arises.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, JR.

New York, Oct. 23—(AP)—The fellows who were on the winning side last weekend were rather pointedly ignored when the football coaches and writers gathered for their weekly session yesterday. . . The boys were too busy commiserating the Giants' Steve Owen, Brown's Rip Engle and Cornell's Ed McKeever. . . The conversation went something like this:

Jim Leonard, Pittsburgh Steelers: "We're getting some boys out of service and by November we should have a fair country ball club."

McKeever (interrupting): We are getting some, too, but our reinforcements came too early or too late. I had planned to use Gil Bouley as fullback on offence and end on defence; he would have made a lot of trouble. I saw Columbia's deceptive attack on Saturday and I don't know how I'll teach the boys to follow the ball. I couldn't follow it."

Engle: "I think it would be good strategy not to score on Columbia until the last couple of seconds. You saw what happened to Yale and Colgate. Our trouble at Brown is we have only three of the four freedoms—we're still lacking the freedom from want."

AT THE CAPITOL — Bing Crosby and Bobe Hope up to one of their old "Road" tricks in their new "Road" picture, "Road to Morocco," which comes next to the Capitol Theatre with Dorothy Lamour, Anthony Quinn and Dona Drake. The "patty-cake" routine has become a trade-mark. On the same program Gene Autry in "Spring Time in the Rockies."

DEMPSEY FIGURES JOE LOUIS IN FOR TOUGH TIME

Long Layoff Will Dull His Speed and Effect His Timing, Says Dempsey

New York, Oct. 23. (AP)—Jack Dempsey figures the same thing that happened to him on a rainy night in Philadelphia 19 years ago, will be sitting right in Joe Louis lap, next June, when Joe has a date with Billy Conn. Jack remembers what that three-year layoff did to him when he tangled with Gene Tunney the first time.

"The same thing that happened to me in that first fight with Tunney", the mauler explained, "is likely to happen to Louis against Conn. I was away from the ring three years then, and that's too long. You know, in this business you don't have to 'knit one, purl two,' but you've gotta stick to your knitting just the same. Those long layoffs take it out of you.

"Now, Joe's going to try to come back after being away four years. He hasn't had a real fight since he flattened Abe Simon in March 1942. When you're away so long, it affects your legs and yours arms and your reflexes.

"Of course, Conn hasn't been fighting either, so you can't say he's the same as Tunney was that night. Gene had seen a lot of action coming up to that fight. But Conn's younger than Joe, and should have most of his speed left. Yep, I figure Joe's in for a very tough time. I know how it is. I found out—the hard way".

Professional Soccer Players Want Boost In Their Weekly Pay

Manchester, Eng., Oct. 23. (CP) Professional soccer football players today began sampling strike sentiment to back their demands for a boost in the present $32 weekly pay after club owners rejected a pay hike and simultaneously refused to accept a subsidy of $400,000 yearly offered by gambling pools.

The players asked for year-round contracts. At present they are paid only during the six-month season and the maximum check for a full-time man is $32. Part-time players get a top of $16.

The Players Union drew up a circular letter asking members "are you satisfied or are you prepared to strike?" The answers will be added up at the end of two weeks. Wording of the inquiry suggested a strike would not be called immediately if a stoppage was predominantly favored. It was believed such sentiment would be used in an effort to get a new contract.

If a strike should be called it would put a crimp in Britain's most popular winter game which often draws crowds of over 50,000.

Organized gamblers offered to contribute after club owners pleaded inability to pay. The betting chiefs said they could turn over $400,000 yearly—more "as times get better"—by slicing one per cent from winners' payoffs. They would make up the amount by cutting their "commissions" on winnings from five to four per cent.

The Owners' Association thumbed down the gamblers' offer after receiving letters and telegrams of protest from religious groups. The religious bodies backed up their opposition with promises to help soccer get tax relief equivalent to that of theatres. The tax on a 30-cent soccer ticket is 12 cents. There is a four-cent tax on theatre tickets of the same price.

STARBRIGHT

By Jane Bliss

CHAPTER 23

Somehow, she was not surprised. She was only a little frightened. And while she sat there she wondered where Karen's Academy Award Statuette would be, wondered if the cold, shiny little figure had had a chance to bring Karen any happiness at all.

She supposed not, for Karen was cold and shiny too, like the statuette. And just as unreal. It did not seem possible that Karen could derive any satisfaction or happiness from an object so like herself.

Elaine was dressed and parking her car in front of the Branns home within an hour. The drive was partially filled with other cars. She recognized Sam Lewin's and Marty Prosser's, the acting head of International's publicity department in Paul's absence.

Minnie let her in, fanning herself with a handkerchief. Her little, chubby face was sad. But there was no sign of grief. Elaine wondered if anyone would grieve.

"Anthony was the first to know. The police called him right away. He's in the game room with Sam and Marty and some others from the studio. A detective is in there, too!"

Elaine quietly entered the game room, was introduced to Inspector Vickers. He was a thin, little man with graying hair and shrewd, careful eyes. He wore a freshly pressed gabardine suit. He held a snap-brim hat in his hand, swinging it back and forth while he sat on the straight back chair facing her.

She marvelled at his appearance, for the heat did not seem to bother him. Nothing seemed to bother him; not a muscle moved in his face as she was introduced to him. He half-rose from the chair, then sat back, idly swinging his hat between his legs.

He evidently had been talking to Brann, for he turned his attention back to him and asked: "Anything else?"

When Brann shook his head, Vickers looked at Elaine. His voice was quiet, distinct. "You knew Miss Stoddard?"

"Yes, we were in school together."

"You were later associated with her, weren't you?"

"For a short time."

"You were friendly with her while she was here? By that, I mean, you travelled in her social circle."

Vickers nodded absently: "How well do you know Lee Collins and John Warren?"

"I was once engaged to Mr. Collins. I knew Mr. Warren on Broadway."

Again Vickers nodded absently. He studied the movement of his hat. Then: "You were with them at Ciro's last night?"

"Yes."

"Who took her home?"

"Mr. Collins."

"Had there been an argument of any kind previous to their departure?"

"Yes. Mr. Collins and Mr. Warren were rather heated about whether Miss Stoddard should go overseas immediately or postpone her trip for a few months."

Vickers stood up. "Was Collins engaged to Miss Stoddard?"

"Yes."

"After he was engaged to you?"

"Yes."

"Why did you and Collins break up? Because of Miss Stoddard?"

"Yes."

Vickers smiled. "Short and sweet. That's the way I like them. All right. Once more. Who took you home?"

"Mr. Warren and Mr. Wilson Hall."

"Both of them, eh?"

"Yes."

Vickers closed his eyes, rubbed his finger down his nose. "Short and sweet," he murmured. Then he turned to the group. "Thanks very much. Some of you will hear from the district attorney's office soon for further questioning. Don't make any trips out of town unless it's vital. And then let us know where you're going." He turned to Elaine. "You will undoubtedly be questioned. Remember, short and sweet." He grinned and left the room.

There was an awkward silence in the room for a few minutes after Vickers left. It broke completely with a sudden burst of talk from everyone while Minnie set a tray of ice tea on the coffee table.

"Poor Mr. Vickers left too soon, didn't he?" she murmured, looking at the hall door. "But a cooler looking man I've to see on such a hot day."

Finally the clamor of talk worked itself into a pattern.

Brann: "I think they're holding Warren."

Prosser: "He said something about Collins, too."

Lewin: "I wish Paul Mason were here."

Elaine: "So do I."

And when she sighed loudly, everyone in the room suddenly laughed.

It wasn't until one of Prosser's men called from the district attorney's office an hour later did they know whom the police suspected.

Elaine's glass of ice tea slipped from her hand and shattered to the hard floor in almost the identical spot where Lee had once dropped a glass when he heard Karen announced her engagement to Warren.

She stared down at the tea and broken glass, stared at the little rivers the brown fluid made, stared into little rivers of time and memory.

Somebody killed Karen.

They've booked Lee Collins for murder.

The words rang and rang through her mind, and she felt horribly sick.

Paul was tapping his cane against the rug on his office floor. He had been back one day, had not even had a chance to get settled again when Elaine had asked him to help her prove Lee was innocent of murdering Karen.

He was sullen and the tapping of his cane grew more vehement. "Good Lord, Elaine, how do you expect me to help? In the first place I've just returned to Hollywood. I don't know anything about the case except what I've read in the papers and what you've told me, which isn't much. And furthermore, Los Angeles has got some pretty good detectives. If they say a man is guilty, they know what they're talking about. Anyway, I thought you were through with Collins."

Elaine was exasperated. "Oh, Paul. You talk as if I am still in love with him."

"Well, what does it sound like? I come back here, expecting you to fall in my arms with a minister in the reception room, and what happens? You immediately start asking me to help you prove Collins is innocent."

"You're still jealous of him, aren't you?"

"Yes, I am. I'm so jealous of him I probably look green in a bright light."

Elaine was smiling now, sitting on the edge of the desk, looking down at him. "Paul I'm the next thing to being your wife. I think that's something pretty wonderful. The only thing I can think of that beats it is being your wife. I don't intend to do anything that will keep me from it. But I want you to help me."

"What does Collins mean to you now?" Paul asked after a moment's silence.

Elaine hesitated. "It's—it's something I can't define. It isn't love, not even affection. It's something that is bound up in me—with my writing, my success. It's that we started together, a long, long time ago it seems. I don't want it this way—but that's how it is. I cut him out of my system as far as loving him is concerned. Now I've got to rid my mind, my way of thinking in my work from him. But I can't do it by letting him die for something I'm sure he didn't do. If I did that, well—then I'd think about him every time I hit a typewriter key. Can you understand that?"

Paul lighted a cigarette, blew out smoke. "Yes, I guess I can, Elaine." He appeared thoughtful for a moment.

"Marty Prosser said you knew a lot of men on the detective force."

Paul grunted and swung around in his chair, reaching for the telephone. "Marty Prosser talks too much. That's why I've got this job." He dialed a number, waited. "Randolph? This is Paul Mason.. Yeah. Yeah. Thanks. Well, what I had in mind is this Collins case. Paid any attention to it?.. Good. Want to work on it?....All right, I'll be right down."

Randolph was to Elaine the exact opposite of Inspector Vickers. Randolph was a private detective; Randolph was big, fat and greasy looking. He had a cubby hole of an office that needed a thorough airing. He chewed a toothpick. But he wore a diamond ring and a wrist watch. Elaine noticed that didn't come from the five-and-dime store.

He listened while Paul explained his mission, contentedly chewing his toothpick.

When Paul asked: "Just how did everything happen? I only got back from Washington yesterday. The papers don't say much," Randolph straightened his huge body in the creaky swivel chair and closed his eyes, folding his hands in front of him atop the desk.

"So far as the police are concerned, it's an open and shut case. As Vickers says—short and sweet. Collins has no alibi; everybody else has. Two and two in that case makes a couple million."

He shifted his toothpick.

"She's found on her bed with this towel jammed down her throat. But that isn't what killed her. When they examined her they found the base of her skull cracked. They don't know for sure what did it. Something heavy anyway. The coronor says the job was done about 4:15 ayem. Everybody's got an alibi for 4:15 ayem, including your lady friend, except Collins. And when he tells them where he was at that time they don't believe him because he brought this Stoddard babe home. He says it was two when he let her out at her house. But what's to keep him from staying another two hours and 15 minutes. Nothing. So far as Vickers is concerned."

Randolph opened his eyes.

"And who knows? Maybe the little guy is right?"

Elaine caught her breath. "Then you think that Mr. Collins is guilty?"

Randolph merely shifted his eyes to look at Elaine. "Lady, I don't care. If you want, I can find out one way or the other."

"We want," Elaine said simply.

Randolph raised his heavy frame out of the chair. "Okay. Be here in two days, same time. You'll know then. That's five hundred in advance—another half-grand when I report."

Elaine whistled.

"I come high," Randolph grinned. "But I come good."

Paul handed over five one-hundred dollar bills and they left the office....

Elaine watched Paul dig into the last bite of his pie, then lean back comfortably.

"You cook with the best, Mrs. Mason-to-be."

"Thank you, my gallant romeo." She stood up and began clearing the table of dishes. "How's your dish wiping arm?"

"Pretty bad," Paul grinned. "I pitched nine hot courses the other day. I need a little more rest before I take the mound again."

"Pooh!" Elaine stacked the dishes and walked back into the living room. Paul was sitting on the davenport, his bad leg stretched out sideways on the cushions.

"Ever since I've been back," he complained "you've been about as affectionate as a traffic summons."

"I'm being calm."

"You're being what?"

"Sure. You know. Calm, cool and collected."

"Well, come down here and collect a kiss," he said pulling her down to him.

There had been times, Elaine thought, feeling his arms about her, when it was hard to wipe away the memory of Lee's kisses. There were times when Paul held her in his arms when it was hard not to think about her darkened apartment in New York and Lee's lips tender and asking against hers.

But there was no feeling for Lee in her now, and when Paul tipped her face up and kissed her it was like something more wonderful than she had ever known.

When the telephone rang and she reached up to snap the lamp light on, Paul was already answering it.

"Yes....Yes, Randolph. All right, we'll be there in a half-hour." He clicked the receiver down and turned to Elaine. "The big boy works fast. He's got the answer now. Let's go." He stopped and snapped his fingers. "Have you got five hundred in cash? The banks, you know. Closed." He smiled weakly and Elaine thought she had never loved him so much.

Randolph appeared to Elaine to be in the same position he was when they had left him that morning. The dusty little office was dark, except for a desk lamp which cast a ghostly glare across Randolph's face.

He waited until they were seated and then he spoke, rapidly, quietly: "We know most of the background of the case—how Collins and Warren both fought over this Stoddard chick, and how Warren finally married her. We know what kind of a babe she was; how she used men to her advantage. Se we'll skip the life history. From the beginning of what we're interested in, this is what it looks like:"

U. S. River Gunboat On Yangste River Reported Fired On

San Francisco, Oct. 22 (AP) — Charles Miner, Mutual Broadcasting System correspondent, broadcasting from Shanghai Monday, reported that the American river gunboat, the U.S.S. Seize, was fired on today midway between Shanghai and Nanking on the Yangtze River.

Miner said there were no casualties aboard the vessel and the results of the return fire were not ascertained.

The attackers were not identified.

Council Refuses to Deal With Sale of Property to Legion Until Injunction Finally Discharged

Members, However, Pass Motion to Deal With Question at Call of Mayor

Being advised by the City Solicitor that it would be illegal for the City Council to sell the property at the foot of Front Street to the Canadian Legion, before the injunction issued some time ago was finally and formally discharged, the members at their regular session on Monday evening vetoed a recommendation "that parts of lots 15 and 16, Front Street, as shown on plans prepared by City Engineer be offered for sale to the Canadian Legion Branch No. 99 on condition they erect thereon in a reasonable time a modern bus terminal and other facilities according to plans submitted to this council. The Legion to have right-of-way only over existing roadway for inlet and exit from the premises, the Legion shall also agree to remove to a new location as shown on plan the existing U.E.L. monument." This recommendation was introduced by Ald. Charles Hyde, who speaking to the motion stated it was time "something was done for the Legion."

Wide Variation in Estimate

The council at a previous time had invited two valuators to give the members an estimate on the property and Norman Montgomery stated in affidavit that he considered the property worth $2,500 while O. D. Clapp, another valuator estimated the property to be worth $1,500. The members were agreed this was a wide divergence in the value but as this was before them, it was a question that an acceptance offer of $1,000 made by the Legion could not be entertained at the present time and therefore the motion was defeated by a six to five vote. Those in favor of the motion did not vote against the advice of the solicitor but rather to have the matter cleared up. A recommendation by Ald. Armstrong "that the City Solicitor be requested to immediately proceed to have legal discharge of our pending injunction and the Mayor call a special meeting to deal with the offer submitted by the Legion for this certain property" was also defeated by a seven to six vote.

Motion Adopted

However, the council in motions adopted one advanced by the same alderman "that the City Solicitor be requested to proceed immediately to have our present injunction finally and formally discharged and the Mayor be advised and he shall be authorized to deal with the matter as he sees fit as regards to submitting Canadian Legion offer for certain lands to this council, when we are legally authorized to deal with same."

This means that the question will come up again at the call of the Mayor or at a regular meeting, when the offer submitted by the Legion on Monday night will be considered. A few of the Aldermen wanted the council to proceed with the matter last night but the opinion was general they should wait until the injunction was discharged.

A delegation, from the Legion composed of Col. H. E. Smith, the president, Leroy Madden, George Ellarby, the secretary and the solicitor, Allan Sprague, was present and presented its views. Col. Smith asked the council at what price they were willing to sell the property, and then it was revealed the valuation of the property as set by the valuators obtained by the council.

Says Veterans Deserve Best

Col. Smith stated, "there was nothing too much you can give these boys who are coming back after fighting our wars and we are only asking for you to do something to keep them off the streets." Mayor Follwell said he agreed with the speaker and thought the property should be sold to the Legion for the original price of $25. Ald. Butler stated it was an unfortunate situation and he was sure all the members were vitally interested. He expressed the opinion the council was powerless to deal with the matter until the injunction had been formally discharged.

Ald. Woodley thought the appraisers' value was too high while Ald. Clarke was in favor of selling the land for $25 and standing an injunction. When the information was given that the injunction had not been finally discharged, Ald. Armstrong stated the council was restrained from acting at the present time and thought the offer from the perspective purchaser should be made. Ald. Follwell was in favor of submitting the question to the people believing that it would carry with a large majority. Col. Smith stated he did not want the question to become a political football and believed the council was quite capable of dealing with the matter.

Wants Matter Decided by Vote

Ald. Clapp was of the opinion that the land should not be sold for less than the appraised value and he was sure that the members of the council were willing to donate out of their own pockets for this project. "I am sure we cannot do too much for these veterans but we must proceed according to law and I would like to see this whole question sent to the people for decision."

Ald. Hyde stated the city was in great need of a bus terminal and the Legion is willing to provide the necessity, and also move the monument to a more central location and enhance its beauty. Ald. Allin agreed with Ald. Clapp that the question should be sent to the people for decision because he said, "there is a great amount of opposition." This ended the discussion and the council now has before it an offer from the Legion for $1,000 for the property.

To Honor Ball Champions

The council will honor the Columbian Squires, junior softball champions of the Province by presenting fifteen jackets to the winning members. This will be a gift from the city and they will be presented at a formal function the date to be decided.

The treasurer was authorized to finance the bonds purchased by the civic employees in the same way as other purchases were handled. The corporation will sell to the C.N.R. the lands they desire at the same rate as they paid for another block previously sold to the C.N.R. for which the city has no title including part of lot 43. The Clerk was authorized to write Ernest Fitzgibbon advising him that it is contrary to present policy of council to grant permission to instal a gas pump and that permission cannot therefore be granted. A full page advertisement of the city will be taken in the B.C.I. Elevator at a cost of $20.

Snow Equipment to be Ready

A discussion was heard on painting the traffic lines in the city with Ald. Clapp advocating the use of yellow paint and doing the work this fall. Ald. Trudeau favored the white lustrous paint used by the Highway Department. Ald. Chamberlain thought the city was using an inferior grade of paint and that was why the lines were not standing up. A motion covering the whole question will likely be before the council at a later date.

The Mayor inquired respecting the snow equipment and whether the city had been zoned by the City Engineer for cleaning sidewalks. Ald. Trudeau stated that one piece of equipment had been sent to Toronto to be equipped with the Huff loader and that city officials would be in Toronto on Friday to inspect the same. He also stated that the other tractor ordered would be here on time and gave definite assurance that the total equipment would be ready for use early in the winter.

The zoning question was under consideration and would be taken care of in plenty of time. Ald. Hyde gave a lengthy report on the meeting of Provincial plumbers in Niagara Falls while Ald. Chamberlain and the Mayor reported on their recent trip to Ottawa with respect to the harbor front.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 23 — (CP)—The gold stocks held a small gain this afternoon on Toronto Exchange. Western oils were steady and the industrials and base metals had minor losses. Trading quieted down and volume totalled 1,203,000 shares.

Advance of 15 cents or more for Eldona was not held in the mid-day profit-taking. It worked back from 2.43 to 2.28 for a net gain of 2 cents. Donalda held only part of a gain of 12 cents. Goldcrest jumped 20 cents to 1.10 but half the gain was dropped at noon

Labrador was up 15 cents to 6.10, Mining Corporation lost 15 and Pend Oreille firmed 10.

The food and paper stocks were a bit stronger and the liquors and utilities weakened.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 23. (AP)—Renewed bearishness over the United States Labor picture received the principal blame today for a general retreat of the stock market although other factors were present. While scattered favorites contested the shift with fair success, declines of one to two or more points predominated near the fourth hour.

Prominent casualties included U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Chrysler, Douglas Aircraft, Du Pont, Westinghouse, Anaconda, American Telephone, Southern Pacific, Great Northern Pacific, Goodyear, General Electric and Santa Fe.

Canadian issues generally stumbled near midday although Hiram Walker made a strong gain of 1 1-8. Canadian Pacific and Distillers Seagrams were off 3-8 and 1-4 respectively while Dome Mines slipped 1-8.

ALLAN MILLS

Rflm. D. Wellman Welcomed Home

Allans Mills—On Friday evening Springbrook hall was packed to overflowing with friends of Rflmn. David Wellman, who gathered in honor of his coming.

Mr. A. McComb was master of ceremonies and Dave was invited to the platform and all the other returned boys present. F. O. Russell Rowe read a very appropriate address on behalf of the community, expressing their best wishes and joy at his return. The other boys all joined in expressing their joy at Dave's return. Dave thanked everyone present for their thoughtfulness and expressed his appreciation to friends and neighbors who helped his mother carry on during his absence. Dave was presented with a wrist watch and a purse of money. Mrs. Wellman and sons, Clarence, Charles and Ralph were also on the platform, and were introduced to all present as Dave's mother and brothers by Mr. Allan McComb.

Several were called on for speeches. Mr. Jack Morrison spoke on behalf of the township in welcoming Dave home. Mr. J. F. Baker spoke on behalf of the Bonarlaw friends and mentioned in his address that the largest crowd ever gathered at Bonarlaw was at the station to welcome Dave the day of his arrival from overseas. Rev. J. M. Brownlie gave a splendid address and said how thankful every one should be for Dave's return, his address will long be remembered by those present. While the four brothers stood abreast on the platform, with Mrs. Wellman close by, all joined in singing "For they are jolly good fellows" and were given three rousing cheers.

An act was put on by two small girls, daughters of Mr. and Mrs. Clifford McInroy of Peterboro, which was greatly enjoyed. Several of the older men put on an exhibition of step dancing. The rest of the evening was spent in dancing. Lunch was served by ladies.

The King Orders Five Medals For Churchill

London, Oct. 22 (Reuters) — The King has personally ordered the dispatch to Winston Churchill, Britain's wartime leader, of five war campaign awards — the 1939-45 Star, the Africa Star, the Italy Star, the France and Germany Star and the Defence Medal.

Mr. Chuchill's war services, which entailed 50,000 miles of world travel, entitle him to all five awards.

He is the third prime minister to be so honored. The others were Herbert Asquith, Liberal prime minister at the outbreak of the First Great War and David Lloyd George, who succeeded Mr. Asquith.

ARAB PARTY CALLS FOR STRIKE

Jerusalem, Oct. 22 —(CP)— The Palestine Arab Party has called for a general strike Nov. 2, date of the Balfour Declaration, and has appealed to neighboring Arab states to join the protest movement in sympathy. British military headquarters planned additional security measures for the day.

Headquarters said Palestine had been without disturbances for six days. The last incident occurred Oct. 16 when an armed band attempted to hold up a military truck carrying a camp payroll.

Several thousand more British troops disembarked at Haifa before noon. More are expected later in the day.

THEY'RE OFF TO ENGLAND IN THIS BEER KEG

Mark Charlton, 26, English born, has one desire—to return to England—and do it in a beer barrel. He is pictured with his grizzly old seafaring pal Peter Olsen, 65, of Norway as they wave from their glorified beer barrel just before setting sail from Sydney, Nova Scotia. The barrel is equipped with a heavy keel, two vanes and a rudder. A sail will provide the power for the giant keg and besides supplies, Charlton's motor bike provides ballast. The enterprising seamen expect to see the coast of England is about 80 days out of Sydney, Nova Scotia.

Duesseldorf Slowly Struggles Back to Life, Thousands Live in Cellars, to Winter There

Editor's Note: This is the first of a series of three stories on Germany today. In it Ross Munro, Canadian Press roving correspondent in Europe, deals with a German city—Duesseldorf—one of the main targets of the Ruhr blitz.)

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Duesseldorf, Germany, Oct. 24. (CP) This is the story of Duesseldorf, a typical German industrial city, smashed by Allied power.

From the summer of 1942 bombers of the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F., hammered this sprawling city on the Rhine at the southwestern end of the Ruhr. It was raided persistently until its capture by the Americans with ease last April.

Today the great steel and iron works and the armament plants on the northern outskirts lie in ruin; many other factories in the industrial ring around the city are badly damaged; the city itself is battered and scarred.

But Duesseldorf was not hit as hard as Essen and Duisburg to the north. Workmen are starting back to their jobs here. Some plants are operating again in a small way. The city is struggling back to life after its ordeal under bomber command, with the population facing acute difficulties which will increase with the winter.

In peace Duesseldorf had a population of more than 500,000, mostly employed in the factories, and the city was a prosperous, roaring producer for the Nazi war machine.

Only a few plants and some grain mills on the Rhine near the downtown area seem to have escaped lightly. Every street in the city has been damaged to some extent. Five thousand persons were killed and 50,000 injured in the raids, according to city statistics.

Thousands are living in cellars and preparing to spend the winter there. About ten per cent of the population, which now has dwindled to 320,000, is living in underground air raid shelters and in the four and five-storey concrete bunkers erected near the factories as strong air raid shelters for hundreds of families.

Conditions for working class families, particularly, are almost as bad as in Berlin, which are the worst in Germany. The civilian ration in Duesseldorf is approximately half what it was in the last years of the war.

Mackenzie King Has Luncheon With His Majesty

His Majesty and the Prime Minister, who is on an informal visit to Britain and is to go to the continent later, have met many times in the past. Mr. King accompanied the King and Queen on much of their Canadian tour in 1939.

After lunch the Prime Minister went to the House of Commons to hear Hugh Dalton, Chancellor of the Exchequer, deliver his budget speech.

Earlier, he talked with Dr. J. F. Hofmeyr, South African Deputy Prime Minister.

Street Car Jumps Switch, Hits Man Causing Death

Hamilton, Oct. 24 — (CP) — Robert Leith, 67, was fatally injured today when struck by a street car which jumped a switch at a downtown track intersection. Leith's body was dragged 60 feet before the car came to a halt. The motorman, overcome by shock, was taken to hospital for treatment.

New Air Service Link With U.K.

By RICHARD E. FISKE

Aboard the American Airlines Flagship "London," Oct. 24 (AP) —This flagship of The American Airlines, with 12 passengers and a crew of seven was speeding over the North Atlantic today for London, inaugurating a new service link between New York and London.

The four-motored, land-based plane, left Bedford, Mass., airport at 5:55 p.m. E.S.T. last night, arrived at Gander Airfield, Newfoundland, at 10:22 and took off again at 12:12 a.m. today for Shannon, Eire. After a brief stop at Shannon the ship will deliver its passenger and products in London.

The flight originated in New York at 3:30 p.m. E.S.T. yesterday —the first of American Airlines post-war civilian service to Europe.

Governor Maurice J. Tobin of Massachusetts was one of the passengers on the initial flight of the weekly service.

Other passengers included four press representatives: D. E. Burritt, New York Superintendent of The Canadian Press; Harrison Salisbury, United Press; Jack Barry, North American Newspaper Alliance and the writer.

Death Sentence For Six Poles

London, Oct. 24—(Reuters) — Six Poles today were sentenced to death by a military court at Flensburg, Germany, for murder and robbery with violence, the Allied Press Service in Germany reported.

Jan Stanisz, a civilian laborer, entered a German farm in Sillerup Aug. 14, threatened the farmer with his gun and then robbed him, it was charged. The other five accused were Johann Wrobinski, Stanislaw Tondel, Jan Haas, Johann Czerwinksi and Simon Stachowial, accused of carrying out an armed attack on another German farm July 25 when two German sentries were killed.

Only 6,000 of 100,000 Nazi Troops Taken at Stalingrad Reported Alive

By RICHARD KASISCHKE

Berlin, Oct. 24 — (AP)—British authorities today quoted German war prisoners liberated by the Russians saying that of approximately 100,000 Nazi troops captured at Stalingrad barely 6,000 are still alive.

The others have died in Soviet prison work camps or in transit home on trains which have 200 to 300 corpses aboard when they arrive at Frankfurt-on-Oder, the prisoners were quoted as saying.

Capt. J. G. Johnson of Oxford, commandant of the Invaliden Strasse Transit camp where the bulk of these discharged war prisoners from the east are received, said he believed their reports are "not exaggerated."

"One can well believe that death rate when one sees the miserable wrecks coming through here at the rate of 2,000 a day," Captain Johnson said.

"The Russians are not releasing able-bodied men. They are all sick or incapable of further work. Released women of the Whermacht are either pregnant or venereally diseased."

Johnson said some of the prisoners reported they walked all the way back from Russia after escaping from work camps. Many limp into the Invaliden camp daily without shoes, their feet found in rags.

Four Stalingrad veterans interviewed today had come in pairs on two trains as far as Frankfurt. They estimated that 200 out of 2,000 prisoners aboard one train had died, and 250 out of 8,000 had died on the other.

4 Gulls Found Dead on Plane

London, Ont., Oct. 24—(CP)—Apparently struck during a take-off, four sea gulls had a free ride from Windsor, Ont., to London aboard a Trans-Canada Airlines plane but were in no condition to enjoy the flight. They were found dead on the engines of the aircraft when it landed.

HOUSE DEBATES THE FUTURE OF AIR SERVICES

Conservative Describes T.C.A. as 'Play-Thing' Which Mr. Howe Has Under His Thumb

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The future of air services in Canada and of Canadian-owned air services abroad occupied the attention of the Commons yesterday as members considered a resolution to a bill which would authorize expansion of Trans-Canada Air Lines in the domestic and international fields.

Air services, both past and future, were given a lengthy going-over as Reconstruction Minister Howe, the minister in charge of civil aviation, replied to questions concerning the purpose of the proposed bill and outlined the government's plans for the government-owned air line.

The resolution finally passed through all stages and the bill itself was given first reading.

Hon. J. L. Ilsley, Acting Prime Minister announced A. Davidson Dunton, 33, editor of the Montreal Standard and former general manager of the Wartime Information Board, had been appointed first full-time chairman of the Canadian Broadcasting Corporation.

Mr. Dunton, whose appointment completes the most important recommendation of a parliamentary radio committee made in a report to the House last year, will take over the $15,000-a-year post Nov. 15 for three years.

At the evening sitting, before the House returned to discussion of the T.C.A. resolution, Robert Fair (SC — Battle River) sought second reading of a bill to amend the Canadian Wheat Board Act, but no action was taken before the hour set aside for private bills had expired.

Under the bill, the Board would take over all the machinery used in the marketing of wheat.

Lauzon's Trial Opens in Napanee On Thursday

Napanee, Ont., Oct. 24 —(CP) —Trial of Ulysse Lauzon, 22, Joseph Peltier, 19, and Walter Koresky, 22, all of Windsor, on charges of bank robbery and jail breaking, will start here Thursday afternoon.

Lauzon and Peltier face charges of bank robbery at Ayr, Port Perry and Bath, Ont., as well as a charge of breaking out of Waterloo County jail, Kitchener, Ont., July 19. Koresky faces charges of bank robbery at Port Perry and Bath.

The trial climaxes a five-province chase that began when Lauzon and Peltier sawed through their cell bars and scaled an 18-foot wall to escape from the Waterloo County jail. They were being held while awaiting charges of robbery of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Ayr, where $75,311 in cash and bonds was taken.

Peltier was captured in Montreal Aug. 31 when he attempted to cash $6,000 in stolen registered bonds. He was shot by a bank teller as he tried to make a getaway. Lauzon and his 20-year-old wife, Eileen, succeeded in escaping in a car stolen from George Easton of Windsor. Police later found the car containing another $26,000 in bonds.

Apprehended at Track.

Lauzon and his wife in the company of Koresky were finally apprehended Sept. 12 at a race track near Charlottetown, following a gun-battle with police. Their trial was deferred three times since Peltier was in Montreal hospital with a spinal injury suffered when he was shot by the bank teller.

The robbery at Bath totalled $310,000 in cash and bonds, largest robbery in Canadian bank history. Police estimate that the amount involved in the three robberies was more than $400,000, of which some $326,000 in bonds has been recovered to date.

On June 19 Peltier was sentenced to eight years in Kingston penitentiary for the part he played in the armed robbery of the Imperial Bank of Canada, Tecumseh Road branch, Windsor, Feb. 23, 1945, in which $830 was taken. He also was sentenced to one year in reformatory on charges of receiving stolen goods, car theft and skipping bail.

In Quebec after their capture Lauzon and Koresky were sentenced to one year's hard labor for auto theft.

OTTAWA POLICE OFFICER WOUNDED BY THREE GUNMEN

Two Captured and Disarmed After Wild Chase Through Ottawa Streets

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP)—As police in Eastern Ontario responded to a general alarm in a search for one of three men who escaped after a running gun fight with Ottawa police early today, hospital authorities reported that wounded detective Thomas Stoneman remained in a critical condition.

Wilfred D'Amour, 25, of Ottawa, and Eugene Larmonthe, 24, of no fixed address, were captured and disarmed after a wild chase down laneways and over fences in the area of Metcalfe, Slater, O'Connor and Albert Streets. The third gunman escaped.

Police were not certain which of the men fired at Stoneman.

The 37-year-old plainclothesman had a bullet in his left lung.

Stoneman, assigned to investigate the theft from the Canadian War Museum last Monday night of three Thompson sub-machine guns and six automatic pistols, was first on the scene when prowlers were reported tampering with automobiles at the rear of a service station on Slater Street.

Constable Russel Berndt, driver of Stoneman's squad car, said the detective jumped from the moving machine and grappled with one of the men.

"The man pulled out a gun, threw his arm around Tom's shoulder and fired, with the muzzle of the gun right against his shoulder," he said.

Constables John Hardon and Thomas Walsh arrived in a second squad car just as the trio scattered. One later identified as Larmonthe ran past Hardon shouting "they've gone the other way," but Hardon noticed an object flashing in his hand and gave chase. The man turned and fired two shots before dashing into a laneway, then fired two more as Hardon followed. Constable Rene Gravelle came running from the opposite direction and cornered the fugitive.

Possible connection of the trio with the three-man robbery of the museum was not discounted by police although weapons taken from them did not correspond with any of the missing automatics.

Awards to Crews Of British Ships

London, Oct. 24 — (Reuters) — Awards to crews of British ships for gallantry, skill and devotion to duty in the capture of Okinawa and the Anase-Shoto Island area of the Pacific between Mar. 26 and April 20 were announced in last night's London Gazette.

Ships included the fleet carriers Formidable, Victorious, Indefatigable, Illustrious and Indomitable, which worked in collaboration with the United States Pacific Fleet.

Capt. Quinten De Graham, commanding the Indefatigable, was awarded the Bar to the D.S.O.

D.S.O.'s were awarded to Capt. Michael M. Denny, Commander of the Victorious, and to Captain Philip Ruck-Keene, C.B.E. Acting Cmdr. D. G. Lewis won the Bar to the D.S.O. which he was awarded in 1940 for his part in operations against the German battleship Graf Spee.

$1,126 Found in Table Drawer

Clinton, Ill., Oct. 24 (AP)—Mr. and Mrs. Harold Wrone, used furniture dealers, were loading household goods they had purchased when a library table drawer fell out. A large amount of currency and silver spilled on the ground. The Wrones handed over to authorities $1,126 to be held for the absent owner of the library table.

A striking trend in recent advertising has been the emphasis on giving the public facts and information about business problems and achievements.

LIBERALS SCORE SENSATIONAL WIN IN NOVA SCOTIA

Capture 28 of 30 Seats; Eliminate Progressive Conservative Party From the House

Halifax, Oct. 24.— (CP) — Sweeping to the most sensational victory in Nova Scotia political warfare, the Liberal government of Premier Angus L. Macdonald in yesterday's general election captured 28 of the Legislature's 30 seats, eliminated the Progressive Conservative Party from the House Leader Donald MacDonald sentation by one.

Both Progressive Conservative Leader L. W. Fraser and C.C.F. House Leader Donald McDonald went down to defeat as the Liberal tide rolled up seat after seat from the time the ballot boxes were opened at 5 p.m. E.S.T.

Premier Macdonald's election in Halifax South was conceded 30 minutes after the polls closed, and The Canadian Press trend-analysis indicated the return of his government at 6.24 p.m.

The C.C.F. retained two seats in industrial Cape Breton, although their leader was defeated by J. Smith MacIvor in Cape Breton South. The Progressive Conservatives lost the four seats they held in the last legislature, as the Liberals even moved into Colchester County, a Conservative stronghold for 39 years.

The victory was the greatest achieved at the polls since 1925, when the Conservatives under Hon. E. N. Rhodes ended a Liberal reign of office extending back to 1882 by winning 40 seats against three for the Liberals in the then 43-member House. The Redistribution Act of the early 1934's cut the House membership to 30, and in 1937 Premier Macdonald's government took 25 seats against five for the Conservatives.

Premier Well Ahead

Premier Macdonald, who returned to the leadership of the Nova Scotia Liberals this Fall after five years as Federal Navy Minister, won a convincing vote of confidence in Halifax South where he piled up a majority of 3,123 over his Progressive Conservative opponent, with the CCF. and an Independent-C.C.F. candidate trailing.

ALASKA HIGHWAY MAINTENANCE IN PEACETIME

Ottawa, Oct. 24 — (CP)—Maintenance of the Alaska highway for peacetime use has been decided upon, Trade Minister MacKinnon said in a radio speech prepared for delivery last night over a local station in Edmonton (CFRN). The $115,000,000 road which runs between Fort St. John, B.C., and Fairbanks, Alaska, was built as a rush defence job by the United States Army in 1942.

ALLIED SOLDIERS AS SANTA

London, Oct. 24 — (CP)—Allied soldiers will play Santa Claus this Christmas to thousands of Europe's children. The Children's Friendship and Gifts Association of London, formed to provide toys for London children whose homes were bombed early in the war, said that British, American and French soldiers already were making toys and that the Americans alone have promised 25,000 by Christmas.

Daily newspapers in Canada and the U. S. pay over $400 million in wages and salaries every year.

Norway's Traitor Quisling Executed By Firing Squad

Secrecy Surrounds Execution By Ten Military Policemen

By NED NORDNESS

Oslo, Oct. 24. (AP)—Vidkun Quisling, Norway's arch traitor, was executed by a firing squad before dawn today, paying the final price for dealing with an enemy, His King and countrymen defied throughout the bitter years of the war.

The greatest secrecy surrounded the execution, a Foreign Affairs office spokesman said.

Quisling was awakened in his cell and rushed before the firing squad of ten Norwegian military police. The only witnesses were an unidentified member of the state prosecution, a clergyman and the officer who gave the order to fire.

Anneaus Schjoedt, state prosecutor who presented the case against the pallid former puppet dictator, and Henrik Bergh, Quisling's defence lawyer, said they had not been notified in advance that Quisling was to be executed today.

In the slightly more than five years he ruled Norway as Adolf Hitler's puppet, the name Quisling became a synonym for traitor.

Virtually Unknown

He was virtually unknown outside his own country before he emerged in April, 1940, as a collaborator with the German invaders of his homeland. Behind him was a record of political failure and discontent with his profession, the army. Even after the Nazis lifted him to power he could rally no confidence among his people.

Strikes and sabotage marked his early rule, and his regime survived by Nazi force of arms.

Born of peasant stock in the southern province of Telemark, July 18, 1887, Quisling became a brilliant student and entered the army, in which he won speedy advancement, serving as military attache at Petrograd and Helsinki in 1918-20. In 1922-23 he represented the International Russian Relief organization in the Ukraine and Crimea.

He left Russia in 1930 and returned to Norway, where, having resigned from the army in 1928 after a quarrel with the general staff, he found himself forgotten.

Failed in Elections.

Entering politics, he was named by the Farmer's Party government of 1932 as Minister of Defence and as such presided over his country's disarmament. After a few obscure political battles, he founded in 1933 his own party, the "Nasjonal Samling," which failed in two elections to gain a single seat in the storthing (parliament) or poll as much as two per cent of the vote.

With his party's collapse Quisling dropped into political oblivion, not to reappear until Norway was under the German boot.

Theoretically he became second to the German civil governor in internal administration of the country, although a host of Nazi civil officials and the Gestapo stood between him and actual power.

In October, 1942, the exiled Norwegian government in London sentenced him to death for his puppet role, but his doom actually was sealed with the collapse last spring of his one support — German military might.

Surrendered to Police.

He drove with six associates to the Oslo police station in a bullet proof limousine and surrendered May 9. Immediately he was arraigned on a charge of treason. Then, as he was later to do at his trial, he maintained that all he had done was for the good of Norway.

His three-week trial began Aug. 20 before a high court of three-judges and four laymen.

The court decreed him guilty Sept. 10 and ordered his death before a firing squad. Allowed only to appeal his sentence, not the verdict, Quisling was granted unprecedented permission to appear before the supreme court personally to ask its leniency. His plea for mercy was unavailing, the highest tribunal confirming the death sentence Oct. 13th.

TWO DAYS' SALES PUT VICTORY LOAN AT $162,660,850

Total Already About Twenty Millions Above Sales for Same Days in 8th Loan

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP)—Maintaining its record pace, Canada's ninth victory loan reached a total of $162,660,850 for the first two days of the drive for a minimum of $1,500,000,000, a figure $20,000,000 ahead of contributions at the same point in the last loan drive, the National War Finance Committee reported today.

Canadians across the nation contributed $85,177,900 in the second day of the campaign yesterday compared with $75,006,450 on the second day of the eighth loan drive last spring. The two-day total compared with $142,851,750 at the corresponding point in the last loan.

The men in the street, returning servicemen, business firms and executives all contributed liberally to keep up the pace in this biggest of Canadian loan drives.

A thousand R.C.A.F. repats who reached Montreal yesterday on their way home set the pattern by buying $61,450 worth of bonds on top of previous commitments made in England.

Workers in two plants in Ontario had reached the million-dollar mark in their payrolls campaigns. At Sudbury 5,516 of the 8,000 workers of International Nickel had bought $1,512,000 worth of bonds against their objective of $1,750,000. Nine of the 42 group-payroll establishments of Sudbury had passed 200 per cent of their increased quotas.

Massey Harris Over

The Toronto head office of the Massey Harris Company reported 5,527 workers had subscribed $1,000,000 against their combined objective of $841,840 for all plants and offices across Canada.

Among yesterday's large purchasers were $3,000,000 by the Imperial Tobacco Company of Canada, Ltd., and $500,000 by Sherwin-Williams Company of Canada, Ltd., both of Montreal.

School children of Canada have raided their penny banks to contribute $500,000 so far.

At Lethbridge, Alta., a woman drove up to victory loan headquarters and dumped a gunny sack of silver on the counter. In it were half dollars, quarters, dimes and nickels—enough to buy $1,600 worth of bonds. She had saved the money selling eggs and milk.

Shooting for a goal of $1,500,000,000, the three-week drive started Monday with a sales record of $77,482,950.

All day yesterday reports of heavy investments in all parts of the country by individuals and business firms alike continued to

Radar Can X-ray Storm Accurately Within a Radius of Hundred Miles

By DOUGLAS HOW
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP)— Quite literally, Canadian pilots of the future may find themselves flying in clearer skies because of "stormy weather."

The basis of that statement lies in war-developed radar and its application to weather, a field in which it is struggling to make one of its major peacetime impressions. Another is the attempt to guide planes by its powers.

The qualifying phrase springs from the code name of "stormy weather" that represents the continuing, 16-months-old study of the principles and applications of radar in storm detection by the operational research group of the Canadian army.

The group came upon the subject in the midst of other research, decided that "it was a good thing" and has plunged ahead at a pace and with a scope that, in some respects, they believe, has outdistanced the work of any other nation.

Today its army enthusiasts say radar can:—

1. Virtually x-ray a storm accurately within a radius of 100 miles or an area of 31,000 square miles, sometimes as high as 160 miles, can give its position, its size and shape, its direction, its speed, and to a limited extent its intensity.

2. Thus sharply focus present storm predictions by meteorology, add to them, fill them out but not supercede them.

3. Guide planes through and around storm centres, warn air traffic controllers of storms on or approaching their airlines.

4. With a single station, do the work of hundreds of observers.

The army's research began with the discovery that the equipment that tracked down enemy planes and ships in war could also reflect the presence of rain or snow by "echoing" it back to the radar screen as mottled, fuzzy patches.

ST. MICHAEL'S HOLY ANGELS' SODALITY HOLDS RECEPTION

In the Church of St. Michael the Archangel, on Sunday evening Oct. 21, at 7.30 o'clock, twenty new members were received into the Sodality of the Holy Angels.

The ceremony of Reception was conducted by Rt. Rev. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson, D.P., V.G., M.C. Monsignor addressed the new members reminding them of the benefits they derived from membership in this Sodality, and exhorting them to strive to imitate the virtues of the Holy Angels.

Benediction of the Blessed Sacrament was then given by Flight Lieutenant the Rev. M. Mooney, Mountain View.

TRIBUTE PAID DEPARTING PATRON OF CHEESE FACTORY

Executive members of the Zion Hill Cheese Company paid sterling tribute to Mr. Lorne Brough, a company officer, patron and resident of the community when prior to his departure to his new home in Foxboro, he was presented with a Morris desk and pen and pencil set.

The presentation took place at the home of Cecil Ketcheson, cheese company president, when directors of the company met for the purpose of hiring their cheese maker, Delbert Rowe, for another season. Following the business meeting Roy Sills called those in attendance to order and made the presentation to Mr. Brough. Taken completely by surprise Mr. Brough expressed his appreciation for being remembered by his friends and his regret at leaving the Zion Hill community.

DIRECTOR TO ADDRESS LECTURE, STUDY CLUB

Director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education, Edward Annand Corbett, M.A., LL.D., Toronto, will be the guest speaker at the regular meeting of the Belleville Lecture and Study Club, Friday evening, it has been announced.

Former faculty member of the University of Alberta at Edmonton, Mr. Corbett has travelled extensively thoughout Canada and is connected with numerous educational organizations. He was appointed director of the Canadian Association for Adult Education in 1936 and has given many lectures on educational topics and on the work of the Association.

GRANTED USE FIRST MONDAY OF MONTH

In Monday's edition of The Ontario Intelligencer in the report of the Board of Education meeting of the previous Friday evening, it was reported the Collegiate Home and School Club had been granted the use of the auditorium for the third Monday of each month. This, it has been pointed out, was an error, the use of the Collegiate auditorium having been granted the association for the first Monday evening in each month.

PO. ALEX G. McKAY REPORTED KILLED

Attached to a drogue flight at Mountain View prior to his remustering for air crew in the R.C.A.F., Pilot Officer Alexander G. McKay, home address Halifax, N.S., is now reported to have been killed Jan. 15, 1945, when his bomber was shot down over Germany. All members of the crew with the exception of the navigator lost their lives and are buried in Germany.

A native of Aberdeen, Scotland, P/O. McKay enlisted in Halifax and was posted to Mountain View and with his wife lived in Belleville for three and one-half years. Remustering to air crew he trained as an air gunner graduating from Mont Joli in Jan. 1944. Mrs. McKay and her two children Heather and Peter, reside in Halifax.

DOWNS-COULTER CO., TRENTON, PASSES LOAN OBJECTIVE

Downs-Coulter Company of Trenton, is the second industrial firm of that town and the third in Hastings County to achieve its objective in the Payroll Savings section of the 9th Victory Loan, it was announced today by county campaign officials. Previously Trenton Bridge Company and Canada Cement Company had surpassed their respective loan objectives, the last two prior to the official opening of the loan.

LOAN THERMOMETER PUT IN POSITION AT SERVICE STATION

Symbolizing things which are really worth while in life and that which represents a higher standard of living for democratic nations, namely, home, travel, college and automobiles, the current Victory Loan campaign thermometer placed over the McColl Frontenac gasoline station at the corner of Front and Bridge Streets points to Victory Bonds as the manner in which these might be achieved.

The attractive and smartly painted sign advises its readers to "Fill your pen of future happiness" by signing for the purchase of Victory Bonds in the 9th Victory Loan thus assuring a home and the better things of life in later years. Progress of the county campaign will be noted on a special thermometer on which the county objective of $3,600,000 is marked.

Foxboro Child Killed by Truck Near His Home

Struck down by a truck when he ran across the road after becoming frightened at a farm tractor which was emerging from a gateway on Mudcat Lane, one quarter mile east of Foxboro, five-year-old D'Arcy Leland received fatal injuries late Tuesday afternoon. He died a short time later after being admitted to Belleville hospital.

According to police the lad became frightened of the tractor and ran across the road directly into the path of an eastbound truck driven by Harry L. Clarke, R. R. Holloway. The Leland boy, a ward of the Children's Aid, was staying at the home of Miss Evelyn Sullivan.

A preliminary inquest was held at the hospital Tuesday evening and after identification of the body was adjourned until October 30th at the city police station in Belleville.

Rotarians Visit Plainfield To Enjoy Chicken Supper And Give Splendid Program

Annual Trek to Mingle With County Folk One of Highlights of Rotary Year

Surviving chickens in the vicinity of Plainfield (if there are any) would have flushed with pride if it had not been after hen working hours had they but seen one hundred and twenty-five chicken-stuffed Belleville Rotarians and their wives staggering (figuratively) homewards quite late Tuesday evening at the conclusion of the annual banquet which is left yearly in the capable hands of the Women's Auxiliary of the Plainfield United Church.

There was delicious chicken with white fluffy biscuits, floundering around in rivers of golden gravy. There was Madame Hen and her offspring (recent) roasted to a bronzed brown, under which was hidden moundlets of rich sagy stuffing. There was fried chicken, which would have done credit to a southern mammy.

And the trimmings. Remember, in the piping days of peace when church and other organizations staged the old-fashioned chicken dinner? Well, the Plainfield repast was a post-war replica, plus.

Shimmering Jellies

Shimmering jellies, gold-crusted scalloped potatoes; salads, pickles, snowy bread and yellow butter, beans that snuggled in baking pans overflowing with tomato sauce; cabbage an ordinary name raised to social culinary heights through the skilled manipulations of clever Plainfield hands, presented in salad form that was both eye and mouth watering.

The piles of fluffy pies. "Yer pays yer money and yer takes yer choice." There was no choice. Pies that those proverbial grandmothers used to make suffered the severest competition of decades. The "punkin" variety was at least an inch thick. Apple, brother, there was a dish, an easy competitor. Lemon, with meringue presenting a snowy covering easily an inch above fork level; raisin, with rich red juices defying a knife or fork, and other kinds. (You could have had all, if you could find room).

Rich red apples, glowing with color; the deep blue of grapes provided an after-dinner tidbit that found plenty of favor.

Outstanding Program.

The banquet, not necessarily a ladies' night, for the clubmen was another edition of those functions which the Rotary Club sponsors as a tribute to the Rotary Anns.

President "Mac" McLean, had arranged, with his committees an outstanding program, under the capable chairmanship of Rotarian Jack Deacon. To that musical genius of the club, his good lady and Leo Riggs plus other outstanding talent must go the palms for the success of the evening, outside of the culinary achievements.

Rotarian Jack, in the role of master of ceremonies, led off his program with several local selections He was in splendid voice and his rendition received rounds of well-deserved applause. Miss Ethel Smith, one of Belleville's well known vocalists was heard in two numbers and her performances herald in a consensus, a bright future for her.

Toasts Proposed.

Rotarian Dr. Bert Howard, proposed the toast to the ladies, amid some heckling by various members. Mrs. Stanley Hagerman, in a brief, but eloquent address, in the response to the toast, voiced the appreciation of the Rotary Ann's and other lady guests present.

Leo Riggs, piano impresario, was perhaps never in better form. His rendition of a Hungarian Rhapsody played in typical style not only brought out Mr. Riggs' mastery of his favorite instrument, but to many of his listeners, his artistry in execution of a number that was not only classical in its origin but outstanding in its rendition.

Miss Eileen Gill tapped her way to the hearts of her audience in a well-executed number. Little Miss Gladys Beatty, an acrobatic dancer, added a distinct touch of variation to the program.

Many Fined.

President "Mac" McLean, who presided added further zest with witty remarks, and the usual good-natured fine-baiting went on apace with the usual results.

On behalf of the Plainfield W.A. the Rev. A. Mackenzie, expressed appreciation of the visit of the Rotarians to his field. In lighter vein Mr. Mackenzie said, "we appreciate what you have done for us. We are not interested in what you take away with you as much as what you leave with us".

Rotarian Ed. Bernstein, conveyed the appreciation of the clubmen in a brief but eloquent address.

Obituary

LIONEL GEORGE HARRIS

Lionel George (Guy) Harris, 238 Bridge Street East, died early this morning in the Belleville General Hospital after a brief illness.

Born in this city the late Mr. Harris was in his 53rd year, and was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Edward B. Harris, his father being the founder of the Harris Bread business. When the first Great War occurred, he answered the call of his King and Country and enlisted in 1914 with the Cobourg Heavy Battery and rose to the rank of Sergeant-Major. He served overseas to the end of the war and was severely wounded and gassed. On leaving hospital he was engaged as a Signal Instructor. He returned home in 1919.

To many friends in this city and elsewhere and to his old "Comrades in Arms" the sudden death of Lionel Harris has brought much regret and by them he will be much missed. He was a member of Christ Church and fraternally he was a member of Eureka Lodge No. 283 A.F. and A.M., and a prominent member of the Army and Navy Veterans Association, Branch No. 201.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Bertha Shaw and one brother, Mr. Edward Harris, Belleville.

LATE WILLIAM WORRELL

On Tuesday afternoon the funeral of William Worrell, late residence, 121 Station Street, took place from the Thomas C. Thompson Funeral Home, Everett Street. The service in the chapel and at Belleville Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. T. S. Russell, Rector of Emmanuel Reformed Episcopal Church, assisted by the Rev. E. A. J. Wicks, pastor of Grace Chapel.

During the service a vocal solo was rendered by Mrs. Wicks.

The bearers were Messrs. Dorland Ross, Fred Smith, James Gibson, Archie Mansfield, G. Draycott and Samuel Turner.

LATE MRS. SARAH BARAGAR

The funeral of Mrs. Sarah Elizabeth (Redington) Baragar, widow of H. W. Baragar, and late residence 68 Octavia Street, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street. The service in the chapel and at Foxboro Cemetery was conducted by the Rev. C. V. Freeman, pastor of the Alliance Tabernacle, assisted by the Rev. E. Lorimer and the Rev. W. Willoughby.

The bearers were Messrs. Harold Vanderwater, Arthur Breach, Roy Atyeo, Otto Shimdell, Earl Vrooman and Daniel Benn.

LATE MRS. ABBIE HARROW

The funeral of Mrs. Abbie Annie (Ruttan) Harrow, widow of Alfred Henry Harrow, took place from the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, on Tuesday afternoon. The service in the chapel and at Elmwood Cemetery, Corbyville, was conducted by the Rev. J. W. Houston, minister of the Tabernacle United Church.

The bearers were Messrs. Jack Pratt, William Kelly, O. Sculthorpe, Ralph Batty, Walter Gill and R. Belnap.

LATE FRANK M. HAFFEY
(Trenton)

Trenton, Oct. 24 — (Special) — The funeral of Frank Michael Haffey, druggist of this town, who died suddenly on Friday, Oct. 19, took place from the Weaver Funeral Home here on Monday morning, Oct. 22nd., to the Church of St.-Peter-in-Chains where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father Carley, who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in Mount Calvary Cemetery.

The bearers were Messrs. Henry Desjardine, William O'Neill, Mari Scanlan, Robert LaMorre, Victor Auger and Dr. V. J. Byrne.

The late Mr. Haffey was born 63 years ago near Tottenham, Ontario. For some years he lived in Toronto and of late years he has conducted a drug store here.

Surviving him are two daughters, Mrs. C. Cumberland, Whitby, and Miss Catherine Haffey, Toronto; four sons, Clyde of the Postal Corps, overseas; John of Trenton; Michael of the R.C.A.F., Toronto, and Neil, Trenton; five sisters, Mrs. James Doyle, Clairmont, Ontario; Mrs. T. Dahl, Grafton, North Dakota, and the Misses Agnes, Kathleen and Camilla, all of Toronto. His wife died four years ago.

MRS. CATHERINE HAGERMAN
(Corbyville)

Mrs. Catherine Marion Hagerman, wife of Mr. Charles Harry Hagerman, died at her home in Corbyville late Tuesday morning, after a brief illness.

Born at Bowmore, Scotland, the late Mrs. Hagerman was in her 66th year. For some years she lived in Belleville, later moving to Tweed. Since last June she made her home in Corbyville. She was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, Belleville, and was highly esteemed. Fraternally she was an honorary member of the Sons of Scotland.

Surviving her are her husband, two daughters, Miss Annie Hagerman, at home and Mrs. Earl (Catherine) Grey, Trenton, one sister, Mrs. James McCormick, Scotland.

Entire Building Is Blown up By German Mine

Even as he stood within the confines of the Italian village a few miles above the beachhead, A. B. L. McConnell, of Wellington saw an entire building disintegrate, burying several Canadian troops and hurling debris for hundreds of yards. McConnell miraculously escaped injury.

He at the time was serving with a naval landing party which had orders to follow up the army commandos for covering purposes.

McConnell arrived home a few days ago after serving three-and-one-half years with the navy. He saw plenty of service and according to him, the biggest thrill of the war occurred "when I was able to throw lead at the Germans".

"Whatever hit the building did a good job", he related. "It suddenly seemed to cave in and the whole shack fell to pieces. Another fifty feet and I would now be pushing up Italian daises."

Previous to the war he was associated with the Quinte Milk Products Company in Wellington.

Rev. J.W. Platt Achieves Quota In Bond Sales

Always in previous Victory Loans one of the first canvassers in his own canvassing district and in Hastings County to achieve his objective in bond sales, Rev. J. W. Platt, of Thurlow township, has again proved his worth as a salesman and is the first canvasser in the county to go "over the top" in personal bond sales.

Set an objective of $30,000 in bond sales for the 9th Victory Loan, Mr. Platt, a superannuated United Church Minister, has already achieved that mark and by Tuesday evening, was $6,000 over his minimum goal. He sold $25,000 worth of bonds on Tuesday, the second day of the loan.

Mr. Platt has been a constant sales worker in each of the nine Victory Loans to date. His canvassing district is in the 2nd Concession of Thurlow and in Point Anne village.

JAP CABINET APPROVES WOMAN'S SUFFRAGE

Tokyo, Oct. 24 — (AP)—Domei agency today reported that the cabinet has approved woman's suffrage and lowering of the voting age for men from 25 to 20 years. The 20-year limit would govern women's voting also.

Wreck of Tirpitz Will Remain As Attraction for Tourists

Tromsoe, Norway, Oct. 24 (AP)—The sunken battleship Tirpitz, former pride of the German fleet, probably will remain in a fjord near Tromsoe as a tourist attraction, Commodore Peter Bredsdorff said today.

The Norwegian naval officer said the wrecked battleship sunk by RAF "earthquake bombs," had been inspected by British divers and all salvage material has been removed—either by them or the Germans. What's left of the rusty hulk, still full of bodies of German seamen, is not worth cutting up for scrap.

"Tromsoe was a great tourist place before the war and probably will be again," Commodore Bredsdorff said. "We can leave the Tirpitz where she is and run excursion boats out to her."

Salvage Halted

The snow-covered hulk of the 45,000-ton ship rises from the fjord against a background of snow-covered hills. A string of buoys surrounds her and one small Norwegian vessel keeps guard.

For a time during the summer it was possible to go aboard part of the ship above water through holes the Germans cut in the bottom while trying to rescue the trapped crew.

Inside was the smell of decomposed flesh and masses of oil and rust. But since oil makes climbing around the ship dangerous and since it is still full of unexploded ammunition, all visitors are forbidden and salvage has halted.

It is estimated that 800 bodies remain inside the ship. Most of the 1,400 crew members were caught in the RAF bombing Nov. 12, 1944.

Always on Run

The big battleship, sister of the sunken Bismarck, took part in no major battles during the war. She spent most of her time slinking from spot to spot along the Norwegian coast where a force of 14,000 men was kept to protect her.

She was damaged first by a midget submarine, then by bombing. An RAF force of Lancasters flying from a base in Scotland finished her off in a final raid with 11-ton bombs, scoring three hits and a near miss.

One of the first visitors in Tromsoe's new tourist attraction was Wing Cmdr. J. G. Tait. He led that final raid which ended the Tirpitz threat.

Mosquito Flies Atlantic in 5 Hrs.

Montreal, Oct. 24 (CP)—A RAF Mosquito today flew the Atlantic from Gander Airfield, Newfoundland, to St. Mawgans, Cornwall, England, in five hours and 10 minutes, establishing a record for a west-east crossing. The previous mark, set in May by a Mosquito of RAF Transport Command, Montreal, on a flight from Gander to Prestwick, Scotland, was five hours and 36 minutes.

(The BBC said the record-breaking plane had landed in Cornwall today.)

The Mosquito, a long-range photographic reconnaissance aircraft which flew many missions in Europe and Africa during the war, was piloted by Wing Cmdr. J. R. H. Merifield.

It had already beaten all records for an east-west Atlantic crossing when it flew from St. Mawgans, at the extreme southwest tip of England, in Torbay Airfield, Newfoundland, in six hours and 58 minutes.

East-west flights are about one-third slower than west-east crossings because of prevailing headwinds.

From Torbay, the Mosquito had proceeded to Montreal and Ottawa, where its captain discussed new developments and equipment of photographic reconnaissance aircraft with members of the Survey Wing of the R.C.A.F.

White Man's Burden to Level Up

Salt Lake City, Oct. 24 (AP)—"If the white man does not carry his burden, another race will carry his coffin," Carl Berendsen, New Zealand's Minister to the United States said in an address Tuesday night. The white man's burden, said Mr. Berendsen, is to "level up the good things of life."

Corvettes Selling For $30,000 Each

Sorel, Que., Oct. 24 (CP)— F. W. Hamilton, custodian-manager for War Assets Corporation here, said today that $50,000 was the best price received for a corvette —which originally cost $800,000. The average price obtained has been $30,000.

The $50,000 sale was that of H.M.C.S. Merritonia, first corvette to be sold, Mr. Hamilton disclosed.

Fairmile motor-launches, which cost nearly $250,000 to build, are now going to new owners for an initial outlay of $3,000. Only 16 of the 55 wooden-hulled craft received at Sorel remain.

Venezuela has bought seven corvettes, two of which are intended for use as naval craft while five will be converted into merchant ships.

Four 780-ton steel-hulled minesweepers have been sold to Marine Industries, Limited.

The Assiniboine, only destroyer, has been purchased by a firm in Baltimore, Md., for scrap.

Volunteers Lasso Loose Hun Mine

London, Oct. 24—(CP)—Volunteers lassoed a huge German mine bobbing dangerously close to the storm battered seawall of the channel coast town of Bognor Regis Tuesday, saving the place from possible disaster.

The mine swept toward the English shore in a gale which reached 70 miles an hour, rolling up 30-foot waves which disrupted channel shipping and halted vehicular traffic along the shore.

Shops and hotels along the Bognor Regis seawall were abandoned hastily when the mine approached on the crest of a roaring tide. No one could say how it crossed the barrier rocks, but it moved into shallow water and encroached upon the seawall where it might have exploded on contact.

Two policemen and a surveyor volunteered for the perilous task of taming the mine. When waves receded momentarily, they rushed out and tied a wire rope around the weapon and made it fast to a jetty. When the tide recedes, a bomb disposal crew will deaden the mine.

Suggests Sugar Island Location for Centre Of United Nations

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 24—(CP)—Mayor W. J. McMeeken of Sault Ste. Marie said Monday night he has written Prime Minister Mackenzie King, now in London, urging that Canada and the United States should "fully investigate" facilities at Sugar Island before deciding a location for the United Nations peace centre. Sugar Island's 30,000 acres is in the St. Mary's River, its westerly end a mile east of the famed Sault locks.

Newfoundland Not 'Overseas'

Ottawa, Oct. 24 (CP) — The Commons' Veterans Committee on a show of hands today adopted a clause for the War Service Grants Act which places Newfoundland, for the purpose of payment of discharge benefits, within the Western Hemisphere and therefore not "overseas."

Its members defeated an amendment by Maj. Leslie Mutch (L—Winnipeg South) that would have added Newfoundland to Greenland, Iceland and the Aleutian Islands as places excluded from the hemisphere.

On the motion of George Cruickshank (L—Fraser Valley) the committee adopted a clause defining the Western Hemisphere as the continents of North and South America, "the islands adjacent thereto and the territorial waters thereof, including Newfoundland, Bermuda and the West Indies."

The committee approved a section which made N.R.M.A. personnel who served in the Aleutians, the United Kingdom, the Western Europe or Mediterranean theatres of war eligible for gratuities.

It approved, too, a definition of overseas service as "service involving duties required to be performed outside the Western Hemisphere and includes service involving duties required to be performed outside of Canada and the United States and the territorial waters thereof in aircraft or anywhere in a ship or other vessel, service in which is classed as 'sea time' for the purpose of advancement of naval ratings or which would be so classed were the ship or other vessel in the service of the naval forces of Canada."

RADAR CAN X-RAY

Can Fix Freezing Levels

Once a mystery and a nuisance, the patches have been exploited until it has been found, for instance, that it is possible to fix the freezing level within 500-600 feet. With certain equipment cloud and fog can be detected and with other equipment the altitude and vertical extent of storms can be traced.

In recapitulation, the army group feels that on the actual results of determining the type of precipitation and on the use of radar as a tool for locating that precipitation it has carried radar work farther than any other group anywhere.

It has co-operated with numerous organizations including the National Research Council, the Dominion Meteorological Service, the other services and the Department of Transport, but the research itself has been the army's project. Its equipment has been designed or redesigned by the research council.

On an experimental basis the group now provides reports to organizations like the Department of Transport through a system of transmitting coded messages which can be put to use within eight or nine minutes of the start of transmission.

The researchers, foreseeing the possibility of a chain of radar stations from coast to coast, contend that "if its uses were fully exploited the costs should be within reason."

Offshoots of Developments

The offshoots of such a development, say they might:—

Tell passengers waiting for a weather-delayed plane flight just when the delay would end.

Warn farmers of that drenching or warn a housewife that she had better take along an umbrella when she sets out for the market.

The "stormy weather" project is under Lt.-Col. L. G. Eon of Montreal who until recently was associated with Dr. J. S. Marshall, now at McGill University.

The meteorological adviser is Leslie Tibbles of the Department of Transport at Rockcliffe Airport, Ottawa.

Mrs. Lottie Smith, Detroit, Mich is visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alex. Bardy.

The flowers on the altar of Christ Church, Sunday were given by Mrs. Victor Brant in affectionate remembrance of Alicia Jean Brant, the six years old daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Kenneth Brant, who was accidentally killed by a car two years ago.

Mrs. Kate Maracle has been notified that her grandson, FO. Ray W. Martin has received the Distinguished Flying Cross. FO Martin is the son of Lorne S. Martin, Windsor, and the late Mrs. Martin, formerly Miss Ella Maracle of the Reserve. The Royal Canadian Airforce headquarters in Ottawa made the announcement recently. The 21-year-old airman was attached to a Lancaster squadron as bombardier, and had made 36 operational flights over Germany.

. . . these hands
took care of you . . . will they have the skill
to take care of him . . ?

THESE are young hands . . . reliable hands . . . they held a hot rifle and fought for your freedom. BUT unless they are trained in the skills of peace, they will not be able to provide a good living for their owner.

One of the big jobs your Victory Loan dollars can do is to provide thousands of returned men with training in paying skills . . . men who were fighting for us during those years that might have brought them trade or business experience. Who can refuse to sign for Victory in such a cause?

Now the war is over, but the fight to win the peace has just begun. Now is the time to show our appreciation, to give our men a good start in civilian life, to repay in some measure what they gave up for us. Remember, there is now only one Victory Loan in the 12 months' period, so you can buy twice as many bonds this time.

Wide Participation in Loan

Early reports of the Ninth Victory Loan indicate that Canadians are going to do what Finance Minister Ilsley advised in Toronto on the opening day of the loan, "exceed the minimum possible objective by the largest possible margin."

It is a source of the greatest encouragement that many canvassing centres have already exceeded their minimum objectives and are moving forward into higher totals, while canvassers everywhere report enthusiasm.

Canadians are acting in the spirit of the Finance Minister when he said that we are now entering upon the great adventure and the great test of peace, which is a time for action, not reaction, a time for hope not fear, and a time to press forward to new goals, not to rest on past achievements. The people are one in their aim to play their part in winning the peace.

They have come to the full realization that they have broken the aggression that the enemy built up, have smashed their forces on land, on the sea and in the air and are determined to show that they can face the problems of peace in the same spirit of victory so that they will attain security and the full rewards of the mighty effort made on the war fronts of the world and on the home front.

Having smashed the enemy, they are thrilled to face the new tasks of peace. They realize that the individual contribution to the war effort went a great distance toward victory and that united effort rounded out this effort to the final achievement. Individuals now in the work of rehabilitation and reconstruction are testing their mettle because they know that their individual effort in peacetime can be multiplied many times in the community and national effort — to achieve greater things than have been thought possible. They are testing their financial strength by doing their utmost.

They know that participation in the loan can bring the best results for the years ahead.

Fifty Years of X-ray

In the age of marvels and the greatest marvel of all, the demonstration of the harnessing of power of the atom in the atomic bomb, men's minds are naturally alert in matters of science. The growth of man's power over nature and its secrets has made man conscious of the wonder of nature and life.

For half a century there has been the discovery of the X-ray by Dr. Roentgen which has been conferring untold benefits upon the human race. It is but a foretaste of the marvellous works which are yet to come.

So great an event as the anniversary of the discovery of these rays will not pass unnoticed. During the week of Nov. 5 to 10 there is to be a celebration to acquaint the public with the importance and value of the X-ray as a medical instrument and the contribution it has made to the health and well-being of every individual. Dr. Gorden E. Richards of Toronto has been appointed to the advisory committee making plans for the semicentennial of discovery of the X-ray.

This anniversary, planned by the American College of Radiology, will pay particular tribute to Wilhelm Conrad Roentgen who discovered the rays on Nov. 8, 1895, at the Physical Institute of the University of Wurzburg in Bavaria. Roentgen, who was a modest, unassuming scientist, presented his discovery to mankind, making no effort to commercialize on these rays which opened a new era in the field of medical practice.

In the half century since Roentgen observed that radiations could be produced which would penetrate solid objects and register on photographic plates, X-ray has become one of the most complex of medical specialities.

Most people have some knowledge of the importance of the X-ray. They know that no part of the human body is hidden from the modern radiologist and disease of the heart, lungs, digestive tract and other organs of the body can be detected with the aid of the X-ray in time for treatment. Injuries of the bones are easily diagnosed. X-ray plays a part in the preservation of the teeth and of health generally by what it reveals of the conditions of man's eating tools. In addition to its diagnostic assistance to the radiologist, it is a valuable instrument in the treatment of both benign and malignant tumors, various blood vessels and more than 80 skin disorders.

In paying honor to Dr. Roentgen, the world serves itself because it helps to stress more and more the handmaiden which science is to men in preservation of health of individual and community. The course of science has had an amazing development, which in other days would be looked upon as unexplained wonder, but which today is commonplace to mankind.

What is ahead in science is to be of the greatest importance. No one can feel that more than the surface of the inventions and knowledge so essential has been scratched or revealed. Discoveries will follow discoveries and man stands to gain everything by these.

The spirit of an explorer into the secrets of nature like Dr. Roentgen who labored purely out of love for humanity and truth opens an unending vista of discovery and human betterment.

Are We Willing to Pay?

Are Canadians ready to pay substantially more than the 22 cents per capita which represented their pre-war investment in scientists and research? asks Montreal Herald.

Upon the answer depends Canada's ability to retain her leadership in the field of atomic research, with all its military, medical and industrial implications, Dr. Leo Yaffe noted in addressing the Young Men's Canadian Club on "The Atomic Age."

Dr. Yaffe pointed out that Canada's rolé in the atomic bomb drama did not come to her because of Canadian ingenuity but because of her strategic location and immunity from Nazi bombs.

Unquestionably, it brought her a postwar opportunity. Her ability to take advantage of it depends on her readiness to invest in brains and laboratories.

Pickup!

(Christian Science Monitor)

We had all but forgotten that "let's-go-places-and-do-things" feeling that comes from stepping on the accelerator, and having the engine respond with never a "nay" in its horsepower. In fact, we had almost come to call it mule power, so delayed has been its reaction during these war years. "Stubborn," we said, "just because it can't have all the gasoline it wants." But it appears the poor thing was undernourished all the while—not enough octane content.

Now that it is getting back on its pre-war-plus diet—plus a higher octant rating—it responds eagerly to the touch of the tie. For the present, judging from the average age of most of our gasoline buggies, it had better be a timid toe, or the worn shoes won't be able to take it. But when new tires and new gasoline team up, watch our post-war dust!

The Example of Smolensk

Before the war, Smolensk, a Russian city 200 miles west of Moscow, had 176,000 inhabitants, 8,000 buildings, 96 factories, 17 schools of higher education, 19 libraries. After the war it has 255,000 population, 700 buildings, no factories, no schools of higher education and no libraries. This sort of thing is one reason that the Russians feel pretty strongly about a hard peace for Germany, says Milwaukee Journal.

Almost ten million lines of sponsored advertising in daily newspapers presented the claims of the Red Cross to the public during the war.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

THE ATTIC

"Clean out the attic!" oft she said.
"The place with dust is carpeted
And filled with things we'll never use—
Your fishing hats and gardening shoes,
And, thinking they'll be useful yet,
Their high chair and their bassinet."

So atticward we'd often go
To stare at things and murmur: "No!
No! Let us not throw that away
'Twill handy be another day.
No! No! Perhaps the children yet
Will want to use that bassinet.

"Though better high chairs now they make,
Let's keep this one for old-times' sake.
'Twas Bud's and Janet's. He or she May want it, if the need should be.
Fresh paint would make it good as new."
And thus our stock of treasures grew.

Old books and trinkets, toys and games,
Worn chairs, outmoded picture frames
Stored in the attic space above—
Dust covered but enriched with love.
A storage room in which appears
The harvest of our happier years.

40 YEARS AGO

OCT. 24TH, 1905

Harry Davis died here today after a lengthy illness in his 36th year. He came to this city some years ago to become editor of the Daily Sun and continued with that paper for some years. Later he became editor of the Daily Ontario. For some time illness prevented him engaging in his chosen profession. Prior to coming to Belleville he was engaged in newspaper work in Toronto, Waterloo, Berlin and Ottawa. He was a clever and graceful writer. During his residence here Harry Davis made many friends and his death is much regretted by them and especially so by his comrades of the Fourth Estate.

Mr. H. K. Denyes will represent the South Hastings Sunday School Association at the Provincial convention in London, Ontario, this week

C.N.R. President Foresees More Work for Canadians

Ottawa, Oct. 24—(CP)— R. C. Vaughan, president of the C. N. R. yesterday told the parliamentary committee on railways that the war had demonstrated "beyond any doubt" the capacity of the C.N.R. to handle traffic and "tremendous" volume. It was obvious, he said, that with volume the railway could be operated at a profit.

"I feel it is necessary, however to sound a note of caution," he added. "It is probable that with the war emergency over, traffic will recede. To what extent we shall have to wait to find out.

"All the indications are that there is going to be more work in Canada than there was prior to the war, and that there will be more work for the railways. In the past the railways could earn a surplus on a gross revenue of $300,000,000. The picture has changed in the interval because prices of labor and material have been substantially increased."

Due to shortages of labor and materials, repairs and renewals not immediately essential had to be deferred and to this extent a reserve had been provided by direct charges to operating expenses. At the end of 1944 this reserve totalled $34,000,000 and it was expected a further sum of between $6,000,000 and $7,000,000 would be provided this year. This was a cash reserve, with the funds being invested in Victory bonds.

Spent $15,286,000

Since the outbreak of war and apart from the acquisition of additional rolling stock, approximately $15,286,000 has been expended on capital account for so-called war projects, involving the construction, extension or improvement of tracks, yards, sidings and other railway facilities

It had been considered the end of the war would determine the usefulness of some portion of these facilities and that in such case the capital expenditure involved, less salvage, should be amortized by charges to operating expenses. The amount so amortized to the end of 1945 would total $3,826,000. This fund also was invested in Victory bonds.

Before the war the practice was followed on Canadian lines of charging to operating expenses the loss when units of property were destroyed or worn out in service. This related to both fixed property and to rolling stock. In 1940 depreciation accounting was adopted with respect to rolling stock.

During the six years, 1940-1945, the total charge to operating expenses for system equipment depreciation accruals would have been $98,427,000. The funds thus made available had been used to finance capital expenditures.

Notwithstanding price controls the war brought substantial increases in the price of materials used in railway maintenance and operation. The purchase price of fuel now averaged $6.02 per ton against $4.016 in 1939. Treated ties averaged $1.90 each against $1.35 and untreated ties $1.26 each against 61 cents each. New rail cost $7.73 per ton more and there had been an increase in the price of other railway material of about 17½ per cent.

Provide Against Loss

To provide against loss which might have to be taken if there were any important recession in the post-war prices, involving a write-down of inventories, a reserve of $7,524,000 had been provided by charges to operating expenses. This fund also was invested in Victory bonds.

Before 1943, reserves had not been set up against annuity contracts issued by the railway to employees going on pension under the 1935 contractual plan. Therefore the practice had been to charge currently to operating expenses the actual pension payments made at the expense of the company. Advantage had been taken of the high revenues of the war period to put the accounting for pension contracts on to a fund reserve basis. The total additional revenue which would have been set aside 1943 to 1945 under this arrangement is $25,926,000. This reserve was invested in Victory bonds.

HOUSE DEBATES

Nettled by Questions

Discussion of the T.C.A. resolution evoked exchanges as Mr. Howe, nettled by some of the questions, remarked there was a "lot of nonsense being talked here" and one Progressive Conservative member described T.C.A. as a "play-thing" which Mr. Howe had "under his thumb."

The bill would provide for an increase in T.C.A. capitalization from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000 and authorize the C.N.R. to issue securities up to $25,000,000 to acquire T.C.A. stock.

It also would provide authority and maintain air services under contract with T.C.A. and make provisions for payment of subsidies to those corporations.

During the debate Mr. Howe made these statements:—

1. The government expects to carry out its policy of divesting air lines from surface transportation companies by next May but this does not necessarily mean the government will buy up those services.

2. The divesting order will be issued to the Canadian National Railways and the Canadian Pacific Railway at the same time.

Feeder Lines Continued

3. Feeder line air services now in existence will be continued.

4. The bill itself will make no change in the relationship between T.C.A. and the C.N.R., which is that the air line is owned by the railway.

5. Separate corporations provided for in the bill will be solely for the handling of trans-ocean services.

6. Subsidies to be paid under the bill will assist trans-ocean companies during their initial operation until there was sufficient passenger traffic.

7. Among routes under consideration for expansion of T.C.A. domestic service was one from Winnipeg to Saskatoon to Edmonton and then to the West Coast.

C.C.F. Supports

Stanley Knowles (CCF-Winnipeg North Centre) said the C.C.F. supported Mr. Howe's proposals and described aviation as one of the fields of natural monopoly which should be under government control. However, the C.C.F. party would liked to have seen feeder lines brought under public ownership.

Howard Green (PC-Vancouver South) said the reason the C.C.F. was supporting the government policy in T.C.A. was because that party was aiming at the "socialization" of all means of transport in Canada.

He suggested Mr. Howe would be wise to make a statement of government policy in that direction and remarked that as far as the Progressive Conservatives were conerned they did not believe in such a policy.

More Information Sought

Mr. Green sought more information on international services and Mr. Howe said the proposed Canada-United Kingdom route already had been pioneered during the war so there would be no need for subsidy. This service would be started before the end of the year.

However, the proposed lines from Canada to South America and across the Pacific would have to be subsidized in their initial stages because of a lack of traffic. These services eventually would show a profit. The government did not intend to operate indefinitely any service which did not return a profit.

The Trans-Pacific flight would be from Vancouver, and negotiations were pending with Russia for use of a northern route from Edmonton to Siberia, China, Japan and then Australia and New Zealand.

Pioneer in Field

The Minister said he did not favor the nationalization of bush lines, essential to whole communities in the north country. Where necessary, the government would pay a subsidy for a certain area but could not be provided because of cost.

Garfield Case (PC—Grey North) said that the Canadian Pacific Railway, which was being asked to divest itself of its air lines, had been a pioneer in the air field.

Had the C.P.R. not taken over "failing lines among the small companies there would be no The Canadian Pacific air lines feeder services in Canada today. the C.P.R.'s air service subsidiary, had not held a dividend since it had gone into operation and was, in fact, a definite liability" to the C.P.R.

Mr. Case said the closer "you get to a monopoly the more difficult it becomes to compare efficiency with economic operation."

Mr. Case asked Mr. Howe to state, if he could, if Canadian Pacific Air Lines had made any money on the operation of their services. He asked how C.P.A. paid the government in taxes and how much T.C.A. paid.

Mr. Howe said the resolution had nothing to do with C.P.A. or the divesting of air lines from surface transportation companies.

The resolution dealt with Trans-Canada Air Lines which would continue to belong to C.N.R. after the legislation was passed.

YOU MUST GO ON EATING

One unhappy husband asks how the blue blazes he can rescue his wife from the "nuts" who have her going on frequent extended juice diets to "alkalize" her system, with the result that she looks like a sack of bones and has no vitality left. She refuses to eat anything that contains protein (that is, if the "nuts" have condemned the item on that score), and so her husband fears she is not getting the proportion of the amino-acids which, he understands, are indispensable for normal nutrition.

The poor man may be right. He mentions meat, fish and fowl among the foods the misguided lady eschews. He does not mention eggs or milk. If she takes eggs and milk and cheese in reasonable amounts she'll get all the amino-acids required for optional nutrition, even if she excludes meat, fowl, fish and other flesh foods from her diet.

But the "alkalizing" business is plumb foolish. Not that juices of fruits or vegetables are harmful in any way. They are all right in any diet, although not quite so good as the fruits or vegetables themselves. But there is no physiological ground for the notion that the blood system or the tissues of body become "too acid" from eating of meat, fish, fowl, eggs, milk or other foods containing protein, nor is there the slightest ground for the notion that a juice diet or a diet of "alkaline-ash" foods exclusively, has any corrective or remedial value in any circumstance— except the effect one gets from restricting the total intake of nutriment, calories, fuel, for a while after a prolonged period of overindulgence.

Man, woman or child, leading an active or an inactive life, may have optimal nutrition, ideal nutrition, on a meatless diet, provided he or she consumes a fair proportion of milk (and cheese) and eggs. But an individual following a meatless diet, whether for a day, a week or a lifetime, has no advantage over one who consumes reasonable amounts of meat, fish and fowl, so far as we know.

The extravagant claims of the "nuts" or faddists must not be confused with knowledge.

There are probably many thousands of victims who are suffering from malnutrition which is due mainly to the freak "diets" the victims follow, under the influence of charlatans who call themselves "food scientists," "diet specialists" or "nutrition authorities."

Don't take my word for this. But you'll find little about "acid-ash," "alkaline-ash", and "neutral-ash" foods in such authoritative books on nutrition as "Newer Knowledge of Nutrition" by McCollum, "The Foundations of Nutrition" by Rose and "Chemistry of Food and Nutrition" by Sherman—books available in any public library.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Ultraviolet

tive books on nutrition as Newer welding causes cataract does the ultraviolet in sunshine have a similar effect on the unprotected eyes? (Mrs. H. H. W.)

Answer—It is not occasional or casual exposure to intense ultraviolet light but frequent or constant exposure as in occupations involving use of electric welding. Ordinary exposure to bright sunshine is harmless, the frequent or constant exposure of the eyes might be harmful. Welders and others working with or near the electric arc should have the protection of special masks or goggles. In sun bathing wear black bandage or smoked glass goggles. On the sand or water or snow protect the eyes from glare with smoked glass or dark tinted glass spectacles or goggles. It is not advisable to wear tinted or smoked glass eyeglasses constantly—it does not prevent eyestrain, as many imagine. It is not advisable to wear any kind of glasses, goggles or eyeshades if you can get along comfortably without.

Hemorrhoids

Have you any pamphlet on hemorrhoids or piles? (C. M.)

Answer—Yes, send stamped envelope bearing your address, for monograph "It is Stupid to Suffer from Piles."

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

How did "cartridge" originate? "Cartridge" is an Anglicized form of French "cartouche," which in turn is from Latin "charta," meaning "paper."

Originally a cartridge was simply a round of powder wrapped in paper for use in a flintlock musket.

Under date of August 24, 1711, William Byrd of Westover noted in his dairy: "I got my arms in order and made cartouches." The following day he noted: "The Frenchmen made me a great number of cartouches and cleansed my arms."

Cartridges were as familiar to General Washington and his Continentals during the Revolution as they were to General Eisenhower and his GI's during the Second World War.

After the battle of Germantown in 1777 the Continentals were described as looking "like negroes" because, in biting off the ends of their cartridges before ramming them into their muskets, the powder spread around their mouths and blackened their faces.

After breech-loading guns came into use "cartridge" was transferred to the metal shells containing both powder and bullet.

"Cartridge" is often erroneously pronounced "CAT-ridge."

LIBERALS SCORE

The Premier's majority was the second largest in the Province, only Industries Minister Harold Connolly bettering it in Halifax North with a margin of 4,054. In each case three opponents lost their deposits.

In a statement the Premier said that "the magnitude of the Liberal triumph is, I think, unprecedented in the long political history of Nova Scotia."

Of the record field of 83 candidates entered 27 lost their deposits by failing to poll 50 per cent of the votes gained by the winning candidate. Nine of the 30 Progressive Conservatives, 15 of 20 C.C.F. candidates, two Labor Progressive nominees and the single independent-C.C.F. entry forfeited their deposits.

C.C.F. Confident of Future

C.C.F. House Leader MacDonald, admitting that the Party had not expected victory in the election, said the C.C.F. was "appreciative of the gains in public support across the Province. We increased our vote in many ridings and we broke new ground in this election in many constituencies. We look forward with confidence to the future.

The C.C.F., although winning only two seats this time against three in 1941, polled nearly twice as many votes, according to unofficial figures compiled with 1,455 of 1,549 polls reported, the Progressive Conservatives, on the other hand, dropped back considerably from their 1941 figures.

Returns so far available showed the total vote was substantially higher than in 1941 but considerably below the 1937 figure of 312,463.

Won't Affect Result

The civil vote was complete in all but 11 constituencies, but the service vote was still to be counted, although incomplete returns showed it would not affect the result in any case. Returns from 29 of the 30 polling stations set up for servicemen stationed within the province but not in their home constituencies showed that 1,805 servicemen who voted followed the civilian trend in almost every instance.

Votes of servicemen stationed or on leave in their home constituencies and servicemen stationed outside the province, whose ballots were cast by proxy, were counted with the regular civilian returns.

The complete defeat of the Progressive Conservatives left the party without representation in the House for the first time since Confederation and sent their leader, Mr. Fraser, down to his 4th defeat in as many elections. He lost in 1933 and 1937, was returned by acclamation by a by-election in 1939, but lost out again in 1941.

Will Change Leaders

Defeat of Donald MacDonald made it probable that the C C F. leader in the new House would be Russell Cunningham, provincial president of the party, who was elected in Cape Breton East.

The C.C.F. provincial organizer, Fred Young, was another prominent candidate defeated. He was defeated in Halifax West.

Progressive Conservative candidates losing out included Sqdn. Ldr. Lawrence (Red) Chisholm, D.F.C. and Bar, in Kings, and Lt.-Col. F. P. Day, one of Nova Scotia's earliest Rhodes scholars, and former president of Union College in Schenectady, N.Y., and Mt. Allison University, Sackville, N.B., who lost in Yarmouth

Latin Quarter Today a Sad And Hungry Place

By FRED BACKHOUSE
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Paris, Oct. 24 —(CP) — The Latin quarter of Paris, for centuries the Mecca of students from all parts of the world, is today a sad and hungry place.

Boulevard St. Michel, main street of this Bohemian centre that before the war was thronged with cheerfully noisy students, is filled with shabby French youngsters seeking rooms and books before the university opens in November.

Thousands who have enrolled this year for the Sorbonne are faced with handicaps unknown to the Canadian scholar. Many are trying to pick up the threads of an education broken by years in German prison camps, books are hard to come by, and food is insufficient to sustain long hours of study.

The cheap but happy little student hotels that fill the narrow streets of the quarter now find that more money can be made from renting rooms to one-night visitors, so the ministry of education has been forced to requisition hostels and even barracks. Many of these are miles away in the suburbs.

At the university office they told me that about 1,000 letters weekly are received from students abroad who want to study here, including "quite a few" from Canadians. All are warned that even if they obtain permission to leave home, the cost of living — five times the pre-war figure — makes it almost impossible to exist in Paris, even in the Latin quarter.

Mawson Hopes To Head South Polar Expedition

Adelaide, Australia, Oct. 24—(Reuters)—Sir Douglas Mawson, 63-year-old Yorkshire-born Antarctic explorer, hopes to lead his fourth expedition to the South Polar regions next year, it was announced Tuesday.

Purpose of the expedition is to establish a permanent scientific base and to help establish Australia's rights to operate a whaling company in the southern ocean.

Communists Have Strongest Party

Paris, Oct. 24 — (AP) — The Communists emerged Tuesday as the strongest single party in France but with slightly more than a fourth of the seats in the new constituent assembly, which the voters Sunday overwhelmingly charged with drafting a new constitution.

Complete unofficial and perhaps official results will be announced shortly. The latest tabulations showed this division in the assembly:

Communists	152
Socialists	142
Mouvement Republican Populaire	141
Modern Rightists	67
Radical Socialists	25
Minor Parties	18.

The Socialists and Mouvement Republican Populaire, a De Gaullist party born of the Resistance Movement, and the Communists all are distinctly Left of centre. The Socialists and M. P. are both supporters of Gen. De Gaulle.

BODY OF MAN FOUND ON HAYSTACK

Montreal, Oct. 24—(CP)—The decomposed body of a man, tentatively identified as that of Arthur Boudreaus, 60, an inmate of a Montreal hospital, was found yesterday on a haystack on the farm of J. A. Pare on the North-East outskirts of the city. No outside marks of violence on the body.

Boudreau is reported to have fled from the institution during the summer, and was seen repeatedly in the district where his body was found. He is thought to have been dead about a month.

An inquest will be held.

POULIOT ASSAILS WORK OF I.L. OFFICE

Mackenzie and Mitchell Stoutly Defend This Organization

Ottawa, Oct. 24—(CP) — J. F. Pouliot, Independent Liberal Member of Temiscouata, Quebec, Monday in the Commons belittled the work of the International Labor Office and criticized British stevedores for remaining on strike while perishable food was rotting in the holds of ships.

Mr. Pouliot described the I. L. O. as "all these fellows who live on the fat of the land and who call themselves labor men."

"They are just parasites. They are just people who cannot work and they call themselves labor men. They go through the world with schemes like this; they sell their goods and they find people who are credulous enough to believe that they are promoting the welfare of the working men, that they are doing so much for the working man."

His attack brought Veterans Minister Mackenzie, Acting House Leader, and Labor Minister Mitchell to the defence of the I.L.O. who said that no other international organization had done greater work.

The debate occurred when the Commons was asked to refer to the External Affairs Committee conventions passed by the I.L.O. in 1932 and 1938. The first convention dealt with the protection against accidents of workers employed in the loading and unloading of ships.

The second convention dealt with statistics of wages and hours of work in the principal mining and manufacturing industries.

Mr. Mackenzie said it would be up to the committee to recommend whether the conventions would be adopted by Canada. John Bracken, Progressive Conservative Leader, said his party supported the objectives of the conventions.

M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. Leader, and C. E. Johnston (SC-Bow River) urged that the conventions be referred to the Committee on Industrial Relations, but Mr. Mackenzie said the government felt they properly belonged to the External Affairs Committee.

Mr. Pouliot said the conventions would do no good whatsoever for labor. At one point he waved copies of the conventions in the air, referred to them as "silly things" and then threw them to the floor. A page boy moved to pick them up but Mr. Pouliot told him to leave them on the floor.

Several Cases Minor Crime Reported

A small epidemic of illegal entry into places of business and residences with premises being ransacked and articles and money missing was reported to the local police authorities during the past twenty-four hours.

An Alexander Street resident reported his garage broken into with a tire, thermos bottle, tools and a raincoat missing, while over the night Harry Smith's coal office was entered by three juveniles who made their entrance through an upstairs window. The place was ransacked in an unsuccessful search for money. The juveniles were apprehended and turned over to their parents.

Two juveniles in the West Moira Street district were checked by police following complaints from residents that street lamps in that area were being broken. The juveniles were in possession of catapults and were using the street lamps for target practice. They were told to report to the police chief today following school.

A Benjamin Street resident reported that a piggy bank hidden in a cedar chest at her home had been disturbed with 900 coppers taken.

Thievery from milk bottles continues in the district west of the river with a West Moira Street resident reporting money from her milk bottle had disappeared.

Belsen War Trial Proceeds Despite Defendant's Illness

Lueneburg, Germany, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Judge Advocate C. L. Stirling, saying the "court is more concerned with justice than points of law," ordered the Belsen war crimes trial to continue, despite absence of one of the 45 defendants.

The defendant, Ladislaw Gura, became ill this morning and had to be assisted from the prisoners' dock Ruling against postponement, Judge Stirling said:

"Bearing in mind that Gura has given his evidence, his defending officer is present and a copy of every word said in his absence will be given to him. Then I can see that no injustice of unfairness will occur to Gura under those circumstances."

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

Mrs. John Hart, Roslin, spent a few days in Toronto last week with her aunt and cousin, Mrs. N. Breach and Dorothy.

Chas. H. Hart, Roslin, spent Thursday and Friday in Toronto, where he received his discharge from the R.C.N.V.R.

Miss Dorothy Breach, Toronto, spent the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. Josph Hart, Mr. and Mrs. Robert Copeland and Mr. and Mrs. John Hart, at Roslin.

Major and Mrs. William McCutcheon of Ottawa ,are spending some time in Belleville with relatives.

Mr. and Mrs. A. B. Collins, Miss Dorothy Quick and Miss Ethel O'Hearn spent the weekend at Thorold Lodge, Seigniory Club, the guest of Mr. A. W. Robertson.

Mr. and Mrs. Bud Tracey, (nee Joyce Woodhouse), have left to take up residence in Montreal.

A very fine reception came over CHEX, Peterborough, Saturday morning, when two of Belleville's outstanding artists were heard taking part in "The Children's Hour" from Peterborough, when Arthur Duby's fine soprano voice rendered several solos and Mr. Bill Navin's splendid playing was enjoyed by many.

Master Ronald Butcher, 85 Coleman Street, celebrated his third birthday at his home yesterday, when he entertained about twelve of his friends at a delightful party. The feature of the afternoon was the Fish Pond, at which the children happily fished for prizes. At the close of the games, dainty refreshments were served and the little guests departed, wishing Ronald many happy returns of the day.

A very delightful shower was held in honor of Mrc. Gordon Carter, (nee Lois Banker), bride of this month, when Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Marner entertained about forty guests at the former's home, Albert Street. Mrs. Patterson received the guests. The home was decorated for the occasion with bells and streamers. After the playing of games, the bride was asked to take her place under the arch of bells and Mrs. F. Yorke wheeled in a decorated bassinette loaded with gifts. After Lois had thanked her friends for the splendid surprise, the guests retired to the dining room where the table, set with an eyelet embroidered cloth, candelabra, and flowers, was laden with good things to eat. Mrs. Marner poured coffee and Mrs. F. Cushing, Mrs. Jane Leonard, and Mrs. H. Yorke served the guests. After everyone had enjoyed the delightful refreshments, they wished Lois happiness and thanked Mrs. Patterson and Mrs. Marner for the delightful evening.

WEDDINGS

ELLIOTT—McCULLOUGH

St. James' Chapel, Kingston, was the scene of a very pretty Autumn wedding, at ten o'clock, on Monday, morning, Oct. 15, when Helen Marie, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Henry McCullough, Lonsdale, became the bride of Sgt. Herbert Grant, son of Mr. and Mrs. Richard S. Elliott of Watertown, N.Y.

Rev. Father J. R. Rowell performed the marriage ceremony. The bride looked lovely in a street-length dress of lime green wool accentuated by a corsage of purple orchids and brown accessories.

Miss Rita McCullough was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing a street-length dress of fuchsia wool, brown accessories and a corsage of red roses.

Immediately after the marriage ceremony the bridal party and guests returned to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Patrick Martin, where they were entertained until a wedding dinner was served to them at the Vinny Morrison Restaurant.

Later the happy couple left amid showers of good wishes, for a honeymoon to Montreal, Ottawa and other eastern points.

50th Anniversary Of Wedding Is Celebrated

Sidney.— On Sunday, October 21, Mr. and Mrs. Frank Moon entertained in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Moon on the 50th anniversary of their marriage, which has been spent on the farm on which they now reside.

They were at home to over eighty visitors and callers, both afternoon and evening, who called to congratulate them and spend a social hour. Fifty years ago this October Mr. Wm. Moon and Miss Annie Dafoe were joined in wedlock by Rev. George Robinson.

Today they are both enjoying the best of health at the ages of 91 and 87 yars.

The house was beautifully decorated with fall blooms, the beautiful gifts of which one was an electric lamp from the community were presented by Mrs. Vera Sine and showed the high esteem in which they were held. Mrs. Bert Dafoe had charge of the visitors' book.

The beautifully laid dining table was centred with a large bouquet of bronze 'mums and lighted candles. The guests were invited to the dining room by Dr. Charlotte Dafoe, of Belleville, while Mrs. Howard Dafoe, of Marsh Hill, Mrs. Frank Dafoe, of Madoc, and Mrs. H. Reed, of Belleville, poured tea.

The assistants were Mrs. R. Dafoe, Miss Emma Dafoe, Mrs. Gerald Dafoe, Mrs. F. Wilson, Mrs. A. Naylor, Mrs. M. Elliott, Misses Geraldine, Joyce and Edith Sine and Mrs. J. Wood.

HOSPITAL AUXILIARY

The regular monthly meeting of the Women's Hospital Auxiliary took place in the Nurse's Residence with Mrs. H. Wray, president, in the chair. After the usual reports, plans were discussed for the tea to be held at the home of Mrs. Mackenzie Robertson with Mrs. Galloway, convener.

Following discussion, it was decided to discontinue the service of taking care of the flowers at the hospital.

Miss Horton gave a report on the indigent fund. Slippers are needed and a cheque for $20 was given for this and other needs.

Mrs. M. Robertson gave a report on the progress of the work done on the ward on second floor. This project is almost completed

What Makes a Good Perfume—Scent Appeal or Cent Appeal?

Perfumes and toilet water must be modestly penetrating

By HELEN FOLLETT

SWARMS of money-flingers packed around perfume counters are evidence of the fact that women consider floretted odors necessary for their soul's sake. Certainly they are a grand uplift, impart a sense of elegance and luxury. But it is a problem to know what scent to choose.

If one has a fastidious nose, one is not likely to err; but even the fastidious nose becomes bewildered after sniffing numerous containers. When that happens trot-trot home, shop another day.

Old-Fashioned Scents

We hear about the restored popularity of old-fashioned scents like jasmine, mimosa, jonquil, lily-of-the-valley, rose and violet. The truth is that distinguished perfumes are blends or bouquets, that call for the utmost skill of the cosmetic chemist. Your reporter has been told that many experiments are made before a blend is compounded that catches popular fancy, makes money from ladies' purses.

A perfume or toilet water should be cool, modestly penetrating. Warm scents, heavy and suffocating, may give the passer-by a sense of discomfort. For the sake of the public nose, one should be discriminating. Women who use strong perfumes are often those who like to make themselves conspicuous by speedy dressing, loud manners. The dainty girl, the naive one, will select an aroma that is delicately fragrant.

Festive Evening

When dolling for the festive evening, perfume is the final touch. A few drops on the inner sides of the elbows or the palms of the hands, in those little hollows back of the ears, but not on the hair. Perfume in the hair is too obvious; the dancing partner bent over the waves and ringlets may get a whiff that is just too much.

Also, unless the tresses have been freshly shampooed, the exudations of scalp glands may change the character of the perfume, and not for the better.

ARMS OUT for the very beautifully trimmed gloves ready to glorify afternoon and evening costumes. Long, 10 or 12-button gloves of suede or doeskin have arm-length cut-outs in various designs outlined with gold thread and pearl-embroidered — with rhinestones, or with multi-hued sequins. Designed For Leisure

Colorful Quilted Crepe Robe.

By VERA WINSTON

NOW comes the season of the cosy robe, designed to bestow comfort and beauty during leisure hours at home. Quilted crepe in a smoky-blue is the background for a lush print of red and white carnations, and the color scheme is pointed up by the lining which is in a warm orangey shade of red. New detail includes the pointed revers that stick up in a jaunty point above the shoulder line. Fastening is in the centre front and consists of one large button. There are gathers from the curved hip yoke which conceals pockets.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Mother Introduces Her Son's Wife.

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Three years ago, while my son was at camp and just before he sailed for overseas, he was married to a girl who lived in the city near his camp. Because of the great distance from our home and the difficulty of travel, we were not able to go to their wedding. But I wrote to this girl as soon as he wrote us about his plans, she and I have corresponded ever since, and, through her letters, I have become deeply devoted to her. I am sure she will be the "perfect helpmate" for our son.

Any day now we expect our son to return from overseas and to be discharged from the service. His wife is to come here, and they are to be with us for a while. I shall be so proud to introduce our relatives and friends to her. . .but I want to be sure that my introductions are properly done. Must I always say "my daughter-in-law"? That "in-law" always sounds cold to me, and particularly since I have come to think of her as our "daughter", and have called her that in my letters. Are there any other forms proper in my introductions?

A Soldier's Mother

I know how you feel about that word "in-law". . .it isn't too easy to get into the degree of warmth of voice and manner that will convey our devotion. You might use these words, "My daughter-in-law" when you are introducing your son's wife to a casual acquaintance, when this indication of relationship may be both necessary and appropriate. But when you introduce your relatives and friends to her, you'll have the perfect opportunity to put into your introductions the devotion and pride you have for her. For example, to a relative who has heard much about your son's wife, say, affectionately, "This is Sally, Aunt Mary". Oh, to a friend, "This is Sally, Bob's wife". Oh, a very charming form, "This is my (or 'our') Sally, Bob's wife".

A Young Girl Plans a Surprise Party for Her Mother

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

I am a sixteen-year-old girl and have had enough experience in cooking to prepare a party. And now, for my mother's birthday next month, I want to "organize" a surprise party for her. I am planning to invite eight guests (four couples).

1.—Would it be proper for me to ask a friend of mother's to help me?

2.—Will you please suggest a menu?

3.—Should my parents provide the amusements of the evening?

M. A. B.

1.—Yes, it would be an excellent idea for you to take your mother's friend into your confidence, and it will be reassuring to you to have someone older, someone enthusiastically interested in your plans, with whom to be able to talk things over. It will be fun to share your "secret" with her! And won't you need her to plan how the guests are to be assembled to "surprise" your mother?

2.—I think it would be an excellent idea for you to plan to serve a menu that includes dishes that you have developed as your cookery specialties. This will make it easier and more comfortable for you, will make your cooking-triumphs "conversation pieces" for the guests, and will be a source of pride and delight for your mother.

3.—Since this is to be a surprise party, I don't see how you can take your parents, or anyway your mother, into your confidence to provide the evening's entertainment. I doubt that you will need any special entertainment; but if you think it might be nice to have some plan "up your sleeve", assemble the equipment for cards or other games you know your parents' friends enjoy.

PICTON

County Obtains 36 P.C. of Quota On First Day

Picton, Oct. 24—In the first day's canvassing of the 9th Victory Loan, Prince Edward County led all Ontario in percentage of general canvass quota attained. With an objective of $1,425,000, the total reported was $515,000, or 36 per cent of quota.

These returns do not include $138,000 reported by Mountain View and Picton R.C.A.F. stations.

Prince Edward led all Ontario in percentage of quota reached in the 8th loan and hopes to repeat.

Appeal to investors is being made on re-establishment of service personnel. Estimating costs of transportation home, hospitalization and gratuities, as $1,458, each district is asked to re-established a certain number of them. Picton is asked to re-establish 433.

Airmen are setting the pace — Mountain View R.C.A.F. station had an objective of $65,000, and has already reported $95,000. Picton R.C.A.F., with 120 personnel has reported $37,000, which is $5,000 over quota.

First salesman to reach his objective is J. P. Williams, Picton, who had $300 over his $50,000 quota.

Only woman canvasser is Miss Filena Barker of Bloomfield.

Salesmen include nine ex-service men, they are, Capt. William Graydon, M.C., C.Q.M.S. Arthur Storms, B.E.M.; Sgt. Herbert Ralston, Sgt. Jack Cole, Sgt. Russell Alexander, Fl. Lt. Alex Milton, Cpl. Bruce Falconer, C. Q. M. S. David Young, Coder Bob Burns.

The county committee includes Dr. R. H. Hoblin, J. M. Hartwick, W. H. Benson, honorary chairman, Mayor N. McKibbon and Warden H. Cleave, Hon. vice-chairman; Unit chairman, D. J. Baxter; Vice chairman, T. J. Webster; General Sales, H. R. MacDonald; Public Relations, E. J. Williams; Organizers, T. Baker and Bishop Lee.

Present Concert

Marking the opening of the loan, the Bata Shoe Co. presented a stage show in the Parish Hall Monday night. Hundreds had to be turned away. The appeal on behalf of the loan was made by Donald Baxter. Professional talent from Toronto gave an excellent program of comedy, song, piano solos, tap dancing and group numbers.

St. Paul's Church Holds Anniversary

Stirling —(Special)— Sunday, October 21st, St. Paul's United Church was well filled, morning and evening, when the Rev. A. M. Laverty delivered outstanding messages to the congregations and visitors present.

At the morning service the organist, Mr. J. L. Clute, rendered the Intermezzo of La Mare, while people assembled. The choir sang "Christ the Morn Breaks Sweetly O'er Thee," with the solo parts taken by Mrs. Harold West and Mr. Ted Reynolds. The first lesson was taken from the Epistle to the Romans.

Short Story for Children.

There followed a short story for the children present, about two boys who lived in Toronto; "They were having dinner and the one boy was not eating what was on his plate. His little brother said to him, "There are little boys and girls in Holland who would like to have it." He asked his parents: "Are they very hungry?" Receiving the answer that they were he replied: "Well then can we take twenty-five cents from our weekly allowance and give it to them?". Their mother phoned the speaker who gave her an address so these two boys are doing without treats all this winter to send money to help feed some little Dutch boys and girls.

Mr. Ted Reynolds sang "Thy Will be Done," accompanied by the organist. Announcements of the social evening to be held in the church parlors on Wednesday evening of this week and the annual convention to be held on Friday, Oct. 26th., in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, were made. In speaking to the congregation Rev. Mr. Laverty mentioned the fact that he had looked forward to this day for a long time. The faithfulness of his people had been more than could be anticipated. He urged those present not to forget what a great bunch of boys that Canada had sent away and what a great bunch she is receiving back. Those who were together in the Services attended service sometimes under difficult conditions but they were held.

In his address Rev. Mr. Laverty bid a welcome to all who had come to join in this wonderful service this morning. To share joy is to gain joy.

Duty of Church Members.

His sermon was about what the church member's job is. "What I am saying to you," he said, "is a result of serious thinking and prayer over what has happened to so many of us in the past few years. The church has a job. If I did not think so I would not have volunteered to do what I have done. I never believed in war but the importance of the things for which the Christian Church stands."

"When we come to worship God, we are coming not that God will remember us but that we will remember Him. He never forgets us. We forget Him in our dealings and, God help us, if we do. We come in thanksgiving and joy for all His goodness to us as anybody who looks back over the past six years certainly will know that he has. In 1940 Hitler could have walked into England. —He did not. In 1941 he made the error of entering Russia. Why? It seemed the right thing to do. He could have cut through Egypt but did not push. When he could have rushed and got through to the Suez he did not. When they took the men off Dunkirk they had a calm sea and mist for hours and hours. Sinful as we are, we are still the instruments and children of God. His hand is with us in the beginning and the end of the day."

The speaker said: "We should all be more considerate of the value of other people. If we cannot overflow with love and helpfulness for those who are heavily laden then we are not a Christian community not members in the name of Jesus Christ. Our judgment of others should not be hasty. God help us, we stand in need of the mercy and understanding of Jesus Christ, why should we set ourselves up to criticize other people. We should cultivate the spirit of understanding and forbearance. We think we are too good."

Non-Attendance Big Problem

"Why do not people come to church? There must be a reason! From the day we reached Normandy we had 70% and more at church. They came willingly. We must find out why the people do not come to the House of God. There has got to be a fellowship. We as a church have got to stand with each individual — little people count a great deal. We cannot get along without them. They count for us because they count for Jesus Christ. We cannot stand by anywhere and see the individual exploited or oppressed without any regard for his welfare. We have got to serve the community in which we live. As members of the Christian community, we have got to stand in the sight of God and walk according to His will. We must insist upon the principles of Jesus Christ. There are instances every single day where a man can stand for or against—whether he is a good soldier of Jesus Christ or whether he is a deserter. Finally, in ourselves, we can give Jesus Christ to the world. We have got to get away from impersonal Christianity — get away from talking about Jesus Christ and a loving Father — we have got to witness Him in ourselves, by our speech and conduct.

"This is the year above every other that we have got to cease to be a stranger to Jesus Christ. Oh men and women, if you believe, live as if you do," the speaker concluded.

Community Service Chest Fund Drive Now Concluded

With the extended time limit of the Community Service Chest fund campaign having been concluded last Friday and with some returns yet to be turned in, campaign headquarters have been moved from the Riggs Motor Sales building to the Y.M.C.A., it was announced by campaign officials yesterday.

Canvassers who have yet to make their returns, or persons who were missed during the canvass of the city and who still wish to make a contribution to the work of the Y.M.C.A., the Children's Aid, the Salvation Army and the Victorian Order of Nurses, may do so by visiting the "Y" or making their donation to the campaign treasurer, Mr. Hefkey, at the Royal Bank.

Although the Community Chest campaign was extended for one week in order that the objective of $15,000 might be met, officials announced today that this goal had still not been reached. With the tabulation of delayed returns by canvassers and the addition of other possible contributions, however, campaign officials still have hopes that the objective will be reached.

Home Grown Port Peacetime Dream Of Young Flier

By GEORGE SITTERLY

Versailles, Mo., Oct. 24 (AP)—Down here on the edge of Missouri's Ozarks is a home grown airport and the beginnings of a young flier's peacetime dream.

On a 75-acre pasture he leased from his parents, 25-year-old Charles Harris is operating a landing field for airminded tourists and sportsmen.

Since he opened the field for use July 1, nearly 250 planes have dropped in.

The field has a natural four-way drain that keeps the runways usable even in heavy weather. The longest of the sodded landing strips is 2,500 feet, parallel to the prevailing southeast winds. The other two strips are 2,100 feet long. All are 300 feet wide.

Harris has installed fueling and oiling equipment, has one hangar completed and will have two more finished this fall.

So far he hasn't set any charges for use of the field and its parking areas. He's been waiting until he could get the property damage, public liability and airport insurance he now carries.

About all he's made out of the field up to now is what he receives for servicing visiting aircraft.

Chuck started flying when he was 10 years old—without the knowledge of his parents. An older friend bought and wired together an old army plane and the Ozarks farm lad talked his way into learning to fly the decrepit craft.

Once he swooped low over the farm as his mother was busy hanging out clothes. "Hi, mom," he cried.

An anguished Mrs. Harris hurried to find her husband and demanded that he "get that boy down here on the ground."

STIRLING

Youth Sunday Observed in Stirling Church

Youth Sunday was observed in St. John's Anglican Church Sunday evening with members of the A.Y.P.A. taking an active part in the service. Mr. Fred Houchin, Lay Reader, said the state prayers.

The Rector, Rev. C. C. Brazill, delivered a message to the young people, for his text he chose Psalm 16th chapter, verses six and seven, "The lives are fallen unto me in a fair land. I have a good heritage." He pointed out one of the great dangers of today in youth was the seeking of happiness according to instincts. As long as the law is kept and if the law objects too strenuously then the law must be changed. Certain types of cheap literature and pictures which are not the best thing for the morals of our generation. To counteract this, all Christian Young People should today, more than ever before, strenuously oppose the trends which lead away from the Christian way of life. In the past, the young people have done great things for Christ and our aim should be today even greater for the future. The stirring hymn, in keeping with Youth Sunday, was "Youth of the World Arise, Clear is the Clarion Call. I come, I come, truth youth replies, To Christ I give my all".

A.Y.P.A Elects Officers for Ensuing Year

The members of St. John's A.Y.P.A. held their opening meeting on Monday evening in the chapel with twenty-five members present.

Following a welcome to the new members, by the Rector, Rev. G. C. Brazill, the election of officers took place as follows:

President, Bob Fanning; Vice President, Helen Johnstone; Treasurer, Claude Markell; Secretary, Marian Gravers; Pianist, Barbara Brazill; Program committee, Mrs. Fred Houchin, Roy Bateman, Barton Tanner, Mrs. Edward Kent and Bruce Bell.

Lunch Committee — Mrs. B. Woodbeck, Mrs. Glen Morrow, Barbara Prince and Jimmy Wright.

The past president, Mr. Roy Bateman thanked the members for their support during the past year and was in turn thanked for his leadership.

Meetings will be held each Monday night and all those interested in Young Peoples' work are heartily invited to these meetings.

Junior W. A. Organized

Monday afternoon in St. John's Chapel the Junior W. A. organized, under the leadership of Mrs. C. C. Brazill assisted by Mrs. J. Whithead. There were fifteen girl Whithead. There were 15 girls present and keen interest shown in anticipation of a happy year's work. The officers elected are as follows:

President, Judy Johnston; Treasurer, Beverley Ingram; Secretary, Eileen Ackers; Visiting Committee, Grace, Carleton, Denise Burgess; Flower Fund Secretary, Shirley Ackers; Pages, Marie McCrory, Margaret Kent; Pianist, Lorna McConnell.

The newly organized Jr. W. A. will meet every second week on Monday.

DEATH SENTENCES ON WOMEN COMMUTED TO 30 YEARS IN PRISON

Frankfurt, Germany, Oct. 24—(AP)—Death sentences imposed on two women by a United States military tribunal for inciting and joining with a German mob in beating to death six young American airmen in 1944 have been commuted to 30 years' imprisonment, it was announced Tuesday.

Five men convicted with them in the atrocity trial at Darmstadt last July are under sentence to be hanged. Three other men were sentenced to from 15 to 25 years at hard labor.

The women are Kathe Reinhardt, 37, and her sister Margarite Witzler, 30.

TRENTON

10-Year-Old Boy Seriously Hurt, Fell Under Truck

Trenton, Oct. 24—Ten year old John Desjardine, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Desjardine, 76 McLellan Ave., was seriously injured about noon on Tuesday while riding his bicycle on Dundas St. West. It is alleged the lad at the time was carrying a heavy piece of iron on his left arm, and is thought to have overbalanced. He fell under the right rear wheels of a truck owned by Fox and Jeffery, Trenton, and driven by Peter Kelly, 8 Metcalfe St. The truck was quickly brought to a stop and the boy taken to the offices of Dr. J. F. Farley and later to Belleville Hospital where he is said to be suffering a fractured right thigh.

Presented With Lamp

Miss Dorothy Barker, and her sisters, Miss Audrey Barker and Mrs. J. Button were hostesses to a number of friends on Friday evening last in honor of Miss Doris Heaslip who is being married on November 8th in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The evening was spent in music and games, and the bride-elect was presented with a beautiful table lamp, and bride's recipe book.

Twenty-three Pay Fines

Twenty-three local residents paid $2 and costs into Trenton Police Court on Tuesday for failing to buy the necessary radio license. Six others paid the usual $10 and costs for a breach of the Liquor Control Act, and one parking by-law charge was enlarged for personal service.

Elmer Elo was fined $53 for careless driving, having been involved in an accident while four others under the Highway Traffic Act paid $12.50, one paid $7.50 and one $4.50.

Three juveniles charged with trespassing on the railway were each given six months probation.

A case of non-support against William Richardson brought the Magistrate's decision that he pay his wife $30.00 per month, while the case was enlarged till called on.

George Anderson, charged with non-support failed to appear in court and a warrant was issued for his arrest.

28 JAP LETTERS APPROVE SUPPRESSION OF MILITARISM

Tokyo, Oct. 24 (AP)—Approval of the suppression of Japanese militarism was expressed in 28 of 100 letters from Japanese civilians to Gen. MacArthur, Allied headquarters announced Tuesday. So far all letters received approved Allied occupation policy, but indicated the Japanese still did not feel free to state fully their true beliefs, headquarters spokesmen said.

PICTON

Clothing Drive To be Extended Till Next Month

Picton, Oct. 24—Though several tons of clothing for relief of the needy in Europe have been collected at Picton Armouries, the drive is to be extended until the end of the month. Members of the Rotary Club met Monday night to pack the second shipment. Collections are being made in most parts of Prince Edward County, and extension of the drive will permit it to be collected.

In Kingston Hospital

Rifleman John Arthur has arrived at Kingston and is a patient in the veterans' hospital there. He was a prisoner-of-war in Japan since the fall of Hong Kong and contracted T.B. while working in the shipyards. He was met at Toronto on Saturday by his wife and daughter. His sister, Mrs. Andrew Devine and family of Picton visited him Sunday and found him cheerful and able to be out of bed.

Opens Practice

Dr. Gordon Caughey is opening a medical practice in Picton. He has purchased the former residence of Dr. P. A. Scott. Dr. Caughey is a native of Prince Edward County, being the son of Mr. and Mrs. Simon Caughey, Crofton. He graduated in medicine in 1937. Enlisting with the R.C.A.F., he served overseas for two years. His sister, Lieut. N.S. Lillian Caughey is with the R. C. A. M. C. in Holland.

Plan Reception

At a meeting of Prince Edward Reception and Rehabilitation Committee, plans were made for a reception and banquet for all Prince Edward County service personnel at Picton Armouries, Nov. 12. The same evening, a Regimental Association for the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment will be discussed and possibly organized. The Legion Ladies Auxiliary will cater and the Rotary Club has donated $500 toward expenses.

Recent Weather Boom to Farmers

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)— The Ontario Department of Agriculture reported Tuesday that generally fine summer-like weather during the last week has been a boon to farmers throughout Southern Ontario and in most areas their autumn work is well advanced.

Silo filling, harvesting of root crops and sowing of fall wheat is in full swing. In Welland and Wentworth Counties soft ground obliged many farmers to discard their binders and cut the corn crop by hand. Potato yields were considerably below average in all regions.

In Eastern Ontario wolves have been destroying cattle in the northern part of Frontenac County. Here as in some other parts of the province soft ground has added to harvesting difficulties, putting silo filling and other general work behind schedule.

Northern Ontario's first general snowfall—two inches on Oct. 15—disappeared rapidly but in some areas left the ground too soft for best ploughing results. However, autumn farm work in this region is progressing well despite difficult conditions.

Tablet Overdose Affects Eyesight

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)—An overdose of sleeping tablets administered to Clare Hilborn, Jr., has affected his eyesight, police here said yesterday. The boy's father is in police custody charged with the murder of his eight-year-old son Brian, who died from an overdose of the tablets according to an autopsy.

Clare Hilborn, Sr., his 20-year-old wife, and three children, Clare Jr., 10, Brian, eight, and Sandra, five, were found in their home Oct. 11 with a note saying all had taken sleeping tablets. Brian was dead and the other four were unconscious. It is believed the note was written by Hilborn, Sr. Condition of Hilborn, his wife and daughter is improved.

Young Clare has not been able to see since he regained consciousness during the week-end. However, officials at the hospital said they did not know whether the blindness was temporary or permanent.

'Bing' Caughlin 'Tickled Skinny' To be Home

By MYER NEGRU
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Montreal, Oct. 24 (CP) — "Tickled Skinny" to be back in Canada, CSM William G. (Bing) Coughlin, whose cartoons in the army newspaper The Maple Leaf, were tops with Dominion servicemen in Europe, passed through Montreal early Tuesday en route to Ottawa with plans to put his character "Herbie" in a book.

The book, to be 95 per cent cartoons, Coughlin said, would be "a humorous record of the war" and the evolution of "Herbie"—from enlistment through basic training, the European war theatres, repatriation and return to "civvy street."

After that, Coughlin has no definite plans, but would like to settle in Toronto or Montreal and keep "Herbie" on the sports pages of Canadian newspapers.

"Herbie," his creator said, "could have been any 'G.I.'" because incidents which happened to him happened at one time or another to every 'G.I.'"

Coughlin disclosed, however, that "Herbie" was actually inspired originally by a Sapper from Ottawa—Norman P. Smith.

"And he pulled a real, typical 'Herbie' stunt too," he added. "He missed the boat and is still in England."

"No matter how big or small a unit be, there's always some Joe finding himself in some scrape, under humorous circumstances. Eventually I came across a chap who gave me several inspirations that led up to a regular cartoon."

Coughlin said he had tried to portray the humorous side of war.

"I've been in the line myself and know it was pretty hard to laugh at circumstances when the going was tough. I felt if I could get a smile a day out of the boys I would be doing a job."

Practising what he preached, he was laughing at himself, for while he intended to proceed direct to Ottawa from Halifax, where he landed Sunday from the Ile de France Coughlin was on a train bound for Kingston, Ont.

At the repatriation centre in Nijmegen, Holland, he had been asked where he wanted to go and had given military district No. 3 as his destination instead of district depot No. 9. He will go on to Ottawa from Kingston as soon as he can gather up his kit there.

Mother, Father Both Charged

Lancaster, Pa., Oct. 24. (AP)——A mother and father were charged with involuntary manslaughter in the malnutrition death of their 10-months-old daughter whom they tried to cure by "pow-wow", a form of "faith healing".

The infant, Jane Louise Fackler, died Sept. 25 from what the county coroner, said was malnutrition and improper care. The coroner testified the baby weighed only nine pounds at death.

Mrs. Anna Fackler, arraigned yesterday and released in her own recognizance so that she might care for her eight other children, ranging from two to 15 years of age, living in the second floor of an abandoned stable.

Daniel Fackler, the woman's husband, a laborer employed by the Mt. Joy Borough, was held under $1,000 bail for court on the same charge.

MURDER CHARGE TO BE LAID

Vancouver, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The Vancouver Sun in a newspage story yesterday said that "a charge of murder is expected to be laid against the 12-year-old schoolboy held in the Juvenile Detention Home in connection with the death of Dianne Blunt, four, the girl whose body was found buried in a Vancouver garage."

Resident Warned Not to Identify Night Prowler

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Oct. 24 (CP)—Police said today that a note containing the four words "don't identify, I kill," was found Monday night in a bottle thrown through the kitchen window of the home of Arnold Prescott whose wife the previous night had foiled the attempted attack of a prowler in the Prescott backyard.

Police, hunting the strangle-slayer of 18-year-old Theresa DeCourcy, whose body was discovered near tracks last Friday, scoured the Spruce Street area of the Prescott home without result. The words on the note, scrawled on paper of the type used in shoe boxes, were written in pencil.

The bottle was hurled through the same window as a stone was thrown the previous night as Prescott telephoned police to report the attempted assault on his wife.

This latest of a series of prowler incidents intensified a general feeling of uneasiness throughout the city as police, headed by Chief Irvih Robertson, continued a wide search for the slayer of Miss DeCourcy, strangled as she was on her way to a school dance last Thursday night. On that same night two girl members of a church choir reported that a man attempted to molest them as they were walking in a district close to where the girl's body was found.

After the attempted attack on Mrs. Prescott she told police she had been seized by a man as she emptied garbage at the rear of her home. She broke away from his grip and ran into the house

The slaying and attempted attacks prompted Ald. William Lightfoot to propose at a city council meeting last night that an auxiliary police force be formed to patrol city streets after dark. He said Canadian Legion members were willing to volunteer.

Says She Believes Hitler Knew of Hess Flight Plan

Dachau, Germany, Oct. 24 — (AP)— Hildegard Fath, Rudolf Hess's private secretary, in an interview expressed belief that Hitler knew all about the deputy leader's flight to Britain in 1941 because Hess dictated to her a memorandum about the project for the Fuehrer.

Miss Fath is held in this concentration camp where 13,000 S. S. members are interned. She may appear as a witness in the Nuernberg war crimes trials next month.

"Herr Hess was opposed to war from the beginning and wanted to stop the slaughter for the sake of all peoples," she asserted.

Aircraft Carrier Guests Frisked

New York, Oct. 24 (CP) — The British aircraft carrier Implacable lost $5,000 worth of articles to souvenir hunters when the ship was thrown open to public inspection at Vancouver Oct. 14. Officers of the United States cruiser Portland took care that that wouldn't happen here.

The Portland was open to visitors Sunday. Bluejackets were stationed at the gangplank to examine departing guests. Within an hour, each man had beside him a pile of steel helmets, sailors' hats, pieces of rope and assorted bric-a-brac.

Detective Agency Report Charged Use of Batteries

Toronto, Oct. 24. (CP)— James Heffering, president of the Incorporated Canadian Racing Associations, said in an affidavit filed at Osgoode Hall yesterday that a detective agency report charging use of electrical batteries by Douglas Ness was one of the factors which prompted the I.C.R.A. to order suspension of the Toronto horseman.

The affidavit was in reply to a motion by Ness for a Supreme Court order staying his suspension and seeking review of I.C.R.A. proceedings under which he was suspended last September. At that time, Ontario racing's governing body said merely Ness had been suspended for "practices detrimental to the turf".

Son Speaks to Mother From Australia

Fort William, Ont., Oct. 24 — (CP) — When Mrs. A. H. Goodrick of Fort William answered the telephone at 5 a.m., she heard the voices of her son, Lieut. John Goodrick, and his wife, who were speaking from Melbourne, Australia. Lieut. Goodrick told his mother he doubted whether he would be home for Christmas this year.

ATOMIC PLANS DISCUSSED IN HOUSE

Representative Chet Holifield (D) of California showed members of the U. S. House of Representatives in Washington, D.C., plans of atomic bomb weapons projected and under study. He is shown demonstrating one type of bomb which would be propelled by jet from the tail section which would later drop off, the shell itself going to the target. He told members of the House that a great deal of research should be carried on before any commission for atomic development be put in effect.

Royal Commission On Coal Shaping Recommendations

By JACK WILLIAMS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The Royal Commission investigating tht Canadian coal industry today settled down to the task of shaping recommendations for a Canadian fuel policy, based on volumes of evidence gathered in a nine-month survey of the Canadian coal situation.

Public hearings, with the exception of a one-day session schedule for Nov. 29 at Quebec City, are completed but it is expected the three-man commission will require until early next year to write its report. The Commission is under the chairmanship of Mr. Justice W. F. Carroll of Halifax, with Mr. Justice C. C. McLaurin and Angus Morrison, both of Calgary, as members.

From the evidence it has become evident that:—

1. The Dominion's fuel policy must be designed to assure adequate supplies in periods of emergency.
2. Canadian mines cannot provide the whole of Canada's requirements.
3. Assistance must be provided to Canadian mines if their coal is to compete with American coal in Ontario and Quebec.

The fundamental problem is the geographic location of Canadian mines — in the Maritimes and Western Canada — far distant from the central part of the country where demand for coal is greatest.

Leaned on U. S. Mines

Under peacetime conditions the government gave assistance on freight movement to Ontario and Quebec to enable Canadian coal to compete with that of American mines and under those conditions roughly one half of the coal consumed in Canada came from Canadian mines. During the war Canada leaned more heavily on American mines.

Another basic problem stems from the necessity of having coal resources readily available for emergency periods, such as a war. A coal mine, unlike a factory, cannot be opened and closed at will.

It has been argued before the commission that generous assistance should be given Canadian mines so that they will be readily available in time of need. Those supporting this view have also referred to the government postwar policy of full employment and held that a reduction in Canadian coal mining operations would be contrary to that policy.

On the other hand, American producers have pointed to their success in meeting Canada's increased requirements during the war.

JUDICIAL PROBE

the members of the 99th Regiment of Foot, stationed at Quebec after serving in Wellington's Peninsular campaign, were offered the opportunity of settling in Canada. The party, in charge of an officer, proceeded to Lachine, thence up the Ottawa River, and through the bush to the new depot at Richmond. Their families lived in tents while the men cut roads and built cabins.

Privates received 100 acres of land (larger grants for officers), with free transport to the settlement for men and their families, pensions of from sixpence to a shilling a day and army rations for twelve months. The head of each family received an axe, broad axe, mattock, pickaxe, spade, shovel, hoe, scythe, drawknife, hammer, handsaw, 2 scythe stones, 2 files, 12 panes of glass, 1 pound of putty, 12 pounds of nails, camp kettle, bed tick and blanket.

A duty to those who have fought

All through our history efforts have been made to repay, in some small measure, the debt owed to those who have fought for their country. After the Seven Years' War and the Napoleonic Wars, soldiers were offered grants of land and other inducements, and hundreds of officers and men settled in Upper and Lower Canada.

This time we must do much more for our returned men than was done for the soldier settlers of early days. We must give them the training, the education, the money and the facilities to establish themselves quickly and successfully in civilian life.

That is one reason why we must all support the Ninth Victory Loan. Money is needed to support our army of occupation; to provide hospitalization for the wounded; to transport the men of our armed forces back home.

Above all we must see that our returned men are more generously treated than those of other wars, who in spite of their meagre equipment helped to make Canada great. What they achieved we must hold.

Only One Game to be Played As N.H.L. Officially Opens 28th Consecutive Campaign

150-Game First Post-War Schedule Eagerly Awaited by Fans

By ALAN HARVEY
Canadian Press Staff Writer

After six wartime seasons in which attendance soared and playing standards slipped, the National Hockey League reverts to peacetime footing tonight with opening of its 28th consecutive campaign.

The 150-game first post-war schedule, eagerly awaited by scores of established stars trying a hockey comeback after varying periods of military service, gets under way with a single game between Chicago Black Hawks and Boston Bruins.

A sellout crowd will jam Boston Garden to send the N.H.L. off on its earliest start in history with the first of 30 Wednesday night games, 13 of which will be played in Boston. The unusually large mid-week quota is designed to ease travel difficulties on week-ends.

Boston and Chicago finished outside the first three last season but both clubs have added strength which team officials contend will shape them into strong challengers for the Stanley Cup which Toronto Maple Leafs won from Detroit Red Wings last spring after ousting the league champions, Montreal Canadiens.

Boston's Kraut line — possibly the only great attacking combination of prewar years which seems destined to remain intact—will be reunited for the first time since 1942 when Milt Schmidt, Bobby Bauer and Woody Dumart take the ice together. Dumart's appearance may be brief, however, because of an infected leg.

Pat Egan, nursing an injured kneecap, will be absent from the Boston blue-line brigade which will comprise Jack Church, Murray Henderson, Jack Crawford and 38-year-old Dit Clapper, Boston playing coach in his 19th consecutive season with Bruins.

The Chicago defence, strengthened by return of Johnny Mariucci from the United States Coast Guard service, will be drawn from Mariucci, George Allen, Eddie Wares, Joe Cooper and Reg. Hamilton.

The Bentley Brothers, Doug and Max, will flank Bill Mosienko on the first-string Chicago attacking unit. Red Hamill, Chicago captain, will team with Pete Horeck and Don Grosso and the third line will be built around Wingy Johnston, Clint Smith and Alex Kaleta.

STUDIES 223 BOOKS IN POW CAMP

Princeton, N. J., Oct. 24—(AP)—It would take more than a war to halt the studies of Nicholas Katzenbach. The 23-year-old student left Princeton during his junior year to enlist in the Army Air forces, was sent to North Africa. Taken prisoner and jailed in Italy and Germany. During his confinement, he read 223 books, returned home just in time to pass his final exams and graduate with honors from Princeton.

Controversy Over Eligibility of Krol of Argos

Participated in Two Pro Games While Member of Detroit Lions

By WILFRED GRUSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Toronto, Oct 24, (CP)—Though slightly bitter at Detroit Lions after a futile fling with them at American professional football, Joe Krol still would like another crack to make the grade.

The next time, however, he'd like to get into the lineup more.

As a slight controversy seemed shaping over his eligibility to play amateur for Toronto Argonauts after his recent release from the pro game, Joe said today he looked on his brief big time stay as "experience".

"I think I could hold up my own with most of them in that league, if only given the chance", he said. "Except for the really outstanding players no one showed much more than I did.

"They had lots of opportunities to shoot me into the lineup a lot more than they did especially in exhibition games. The few times I was on the playing field wasn't long enough to really get the feel of the ball.

The former University of Western Ontario and Hamilton Wildcats backfielder got into four games altogether, playing about 12 minutes against Philadelphia Eagles and five minutes against Washington Red Skins in exhibitions and just long enough for one kick in regular league games against Chicago Cardinals and the champion Green Bay Packers.

Participation in the two league games weighs heaviest against his case for eligibility to play for Argos. One more point: Joe doesn't qualify under the Sept. 1 residence rule. But here little opposition is expected because the Board of Governors can waive the residence rule with the unanimous consent of all members. The other point presents board members with a problem they aren't too anxious to meet.

Jimmy Dolan, secretary-treasurer of the League and a member of the Argo executive, said last night the Board was under the impression Krol had played only in one exhibition game which, he thought, would not have been a major issue. Joe's play in those league matches has complicated things but the board will rule on it before Friday, either by a telephone vote or at a specially called meeting.

TROPHY PRESENTED KINSMEN BALL TEAM

A number of the members of the Belleville Kinsmen Club journeyed to Trenton last night where their softball team which won the Kinsmen League of the district was presented with a handsome trophy by officials of the Benedict Proctor Company.

The local clubmen emerged victors over teams from Trenton and Tweed in the loop which was inaugurated this year. It is expected that other Kinsmen Club teams of the district will augment the league next year.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

IDEA SHOULD BE O. K.

Something brand new in sports organization insofar as Belleville is concerned should take concrete form at the Y.M.C.A. tonight, when the second meeting of city hockey players will take place. The initial get-together of the boys on Monday was better than at first anticipated and with no counter-attractions on this evening there should be a good turnout of fans and players.

It was decided at the Monday conclave that the 1945 edition of the Van Horne entry from this city will be operated on the player-co-operative basis. That is, the lads share in the profits and whatnot. It will be the first time in history that the co-operative idea, which seems to be going so well in other centres, has been tried here. There is no reason why it should not succeed, if placed in the proper hands.

However, the boys who attended the Monday conclave are highly optimistic over the outcome. The player situation, at least on paper does not appear to be as bad as some of the earlier season pessimists would have one believe.

For instance there are available Gord Cook, Fitzpatrick and Bill Dickie for the netminding chores, the latter tried out once with the Chicago Black Hawks, and Gord Cook has had plenty of experience. Vernon Goyer may be available for defence duties as will Speedy St. Louis, Ransler Bush and Doug Day. Up front is Gene LaBonne, Al and Berny Meagher, possibly Jerry Moher and Jack Wardaugh, Clare Williamson, Don Bowen, Tim Williams and Leo Goyer, with others to be heard from.

Red Townsend and other sports luminaries of the city have signified their intention of being on deck tonight when the gang gets together, and all who are interested are cordially invited to attend. The time, 8 o'clock at the Y. M. C. A.

THOUGHTFUL

There were several thoughtful gestures at the banquet given the champion Columbian Squires by the Knights of Columbus here Monday night. One that caught the popular fancy was the good wishes uttered by Father O'Donnell anent Ken J. Colling of this newspaper at present sojourning in Hamilton. In the midst of the many tributes paid to the youthful champs, Father O'Donnell voiced a popular note when he publicly paid tribute to our colleague with the fervent wish that he may speedily recover and once more take his place in the sports scheme of things here. The reverend gentleman has long taken a keen interest in all kinds of sports here and his tribute reveals that the interest extends to those whose efforts have gone a long way in furthering sport in the city.

"HI NELLIE"

Ye Gods, and small piscatorial fry, has it come to this. The newspaper profession is going to the dogs. Imagine, if you can, a sports editor, whose pate resembles that of the well-known cue-ball being awaited upon by a delegation of wrestling bobby-soxers whose sole request was his opinion as to whom is the better looking, Vic Christie or Whipper Billy Watson. As the sports bloke reached for the aspirin box and his trusty .38 one of the Bee Essers gurgled, "It's just to settle a bet. I think the Whipper is just too sweet for words."

Her blonde pall ogled her with a dangerous glint in blue orbs. "Yeah?" she grated. "If you think that guy has anything on that gorgeous hunk of man called Victor, sister, you're due for a new hair-do. I never did like that one you've got, anyway."

The third member of the trio, a cross between Lana Turner, Veronica Lake and La Grable sidled up to the desk. "Personally" she throated in one of those voices that originate in the diaphragm, "I'm neutral. In addition I think you girls are nuts to rave about a couple of well-upholstered torsos with a good-looking face up above to set them off. Not that I have any objection to girls going off the deep end what with the shortage of men and what not, but you're slightly off beam to advertise the fact."

The other two tossed curly heads. "Its our own business. If we like the Whipper and Christie, that's our affair."

"Aw come," murmured the Turner-Lake-Grable combination, "let's get out of here. I know where there are three sailors."

As the trio turned to go the last named hesitated. Then in a stage whisper she queried the world, "Say, mister, could you wangle an introduction to Vic Christie for me tomorrow night. I'll be waitin'."

And as the sports scribe's tonsils worked feverishly to re-adjust themselves she glided out of the room leaving behind a gasping staff and a delicate aroma of "Evening in Shannonville."

TORONTO LEAFS MORE POWERFUL THAN LAST YEAR

New Strength Comes Largely From Players Returning From the Services

By FRASER MacDOUGALL
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Owen Sound, Oct. 24 (CP) — The Toronto Maple Leafs embark on the 1945-46 National Hockey League campaign this week with a team infinitely more powerful than the one which won the Stanley Cup last spring but Coach Clarence (Happy) Day says that its chances "depend largely on how much strength the other clubs have added."

The new strength comes largely from players returning from the services, most of them members of the team which won the Stanley Cup for Toronto in the 1941-42 season.

The makeup of the team, which plays its first scheduled game against Boston Bruins here Saturday, won't be announced until after three intra-squad games this week, the final one tomorrow night in Toronto, and Day says that "while I won't say that every player in training camp here has the same chance, they all have an equal chance of being on the team."

Because of their wealth of material, the Leafs have already announced they will probably carry 20 players this season—six more than they can use in a game. There will be two goaltenders, three defence pairs and four sets of forwards. The extra manpower probably will be used to spell off the aging veterans on the tough weekends when the team plays at home Saturday nights and takes a long hop to one of the United States N.H.L. centres for Sunday night fixtures.

Choice of Goalies

Choice of the two goaltenders rests between Frank McCool, star of the Stanley Cup play-offs last spring and practically certain of the starting assignment, Baz Bastien and Gordie Bell, the youthful star from Portage La Prairie, Man. Bastien, on the Toronto roster before he joined the army has been a standout training camp performer.

It seems probable that Walter (Babe) Pratt, the towering railway switchman, and Elwin Morris will team up as one defence pair and Wally Stanowski and Bob Goldham as another. Goldham, just out of the services, was a brilliant performer in 1942. Choice for the others rests between Ernie Dickens, just out of the Air Force, Doug Baldwin, a Winnipeg boy who was with Quebec Aces last season and who has shown plenty of stuff in pre-season drills, and Tommy Anderson, the league's most valuable player four years ago with the Brooklyn Americans. He has been in the army since then.

Two Lines Intact

Two of last year's forward lines are intact—Gus Bodnar, Lorne Carr and Sweeney Schriner; Ted Kennedy, Mel Hill and Bob Davidson. Bodnar, rookie award winner of two seasons ago, has been outstanding in training camp and is working well with the Calgary veterans, Carr and Schriner. Kennedy, stronger and smarter than last season when he was one of the league's best centres, gives promise of being an even more dangerous attacker than ever.

There are plenty of first-class forwards for the other six positions. Syl Apps, one of the greatest players in modern hockey, is out of the army and if present plans are followed through will be flanked by the Metz brothers—Don and Nick. Billy Taylor, the Oshawa smoothie, probably will centre another line. One of his mates is Gaye Stewart, who gave promise of becoming one of hockey's greatest stars in his only full N.H.L. season, 1942-43, when he won the rookie award. Bill Ezinicki, who came to the Leafs from Winnipeg by way of Oshawa, may fill the other wing position if he can catch up after a late start on the training grind.

Defenceman Never Won

Other prospects include defenceman Bingo Kampman, Jim Thomson and Gar Boesch and forwards Joe Klukay, Doug McMurdy, Jack Irvine, Jackie Hamilton, Shep Mayer and Scotty Mair.

For one thing there are a lot of former rookie award winners on the Toronto roster. Schriner, Apps, Stewart, Bodnar, and McCool all won the award in their first league season. Top candidate for the honor this coming season appears to be Baldwin—if he makes the team. But a defenceman has never won the award.

New York, Oct. 24 —(AP)—Don't be surprised if the Notre Dame coaching exodus which began last year continues after the current football season. . . . The Irish don't figure to be beaten by any rivals except the Army and Navy, so it won't be a case of firing a losing coach, but some insiders figure that Hughie Devore will be looking for a new job in 1946. . . . Sam Taub, who can mangle the English language even more artistically than can the eminent announcer Harry Balough, celebrated his return to a ringside microphone Monday by announcing — " Moore is fighting in a sort of crouch, managed by Jimmy Johnson."

Gabby Street, who didn't earn his nickname by remaining silent, says he never dreamed there could be a job quite like broadcasting baseball . . . and getting paid for it. . . . "They won't even let you touch the mike," Gabby grins. "The engineers set it up and all you have to do is sit down and describe the game. . . . Of course, a guy gets tired sometimes, because you have to manage both clubs when you're broadcasting a game."

3-GOAL SPLURGE WINS FOR BLUES

Owen Sound, Oct. 24 — (CP)—Toronto Maple Leafs Blues put on a three-goal splurge in the third period last night to edge the Whites 5-4 in the first game of the club's annual pre-opening warm-up series. The second game will be played at Hamilton tonight with the third set for Toronto Thursday night.

Blues trailed 4-2 as the third period opened but, sparked by Bob Goldham, their drive netted them three goals. Mel Hill sniped the clincher less than three minutes before full time.

Whites jumped into an early lead when Sweeney Schriner scored on a pass from Gar Boesch at the one-minute mark. Blues tied it up 11 minutes later on Bill Taylor's goal, then Bodnar scored for Whites at 17:08. After Kennedy notched one for Blues at 19:20, Nick Metz put the Whites ahead just five seconds before the period ended.

Toronto, Oct. 24 (CP)—A clash of wills which ranged independent-minded racing men on opposite sides of the fence closed Ontario's money-making 1945 season on a note of cheap commercialism.

Without benefit of form charts, average fans found it obvious that somebody "ran in the can" in the farcical turf impasse between W. E. MacDonald and Fred S. Orpen, whose Metropolitan Racing Association controls activities at popular Dufferin Park

By original, aggressive promotion, angelic-looking Orpen had transformed the half-mile track jammed in a Toronto working-class district from the ugly duckling of Canadian race courses into a picturesque layout that didn't lag far behind pretentious Woodbine as a profit producer.

Shirtsleeved Dufferin soon became Canada's "Little Saratoga," a free-and-easy track where you could figuratively "lean out and kiss your pig" as thoroughbreds thudded around hairpin turns.

Crowds of 20,000 to 25,000 spilling between races from rickety grandstand to infield and back again, were commonplace.

Such was the scene Saturday for the closing card of the 98-day Ontario campaign, a program topped by the $3,000 Bunty Lawless Handicap. A principal attraction was the promised appearance of Tulachmore, swift-striding son of Worthmore which Toronto barrister MacDonald bought for $850 at a yearling sale and developed by his own training methods into leading Canadian-bred money winner (about $52,000) of all time.

MacDonald, centre of a stormy conflict at Dufferin two years ago over a faulty ride he said had been given his two-year-old Joe Guest, asserted he brought Tulachmore from Detroit at Orpen's invitation to enter the Canadian championship and the Bunty Lawless. Tulachmore breezed in the championship and looked equally good for the Bunty Lawless.

But the race attracted only four other interests and the Dufferin management decided to cancel wagering, permitting betting on seven other races. The Bunty Lawless was scheduled as the last race on the program.

MacDonald objected. Because of the lateness of the season, he contended the eighth race would be run in semi-darkness. He took his case to Orpen and was told no change would be made. So MacDonald scratched Tulachmore and stablemate Vice-Admiral, then announced he would "never race another horse on an Orpen-operated track.

That left three starters to contest a $3,000 handicap under possibly the weirdest conditions in Canadian racing history.

When the three starters paraded to the post, shortly after 6 p.m. semi-darkness prevailed Even veteran race announcer Foster (Buck) Dryden, though he delivered a competent running description, admitted conditions were difficult.

MacDonald's fears for Tulachmore proved justified in the running. Reaching the homestretch a handy margin before Westport Point and Reply Brief, Halton Brook stable's Ferry Pilot swerved sharply nearing the finish when frightened by sudden flashing of camera finish lights.

The western-bred colt's sudden swerve virtually unseated Jockey Ken Warwood and Westport Point charging on the inside, almost stole the race. Ferry Pilot won by a neck.

ADMITS SLAYING

Littleton, Colo., Oct. 24 — (AP) —Joseph Desrosiers, 25-year-old former Army sergeant, has admitted that he shot his wife, Catherine, aged 23, to death Thursday night in the rear seat of a car, but maintained the slaying was an accident, police said last night.

South is declarer at a contract in hearts. There are, as you can see, eight cards left in each hand. South is in the lead. How can declarer take six of the remaining eight tricks?

He can afford to lose two. And it looks as if he must lose a club and two trump tricks. But good play will enable him to keep opponents from taking more than two tricks against any defence.

It may be very mean of me, but I am not going to give you any part of the solution today. No doubt you will stay awake all night trying to solve it. And then give it up.

Of course, I don't want you to hate me in the morning. So, perhaps I should give you a hint or two of what you are up against. As a matter of fact, you are up against nearly every play principle here.

This problem takes in the trumping principle. It includes the establishment of suit principle. Also involved is the strip-and-end play. There is also a slight touch of the squeeze.

Mixed with all this is the unblocking principle in several of its branches. Among these branches is the preparation for an entry, a holdup, a refusal to cover.

Then you run into the grand coup possibly followed by the customary smother play. The smother is always an aftermath of the grand coup. You also strike a finesse.

So, think of all the basic plays that you can run into in a lifetime of bridge. They may happen when you try to solve this.

It shouldn't happen to a woof-woof.

SPORT SHORTS FROM BRITAIN

London, Oct. 24—(CP)—Old soldiers—and airmen—never die—they just play away. Wing Cmdr. Douglas Bader, legless R.A.F. ace, has entered the autumn meet of the R.A.F. Golf Association at Moor Park, Rickmansworth, and Maj. J.L.C. Dillon, who broke his neck in two places and his jaw in nine pieces, is back playing with his old rugby club, London Irish.

Major Dillon was injured in an accident in Persia in 1943 and spent months in a Cairo hospital encased in plaster and steel, but his playing was so good in his first game that friends said, "You'd never know Jimmie ever had an accident."

The Board of Trade chilled a hot rumor that natural rubber golf and tennis balls soon would be on sale.

"Natural rubber cannot be spread for these goods until supplies are much more plentiful," the board said. "Even then, some time must pass between the release of natural rubber and the appearance in the shops of balls made from this material."

"For these reasons it is not possible at this stage to forecast when tennis and golf balls made from natural rubber will be available, but until then they will still be made from synthetic rubber."

Gordon Richards, this season's champion jockey for the 18th time in 20 years, believes that 1946 will bring him his brightest chances of riding his Derby winner.

His retainers next year are F. Darling's Beckhampton stable, the Aga Khan, T. Lilley and Stephen Raphael.

"This means," Gordon said, "that I can have the pick of the Beckhampton colt, Edward Tudor, the Aga Khan's Khaled and Lilley's Radiotherapy for next year's Derby. And as they are three of the best colts of this season, I must have an excellent prospect of achieving the only ambition I have left."

Cricket briefs: Eddie Paynter, Lancashire test match batsman, says at 43 he feels the strain of three-day matches and may not play regularly in first-class cricket next season. . . Rochdale Cricket Club, members of the Central Lancashire League, have signed Cecil G. Pepper, 28, Australian victory test player, as their professional coach for three years. . . Capt. E.D.R. Eagar, 27, Oxford cricket blue and Gloucestershire amateur, has been appointed joint secretary of Hampshire Country Club and will captain the county XI.

Montreal Signs Negro Ball Player, Starts Argument

First Ever Admitted to Organized Baseball and Some Owners Unhappy

By GAYLE TALBOT

New York, Oct. 24 — (AP) — Senator A. B. (Happy) Chandler, who hasn't been getting along too happily, anyway, since he undertook to fill the late Judge Landis' shoes as Baseball Commissioner, can thank Branch Rickey Sr. for his latest headache.

Threatening to camp on the Senator's doorstep today were the owners of the Kansas City Monarchs, Negro professional baseball team, whose star shortstop, Jackie Robinson, was signed by Rickey last night to a contract with Montreal Royals of the International League — the Brooklyn farm club at Montreal.

"We won't take it lying down," said co-owner T. Y. Baird of the Monarchs. "Robinson signed a contract with us last year and I feel that he is our property. If Chandler lets Montreal and Brooklyn get by with this he's really starting a mess."

The reaction of the Monarchs' co-owner was, perhaps, the most interesting obtained to the signing of the first Negro player to a contract in organized ball. It had been generally felt — and no doubt by Rickey, himself — that the revolutionary move would be universally hailed by Negro baseball as the long-sought opening wedge into the big leagues. Owner Baird's beef was, therefore, a considerable surprise.

Quick to See Justice

President Clark Griffith of Washington Senators was quick to see the justice of Baird's complaint, declaring:

"That is a well established league, and organized baseball shouldn't take their players. The Negro league is entitled to full recognition as a full-fledged baseball organization."

If there had been any expectation that the announcement of Robinson's signing would rouse a storm of controversy in organized baseball circles, it failed to develop immediately. For the most part owners and league officials preferred not to comment last night, but those who did almost unanimously said the graceful thing.

President Frank Shaughnessy of the International League, of which Montreal is a member, said "as long as any fellow's the right type and can make good and can get along with other players, he can play ball. I don't think much prejudice exists any longer.

Anticipates No Trouble

Shaughnessy said the only team in the International League which could be considered in the 'south' was Baltimore, and that he didn't anticipate "any particular difficulties there."

Said owner Alva Bradley of Cleveland Indians: "That's the only way colored boys will ever get into the major leagues — by breaking in with minor league teams and proving they have the ability to play major league ball. Colored players have never been discriminated against in the major leagues. They have simply never been able to get into minor leagues to get the proper training for major league competition."

President Horace Stoneham of New York Giants termed Rickey's action a "fine way to start the program" and said his own club would begin scouting the Negro leagues next year.

Joseph A. Brown, secretary of the Buffalo Club of the International League, called the move "very surprising — hard to believe."

Johnny Muretich, Ottawa Player, Joins Hull Volants

By The Canadian Press

Marty Servo, 26, of Schenectady, N.Y., winner in 137 of 143 amateur and pro bouts, yesterday tossed his gloves into the ring with a challenge to test Freddie Cochrane for the latter's welterweight title. Servo hasn't fought since 1942 because of service in the coast guard.

The United States Hockey League will break the ice Saturday with two games as the successor to the pre-war American Hockey Association, the openers being scheduled at Dallas and Fort Worth. Four of the eight clubs are farm units of N.H.L. teams.

Louis B. Mayer, Bing Crosby and five other sportsmen today joined screen Actor Don Ameche in the ownership of the Los Angeles franchise in the All-America Professional Football league which proposed to open next fall. Other All-America entries at present include Chicago, Brooklyn, Cleveland, Buffalo, San Francisco and Miami, with an eighth team to be added soon.

Stock of the Hull Volants of the Quebec Senior Hockey League continued to rise today with the announcement that Johnny Muretich, an Ottawa player who has been working out with the Chicago Black Hawks of the National Hockey League likely will line up with Bob Guertin's team.

Muretich said he had turned down a Hawk offer and hoped to return to Ottawa University.

The Volants are still waiting permission to use Bucko McDonald and Kilby MacDonald, both former New York Rangers, who have been attending Coach Alex Wood's drills. Bob Balance, a Winnipeg centre, is expected to join the club by the weekend.

Ottawa Rough Riders of the Interprovincial Rugby Football Union have appealed a decision by the League executive barring Frank Mathers, former Winnipeg Blue Bomber backfielder, from appearing with the Ottawa Club.

Manager Jim McCaffrey said that after a telephone conversation, Jim Dolan, of Toronto, "Big Four" Secretary, had agreed to place the case before the executive again and, if the appeal was turned down, before the Board of governors.

Detroit Red Wings using only a handful of regulars, defeated Omaha Knights of the United States league 5-1 last night in the first of a two-game exhibition series. The teams play again at Galt today.

Jockey Chris Rogers of Hamilton led all Ontario riders in the number of winning mounts during the 1945 incorporated Canadian Racing Associations season, it was announced last night. The number of winners was not disclosed. Joe Cowley of Toronto, placed second to Rogers.

MILLION DOLLAR FIRE

Sherbrooke, Que., Oct. 24 — (CP)— Residents of nearby East Angus breathed easier as the combined efforts of the firemen from 15 municipalities reinforced by several hundred soldiers appeared to have got the better of a fire which since noon on Sunday has threatened to destroy the entire 60,000-cord pile of pulpwood on the property of the Brompton Pulp and Paper Co.

Large Contingent Welcomed Home

Toronto, Oct. 24—(CP)—To thunderous cheers and screams, one of the largest drafts to come to Toronto from overseas was welcomed home Tuesday. Led by a brass band, the draft consisted of 350 officers and other ranks who reached Halifax last weekend aboard the Ile de France.

The troops were met by relatives and friends in the pure food building at the Canadian National Exhibition Grounds.

Among arrivals was Maj. J. D. McFarlane of Toronto, formerly of Windsor, Ont., and Chatham, Ont., who was ousted as editor of the Canadian Army daily newspaper, Maple Leaf, for editorials criticizing the government's repatriation policy. MacFarlane had no comment.

Proposal to Annex Part of Township of Cornwall is Studied

Cornwall, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The possibility of annexing a portion of Cornwall Township to the City of Cornwall was discussed yesterday before a municipal board which heard a proposal from the township, the city, the United Counties, School Boards, industrial firms and other interested organizations.

The two-man board of R.C. Colter, chairman, and W. P. Near, reserved decision.

The proposal would extend the city boundaries to juncture with Charlottenburg Township on the east, a distance of 2 1/2 miles from the present limit, a mile to Toll Gate Road on the north, a mile to Centre Road near Black Adder Creek on the west and to the St. Lawrence River on the south.

Hidden 'Mike' Revealed Jap Plans For Defence Legion

Manila, Oct. 24 — (AP) — A word-for-word account of Gen. Tmoyuki Yamashita's 1944 Christmas day staff conference on plans for the defence of Luzon, recorded by a microphone hidden in the Japanese commander's supposedly secret headquarters, was relayed to Gen. MacArthur by an undercover signal service company, United States authorities disclosed today.

The microphone was smuggled into the paunchy Yamashita's headquarters in Santa Mesa, suburb of Manila, by Filipino and American Guerillas.

The voices it picked up at that meeting were sent out of Manila on transmitters smuggled into the city April 26, 1944.

APPOINTMENTS URGED

Toronto, Oct. 24 — (CP) — Amendment to provide two more judges on the Ontario Supreme Court Bench was urged by Stephen Wills, registrar for jury cases. Such action would require amendment of the judiciary act, Mr. Wills said, and would help ease the unprecented increase in criminal and civil cases on the dockets for the fall assizes.

As a result of the present shortage of judges, civil cases at Sault Ste. Marie were not even touched at the Fall assizes, but were set over to the winter assizes. Two supreme court judges died within the last two weeks and a third is ill.

CHAPTER 23

He snapped the toothpick in mouth in two, inserted a fresh one.

"The chick was sapped on the back of her head a couple of times with this Oscar she won the night before at the Academy Award dinner. This statue job was wiped clean. No prints. Then she was picked up and carried to the bed. Every article of her clothing was wiped clean, shoes, hose, dress, arms, jewelry, neck, mouth, nose, eye lashes, forehead, even her hair. No lab policeman found a print on her. All he found were minute threads from a handkerchief—a good Irish linen handkerchief—which we'll go back to in a few minutes."

Randolph shifted the toothpick from one corner of his mouth to the other.

"Then this towel is stuffed in her throat. No prints on the towel—that means gloves were worn, otherwise fingers would show. No prints any place, not even heel marks on the rugs. The guy was thorough. He took a broom and swept the rugs all the way down to the front porch. All that is in the room is this note which the police kept quiet because of pressure from International Pictures which says "She had it coming," and a gold pencil. The note is typed and the pencil has Lee Collins' name printed on it."

Randolph grinned slightly.

"The pencil is covered with prints. The police figure the guy maybe dropped it while doing the job. We'll come back to that later. For the note, type experts say it comes from Collins portable machine in his apartment. Any jury, listening to the background, the stories about the arguments and the love affairs, will convict Collins on the note and the pencil."

Again Randolph grinned. He flicked the toothpick out of his mouth and stared at the light from the desk lamp for a moment.

"Okay, so the answer is this. Collins brings this chick home about two. They leave Ciro's around midnight. They don't go straight home. They park some place. Even if Collins didn't admit it, medical examination shows they did. You can't wipe away some kinds of prints. Well, Collins hashes up a story about a quick drink at a bar and then home to bed. But the bartender at this joint has got a poor memory whenever he sees coppers, so he goes blank. Collins' story is flatter than a—than a—."

Randolph grinned. "I come high. But I got answers."

"All right," Randolph continued. "Collins is on his way to the gas chambers. But we'll take it short and sweet like Vickers. We'll look at this guy Warren. He says he took Wilson Hall and Miss Grayson, which is you, home about 12:30. He let you out first, which made it from Ciro's to your apartment in around a half-hour. Then he had to swing back to Hall's manse in Brentwood and that took another half-hour. After that, he says he drove around Los Angeles to get his mind off his home life, decided against going home and went to an all-night movie. The gal at the box office sees so many bums come in and out that she don't remember whether Warren was there or in Centerville, Iowa."

Randolph paused and accepted a cigaret from Paul. He puffed on it for a few moments, then opened a desk drawer. He pulled out a flat manila envelope and a pair of tweezers. Carefully he pulled tissue paper out of the envelope, then a simple sheet of carbon paper. He laid the carbon paper face up under the harsh glare of the light and stared at it for a moment.

Then he fished a handkerchief out of his pocket and dropped it on the desk. He plucked at the threads in the handkerchief with the tweezers, pulled a few loose, dropped them next to the carbon. He leaned forward on the desk and it creaked under the weight.

"Vickers sometimes likes it too short. Take the pencil. It's on the floor, near the bed, in more or less plain sight. If a guy is so careful to clean up everything, including sweeping the rug of all heel prints, then he don't miss a gold object like a pencil with his name engraved on it. Does he?"

"This handkerchief comes from Collins' apartment," the burly detective said. "You saw how easy it was to pull threads out of it. Just as easy to slip these threads out of an envelope and sprinkle them on a towel, or any place else. It's also just as easy to pick up a pencil with gloves on, carry it some place and drop it without disturbing the prints that are already on it. We're working on a smart guy, people. Only, none of them are ever too smart," he said and looked down at the carbon paper.

"The note was typed on Collins' typewriter, and just to show you how smart this guy is I'll tell you something. The keyboard of that typewriter has got those little rubber tabs for the regular keys. Well, so as not to rub off Collins' prints on them, he takes only the ones off that he'll need to use on the note. Then he puts them back on and Collins' prints are still there. If Collins had gone to all the trouble of cleaning prints and heel marks up in that bedroom, he would have done the same to his typewriter. Well, now we'll really show this smart guy up. Look," and he motioned to Elaine and Paul.

They bent over the desk and stared at the carbon.

"This sheet of carbon paper was lying on top of the regular typing paper. In order to pick up a sheet of the white paper, this carbon paper had to be moved. But ever try and pick up a single sheet with gloves on- Impossible. He had to take his gloves off — and when he did that he wrote himself a one-way ticket to the state house, and I don't mean the one at Sacremento. Look." Randolph pointed with the tweezers.

At one corner of the black carbon paper, a corner where no type imprints had touched, was a fingerprint.

"That print is as clear as — as clear as —."

Elaine helped him again. "As clear as your answer, big boy."

Randolph chuckled. "That's right. When this smart guy takes off his glove to pick up a single sheet of white paper he has to move the carbon. And when he moves the carbon he touches it with clean, pure fingers. I checked on that print at the bureau of records. It's owned by John Warren. He had plenty of time to get into Collins' apartment and back to his own house before Collins brought the babe home. He had a half-hour. Collins is as free as—as free as—."

"As free as I am now," Elaine breathed softly..

On the way back to Elaine's apartment that night, Paul pulled over to the side of the street and dug his hand into his pocket. He brought out a little piece of pasteboard, stared at it, then tore it up and tossed it out the window.

Elaine's brows were furrowed. "What was that?"

"That was a rain check. You cashed it in."

Then he put his arm around Elaine, started the car up and sped down the street into the night.

THE END

Elephant Circus To be Remodeled

London, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The Elephant and Castle, one of the major road junctions south of the Thames in London, is to undergo thorough alterations under London county council plans.

Eight and 10-storey buildings are to be erected around the new "Elephant Circus." Other plans call for a new underground station, with wide platforms and fast escalators; roundabout traffic control, and a new system of pedestrian subway crossings.

Three housing estates to accommodate 7,000 families are to be built in the district. More than 6,000 houses, badly damaged in the blitz, are to be demolished to make room for them.

ASSURES EQUALITY

London, Oct. 24—(Reuters) — Principles of a new German judicial system, assuring all Germans of equality before the law, were outlined in an Allied Control Council proclamation published last night.

How You Can Get Quick Relief From Sore, Painful Piles

Most people seem to think the only way to get relief from their sore, painful piles is by local treatment. Local treatment may give temporary relief from the itching but you can easily see why such treatment will not correct the cause of your piles.

No lasting freedom from pile misery can be had unless the cause of the trouble is corrected. Piles are due to internal causes so the best way to get lasting relief is to treat them internally with a medicine like Hem-Roid.

Hem-Roid is a formula that has been used for over 40 years by thousands of pile sufferers. It is a small, highly concentrated tablet, easy and pleasant to use. This cleverly compounded tablet formula directs its medical action to relief of the congestion that is the real cause of your piles. Hem-Roid promotes free, easy and comfortable bowel movements, quickly relieves itching irritation and soreness and stimulates better blood circulation in the lower bowel. With good blood circulation in the lower bowel the painful pile tumors soon heal over leaving the sensitive rectal membranes clean and healthy.

Posed by a Professional Model

We invite you to try Hem-Roid and let it prove itself. You can make your test, in the privacy of your own home. NO COST if you are not convinced that this is an amazingly easy and surprisingly effective method of treating your sore, painful piles.

Get a package of Hem-Roid today from any drug store and use it as directed for JUST FIVE DAYS. At the end of that time if you are not absolutely sure Hem-Roid is the nicest, cleanest and most effective pile treatment you ever tried, return the unused portion of the package to your druggist and he will promptly refund your money.

NOTE: This generous offer is backed by a reliable firm doing business in Canada for a good many years. Hem-Roid must help your pile condition quickly, easily and pleasantly or this simple, easy test costs you nothing. Try it today.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 24 — (CP) — Western oils were stronger and other groups were down at midday today on the Toronto Stock Exchange. The heavy trade was in Marion Rouyn on a gain of 5 cents to 39 on the news of a new under - writing and option deal. Volume was 1,163,000 shares for the first three hours.

Home oil at $4 was up 20 cents, Calgary and Edmonton gained 12 small gains were held by Anglo-Canadian and Vermilata.

Labrador firmed 10 cents to 7.10 and moderate weakness was shown by Noranda, Mining Corporation and Steep Rock.

Industrials were down .48 in the early session. Steel, Utility and liquor issues were lower and the food and paper stocks were firm to strong. Distillers-Seagram and Hiram Walker weakened 1/2 to a point.

NEW YORK STOCK ECHANGE

New York, Oct. 24 —(AP)— Stock market prices continued their retreat today with steels and motors leading a general decline of fractions to more than two points.

Among the principal losers were U. S. Steel and General Motors, both of which face the possibility of strikes.

Shares were mixed in the first hour of dealings but plus signs gradually disappeared and only a handful were apparent near the fourth hour. Activity picked up as the list moved lower and then slowed somewhat.

Lower were Bethlehem, Goodyear, Chrysler, U. S. Rubber, Montgomery Ward, Caterpillar Tractor, United Aircraft, Western Union "A," Kennecott, Westinghouse, Union Carbide, Eastman Kodak and Standard Oil (N.J.)

POINT TRAVERSE

Two-Day Pheasant Shoot in S. Marysburgh

Point Traverse, Oct. 23 — A 2-day pheasant shoot will be held in the township of South Marysburgh on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 26th and 27th. The area is a regulated game preserve.

Legal shooting during the hunt will be from 8 a.m. to 5 p.m. A bag limit of three cock birds per day is allowed. Each hunter requires a gun licence and also a township permit, which is secured from the clerk of the township, Hiram Ellis at Milford.

Visits Island

Mr. John Foster Dulles, famous international lawyer, who recently returned from London, England, where he attended the Peace Conference of the Council of Foreign Ministers, was holidaying at the Main Ducks, off here, last week.

Mr. Dulles crosses over to the Ducks during each April to watch the northward flight of birds, but last spring he was unable to come to the island, as he was one of the delegates to the San Francisco Conference.

In Hospital

Raymond McIntosh who was admitted to the Pr. Ed. Co. Hospital with a knee injury, is reported to be recovering satisfactorily.

Reduced Demand Cuts Fish Prices

Unprecedented releases of huge quantities of fish from the Lake Erie fishing grounds have swamped the New York market and local commercial fishermen are finding it hard to get rid of whatever catches they haul, it was learned here today.

Prices are sweeping down to new lows, and fish brokers are being warned by the market interests to watch their step as far as purchasing quantities of fish to any great extent is concerned.

Over the period of one year, the price of whitefish has slumped from 75 cents the pound to as low as twenty cents. Pickerel which brought 50 and 60 cents the pound last October are now selling at retail prices from twenty cents. Pike are 15 cents the pound and mudcats can be bought for five pounds for the dollar.

Last October the Bay of Quinte Fisheries on the Bay Bridge Road was shipping as many as sixty boxes of fish twice a day to the New York market. Today the demand is nil.

Unless there is a sharp upsurge in demand in the big markets and a noticeable decrease in outside supplies, fishermen here today predicted low fish prices in this vicinity would prevail for the time being.

TWO DAYS SALE

pour in at headquarters. The organizing ability of the three armed services was reflected in the high percentages of minimum quotas achieved in the first two days.

RCAF Tops Services

The Royal Canadian Air Force topped the services by coming within four per cent of its quota, without a second day's report from Western Air Command. Navy subscriptions climbed to 57.4 per cent and the army in the Western Hemisphere had reached half of its objective.

Capt. T. Gillespie was the first person at defence headquarters to collect on the offer of Lt.-Gen. C. Foulkes, Chief of the General Staff, of the use of the pen with which he signed the German surrender in Holland to any soldier doubling an individual Eighth Loan purchase.

Canadian Pacific Railway employees had allied for $1,491,850 by last night with eastern and western divisions nearly even in their totals.

Lanark Tops Previous Loan

Mutual Life Assurance Company of Canada, Waterloo, Ont., headed the business investors yesterday with a subscription of $20,000,000, followed by the British Columbia Electric Railway Co., Ltd., with $2,000,000 and North American Cyanamid, Ltd. Niagara Falls, Ont., $1,500,000.

Headquarters of Military District No. 1 at London, Ont., reported topping the campaign objective mid-way through the second day with signatures for $519,000 worth. At the same stage of the last loan, only 68 per cent of the target figure had been subscribed.

The County of Lanark reached $255,900 to top the same period of the Eighth Loan by $61,500.

FOR DUTCH CHARITIES

Hilversum, Holland, Oct. 24 — (CP-Aneta). — Proceeds of all football games which Canadian Army teams played against Dutch teams have been turned over to Dutch charities, it was made known today.

BREAK COMBINATION BUT GET NO LOOT

Office of the Canada Packers operated creamery in Bancroft was broken into some time during Tuesday night with the marauders knocking the combination off the safe in an unsuccessful effort to loot the strong box, provincial police headquarters stated here today.

Details of the break-in were stated to be lacking thus far but it was believed those responsible had been disturbed in their efforts to open the safe. Police from the Belleville headquarters are continuing the investigation.

Parades, Games, At Armouries, 'Y' On Hallowe'en

With Hallowe'en now exactly one week away members of the local Kinsmen Club, the Y's Men's Club and officials of the Belleville Y.M.C.A. are hard at work completing plans for the monster parties which on that evening will be held for the children of Belleville both at the Armouries and at the "Y".

For many years the Y.M.C.A. has conducted fine programs on the "Y" floor on the evening of October 31st which have provided a fine evening's fun for the young people of the city. These programs have given children the opportunity to dress up, parade, enter contests and win prizes, and at the same time have been instrumental in reducing the amount of destructive activity which is more or less associated with Hallowe'en.

During the past three years the Kinsmen Club and the Y. M. C. A. have co-operated in this endeavor and have made a joint effort which has increased the scope and effectiveness of the evening, using the Armouries for the older children and the Y.M.C.A. for the younger ones. This year again the 2 above organizations will work out a similar evening.

First of all there will be two parades, one for the younger children starting from the Y. M. C. A. at seven o'clock and another and possibly more elaborate parade from the Armouries starting at eight o'clock. To add to the excitement and enjoyment of the occasions, a local band will be on hand to lead the parade.

After the parade from the "Y" the participants will return to the Y.M.C.A. where stunts, contests and games will be enjoyed and prizes given for the best costumes in various classes to be later announced. Participants of the second parade will return to the Armouries where a special program of high class talent will be provided. Hallowe'en treats will be provided for all children at both places.

Co-operation of the parents and friends of children can again make this a successful evening and club members will appreciate any assistance which can be given.

Fine Programs, Awards and Cash "Shell Out" Prizes

The slogan that all roads lead to the Armouries and to the local Y.M.C.A. on Hallowe'en night is one which these days is constantly on the mind of every Belleville child of school age.

For, for the past week school children of almost every age and of both sexes have been living in anticipation of the annual Kinsmen Shell Out party which on that night will be enjoyed with all its trimmings.

Now well aware of what Kinsmen Shell Out tickets are, what they mean and what they might possibly bring in the way of prizes won, every school child has developed into a potential salesman or sales woman and is striving to be first on the list when the bright and shiny new bicycles are handed out to the boy and girl selling the most Shell Out tickets.

The bright and shiny new bicycles, of course, are only two of the prizes galore which will be won by Belleville children at the annual Kinsmen Shell Out party. In addition to the major prizes given to the boy and girl selling the most tickets, there will be cash prizes awarded to the child in each class room selling the most tickets.

And on Hallowe'en night after the children have visited homes of local residents collecting Shell Out tickets there will be special prizes of merchandise for the more successful.

All in all the children are both way winners in this Shell Out party game. They stand to win prizes for selling the most tickets; they get prizes for collecting the most tickets, and in fact the whole party is being staged for the benefit of Belleville children.

Belleville Youth Will Benefit From "Shell Out"

With hostilities in war torn European countries now having ended social work of Canadian service clubs has taken a very definite swing to Canada with result that social conditions across Canada can shortly be expected to take a turn for the better.

For the past two years the Kinsmen Hallowe'en Shell Out program has been staged with the primary thought in mind of raising money for the club's "Milk For Britain Fund" and as result of children's efforts all across Canada thousands of undernourished children in England have been receiving milk sent from Canada.

Today, with the need for the "Milk For Britain Fund" having greatly diminished, thoughts of the Kinsmen are turning toward Canadian welfare, and more to the point, welfare of Belleville children. It is toward this very commendable project that the proceeds from this season's Shell Out Party will be directed.

The Belleville Kinsmen Youth Work and Organization Fund, will cover a multitude of different welfare endeavors, but it is toward this goal that the local service club has now directed its efforts.

In other years the annual shell out party has met with splendid success financially. From the interest which the children are again showing this year, prospects are for an equally successful party this season. And local school children in doing their utmost to sell as many tickets as possible will have the added incentive in knowing that their efforts will benefit some less fortunate Belleville child.

So, with the need for milk for Britain having lessened, Belleville children will benefit through this year's shell out party. For Belleville Kinsmen Youth Work and Organization Fund to grow with corresponding benefit to Belleville children, it remains only for local citizens to do their part in purchasing Shell Out tickets.

'Shell Out' Parties Tend to Minimize Hallowe'en Pranks

While Kinsmen Shell Out parties were initially organized three years ago to assist in raising funds to supply needed milk for children in England and to give Canadian children a good time on Hallowe'en, records in the larger centres all across Canada have shown that these parties have had a direct bearing in lessening property damage on the night which Goblins ride.

So, if for no other reason shell out parties as sponsored by the local Kinsmen Club should receive the fullest support from Belleville parents and property owners.

Shell Out parties are endorsed by city police, firemen and officials at the city hall, as being one of the best mediums in directing the interests of children on Hallowe'en to other than destruction of property.

The conception of the Kinsmen "Shell Out" party as originated in Western Canada for the sake of war charity is one to be commended. The principle is simple and the fact that candy is scarce because of shortages resulting from the war has greatly enhanced its success.

The principle is that prior to Hallowe'en school children sell "Shell Out" tickets (one cent each) to the householders. On Hallowe'en these Shell Out tickets are collected by children in masquerade when householders pass them out instead of candy.

The children take these Shell Out tickets either to the Armouries or to the Y.M.C.A., dependent upon the age of the individual child, where prizes are given for collecting the greatest number of tickets. Children also receive worthwhile prizes for being the top salesman in their respective class rooms at school. And the boy and girl selling the most tickets in the city receive major prizes of bicycles.

Bank Hold-up Case Opens at Napanee

Lauzon, Peltier Face Two Charges

Napanee, Oct. 25—(CP)— Accused of perpetrating the biggest bank robbery in Canadian history—at Bath, Ont., last August—three Windsor, Ont., men today face trial on bank hold-up and jail-breaking charges.

The men—Ulysse Lauzon, 22, Joseph Peltier, 19, and Walter Koresky, 22—led police through five provinces after a series of bank robberies until the trail ended Sept. 12 in Charlottetown.

Peltier and Lauzon face bank robbery charges in connection with hold-ups at Ayr, Port Perry and Bath, Ont., in addition to a charge of breaking from Waterloo County jail, Kitchener, Ont., July 19.

Koresky will answer to charges of bank robbery at Port Perry and Bath.

Bonds, Cash Stolen

In the Bath stick-up approximately $310,000 in bonds and cash were stolen, the most of it later recovered by police. In the three hold-ups police estimate more than $400,000 was involved.

Peltier and Lauzon were in Waterloo County Jail awaiting charges of robbing the Ayr Canadian Bank of Commerce branch when they sawed through cell bars to escape.

The first real break in police search for the gang came Aug. 31 when Peltier was captured in Montreal after he had been shot by a bank teller. Peltier was attempting to cash $6,000 worth of stolen registered bonds at a Montreal bank.

Lauzon and his 20-year-old wife, Eileen, escaped, police said, in a car stolen from a Windsor man. The automobile was found later containing $26,000 in bonds.

Lauzon, Koresky Arrested

For his part in a Imperial Bank of Canada branch robbery in Windsor, Feb. 23, Peltier on June 19 was sentenced to eight years in penitentiary and also one year in reformatory on charges of receiving stolen goods, car theft and skipping bail.

Koresky and Lauzon after their capture were sentenced to one year's hard labor in Quebec when they were convicted of automobile theft.

Strike Pickets Tighten Lines

Windsor, Ont, 25. (CP)—Pickets around the strikebound Ford Motor Company Limited, plants here were tightened last night after officials of the United Automobile Workers of America (C.I.O.) decided unanimously at a policy meeting that watchmen allowed to enter the plants "were engaged in work formerly done by men now in the picket line".

A Union statement charged that watchmen after being permitted through the picket lines changed their uniforms inside the plant and went to work as mechanics.

"When the gates were closed last Sunday", the statement said, "it was reported that only one watchman was left at each gate.

"Next day it was found that the watchman were changing their uniforms inside the plant and engaging in work completely beyond the scope of the duties for which they were paid. More than 20 watchmen left the plant last night and only five were allowed to enter. Another 28 were barred this morning after five were permitted through. The five allowed in on each shift include one foreman.

"The decision to permit the entry of only a limited number of watchmen was made unanimously by the policy committee after numerous reports indicated positively and without any room for doubt that the watchmen were engaged in work formerly done by men now on the picket line".

The strike, which started Sept. 12, involves 10,000 production workers.

A. L. Bennett, Galt, president of the I.A.P.A. presided. It was announced that the annual meeting of the Associations will be held in Toronto on April 8, 1946.

Nazis Apathetic To New German Political Parties

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Berlin, Oct. 25 — (CP) — The Grunows live at 69 Nassauische Strasse in downtown Berlin, in a five-room flat on the fourth floor of a bomb-damaged apartment house.

Their real home was lost a year ago in a bombing. This flat was formerly owned by an S. S. officer killed fighting against the Canadians at Caen.

The Grunows, who have suffered a good deal during the war, are probably an average German family. Paul Grunow is the 48-year-old head of the house, a radio technician who before and during the war worked in the Telefunken Radio Works in Berlin.

His wife lives with him in the shoddy flat. The windows were blown out and cardboard replaces the glass. A Russian shell left a gaping hole in one wall which is covered by canvas. It is cold and bleak and the winter without coal will be bitter.

The Grunows cannot draw on their savings for the banks are still closed. The family income comes from the money Paul Grunow earns in his radio repair business.

Frequently they can't get rations to which their cards entitle them. Food is scarce in Berlin and will be more scarce. Grunow goes each day to various places in the city where he can barter articles.

Grunow himself is an unrepentant German. He probably was an active member of the Nazi party although, like most Germans, he will not admit it. But he is concerned about the new Allied regulations directed against Nazi party members. He says: "We are Germans. We fought a good war. We lost. But we are still Germans. I am proud to be a German."

He is frankly surprised that German leaders are to be tried as war criminals.

The Grunows speak of Hitler with reverence. National Socialism is not dead in this family nor in many other families in Germany. It will be a long time dying. But they are apathetic to the new German political parties.

Mick MacDonald Given 15 Years

Toronto, Oct. 25.—(CP)—Donald (Mickey) MacDonald, 38, convicted on a re-trial of charges of armed robbery and kidnapping, was sentenced today to fifteen years in penitentiary. He received the same sentence at the original trial nearly a year ago.

The sentence, imposed by Judge J. Ambrose Shea, in Court of Sessions after a jury convicted him six days ago, was consecutive to a 2 1-2-year term MacDonald was serving for aggravated assault on an 84-year-old Toronto hotel doorman.

Today's sentence involved a charge of armed robbery of a $35,000 liquor shipment Dec. 13, 1943, and the kidnapping of George Butcher, truck driver for Western Freight lines. It followed a successful appeal by MacDonald on the original conviction.

Transatlantic Flight Becomes Jaunt Amid Luxurious Surroundings

By D. E. BURRITT
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 25. (CP Cable)—Flying the Atlantic is not news but it is when you do it in a clublike atmosphere standing with a cocktail in your hand while discussing with a group of fellow-passengers whether you'll select lobster thermidor or filet mignon for dinner.

To young Canadian airmen, who flew the Atlantic in all kinds of weather to ferry their aircraft to the front lines, it would have seemed fantastic to have been aboard the American airlines "Skymaster" which left New York Tuesday to start regular thrice-weekly Atlantic crossings to Britain.

The big passenger ship, which made the trip in 15 1-2 hours' flying time after stopping at Boston, Gander, Newfoundland, and Rinneanna (near Foynes), Erie, is really a flying lounge in which may be seated 44 passengers.

To those of us who had made a wartime bomber crossing wearing two flying suits over regular clothes, extra socks and flying boots and a fur helmet—and still froze almost as solidly as the water in the aircraft's thermos tank—life in the "Skymaster" seemed an exaggerated idea of what might be enjoyed in the distant future.

On the "Skymaster" if you're chilly the purser or stewardess adjusts the air-conditioning system.

If you are thirsty or hungry, they look after you in a big way. Tables are set for a full-course dinner—and there is none of this stuff of balancing a plate or cup on a wobbly knee.

Passengers saunter about, stand in groups, grind movie cameras, pose for one another. It never seems to occur to them that the cold Atlantic is all that's below.

The present terminal for the service which succeeds the system pioneered by the American Export lines is at Hurn Hampshire, about 150 miles southwest of London. British authorities say there are not suitable landing fields available at London for the present.

THIRD DIVISION TO START JOURNEY HOME ON OCT. 30

Half of Formation Will Leave Holland For Great Britain by 15th November

By BILL ROSS
(CP War Correspondent)

Amsterdam Oct. 25. — (CP Cable)—The 3rd Canadian Infantry Division, Canada's representatives in the D-Day assault on fortress Europe, who later earned the nickname of "Water Rats", in Holland, start their journey home October 30.

Movement orders have been issued for the trip from Holland to the United Kingdom for half of the formation by November 15. A daily flow of 600 men through Nijmegen will see 465 officers and 8,456 other ranks leave during the first two weeks of November. About 4,279 will be left for later movement.

The present schedule follows:

Oct. 30: Cameron Highlanders of Ottawa; 1st Canadian Corps Defence Company (Lorne Scots); 6th Field Company Royal Canadian Engineers; 11th, 16th, 43rd Field Batteries Royal Canadian Artillery.

Nov. 1: 34th, 66th, 81st Field Batteries R.C.A.; Queen's Own Rifles, Toronto.

Nov. 3: 18th Field Company R.C.E.; North Shore New Brunswick Regiment; Highland Light Infantry (Galt).

Nov. 5: Regiment de la Chaudiere; 17th Canadian Hussars.

Nov. 7: Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry Highlanders (Cornwall); Regina Rifles.

Nov. 9: North Nova Scotia Highlanders; 32nd, 69th Light Anti-aircraft Batteries R.C.A.

Nov. 11: Canadian Scottish (Victoria); Royal Winnipeg Rifles.

Nov. 13: 3rd Field Park Company R.C.E.; 100th Light Anti-aircraft Battery, 4th, 52nd, 93rd, 105th Anti-Tank Batteries R.C.A.; 22nd, 44th, 78th Field Batteries R.C.A.

Nov. 15: 5th, 87th Medium Batteries R.C.A.; 85th, 63rd, 99th Field Batteries R.C.A.

Fibrin-Foam Stops Excessive Bleeding

Montreal, Oct. 25. (CP)—Dr. S. A. MacDonald of the staff of the Montreal General hospital, yesterday demonstrated to the 13th Annual Clinical Convention of the Montreal Medico-Chirurgical Society a new substance, known as fibrin-foam, which is designed to stop bloodflow in difficult operations.

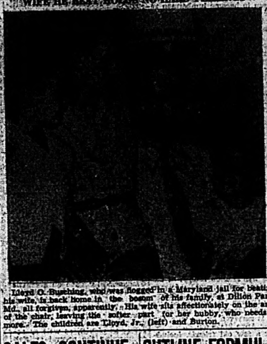
Fibrin-foam looks similar to gauze and may be applied to any part of the body where bleeding may occur during an operation. Placed on the bleeding spot, it may be left there after the operation is completed. It disappears of its own accord within one or two weeks.

ARRESTED AFTER ROBBERY

Welland, Oct. 25—(CP)—Three men were arrested shortly after robbing a Dunnville jewellery store early today. The men are: Joseph Yarcich, 19, Crowland; Angelo Gobbi, 24, Welland, and George Bulek, 25, Crowland.

Half an hour after receiving a telephone call from Dunnville police Welland police cars apprehended the three men motoring in Welland. A quantity of jewellery was found in their possession. The trio was taken to Dunnville later.

WIFE HE BEAT HOLDS NO HARD FEELINGS



Lloyd O. Busching, who was flogged in a Maryland jail for beating his wife, is back home in the bosom of his family, at Dillon Park, Md., all forgiven, apparently. His wife sits affectionately on the arm of the chair, leaving the softer part for her hubby, who needs it more. The children are Lloyd, Jr., (left) and Burton.

SALES CONTINUE AT HIGH LEVEL ACROSS CANADA

$69,613,800 Subscribed 3rd Day, Approximately 19 Million Ahead of Last Loan on Same Day

Ottawa, Oct. 25—(CP)—Canadians signed their name to victory for $69,613,800 Wednesday to boost the three-day total for Canada's ninth and biggest Victory Loan to $232,774,650, approximately $19,000,000 ahead of the total at the same point in the eighth loan drive last spring, the National War Finance Committee announced today.

Wednesday's sales compared with $60,328,150 subscribed on the third day of the last drive and the three-day aggregate compared with $203,179,900 reached at that point last spring.

There was continued heavy response in the three-week campaign for a minimum of $1,500,000,000.

Municipal and religious bodies were large Ontario buyers. The Church of England Synods of Hamilton and Niagara subscribed $50,000 and $20,000 respectively. The municipalities of Woodstock and Lindsay bought $65,000 and $25,000 respectively. The city of Kingston reported general sales of $349,200, almost double the $176,600 taken in on the same day of the last loan. Kingston county more than doubled its previous $38,000 total.

Payroll workers of Peterborough, Ont., Wednesday exceeded their combined objective of $1,255,000; while Brantford workers were within 20 per cent of theirs. Top payroll performer in Northern Ontario was the Aunor Gold Mine, where workers bought $54,100 worth of victory bonds. First quota-cracking communities in that area were Hearst and Smooth Rock Falls, with Hearst hitting $220,000 against an objective of $174,000.

Troop Shows Used.

Five seasoned troop shows go into action during the next few days, in support of the Victory Loan in military hospitals, repatriation centres and armories. Montreal schools are offering prizes for the best Victory Loan costumes worn at Hallowe'en celebrations, and campaign headquarters are thronged with children seeking posters.

Large business investors yesterday included Canada Life Assurance Company, Toronto, $15,000,000; Hudson's Bay Company, Winnipeg, $1,000,000; Safeway Stores, Ltd., Winnipeg, and branches, $750,000; Procter and Gamble Company of Canada, $750,000 and the City of London Sinking Fund, London, Ont., $750,000.

A $1,000,000 subscription by the City of Halifax boosted Nova Scotia's two-day sales to $8,842,200, or 22.49 per cent of the provincial quota, with individual purchasers accounting for $6,019,400 of the total. Sales at the Sydney, N.S., steel plant averaged $245 per employee, while Dominion Coal and Steel Company workers averaged $361.

Ontario provincial headquarters was enthusiastic over the response in central and southwestern sectors of the province, with nine plants in the Toronto suburban area alone going over the top to bring the total to 13 at the end of the second day.

Ottawa City Loan officials said maintenance of the rate of sales would assure a successful campaign. By last night the figure was $13,048,150 of a $20,000,000 objective.

OUTLINE FORMULA BY WHICH TALKS CAN PROCEED

Parley Between Indonesians and Dutch Will be Held Before Third Party

By RALPH MORTON

Batavia, Java, Oct. 25—(AP)—Amir Sjarifuddin, Minister of Information in the unrecognized Soekarno government, announced tonight the formula under which Indonesians will open informal talks with the Dutch in an attempt to bring a peaceful settlement to the Dutch East Indies.

The Information Minister declared the talks will be held in the presence of a third party, presumably a representative of the United States, and that the "right of self-determination of the Indonesian people is acknowledged."

Sjarifuddin is one of the outstanding moderates in the native Nationalist Movement.

The political situation brightened considerably as H.J. Van Mook, acting Governor, invited the Soekarno cabinet to meet with him.

United Appeal

(Aneta, Netherlands news agency, reported in a dispatch from Amsterdam that 11 newspapers have addressed a united appeal to the Governor to remove the tensions between Holland and Indonesia through democratic means and without the use of force.")

Aneta reported a "chaotic and grave" situation at Soerabaja, Java naval base, where Allied troops were due to land today. Allied units engaged in the recovery of Allied prisoners of war and internees were said to have been thrown into jail by Nationalist Extremists.

"Seventeen Europeans and Eurasians have died as the result of beatings they received in the jails," Aneta said. "There are street fights every day."

President Soekarno of the "Indonesian Republic" appealed to the United States in a broadcast last night to act as mediator in the struggle for Indonesian independence.

Soekarno spoke over the British-controlled Alabar broadcasting station at Bandoeng. His use of the station was not immediately explained. When British forces first took over Bandoeng, however, they stopped the Nationalists from using the station, and some observers interpreted the lifting of the ban as an indication of an important change in British policy.

Soekarno's address came amid growing hope for an early meeting between the Indonesian Nationalist leader and J. H. Van Mook, acting Governor of the Netherlands East Indies.

It was expected a statement would be forthcoming shortly on the progress of negotiations begun by three mediators — all Indonesians — which Governor Van Mook dispatched earlier this week to talk with Soekarno's foreign minister in an effort to arrange a conference.

It was believed Soekarno would ask that the meeting take place at a neutral location — probably the United States Consulate — and would suggest that Walter A. Foote, United States Consul-General, act as mediator.

Officials close to Van Mook expressed hope that a compromise agreement could be concluded to avert further bloodshed.

Soekarno said yesterday "No power on earth" could halt the Indonesian Independence Movement but added:

"We don't want to throw the Dutch into the sea. They can maintain their financial holdings here. These things can be arranged by a treaty with the Dutch."

INDIANS' PLIGHT DRAWS SYMPATHY IN PARLIAMENT

House Supports Motion To Extend Provisions Of Old Age Pensions Act to Indians

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 25 — (CP) — The plight of the Canadian Indian, once the proud nomad hunter of the plains but now confined to a government reserve, drew sympathy in the Commons yesterday.

Quick support came from all sides of the House for a resolution introduced by Lt.-Col. D. S. Harkness (PC — Calgary East) which called for extension of provisions of the Old Age Pensions Act to the Indians of the Dominion.

Resources Minister Glen, whose department handles Indian affairs, expressed sympathy with the aims of the resolution, outlined steps taken to ease the lot of the red man and said he hoped to introduce at the next session a bill which would revise the Indian Affairs Act.

Mr. Glen also announced that a Royal Commission or committee of the Commons would be established to study the treatment of Indians and consider such questions as payment of Old Age Pensions.

No action was taken on Col. Harkness' resolution before six o'clock adjournment was reached.

Two Govt. Announcements

Discussion of the status of the Indian in the country of his ancestry was preceded by these two government announcements by Justice Minister St. Laurent:—

1. The Canadian Army will take over control of the Alaska highway next April 1 while the R.C.A.F. will assume responsibility for the Northwest Staging Route next June 1. Both these defence projects, built at a time when this continent was threatened by Japanese attack, now are controlled by United States authorities.

Troops on Move

(By The Canadian Press)

Due at Halifax—S.S. Queen Elizabeth (Friday) with 12,000 repatriated Canadian servicemen.

Due at Esquimalt, B.C. — H.M.C.S. Glory with about 1,000 British and Canadian personnel returning from the Far East.

ADMIT PATIENTS ON FRIDAY

Ottawa, Oct. 25—(CP)—Veterans Minister Mackenzie said yesterday in the commons that patients will be admitted Friday to the new hospital at Peterborough, Ont.

The 200-bed hospital, would be used for the care of tuberculosis cases of not too serious a character.

No plans had been made for a formal ceremony at the opening of the Peterborough hospital.

Japan is Ordered To Sever Relations With All Countries

Diplomatic Properties and Papers to be Given Allies

Tokyo, Oct. 25 — (AP) — Gen. MacArthur today ordered Japan to sever relations with all foreign governments and to turn over its diplomatic properties and papers throughout the world to the Allied powers.

The order, issued "by direction of the Allied powers," told the Japanese government to recall home "immediately" its diplomatic and consular representatives to neutral countries.

Purpose of the order, other than the apparent one of revealing to the Allies all Japan's diplomatic and consular secrets, was not disclosed. It came to Gen. MacArthur from the joint chiefs of staff at Washington.

The directive followed close upon criticisms from Moscow to the effect that with the demobilization of Japan's armed forces, the occupation policies in the conquered country should be directed by a four-power commission instead of by Gen. MacArthur.

The order called for "prompt compliance" by the Japanese government of the following requirements:—

1. In the United Kingdom, Russia, China, the United States, France, The Netherlands and their Colonies, Japan must turn over "intact and without delay" to the governments of those countries all diplomatic and consular archives and property.

2. In other countries where Sweden or Switzerland are acting as protecting powers over Japanese interests, Japan's property and archives must be delivered to representatives of "the four Allied Powers" who have been instructed to receive them. The protective powers, however, shall continue to watch over interests of Japanese Nationals.

Aged Woman Is Asphyxiated

Peterborough, Oct. 25. (CP)—Eighty-six-year-old Mrs. Dorothy Smith was asphyxiated last night when she accidentally turned on the gas jet of a hot-water heater while attempting to raise herself after falling from a chair.

Police forced their way into the kitchen of the home where Mrs. Smith resided alone after a neighbor detected gas fumes. Death was estimated to have occurred only 15 minutes before police arrived.

Last Tuesday, Mr. and Mrs. George Helson were discovered unconscious in their home, in another part of the city, from leaking gas fumes. They are recovering in hospital. Helson is 82, his wife, 78.

Coast Watchers of South Pacific Earned Respect of Every Fighting Man

San Francisco, Oct. 25 (CP)—The coast watchers of the South Pacific earned the respect of every fighting man who came in contact with them and none was more honored than Ruby Boye, Honorary Third Officer in the Women's Royal Australian Naval Service and lone white woman on Vanikoro Island.

One of the watchers whose activities were top secret during the war, Mrs. Boye transmitted by radio news of the weather and of Japanese ship, troop and plane movements.

The coast watchers—scattered individuals or tiny groups from Australia, New Zealand, Britain, Holland, China, Canada, South Africa, Indonesia, Malaya and the Philippines—fought Japanese as well as spied on them.

In small-scale battles on the Japanese-held islands on which they were hidden, the coast watchers killed nearly 4,000 Nipponese, took 74 prisoners, and rescued more than 500 Allied airmen.

Mrs. Boye remained on Vanikoro with her husband, who had worked for a lumber company there. Her weather reports guided Allied bombers. Through her native scouts she often learned of enemy warships at anchor in isolated lagoons, of Japanese convoys moving south, or of Japanese planes landing on brand-new airstrips.

The Japanese knew it, too.

"Mrs. Boye, calling Mrs. Boye on Vanikoro," came a sing-song voice on her radio one day. "This is Japanese commander. You get off air pretty damn quick and please to discontinue use of radio. You get right off Vanikoro or we come over and make every thing hot for you."

But Mrs. Boye was not impressed; the Japanese were kept busy by growing Allied opposition and never arrived to punish her.

On New Guinea, Capt. Neptune Blood operated with equal effectiveness; his boldness became a tradition. Once cut off from his group, Blood led a small crew to safety across New Guinea's 13,000-foot mountains, allowing each man one small pancake of native flour every 24 hours. For the last six weeks of the painful trip, Blood walked barefoot; his boots had fallen apart.

Natives who aided the coast watchers throughout the South Pacific often waged private wars against small bands of Japanese. On Bougainville, a native named Misiamu polished off at least 30, bringing in rifles, paybooks, caps, pistols and other evidence to prove it.

Reports to the Allies sometimes ceased for weeks at a time on such flights—and, inevitably, some of the coast watchers never were heard from again.

BERNARD COOK 24, INSTANTLY KILLED NEAR MARMORA

Car Crashes Into Ditch Two Miles North of Village, Companion Not Hurt.

Marmora — (Special) — Bernard Cook, 24, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook, Marmora Township, was instantly killed about 2:30 this morning when the car in which he was riding crashed into the ditch and turned over on the Cordova Road about two miles north of this village.

Harry Boyd, a passenger in the car was not seriously hurt in the accident.

The two men were returning home from a shower given at the home of Mrs. Louise McGrath some distance north of Marmora.

Cook suffered a fatal skull fracture and severe head and facial lacerations. Constable John Hatch, Madoc and Chief of Police W. D. Lavender, Marmora, investigated the accident with Dr. Beatty, coroner, of Madoc.

Following the investigation, Dr. Beatty stated that an inquest will be held.

United Nations Charter Part of Law of Nations

By GRAHAM HOVEY

Washington, Oct. 25 (AP)—The United Nations is a going concern—on paper.

Conceived at San Francisco by representatives of half a hundred countries "determined to save succeeding generations from the scourge of war," the organization came into formal being at 4:45 p.m. E.S.T. yesterday.

A few pen scratches on diplomatic parchment by State Secretary Byrnes made the San Francisco charter "a part of the law of nations."

As of yesterday noon, 26 countries had completed ratification of the charter and delivered the necessary documents at the State Department. Ratification documents of at least three more countries were required to make the charter effective—and one of the three had to be Russia, one of the "Big Five" on the security council.

Shortly after 3 p.m., Fedor Orekhov, First Secretary of the Soviet Embassy, called at the State Department's Division of Trusties. He had with him not only Russia's ratification, but those of the White Russian and Ukrainian Republics as well.

The organization to keep the peace is not actually functioning yet.

The assembly is scheduled to hold its first meeting in London in December. Some time later the all-powerful, 11-member United Nations Security Council will meet.

SEEK RELATIVES OF LATE JOHN GORMAN

A native of this city and former resident here, John Gorman, age 80, had died in North Bay, according to information received at the local city police station from North Bay police who would like to contact relatives. The late Mr. Gorman was the son of Mary Meagher and John Gorman. Funeral arrangements have been made for seven o'clock Friday morning when burial will be made unless North Bay police receive word from relatives in this district.

MOTORIST LOSES TIRE AND TUBE BY THEFT

With restrictions still in effect on the sale of new tires, district motorists continue to lose tires and tubes from their vehicles, according to complaints which repeatedly are turned in at the local police station.

A North Front Street resident reported yesterday to police that the spare tire and tube with wheel cover had been taken from his vehicle.

Two other instances of theft reported over the night included the disappearance of three new garbage cans from in front of a Highland Ave. residence, while a Peterborough motorist reported his car had been broken into while it was parked on a Front Street service station lot.

Sgt. Jack Ogilvy, Wellington, Expected On "Queen Elizabeth"

Sergeant Jack Ogilvy, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ogilvy, Wellington, a four-year youthful veteran of the war is arriving home on board the troopship, "Queen Elizabeth" which is expected to dock at Halifax on Friday.

The young soldier, a sergeant in the Royal Canadian Ordnance Corps was the chief non-commissioned officer in a light aid detachment and was attached to the Sherbrooke Fusiliers during its tenure of active service in Europe.

He enlisted in 1941 and attended a trades school at Hamilton emerging from the stiff six-months course with the chevrons of a corporal. He went overseas the same year and trained extensively in Scotland before going to France with the infantry unit.

With his detachment he followed the men of the Fusiliers where the going was hottest, repairing and maintaining the heavy tanks with which the unit was equipped. He had several narrow escapes. One in particular which saw a heavy German shell blow up his vehicle a few minutes after he had dismounted from it.

Prior to enlistment Sergt. Ogilvy was associated with his father in a dairy business in the lakeside village. He married the former Miss Aleta Way, Wellington a few months previous to going overseas.

Improper Use Of Fog Lights To Bring Summons

With the use of fog lights as driving lights noted as being on the increase, provincial highway traffic officers today issued a warning to district motorists against this practice and stated that summons would be issued to those continuing to use the highways without proper lighting on their autos.

Llights used for driving must be equipped with dimmers or "ditching" apparatus, while fog lights must be so positioned that they will fall on the highway at a distance not greater than 75 feet in front of the car. Many of the night highway accidents are the result of motorists being blinded by improperly focussed fog lights or by lights which were not "ditched" when meeting other vehicles, it was stated.

More Workers in Bush Required To Supply Needed Building Material

In view of the shortage of housing accommodation in the urban centres of the district and the necessity of building materials with which to build the needed houses, an urgent appeal for workers to go into the bush as lumbermen was made from the local employment offices today.

Throughout the Province of Ontario from eight to ten thousand bush workers could be placed as lumbermen while about 100 could be placed in the Hastings district, it was stated.

"The need for housing across the province is general and housing contracts are crying for materials which are not available," stated Mr. H. H. Reed, manager of the local employment office. "The only way the necessary materials can be secured is for workers to go into the bush."

Good Wages

And good wages are paid to bush workers. Pulpwood cutters receive up to $4.50 per cord and sawyers and axemen cutting lumber are paid equivalent wages. Generally speaking a good bush man can earn up to 75 and 80 cents per hour. Mr. Reed termed it a splendid opportunity for district farmers or others used to outdoor life. In fact a few office and other inside workers have chosen to become lumbermen rather than remain on unemployment insurance and have already gone to the bush in Haliburton and North Hastings.

Following layoffs in local war plants a number of other workers secured employment at the fluorspar mines at Madoc and at the Tomahawk Iron Mines at Millbridge.

300 Out of Work in District

Speaking of the general employment situation in Belleville, Mr. Reed stated there were approximately 300 persons of both sexes out of work in the immediate Belleville district at the present time. Most of these are skilled or semi-skilled workers, the unskilled workers for the most part having been placed in jobs.

Picton, Oct. 25—The death occurred suddenly at Stirling on Sunday of William Desjardins. He was linotype operator with the Stirling News Argos. He had been ill only a few hours. The funeral service was held at Stirling on Wednesday and interment in Mount Olivet Cemetery, Picton.

Born in Picton, he was the son of Mr. and Mrs. William Desjardins. He was a member of the Roman Catholic Church. He learned the printing trade in Picton. During the 1st World War he enlisted and served overseas.

Survivors are his parents, his wife and a son, Gerald.

LATE JOSEPH H. SOLMES

The funeral of Joseph Henry Solmes, late residence, 7 Ridley Street, and formerly of Bancroft, took place from the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Campbell Street on Wednesday. Service was conducted in the chapel in the morning at 10:30 o'clock by Major J. Earl of the Salvation Army. Later the body was conveyed to the United Church at Bancroft where service was conducted by Major Earl assisted by the Rev. W. McLaughlin.

Interment took place in Mount Pleasant Cemetery. The bearers were H. Putman, W. Jones, R. Woodward, G. Webb, W. Neil and A. Carson.

LT.-COL. DR. J. L. McLEAN (Havelock)

Trenton — Lieut.-Col. Dr. John Lorne McLean, of Havelock, for 24 years a dentist in Trenton, passed away suddenly at a local hotel on Monday. He came here to attend the funeral of his lifelong friend, Col. A. E. Bywater, V.D., and acted as an honorary civilian pallbearer.

Dr. McLean was a native of Victoria County, and one of seven brothers. He was born in 1873, educated in Toronto and graduated in 1901 as a dental practitioner. He practised for a time in Bancroft and then came to Trenton. He went overseas with the 59th Battalion and served in France with the 21st Battalion. In the reorganization of the Hastings and Prince Edward Regiment he took a prominent part. He retired some years ago with the rank of Lieut.-Col.

The late Dr. McLean was a life member of the Masonic Lodge at Bancroft; a charter member of the Trenton Rotary Club; a member of the Trenton branch of the Canadian Legion and a former member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. In politics he was a staunch Liberal.

He is survived by his wife, the former Anna Mathison.

Not a few old friends, including members of the Canadian Legion, attended the funeral service on Wednesday afternoon at the McNair Funeral Home. Officiating minister was the Rev. Ross C. MacLean of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church and interment was made in St. George's Cemetery. The Legion accorded him military honors.

LATE MRS. MARY J. BAKER (Belleville — Brockville)

On Wednesday morning the funeral of Mrs. Mary Jane Baker, who died here on Saturday last at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Gordon Poitras, 285 William St., took place from the Scott Funeral Home in Brockville to the Church of St. Francis Xavier where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Very Rev. Dean Louis E. Statley, and the committal prayers at the graveside in St. Francis Cemetery, were said by the Rev. Father R. C. Pickett.

The bearers were Alex. Martin; John Tobin, E. B. Neeham, Edgar Brady, E. Burns and M. J. O'Shaughnessy.

LUIS CARRIZALES, 86, IS FATHER OF BABY GIRL

Des Moines, Iowa, Oct. 25 (AP)—Luis Carrizales, who says despite his 86 years, he keeps in physical trim by skipping rope, chopping wood and chinning himself 40 times a day, is the father of a baby daughter.

His 21-year-old wife gave birth to an eight-pound, 2 1-2-ounce baby girl yesterday.

Carrizales, half Cherokee Indian and half Spanish, is the father of seven other children by a previous marriage. An employee of a Des Moines thresher company, Carrizales says he follows his rigorous exercise to "keep strong."

Local Talent and Radio Personalties To Feature Kinsmen "Panorama"

A fine evening of varied entertainment is being offered Belleville and district residents on Friday and Saturday evening of this week when the Kinsmen "Panorama" program is being staged in the Collegiate Auditorium.

The program will be a combined radio broadcast show sponsored by Willard's Chocolates as part of their Ontario Panorama series, and a varied stage performance of local and imported talent. The radio show will go on the air at 9 o'clock Friday evening and will continue for one - half hour over CFRB, Toronto.

Well-known journalist, world traveller and author, Gordon Sinclair, and Allan Savage, well known to thousands of Canadian radio listeners as master of ceremonies, will be on hand to interview seven local residents with unusual occupations. Names of the five men and two women who will be interviewed are being kept as a surprise by the local Kinsmen club who are co-sponsors of the show.

Following the radio broadcast will be a high class musical program with H. G. Wedderburn, one of Toronto's top-ranking exponents of the art of step dancing being scheduled to appear. The dancing class of Belleville's own Barbara Diment will also be seen in several revue numbers.

All in all the Kinsmen Panorama promises to be a splendid show and one offering the best in entertainment. Proceeds of the show will go to Kinsmen Service Work, while Willard's Chocolates Limited will add $50 for a local charity. Admission to the show has been set at 50 and 35 cents.

Eleven Retired C.N. Engineers Honored by Brotherhood at Enjoyable Banquet at "Y"

Each Presented With Billfold Suitably Engraved With Their Initials

Loyal, efficient and long service on the Canadian National Railways was rewarded Thursday evening at the "Y", when the local lodge of the Brotherhood of Locomotive Engineers with their ladies tendered a banquet to eleven recently retired engineers from this division, including Herb. McMorran, Robert Bolton, A. "Scotty" Bremner, H. Sheridan, W. Boyce, Herb. Leavitt, Ex.-Ald. F. A. Pinkston, Edgar Elliott, Ernie Crawford, T. C. Wilson and William Neil. Each was presented with a billfold, while their wives were presented with corsages. The meeting was in charge of George McGhee, chief engineer of Division 189, while the toastmaster was David C. Elliott. The banquet was provided by the Ladies Auxiliary of the Tabernacle United Church.

Guests Toasted

The honored guests were toasted in song, speeches and story and Barbara Diment presented an interesting program. She gave a number of delightful songs, while Gladys Beatty gave an acrobatic number displaying extraordinary skill and Alice Gill entertained with a fine tap dance number. Community singing was part of the program, Mrs. William Warham, acting as pianist, as well as accompanying the several artists.

The toast to the honored guests was given by Dick Sargent, local chairman of the B. of L.E., who stated the retired engineers were not considered pensioners but rather on retirement from long and faithful service. "They have earned their retirement", said the speaker "and it is for us to follow their example. He stated they had endured hard knocks and had railroaded when the going was tough but that the job was getting easier as the years went by. He stated that the honored guests would carry into retirement the esteem and admiration of their fellow workers. The women were praised for their assistance through the years of toil.

Praises Brotherhood

Mr. A. Bremner stated that the brotherhood had done much for him in replying to the toast stating that he earned $48 a month when he started railroading in 1904 and through the Brotherhood living conditions had become infinitely better and advised all to join.

The toast to the visitors was proposed by Bert Robinson and reply was made by Robert Hay, of Stratford, who was retired in July of this year. In the reply the speaker asked the young men to continue the efficient service that had been given by the retired enginemen. Mayor Frank Follwell believed he was in the same category as the honored guests because he had served for three years as a brakemen with the C.N.R. and then added that many members of his family had served with the organization. He stated there was no better industry in Belleville than the C.N.R. and the city appreciates what you mean to us. "Belleville has always been known as a "railroad town" and I hope that it never loses the nickname", said His Worship. He asked the employees of the road, who are residents in Belleville to take an active interest in the government of the municipality. He wished for the retired enginemen many years of happy retired life.

War Veterans Toasted

The toast to the soldier railroadmen was proposed by James Walden and reply was given by Albert Jones, locomotive foreman, who stated that the veterans of last war, served faithfully through the Second Great War carrying supplies, ammunition and foodstuffs to the fighting fronts. "A number of the employees enlisted when the call came and now they are coming back and taking their places in the peacetime occupation of railroading. Mr. Jones told of the "Fag" fund founded by the Veterans' Association of the railroad, who had supplied over two million cigarettes at a cost of more than $7,000 and which are still being sent. He stated that 55 veterans of this past war had joined the engine service and 15 in the shops and they were of a high type of citizen and he was sure they would make good in their peacetime occupation.

Percy Kerr proposed the toast to the Railroad and E. L. Welte, assistant superintendent, ably responded. The toast to the ladies was proposed by Ken Bunnett and to the Brotherhood by David Fisher. Mr. Arthur Brisbane, Lindsay, general chairman, stated the organization had not staged a strike in wartime but that the employees had gained many favors by co-operation including six days holidays with pay. He stated that the Brotherhood had been established in 1863 and had stood the test of time. The National Anthem concluded a most enjoyable evening.

Seven Baronies Conferred on Labor Favorites

London, Oct. 25 —(CP)— The Labor government's strength in the predominantly Conservative House of Lords was increased today by seven in what was officially described as "a wholly exceptional measure of state policy."

It was announced last night that the King, acting on the advice of Prime Minister Attlee, has conferred seven baronies.

Some quarters believed the step was taken in an effort to prevent the possibility of the peers adopting delaying tactics to hold up Labor legislation.

Veteran parliamentarians recalled that in 1911 a Liberal government threatened to have a number of new peers created if the Upper House did not pass a bill for reform of the House of Lords. Faced with this threat, the Upper House voted in favor of the measure which restricted its powers. It disqualified the House of Lords from rejecting or amending any money bill and limited its veto power on other bills to three successive sessions within a period of two years.

Receiving the baronies are:

Admiral Sir Edward Evans — "Evans of the Broke"—a title he earned in 1917 when his destroyer, the Broke, and the destroyer Swift defeated six German destroyers off Dover. During this war he was in charge of the civil defences of London.

George Muff, 68, son of a collier, who left school at the age of 10 to work in a woollen mill.

William Piercy, 59, a member of the London Stock Exchange.

R. C. Morrison, Labor member of the House of Commons for Tottenham North.

Robert Samuel Theodore Chorley, professor of commercial and industrial law at London University.

Alexander Dunlop Lindsay, master of Balliol College at Oxford and author of several books on democracy and economics.

Robert Alexander Palmer, general secretary of the Co-Operative

Plan to Convert 'Rickarton Castle' Into Yacht Club

Picton, Oct. 25.— Plans for the conversion of "Rickarton Castle" here into an International Yacht Club, with modern hotel and all the facilities of a first class summer resort, were announced here yesterday by the new owners. They are S. Thomsen and Len Baker of Toronto. They hope to have it in operation by next May.

"Rickarton" is located on the shore of the Bay of Quinte, on highway 33, just outside of the town limits.

There is extensive acreage on the waterfront and the grounds were beautifully landscaped by the former owner, the late Brig.-Gen. B. R. Hepburn, C.M.G. The castle was modelled after Warwick Castle in England with turrets and gables and tower.

According to the new owners, it is planned to establish and equip this club as a high class resort, designed to attract yachtsmen and other friends from the States and Canada. The castle would be remodelled and enlarged, to be used as a hotel, an electric organ installed, tennis and badminton courts built, also a dance pavilion.

Building of a modern boat house and docks, with facilities for amphibious planes, are included in the plans.

The new owners stated they expected to spend $50,000 on the project.

Rickarton has been idle since 1940 when it was last used as an officers' mess in connection with the services here.

The castle, built more than 75 years ago, is in good state of repair. It was opened in 1867 as a boys' college, connected with the Church of England, and continued thus for five years. The late A. W. Hepburn purchased the property and the Hepburn family was born and raised there.

Presentations Made

Marking the close of the canning season, Mr. and Mrs. Bernard Kingsley entertained 100 employees of the Quinte Canning Co. Dancing followed the dinner. The employees took advantage of the occasion to present Mr. and Mrs. Kingsley with a walnut end table, Garfield Pearsall, engineer, making the presentation. Manager C. Allen and Mrs. D. Munro, secretary were also given gifts.

He is survived by his wife and a daughter, Mrs. Baxter, wife of Magistrate Ronald Baxter, Port Hope. Mr. and Mrs. J. E. Baxter and Mr. and Mrs. D. J. Baxter attended the funeral on Wednesday.

Pace of Loan Beating Records In P.E. County

Picton, Oct. 25. —Prince Edward County is breaking all records in the 9th Victory Loan. With three days' canvassing, $703,200 is reported. This is 48.5 per cent of the general canvass quota.

In addition, the two air stations are forging ahead. Mountain View now has $102,750 or 150 per cent of quota. Picton R.C.A.F. has 128 per cent of quota.

The banks have done an outstanding job. The first day they reported $436,350 compared to $110,350 in the first day of the 8th Loan.

Picton leads all county districts. Raising $526,950 in three days, they have 81 per cent of quota. Wellington has 54 per cent, Bloomfield 36.

To Carry on Duties

Acting Superintendent at a special meeting of County Council, Tuesday night, Dan Holt was engaged to carry on the duties of road superintendent. J. [illegible] ley, granted extended leave of absence, will go to California, for several months. Mr. Holt has been roads' foreman. The appointment was approved by E. F. Hear Students

Feature of the Rotary Club meeting was a quiz in which pupils at Picton Collegiate answered questions asked by Rev. W. G. H. Swayne concerning a community recreational centre in Picton. Helen Kinney, Jean Lloyd, Robert Walmsley and Harry Bowers were spokesmen for the pupils and presented many reasons why such a centre should materialize here.

50th Anniversary Of Wedding Is Celebrated

Approximately 175 relatives and friends in the Wooler district gathered at the home of Mr. and Mrs. W. A. Smith on Tuesday afternoon and evening to pay tribute on the occasion of their golden wedding anniversary.

Lifelong residents of the Wooler district Mr. and Mrs. Smith formerly operated an apiary on the outskirts of Wooler in Murray township, where Mr. Smith has been reeve for the past two years. Mr. Smith is in his 70th year while his bride of fifty years will soon celebrate her 68th birthday. Mr. Smith has been a member of Northumberland county council for eight years and has taken an active interest in community affairs.

Members of the Wooler United Church, Mr. and Mrs. Smith were the recipients of many lovely and appropriate gifts from the various church organizations to which they belong. Telegrams and messages of congratulation were received from as far as Manitoba.

'The True Glory' Film of War

Ottawa, Oct. 25 — (CP) — The Allies documentary film of victory on the western front, "The True Glory," will begin showings in Canadian theatres early in November, the Defence Department said today in a press release.

Showing under government sponsorship, it depicts the violence of war as it unfolded before the service-cameramen of Britain, Canada and the United States with part of the commentaries by the fighting men themselves.

Early showing will be made in Toronto, Ottawa, Winnipeg, Saskatoon, Sask., London, Ont., Halifax, Montreal, Quebec, Saint John N.B., Edmonton, Vancouver, Hamilton, Brantford, Victoria and Regina.

The CBC will review the film in a Dominion network broadcast Saturday night from 10:30 p. m. to 11 p.m., possibly with commentary by L. W. Brockington, prominent Ottawa lawyer.

The defence headquarters release said top billing in the feature-length film goes to the private soldiers and airmen, who are seen in action on the beach head, in fierce battles at Falaise and Hoschwald and in shattered cities of the Rhine.

There are sequences of all important operations, including the opening of the port of Antwerp by amphibious Canadian operations which gained for the Canadians the nickname "Water Rats."

Growing Pains Still "Old College Try" Spirit at Varsity

Toronto, Oct. 25—(CP)—Growing pains have stilled the "old college try" spirit at University of Toronto.

What with scholars returning from the wars, this year's student body is so large and unwieldy that a noticeable lack of Joe college horseplay — always regarded an indispensable part of campus life — has furrowed the brows of leaders. So, a committee representing all faculties will organize the season's first mass "pep" rally after school tomorrow on the front campus.

Immediate reason for the rally is a gridiron battle Saturday between ancient rivals Queen's University and University of Toronto. The school band, decked out in natty blue and white uniforms and making its first appearance since 1940, will blast out at both the rally and the game.

The moan over lack of spirit was heard after last Saturday's football game in which Queen's edged Varsity at Kingston. The Toronto delegation pointed to such Queen's spirit as that involving a monster snake-dance by pyjama-clad students through town last Friday. The parade ended at the football stadium where an effigy of the Toronto beaver was burned.

Some Queen's men stayed behind to guard the goal posts at the field but, unlike other years, no Varsity challengers showed up to do battle. At a round of parties and dances before the game 'dates' were provided the visitors.

Response is Cheering

The people of Canada are showing in their response to the appeal of the Ninth Victory Loan that they need little encouragement to invest in this banner investment. They know there is work yet to be done to complete the task so gloriously carried on throughout the war. They know that money is needed and they are investing it and building for national and personal welfare.

The unanimity of reports for the first days of the loan proves that the people understand their obligations. They know there are outlays yet to be made as a result of the struggle, to bring home troops, to rehabilitate all, to pay gratuities and pensions and maintain hospitals for the wounded.

The people with the glorious heritage of a free, extensive and rich country where they have the greatest opportunity of any nation to build up for the future one of the great states of the world gladly invest. They have learned the importance of saving and investment in war bonds in the war years and they are not going to cut loose from this experience, rather they are going to do more—as they already show—along the lines of savings and in investing in government securities.,

The people are doing their duty. The Canadian fighting men did their noblest in battle and won and they are home or coming home and will help to play a big part in developing the Dominion.

British War Production

A record of British War Production has been compiled by The Times, London, giving in detail the story of this great achievement by the people of Britain. In the words of the Rt. Hon. Oliver Lyttelton, D.S.O., M.C., former Minister of Production, who writes a foreword to The Times' account of Britain's achievement, "victory in the war of 1939-45 was won not only on the battlefield, on the sea and in the air, but in the workshops and factories of the United Nations. The Times' story, he says, "is for the first time in one document a comprehensive summary of the many and varied aspects of Britain's achievement in war production. Of all the munitions used by the armed forces of the British Commonwealth and Empire (8¾ million men in all) since the beginning of the war no less than 70 per cent was produced in the United Kingdom itself. The rest came from the United States of America, from Canada and from the other nations of the Commonwealth. The First Lord of the Admiralty, the Minister of Supply and the Minister of Aircraft Production can testify with me, who was responsible for the overall co-ordination of this vast and complex system of supply, that, notwithstanding our own high rate of production, this aid from overseas, was indispensable.

Britain's prodigious effort was made possible by the great labors and heavy sacrifices of the British people, it is pointed out. "During all this great outpouring of effort the quality and ingenuity of British production have been more than maintained. We were the pioneers of Radar and Jet Propulsion; it was a British scientist who discovered insulin, a British engineer who invented and designed the Bailey bridge; we designed and built the Mulberry harbors, the prefabricated portable harbors which made the invasion of France possible; British aircraft have proved themselves second to none in the world. and British scientists collaborated with American and Canadian scientists to develop and produce the atomic bomb.

"The inventiveness and ingenuity of British scientists and engineers and the high standard of quality in our production, point the way to the future and show that we shall conquer too the problems which peace is bringing".

The Times points out that the challenge which confronted Britain at the time of Dunkerque" was still more dreadful than that which it had faced in September, 1939, when she stood alone against a fully mobilized Germany. That challenge was accepted by Britain irrespective of the cost by industry as it was by the people in every walk of the national life."

"In the four years from 1940 to 1944 British industry and the British people through deprivation voluntary and forced, through compulsion and direction cheerfully and willingly borne, and through unprecedented hours and intensity of toil, became totally harnessed to the service of total war."

From the time of Dunkerque to the time when the invasion was launched upon the Beaches of Normandy manned with everything human ingenuity could provide and with vast reserves of equipment and of war factories behind them, the change was a saga almost too great to be credible. All this had been prepared while by great victories had been won in Alamein and Tunis, in Italy and Abyssinia, in Burma and the Eastern Seas, in the Atlantic and in the skies over Britain and Germany. "Those who saw the American forces sailing to the beaches were perhaps further encouraged, as they reflected on those four years, by the thought that at any time Britain had failed nobody, and that these Allies of the same blood, whom Britain had greeted with relief, watched with interest and curiosit in the streets of English towns and villages and finally taken to her heart, were at least helping those who had helped themselves."

In the thirty-two page edition The Times tells the amazing story of organizing the war effort, of the mobilization of industrial manpower, co-ordination with the Allies, control and rationing, concentration of production, raw materials in wartime, industrial salvage, the battle of the factories, the importance of new ideas in industry, scientific research, welfare work, the changed tank design, the new weapons of the infantry, the guns of today, and every phase of the industrial life of Britain mobilized for total war. Canada's vast output occupies a prominent place in the summary along with that of the other Dominions.

This thorough survey of the British industries and people refers to the fact that "British industry faces a colossal task in reconverting itself to peacetime requirements" and it is "confident of its ability to surmount all these difficulties facing the country. British industry after all its war experiences has good reason to believe that it is sufficiently adaptable and versatile to cope with anything."

Romans Anticipated Hirohito

(New York Times)

For the idea of a God-Emperor it is not necessary to go as far as Japan, though we do have to go farther back in time than Hirohito. The Romans, from whom we got the word emperor, ascribed divine attributes to their emperors. It began even before the establishment of the empire by Augustus. Julius Caesar set up his own statue among the gods in the Roman temples, and after his death was formally deified as Divus I Julius. It set a precedent for many of his successors who were regularly elected to the Roman pantheon after their death by a vote of the Senate.

It is a little hard to think of characters like Nero or Caligula as gods, but so it was. Later, when the office of emperor was put up at auction by the all-powerful Praetorian Guards, there presumably went with the bill of sale the right to be worshipped as a god. That last situation may help us understand how the Japanese have managed to fit a God-Emperor into their practical way of life.

Smaller Cities Are Best

(Chatham Daily News)

Smaller communities may take considerable encouragement from the decision of a great American manufacturing corporation to spend large sums of money in establishing new factories in relatively small cities all over the country as part of the physical decentralization program. This corporation, which has branch factoiries in Canada produces a long line of various products, and the idea seems to tend towards the building of separate factories to supply each article, as far as possible.

JUST FOLKS

(Copyright, 1945, Edgar A. Guest)

By EDGAR A. GUEST

IMPORTANT ENGAGEMENT

If you've asked him out to supper he'll be thirty minutes late;
And with him, a town appointment means an hour or two to wait.
But, when dated for a golf game, very furious he'll be
If a friend should keep him waiting sixty esconds on the tee.

He thought his wife too fussy when she bitterly complained
That a diner cooked "for seven" never hot at "nine" remained.
"I'm a busy man!" he muttered. "Business must be first with me."
But he wants his golfing partners to be punctual on the tee.

There are chairs outside his office where callers have to sit
And await his own convenience, though they like it not a bit.
But his aflame with fury will his golf companions see
If they ever keep him waiting for a minute on the tee.

INDIANS' PLIGHT

2. Maj.-Gen. Maurice Pope, military adviser to Prime Minister Mackenzie King, has been appointed head of a Canadian Mission to Berlin, with acting rank of Lieutenant-General. The Mission will look after Canadian interests in Germany.

Support for the Indian resolution was expressed by G. H. Castleden (CCF — Yorkton), Rev. Dan McIvor (L-Fort William), Solon Low, Social Credit Leader, Maj. E. P. Fulton (PC-Kamloops), G. K. Fraser (PC - Peterboro West), J. A. Dion (L — Lake St. John - Roberval), J. L. Gibson (Ind — Comox-Alberni) and Bona Arsenault (Ind - Bonaventure)

In moving the resolution, Col. Harkness said he had been told Indians were excluded from the Pensions Act because the payments were administered by the provinces while Indians were Federal government charges. Another reason given was that they received a monthly ration.

Mr. Glen said the average monthly payment for aged, unemployed and infirm Indians, covering the cost of food, clothing, medical supplies and other articles, was approximately $14.50. No Indian would be allowed to suffer because of lack of these supplies.

Cash was not of much use to Indians in the Northwest Territories or the Yukon and this made the payment of monthly pensions difficult. In the case of family allowances, for instance, Indians in those areas were paid in goods.

Difficulties Presented

Appointment of a Royal Commission to investigate Indian affairs would present difficulties, said Mr. Glen, because its membership would have to be acceptable to the government, the Indians themselves and the religious denominations working among them and operating Indian schools.

In fact, it had not yet been decided whether to set up a Royal Commission or to establish a House Committee. A recommendation would be made to the cabinet in due course

An appropriation exceeding $12,000,000, was contained in the government's rehabilitation program and would be used for construction of Indian hospitals, improved and up-to-date day schools, nursing stations, buildings for storage of relief and medical supplies and administration buildings.

Part of the sum includes $2,500,000 for the construction and repair of Indian homes.

JAPAN IS ORDERED

3. In all neutral countries, the Japanese missions must surrender papers and property to designated representatives of the four Allied Powers.

Shortly afterwards, Domei agency reported that Prince Fumimaro Konoye, Royal Career Statesman and youngest of Japan's senior statesmen, would renounce all titles and court privileges so that he could take part in politics as a private citizen.

Konoye was prevailed upon by Marquis Koichi Kido, Lord Keeper of the Privy Seal, to delay his action until work on revision of the constitution is finished, Domei said.

The action might indicate that Konoye has determined to accept Gen. MacArthur's suggestion, which was reported last Sunday, that the three - time premier head the Liberal political movement in Japan.

JUST BETWEEN OURSELVES

The trouble with a lot of neurotics—persons who consider themselves "nervous" or endowed with more sensitive nerves or nerve centres than ordinary folk or afflicted with "weak nerves" or "nervous exhaustion" — the trouble is that these Class A neurotics had rather go on believing things which are not so than learn the physiological truth. And the trouble with the old one-horse-and-buggy doctor who says so is that he says things like this in the fewest possible words—in order to save more time to bowl—instead of burying the thought in a lot of psychological double talk as all of the best authorities do.

Now will Class A neurotics please pay close attention while I make with the positive. Nothing imaginery or assumed about it—Class A neurotics really have something the matter with one or another organ or function, altho it is usually not the brain, spinal cord or nerves that is affected — more likely it is the teeth, the arteries, the lungs or the digestive organs. Chew that over—if you belong in Class A. There's no telling—you may get a kick out of it, a kick back toward recovery.

What I mean to imply is that any invalid, no matter what the nature or cause of his illness or poor health, is naturally more irritable, cranky, peevish, restless and unstable than a healthy person. If the nature or cause of the trouble is hidden or not known it is easy to ascribe the invalid's impatience or oversensitiveness to "nerves", and that's how so many invalids or near-invalids with hidden or undiagnosed ailments achieve the deplorable state of neuroticism. It is as much their own fault as it is the fault of the physicians they consult—if they consult physicians.

In actual practice, Class A neurotics should understand, patients with lesions of the brain, spinal cord or nerves are no more "nervous" in the popular sense of the term than are patients with arthritis, peptic ulcer or pulmonary tuberculosis.

Unfortunately this spurious conception of "weak nerves" itself keeps many of its victims from consulting a physician in the early or incipient stage of their illness—for instance pulmonary tuberculosis—and thus robs them of the best chance of early recovery. I mention tuberculosis merely for the sake of emphasis—not that it is likely to be found in many instances of what purports to be just "nervous weakness."

Well, I hope what I say here doesn't make anybody mad—if it does I'm sorry and I say: Oh, pshaw. Still more I hope it doesn't frighten or worry anybody who purports to have "weak nerves"—that is, frighten or worry him or her more than is necessary to make him or her consult a physician.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Iodin Ration in Reduction Regimen

Should one take the Iodin Ration when one is following the reduction regimen outlined in your very enlightening booklet "Rules for Reducing"?

(Mrs. G. K.)

Answer—Yes. In fact I'd suggest taking the Iodin Ration with a reduction diet, to promote thyroid gland function. The booklet "Rules for Reducing" will be mailed any reader who asks for it and incloses twenty-five cents and stamped self-addressed envelope. Do not send a clipping. If you want also instructions for taking the Iodin ration say so.

Bumps in Legs

I'm a girl of 40 and my vanity is crushed to have funny little bumps appearing on my otherwise perfectly good looking legs. I know women beyond fifty have these vein troubles but . . .

(H. C. E.)

Answer—Have your physician give the injection treatment before the trouble becomes worse. If the doctor makes any bones about it, send a stamped self-addressed envelope for pamphlet on Varicose Veins and Varicose Ulcers—If I know of a doctor in your vicinity who is skilled in the injection treatment I'll give you his name.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Who are the Tuckahoes?

"Tuckahoes" is an old nickname for the poorer classes of people living in southern or "tidewater" Virginia.

In some sections of the South the term is virtually synonymous with "poor whites." The word itself is believed to be derived from an Indian word meaning "globular" and originally applied to various bulbous roots used as food by the aborigines in that region.

Chief among the edible bulbous roots so designated were those of the golden-club or floating arum and the Virginia wake-robin. But the name was applied also to the Virginia truffle, a curious fungus growth formed under the soil in the Southern States bordering on the Atlantic. The Indians and early settlers were fond of these truffles and generally they located them by following hogs engaged in rooting.

Tuckahoe, in its typical form, consists of fungus growing on tree roots and possesses a white, dense and edible thalus covered with a hard, barklike coat. Captain John Smith wrote that some of the settlers "would gather as much Tockwogh roots in a day, as would make them bread a week." Elsewhere Smith spelled the word Tockawhoughe.

"The term in time came to signify "Indian bread" or "Indian loaf" in general and the inhabitants of Lower Virginia were called Tuchahoes because their poverty compelled them frequently to resort to Virginia truffles or Indian bread for sustenance.

"Tuckahoe" also is employed to designate the poor land in southeastern Virginia. A creek near Richmond has been called Tuckahoe since earliest times.

Virginians living west of the Blue Ridge were called by a name variously spelled "co-ees," "cohees" and "Quohees." Some authorities regard this term as a corruption of "Quoth he," a common phrase at one time among the mountaineers.

Mess Room Chatter Of Canada's Airmen

With the R.C.A.F. Overseas, Oct. 25 (CP)—By playing 'dumb' after his capture in Java in March 1942, LAC O. A. Luce of St. Catharines, Ont., radar mechanic, kept vital secrets of radar from the Japanese.

Following his capture Luce was marched to the Jap airfield at Palembang and ordered to overhaul enemy radar equipment. Luce pleaded ignorance of radar, and when the Japs pointed out that he was listed as an electrician fooled them by saying he was only a house electrician.

His ham-phanded work on the equipment apparently satisfied the Japs and he was sent to a labor gang. Luce was in a prisoner of war camp in Sumatra until June this year, when he was transferred to Singapore.

To mark the fact that more than 90,000 Canadian airmen passed through the Overseas Reception Centre at Bournemouth during the war, the R.C.A.F. presented a bronze plaque to the popular British seaside resort.

Group Capt. H. G. Richards of Toronto, commanding officer of the centre made the presentation to Mayor Harry C. Brown following a mass parade of airmen through the town. Honor of leading the parade went to the W. A. A. F., in token of the R.C.A.F.'s admiration for the R.A.F. and its airwomen's auxiliary.

Group Capt. Richards paid high tribute to the "sympathy and tolerance" which Bournemouth citizens had shown Canadians. "We hold Bournemouth in great affection," he said.

Mayor Brown in his address of acceptance, said: "We have been proud indeed to give you the hospitality of this town....there is really no need for a plaque in Bournemouth to remind us of Canadians. Through two wars we have come to admire and love them."

It was the fourth time in his career that the Husky squadron's chef, LAC Jerry Kivell of London, Ont., had "laid on" a fancy lunch for an air officer commanding. Occasion was the visit of Air Commodore W. Whitney Straight, to the squadron's headquarters in Brussels.

Fruit cocktail, soup, luscious steaks, melon and ice cream, were on the menu. Everything was set. Then the Belgian waitresses, dazzled by all the gold braid, went into a complete "flop."

Soup went in before the fruit cocktail, steaks threatened to get cold, and Jerry tore his hair. "Never have I seen such a panic in a kitchen!" he moaned.

"But what I can't figure," he added, "is that in the four spreads I have whipped up for A.O.C.'s, this is the first time an A.O.C. ever called me in and complimented me on a fine dinner!"

Lighted candles on tables named for noted Canadian night clubs, brought to mind many a big night back home, and transformed the iron Nissen hut into a cheerful place for the last official party at Rear Headquarters, R.C.A.F. Bomber Group in Britain.

Sodas and sundaes were served to tables marked "Chez Maurice," "The Silver Slipper," "The Cave" and "Brant Inn," while the air force's "Repairs" group provided a floor show.

Canadian Wives, Children Arrive

Sydney, Australia, Oct. 25 —(CP Cable)—A party of 122 Canadian wives, children, fiancees — and a few widows—of R.A.A.F. men have arrived here after docking at Brisbane. The women had met the airmen when they were stationed in Canada undergoing training in the Commonwealth air training plan.

Kidney Acids Rob Your Rest

Many people never seem to get a good night's rest. They turn and toss—lie awake and count sheep. Often they blame it on "nerves" when it may be their kidneys. Healthy kidneys filter poisons from the blood. If they are faulty and fail, poisons stay in the system and sleeplessness, headache, backache often follow. If you don't sleep well, try Dodd's Kidney Pills—for half a century the favorite remedy. 103

Whitehall Notebook

By JAMES McCOOK
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 25 (CP)— Labor victories in by-elections in Smethwick, Ashton-Under-Lyne and Edinburgh East have been taken by opposition groups almost as a matter of course following the Labor sweep in the general election. These seats had been won by Labor in July and the government headed by Clement Attlee still was untried in the eyes of voters.

However, the Conservative opposition spokesman in these by-elections indicated they had abundant ammunition to use against the Attlee regime. Sir Robert Cary, the Conservative candidate in Ashton-Under-Lyne, took a position which probably will be upheld by his party entries in another five by-elections yet to be decided. He contrasted Labor Ministers' speeches, describing difficulties faced by the administration, with "the honeyed words which fell from their lips so recently in the general election." He said he was determined to maintain in parliament and elsewhere a vigorous opposition to "any lack of positive leadership on the part of those now in authority."

In the remaining five by-elections to be held shortly, the Conservatives will fight to retain seats they won in July— Bromley, Monmouth, City of London, South Kensington and Bournemouth. While they had to accept increased Labor majorities in Smethwick and Ashton-Under-Lyne, they have found some consolation in a decrease in the Labor poll in Edinburgh East.

The by-elections are being fought by Conservatives of high standing in the party, all five being former ministers. Richard Law, former Minister of State in the Churchill "caretaker" government and son of the late Bonar Law, a Canadian who became Prime Minister of the United Kingdom, is the candidate in South Kensington and Brendan Bracken, former Minister of Information, is the entry in Bournemouth. Other candidates are Harold MacMillan (Bromley), Ralph Assheton (City of London) and Peter Thorneycroft (Monmouth).

These and other Conservative candidates have the benefit of findings at what London newspapers called a party "inquest" held by more than 150 Candidates defeated in the general election who freely discussed the weakness in their campaign and suggestions for the future.

A reform group within the Conservative party is making a strong bid for increased emphasis from leaders that the party is "traditionally reformist." In this way it hopes to steal some of the Labor thunder when new legislation is brought down in the House.

Wounded Detective Slightly Improved

Ottawa, Oct. 25—(CP)—Hospital authorities reported slight improvement today in the condition of Thomas Stoneman, 37-year-old city police detective shot Tuesday by one of three gunmen being held on attempted murder charges.

Blood transfusions are being given and the bullet remains lodged in his lung, officials said. He was still in critical condition and no operation could be performed until improvement was shown.

Yesterday police arrested Albert Henderson, 24, Wilfred D'Amour, 25, and Eugene Larment, 24, all of Ottawa, after the shooting and established their connection with the burglary of the Canadian War Museum Monday night.

Three sub-machine guns and six automatics missing from the Museum were recovered and other loot unearthed which police believe connects the gang with previously unsolved robberies at Glasgow Station and Carp, Ont.

BODY IS RECOVERED

Honey Harbor, Ont., Oct. 25—(CP)—Body of Charles Wood S. Cobb of Toronto, believed to have fallen into the water from a dock near his cottage, was recovered by dragging yesterday afternoon. Honey Harbor is about 10 miles north of Midland.

Attempted Murder Charged Against 3 Ottawa Men

Ottawa, Oct. 25 — (CP)—Ottawa police held three men on a charge of attempted murder today in connection with the critical wounding of a city detective in an early Wednesday morning gun fight and said investigation of the case led to recovery of most of the guns stolen in a bold robbery from the Canadian War Museum here Monday night.

At the same time they said investigations had led to recovery of a quantity of groceries believed stolen in a store robbery at New Glasgow station, about 40 miles west of Ottawa on Oct. 22.

While Detective Thomas Stoneman, who took a bullet in his lung at point-blank range in a tussle with one of the men, lay in a critical condition in hospital, police apprehended the third suspect in the case. The other two were captured in a chase by police at the time of the shooting in downtown Ottawa early Wednesday morning.

Charged with attempted murder were Wilfred D'Armour, 25, Ottawa, Eugene Larmonthe, 24, no fixed address and Albert Henderson, 24, of Ottawa.

The 37-year-old detective had a bullet lodged in his lung when he grappled one of the men and the suspect fired at point-blank range. Hospital authorities said Stoneham was suffering severe shock and a series of blood transfusions had been given.

The shooting affray started when police were called to the vicinity of Albert and O'Connor Streets in downtown Ottawa on a report three men were tampering with a parked auto.

Alert for suspects in the Monday night theft of three Thompson sub-machine guns and a number of automatic weapons from the Canadian War Museum, they went to the scene in a squad car and a radio alarm was given.

Motor-Coach Makes Nifty Utility Home

London, Oct. 25 (CP)— Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Sobey live in what might be called a "roaming house"—a 32-seat motor coach without the motor and with good tires on all six wheels. In it they can roam where they will — on tow.

They were bombed out of their house at Margate, so Mr. Sobey bought a smart blue motor coach, took out the seats and sold them, installed a neat little kitchen stove and set up their home at Lewisham, southwest London.

"Once you've lived in one of these," said Mrs. Sobey, a former circus performer, "you don't want a house. It's warmer in winter and in summer we cook on an oil stove outdoors.

"The windows slide down so it's easy to get lots of fresh air when you want it."

Soon the Sobeys hope to be on the move again. They are looking for a new site to park their home, preferably in the more bracing air of the Kentish coast.

Next spring they may move their "roaming house" into the warm sunny places of Hampshire

Political Road Hard, Woman M.P. Declares

London (CP)—Dr. Edith Summerskill, parliamentary secretary to the Ministry of Food, speaking at the annual dinner of the Women of Westminster, said there was no easy way for women in the House of Commons, and advised them to cut their political teeth on local government.

"The chief aim of the Women for Westminster movement" she said, "is to obtain bigger representation of women in the House of Commons.

"If you look at the House of Commons today with its 24 women members and think women have arrived, you are completely wrong. Women have simply made a few faltering steps in the right direction."

YOU'D NEVER BELIEVE SHE IS 48....

She's one of the peppiest, happiest-spirited women you ever saw. At the time when most women think life is passing them by—she's right in the midst of things—always ready to go places and do things . . . as popular with the men as girls half her age. To look at her you would never believe she was a day over 35.

How does she do it? She gives the credit to Dr. Williams Pink Pills . . . for well she knows how important it is to have plenty of rich, red blood during those years when so many women are "pulled down" in health by bodily changes.

If you feel "always tired", if you look pale and dragged out, if you are suffering from a feeling of nervous exhaustion, are jittery and irritable, you may be paying the price of poor blood make-up. Don't wait—start Dr. Williams Pink Pills today. They contain an easily assimilable form of iron—fortified with a generous amount of Vitamin B_1—and are wonderfully effective in helping to build the rich, red blood so necessary to vigor and energy. Paris Favors Smaller Hats Jacket Coats

By CYNTHIA LOWRY

Paris—(CP)—Like the chicken and the egg, it is hard to know which came first, smaller hats or tidier hairdos.

But monstrous hats and monstrous pompadours are strictly dated now. Hair is either gracefully upswept and dignified or shoulder length and youthful. Any pompadour is discreet.

Hats are moderately sized pillboxes ideal for hair piled high and graceful necks. Turbans are good for either type of hairdo. Furs and feathers are used lavishly and flatteringly. Hats are worn off the face.

Shoes in leather-poor France are scarcely one of the important phases of the style parade this fall. Models are wearing, for the most part, those high platformed shoes, open-toed, open-heeled.

Perugia is sticking to those rather sturdy platformed oxfords that come up high to hug the shins. Wedge heels are very popular.

Most Frenchwomen are worried about what is happening to their feet. They say that wooden and cork soles, and years of improper fitting are ruinous. Added to the beating they are getting from the hard wood soles is the further discomfort of being without stockings.

It is getting so that a weekly visit to the chiropodist is almost as essential to good grooming and comfort as a trip to the hairdresser.

Mode in Gloves

Gloves of all lengths, fabric and leather, are being worn, but there doesn't seem to be anything particularly new about them. Jacques Heim is showing several pairs of black suede banded with color to match his ensembles. Jacques Fath continues to go in for little half mittens worn over short fabric gloves. Gloves shirred above the elbow, continue to give elegance to formal gowns.

It's a jacket year from soft tailored to straight little box coats. Most of the dressier street coats are belted but with plenty of skirt fullness and broad shoulders. Tuxedo fronts are popular particularly with panels of fur swung from the fur lining into two front panels.

As far as materials are concerned, plaids are extensively used in most collections. It shows up in the most unexpected places. Jet embroidered Scotch plaid jackets, are worn with one of Schiaparelli's evening gowns. It lines coats and jackets, it is draped on hats, it is used in hip-draped scarfs and popular in suits and dresses.

It is interesting to note what is being done with coat and jacket linings this season. Lelong, for instance, lines a short black jacket with vivid yellow quilted satin. Everyone seems to be lining coats and suit jackets with fur—mostly lapin. Schiaparelli, however, announced flatly she was all out for cat and goat skins and didn't try to dress up their names at all.

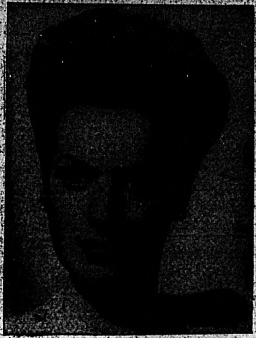
A Blessing to Womankind



Maureen O'Hara knows the value of well-groomed hair.

By HELEN FOLLETT

TO THE woman who has thin hair, who can't grow more even if she put her mind on it, the permanent wave is a blessing. Where one hair grows, more seems to flourish because of the bouncing coil that is put in it.

Only the oldsters know what it means to wrestle with curling irons, then have the old thatch go limp as soon as a drop of rain falls. Scolding locks hang around the nape line. In some respects, this world is a better place for a woman than it used to be.

Cold Wave

The cold wave is gaining popularity. There is no discomfort The treatment takes a little longer. Some women prefer the old time method, others find the machineless satisfactory. All methods are good.

The success of the wave, of course, depends upon the skill and conscience of the operator. The hair must be wound carefully, strands properly proportioned.

Time was when dyed hair could not be submitted to the curling process. Now the beauty industry has got around these problems. A test curl is taken, so it will be known beforehand just what the results will be.

The best permanent can be weakened by careless shampooing. If soap scum remains on the shafts, they loose the coil quality, haven't life or spring. If you do your shampooing instead of patronizing the pulchritude works, use a melted soap, have three soapings and as many rinsings with a spray.

The topknot hair-do, without a sign of a wave or a ripple, seems to be gaining headway. All right for a good-looking woman who has flair, but it is downright cruel to a plain woman with irregular features. However, there are those among us who will follow the fashion no matter how terrible it makes us appear.

The majority, we believe, will hang onto their soft rolls and ringlets, even if they call for a heavier overhead, take more time to arrange each day.

Extreme Hat and Footwear Fashions Featured in Paris

Paris, Oct. 24. (CP)—The only free sights in Paris today are the usual guide-book places and—the women.

The returning pre-war inhabitant, taking a firm grip on his synthetic fruit-juice in the sidewalk cafe De la Paix, sees some feminine transformations that really rate a mention by Herr Baedeker.

Shoes, skirts, hair and hats have all gone up to the third floor.

Six-inch platform-soled shoes have given the girls a haughty new stature, and they swear the only reason they wear them is that being made of cork and wood they are off the ration. Incidentally, they are three times as expensive as the well-made leather jobs for which the girls need a coupon.

Skirts, according to cursory male observation, have been hitched at least two inches since last noted in peacetime. Shortage of cloth is the cause, said one informant.

Also notable is that most Parisiennes have naturally or artificially bronzed legs, which is a trick British females seem to have overlooked.

Hair—well it seems you can do anything with your hair in Paris, provided the movement is skyward. One young thing at the place De L'Opera looked as if she was on fire. She had plastered her bright red tresses vertically for nine inches or so and them whipped off the ends to look like flames.

Hats are rarely worn, but are similarly mountainous and imaginative, with the built-up turban having a slight edge over all others. One creation, however, halte dthe conversation when it passed the cafe. It was a carefully-balanced confection of luscious fruits and vegetabels that made the five-course dinner worn by Carmen Miranda look like a hasty snack.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

War Widows Might Profitably Consider the Story of Penelope

You can hardly open a paper these days without readin[illegible] the "widow" of a soldier has remarried, only to discover that her husband is alive and hoping to return to his home from a prison camp.

The latest of these Enoch Arden cases concerns a girl who married her presumably "dead" husband's uncle. It's heart-breaking that such cases must be acted out before a news-reading audience which has now begun to regard them with amused tolerance.

This morning's mail has brought me a couple of newspaper clippings, begging me to remind war "widows" in this column of the story of Penelope. You'll recall the tale, in your mythology, of Penelope, the most loyal and faithful of wives. Her husband, Odysseus, went off from Ithaca, adventuring for twenty years, and while he was absent his beautiful wife was courted by numbers of suitors. She put them off with a ruse which has become proverbial through the centuries. She would decide among them, she said, when she had finished weaving a certain web. Each night she secretly unravelled what she had woven by day, and as the suitors waited, her husband, Odysseus returned.

Now perhaps, it would be too much to expect the presumable "widow" of a soldier to wait like Penelope for twenty years, but some of these ladies who've married in a few months to the consternation of their new husbands and a general upheaval all around, have encountered something in the way of a boomerang.

But so many of these Enoch Ardens have returned before the war was well over that we may expect hundreds of such tragedies in the months and years to come. The girl who believed herself to be a widow and married her husband's uncle had received word that her husband was blown up by anti-aircraft fire while on a mission over Burma. The Japanese, it seemed, never bothered to report to the International Red Cross that some of the bomber crew had parachuted from the wreck and were in captivity.

The girl has sought an annulment which has been granted. The second husband has retired from the picture as gracefully as circumstances permit. The rest of the action now depends on the airman who so dramatically returned from the "dead".

The Marry Go Round

By HELEN ROWLAND

Mrs. Solomon Says—

Heaven deliver us from the Seven Deadly Bores and from the Professional Reformers who seek to make us "better men and women", according to their own pattern, oh spare us!

For they cause us to think dark thoughts and drive us to much hypocrisy and lying.

Deliver us from the Know-it-alls, from whose mouths drop imitation pearls of wisdom and paste jewels of thought; who delight to inform and "instruct" us; and who treat us as morons and regard us as dimwits. For an amateur show is not more boring or a rainy Sunday in the country more full of emptiness.

From the self-elected dispensers of "good advice" and from those who can always tell us how to do things and who seek to run our lives, according to their own plan, deliver us. For they fill us with confusion and bitterness, and drive us to do foolish things whereof we had never dreamed.

Yea, deliver us from the critical who search out our weaknesses with a microscope, and then cast a spotlight on our flaws and failings. For who hath not his little human failings? Yet, they fill us with doubts and self-contempt and drive us to white lies and false alibis.

Deliver us from those who believe themselves Impeccable! For they are like a clean spot on an antique Persian rug. They show us up! Yea, they delight in the shame of the frivolousc and gay. They are too good to be true!

Deliver us from the fastidious, the hypercritical and the finicky. For they are as a continuous sound of riveting on tender nerves; as an earache they cause us constant twinges.

He that filleth thee with vanity, flattery and self-importance, may not be thy best friend; but he that robbeth thee of thine illusions about thyself, and taketh away thy self-esteem, is surely thy worst enemy.

Therefore, deliver us from the egregious, who would pose as Paragons. For to look up to them giveth us a pain in the neck and afflicteth us with ennui.

Verily, a sinner may be turned from his sinning and a hard answer silenceth a fool. But from the naggings of the critical, and the admonitions of the self-righteous, there is no escape.

Form Permanent Club For Women Overseas

London (CP)—The Canadian Girls' Club in London has registered under Great Britain's Companies' Act in the new name of "The Canadian Girls' and Business Women's Club."

An overseas membership arrangement entitles Canadians in Canada to join and when in England they will have all club privileges for six months.

Club officers said it is the first and only all-Canadian women's organization in Britain. It was inaugurated in December, 1942, for service and civilian Canadians doing war work in Britain.

Officers and their Canadian homes are: President, Mrs. Marian Robertson, Nelson, B.C.; honorary secretary, Mrs. Arabella Rivington, Victoria; treasurer, Mrs. E. Mary Warwick, St. Catharines, Ont., committee, Miss Eileen B. Griffin, Montreal; Mrs. Bessie Hope, Victoria; Mrs. Elizabeth J. Western, Neepawa, Man., and hostess, Mrs. Nessie Brown, Victoria.

Pretty little date dress

By VERA WINSTON

ONE-PIECE frocks that borrow a two-piece look give emphasis to the skirt and blouse theme. This pretty little date number has a top of black jersey made with a boat neck, short sleeves and a back-buttoned closing. The skirt of vanilla beige jersey is gathered in front and gored in back. A bunch of red roses with green leaves is tucked through the black belt.

HEROINE OF WAR

One of the unsung heroines of the underground war against the Germans in Holland is Mrs. Patricia Van Delden (above). Mrs. Van Delden, an American, married a Dutch engineer in 1939. She was in France when the Germans invaded the Netherlands. She entered the occupied country by concealing herself in a German munitions train. Thereafter she played a major role in the Dutch underground resistance movement. Her husband died in a Nazi concentration camp. Mrs. Van Delden is back in America to lecture on behalf of American relief for Holland.

Liberated Britisher Finds Dreams Do Come True

When Corporal Charles Bennett of the Royal Engineers thought of his wife in London while lying in a Japanese prison camp he always pictured her in a red dress. Just to make sure she has that red dress when he arrives home sometime this month the Corporal took the first opportunity to do a bit of shopping after arriving at Debert Military Camp along with more than 3,000 other Britishers, last week. Here the Corporal gets "just the dress I'm looking for," from a saleswoman in a nearby Truro, N.S., departmental store.—(Canadian Army Photo, by Sgt. Doug Lee.)

Dr. Harold Taylor First Male Prexy Of Girls' College

New York (CP)—The recent convocation at Sarah Lawrence College, Bronxville, was an expectant session as the 300 girls waited for their new president, Dr. Harold Taylor, to address them.

Key-note of his speech was the reference to "our generation," not the usual "your generation" heard from convocation platforms. Dr. Taylor, only 30 years old, already has proved himself progressive, eager to advance co-operation between students and the faculty, and ready to devote his time to student problems and offer advice as a contemporary. He is the first male president of Sarah Lawrence and one of the youngest college presidents in the United States.

Born in Toronto, Dr. Taylor received his Ph.D. from the University of Toronto and went to Cambridge on a fellowship to further his philosophical studies. Cambridge did not afford the specialized subjects he wished so he transferred to the University of London. There he paid his way by editing a magazine on modern jazz. He plays the clarinet himself and hopes to sit in with the Sarah Lawrence orchestra.

When his formal education was completed, Dr. Taylor applied to Max Otto whose work in the field of philosophy he admired, and obtained a professorship at the University of Wisconsin under Otto.

When the board of Sarah Lawrence was searching for a president to succeed Dr. Constance Warren, they approached Dr. Taylor because he advocated the same liberal education the college strives to attain.

The doctor and his wife, an attractive English girl, and their three-year-old daughter, May, hold "open house" for students and encourage them to drop in whenever they please.

As well as carrying on manifold duties as president, Dr. Taylor conducts philosophy classes with emphasis on human problems and the relation of philosophy to living society.

RATIONING OF NATIVE WINE MAY BE LIFTED BY END '45

Toronto, Oct. 24—(CP)—Rationing of native wine in Ontario may be lifted by the end of the year officials of the Liquor Control Board said Tuesday. A board spokesman said supply of native wines now is adequate since Federal restrictions which prevented wine manufacturers from making more than 80 per cent of their usual quota have been lifted.

More wine has been placed in all outlets and it now is possible for consumers to get their full four-bottle quota each month.

Foxboro

Foxboro—Mr. and Mrs. N. Sprague and twin daughters of Trenton and Mr. B. Ketcheson were Sunday callers at Mrs. Annie Bonkin's and Mrs. B. Ketcheson returned home with them.

Owing to the funeral services of the late Mrs. Frank Eggleton, a small number of W.M.S. ladies attended the Sectional Rally on Friday at Mount Pleasant, Rawdon.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank Parks of Hay Bay and Mr. and Mrs. Erle Denyes of Plainfield were Sunday guests at Mrs. J. G. Sills'.

General sympathy is extended to Mr. Frank Eggleton in the passing of his wife and to the sisters and brothers of the late Mrs. J. F. Eggleton.

Mr. and Mrs. Francis Leppan and Mr. George Jehle and Miss Doris Jehle of Detroit returned home after attending the funeral of their sister, Mrs. Eggleton.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Chappelle and daughter attended anniversary services at West Huntingdon on Sunday and were guests at Mrs. Fleming's Ivanhoe.

Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Walt and Mr. and Mrs. A. Seeley and Anis of the fourth line were Sunday guests of Mr. S. Sherry.

Mrs. Jim Stewart and Master Douglas Stewart were dinner hour guests on Sunday at Mrs. C. Davis'.

Mr. and Mrs. Ben Bleecker and Mr. and Mrs. Frank Howes were guests on Sunday at Mr. Clifford Wilson's.

Mr. and Mrs. James Reynolds and Nancy were Sunday guests at Mr. Len Wilson's.

Mr. and Mrs. George Smith entertained Mr. and Mrs. Jack Frederick on Sunday.

Mrs. C. Davis, Miss Helen Davis, Mrs. J. Stewart, Master Douglas Stewart and Mrs. J. Hill were Sunday evening guests at Mr. Harold Stewart's.

Mrs. M. Hawley was an over Sunday guest at Mr. Everett Sills'.

A number spent Sunday afternoon at Batawa.

Autumn sun shining through frosted windows on the fruit, vegetables, grain, potted plants and varied colored maple leaves which formed the decorations was truly a cause for thanksgiving in the United Church on Sunday when large numbers attended both anniversary services. The addresses given by Rev. Thompson in the morning on "The church" and in the evening "The challenge of the world to the church of today" were most fitting and special music by the choir, which consisted of anthems by the full choir, a trio by Mr. and Mrs. E. Tummon and daughter, Mrs. Thompson, and a duet by Messrs. Harry Dafoe and S. C. Gay were very much enjoyed and the offering was most satisfactory when over $400 was contributed.

Rev. L. Shorten conducted anniversary services on a former circuit of his late father's near Ottawa on Sunday last.

Mrs. George Hicks returned home after visiting friends near Port Hope.

A number attended the S. S. convention at Bethany on Wednesday.

Miss Shirley Finkle celebrated her eleventh birthday on Monday when ten young friends were entertained at her home and a pleasant time was spent playing games and a lovely lunch enjoyed. Shirley received a number of pretty gifts.

Wooler

Wooler — Mr. and Mrs. J. J. McColl were tea hour guests of Rev. W. T. R. and Mrs. Delve on Sunday. Afterwards they all motored to Campbellford and attended service at the United Church, where Rev. H. B. Neal, a former pastor of Wooler United Church, was in charge.

Mrs. Marion Mitchell of Trenton was a guest of Mrs. A. Bell for lunch on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. John Callahan and Michael Callahan and other friends of Toronto spent the week end at the Callahan farm.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Ellis were guests of Mr. and Mrs. Martin Kennedy at Trenton on Wednesday last week.

Mrs. Charlie Sharpe and Mrs. Lloyd Bell spent an afternoon with Mrs. Frank Ellis during the latter part of the past week.

Mrs. J. J. McColl made a business trip to Cobourg on Thursday.

Mrs. W. J. Bell has not been so well during this week.

Plans are being considered for the installation of electricity in the Stone school, Section No. 17, Brighton Township.

Mr. Jim Manners has rented the upstairs apartment in the residence of Mr. W. H. Bell and is redecorating same.

Mr. and Mrs. Ervon Scott have returned home after a week's visit with relatives in London, Ont.

Wooler Continuation School collected a very generous supply for the National clothing drive.

Mrs. A. Wilson has returned to her home in Toronto after a few days' visit with Mrs. A. C. Dafoe.

Mrs. R. Jenners of Trenton is home for a few holidays.

The meeting, sponsoring the Women's Institute was held at the home of Mrs. Alex Hubble and was well attended. The program in charge of Mrs. Percy Gooding on "Thanksgiving" was interesting.

Mrs. Sanford Sharpe and Mrs. Hugh Gainsforth were recent guests of Mrs. Harry Gerow at Smithfield.

Mr. George Kilbanks had his sister, Mrs. Wood of Stockdale for a week's visit.

Mrs. G. L. Terrill has gone to Toronto where she is the guest of friends.

Mr. Milton Bryant spent a few days with friends in Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. George Crosby have moved into apartments in the residence of Mr. and Mrs. Davis Bull.

Miss Isabelle Barr who has been the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Clarence Wessels and Alice for three weeks, has returned to her home at Trenton.

Mr. Patrick McGuire of Codrington has been taken to a hospital in Peterboro. His friends here hope for a speedy recovery.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Sherwood have returned to their home in Kingston, after a number of weeks with friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Shick and children who have been in Saskatchewan for two weeks, have returned home.

Mr. and Mrs. Roy Ross recently entertained Mr. and Mrs. Greene of Trenton for the day.

Mrs. Frank Ellis accompanied her daughter, Neta and son Clinton Ellis to Toronto on Sunday, where she will spend the winter months.

CROSSROADS

Whatever Road They Choose . . We Owe Them Our Help!

THEY'RE AT THE CROSSROADS—back from the hardships of war—changed perhaps in their outlook. Not so much older, but wiser by far. What they look forward to in Canada is freedom and opportunity. For that's what they dreamed of as they were out there on the battlefield, or zoomed into the flak over the target, or took up battle stations when the sub pack threatened.

Now they're back to seek and find that opportunity—opportunity you can help give them. A chance to complete their education, to own their own farms, their own homes, to learn trades or go into their own businesses. To pick up the threads again and start anew on the road of life.

Yes, your purchases of VICTORY BONDS help provide that chance—for the 9th Victory Loan will be largely used to finance rehabilitation. So dig down deep this time and buy more Victory Bonds than ever. And you'll not only be helping to pay the debt we owe these men and women, but helping to assure your own future by your savings.

Remember, there will only be one Victory Loan in the next 12 months—so you can buy double the amount with the same deductions from your pay envelope, extended over 12 months.

"Barbed Wire Ballads" Capture British Ex-P.O.W.'s

Lieut. Tom "Scotty" Melville's popular book, "Barbed Wire Ballads," written in a German prison camp, sang a familiar tune for British liberated prisoners of war from Jap prison camps in the Far East who are making Debert Military Camp their temporary home while awaiting ship transport to the United Kingdom. One copy of the book appeared in their camp and it soon became the book most sought after by the ex-prisoners. Here are three gunners, J. F. Davidson, Frank Clegg and Bert Morris, captured at Singapore, shown intently reading the ballads. Melville, a Regina newspaperman, was captured at Dieppe while fighting with the Queen's Own Cameron Highlanders of Winnipeg. — (Canadian Army Photo, by Sgt. Doug. Lee.)

South African News Letter

Says Smuts Broke Word on Charter

Cape Town (CP)—A charge that Prime Minister Smuts "left small nations scandalously in the lurch" at the San Francisco world security conference was contained in Opposition Leader D. F. Malan's criticism of the government's recent decision to ratify the United Nation's charter without waiting for parliament's approval.

The government said there was no time to place the ratification before parliament because it was not meeting until January and the general assembly of the United Nations was taking place in December. Assurance was given there would be full consultation with parliament at the first opportunity.

Dr. Malan said the government's action was in direct conflict with constitutional usage and the prime minister's own undertaking. "The prime minister is afraid to face parliament," Dr. Malan said. "Apart from the growing unpopularity of the government, he knows, too, that at San Francisco he left the small nations scandously in the lurch. This new act of sabotage will open the people's eyes to the fact he has become a positive menace."

The make-up of South Africa's post-war armed services has just been announced by the chiefs of the services. They will consist of: two infantry divisions; an armored brigade group; coastal artillery; a youth training battalion of 2,000; a physical training battalion including the junior Cape Corps and ancillary units; 15 fighter-bomber, coastal and transport squadrons, personnel of which will be two-thirds full-time and one-third part-time; a naval force of four frigates and 18 small ships with a naval college and training facilities.

Except for the youth battalion there will be no outside recruiting, only serving soldiers and ex-soldiers being accepted. The forces will remain at these figures until March, 1947, when, it is stated, events will have become sufficiently clarified to enable a long-range policy to be laid down.

South Africa believes her interests can be served best by having the channels of trade as free as possible, Reconstruction Minister S. F. Waterson told the Associated Chambers of Commerce congress at Johannesburg. The union was pledged to work for freer trade among the nations but in the application of the principles of free trade both organized commerce and the government knew perfectly well there must be qualifications.

H. Waters, the congress president, said the Union permitted herself three costly luxuries — the color bar which obstructed secondary industry's progress, an agricultural industry which demanded full protection from all competitors and a transport system which largely ignored the fundamental reasons for its existence.

More than 1,400 Royal Air Force men from camps throughout the Union and as far north as Zambesi sailed for Britain from Cape Town. Some had been in South Africa for five years. They took home many South African wives and about 50 babies.

"FORGOTTEN WOMEN" FIGHT FOR RIGHTS

London (CP)—Miss Florence White, national organizer of the Spinsters' Association, told a large meeting in the Kingsway Hall that, as a result of the war, one of every five women in Britain will remain unmarried.

Miss White said lack of recognition of the need of spinsters had earned them the title of "Forgotten Women."

"That name should be a spur to us to carry on the fight for our rights," she said. The meeting passed a resolution demanding reduction of the pension age of insured single women from 60 to 55.

THIRTEEN WOMEN CANDIDATES IN B.C. ELECTIONS

Newspaperwomen, Teachers, Judges and Housewives Seek Seats in Oct. 25 Voting

By KATHLEEN BEX
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Vancouver (CP)—Two newspaperwomen, a couple of former school teachers and a former juvenile court judge are among the women seeking seats in the British Columbia legislature in the Oct. 25 provincial general election. Majority of the 13 women among the 147 candidates are newcomers to the political field. In the 1941 election 12 contested seats and five were elected.

The two coalitionist candidates, Mrs. Nancy Hodges and Mrs. T. J. Rolston are seeking re-election. Mrs. Hodges, women's editor of the Victoria Daily Times, is running in Victoria where she was elected as a Liberal in 1941. Mrs. Rolston, a veteran politician, is seeking re-election in Vancouver-Point Grey where she was chosen in 1941 as Conservative member.

The three C.C.F. women candidates running for re-election are Mrs. Laura Jamieson, contesting Vancouver Centre, Mrs. Grace MacInnis, Vancouver-Burrard, and Mrs. Dorothy Steeves, North Vancouver.

Mrs. Jamieson, a native of Park Head, Ont., was juvenile court judge in Burnaby in 1927 - 38. Winnipeg-born Mrs. MacInnis is the daughter of the late J. S. Woodsworth, founder of the C. C. F. party. She was honorary parliamentary secretary to the CCF group in the House of Commons during 1935-41.

Born in Amsterdam, Holland, Mrs. Steeves during the First Great War was employed as legal adviser to the Dutch government office charged with the distribution of food and other necessities.

C.C.F. novices on the B. C political scene are Mrs. May Campbell, Victoria, Mrs. Gladys Webster, South Okanagan, and Mrs. Clare McAllister, Oak Bay. Mrs. Campbell moved to Penticton from Saskatchewan in 1937 where she has been a member of a fruit and vegetable workers union while employed in a Penticton cannery.

Mrs. McAllister, a University of British Columbia graduate and the mother of three children, taught school in Nova Scotia at one time. Mrs. Webster's husband, Arnold Webster, Vancouver school teacher, ran unsuccessfully as C.C.F. candidate for Vancouver-Burrard in the last Dominion election.

Mrs. E. Wilson, Burnaby, and Mrs. Jean Mason, Vancouver-Burrard, are on the Labor-Progressive ticket. As housewives and mothers both have been active in welfare and parent-teachers' association work in their communities.

The Social Credit Party has chosen two women candidates, Mrs. Margaret Murray, Peace River and Mrs. Lyle Campbell, Burnaby. Mrs. Murray, who with her husband, George Murray, runs the only newspaper of the Peace River area, is a prominent British Columbia journalist. Her husband is running as an Independent Progressive Liberal in Lillooet.

Only woman running as an independent is 60-year-old Mrs. Ellen Hart, who is contesting Victoria as an Independent Progressive Conservative.

'Red' Hill Rescues 125-Pound Doe From Rocky Ledge

Niagara Falls, Ont., Oct. 25 — (CP) — Although he had not fully rested after his terrifying experience earlier in the day, William "Red" Hill, famous Niagara Riverman who nearly lost his life in the penstocks at the Queenston power plant saving a buck late Tuesday afternoon, rescued a second deer a few hours later.

STUDY STREAMLINE TRAINS

Ottawa, Oct. 25 —(CP)— R. C. Vaughan, C.N.R. president, said Tuesday night at a meeting of the Commons' Railway Committee that the railway had a committee actively studying the possibilities of streamline train and Diesel engines and promised plenty of sleeping cars "within six months or a year."

Queen Elizabeth To Dock Friday

Halifax, Oct. 25 —(CP)— The giant troopship Queen Elizabeth, bringing some 12,000 Canadian troops back home from overseas, is expected to dock at Halifax about 8.30 a.m. E.S.T. Friday, military officials said Wednesday.

Thirty special troop trains are being assembled at the ocean terminals here to handle the big troop movement which will raise to 22,000 the number of Canadian service men brought home from Britain this week.

The Ile de France arrived Sunday with 10,000.

Embarkation authorities said the Ile de France has been removed from the Canadian repatriation movement as her name does not appear on the list of troopships scheduled to dock here in the future. Another troopship, the Nieuw-Amsterdam, was removed several weeks ago.

RIPLEY CAPTURES TROPHY

Wingham, Oct. 25 — (CP)—In a sudden death girls softball fixture here yesterday, Ripley defeated Hanover 18-14 to capture the trophy. Twice in the series, Ripley came back to even the count. Yesterday Ripley trailed until the ninth inning, when a 9-run splurge decided the issue. Jean MacDonald was credited with a circuit clout. Jean McLeod set a record, having pitched the entire schedule and during the elimination series.

STUDENT NURSES GET TRAINING IN STATELY MANSION

London Hospital Moves to Make Profession Attractive to Greater Number of British Girls.

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Hadley Common, England (CP)—Here in a stately, old-world mansion nestling in its own spacious grounds is one answer to Britain's vital problem of the shortage of nurses.

What was once a nobleman's Hertfordshire home now is the Central Preliminary Training School of the Prince of Wales Hospital in London where nurses are being trained under improved conditions.

The word "probationer" has been discarded. Girls enter as student nurses and everything is done to impress them that they are going into a splendid profession.

There are flowers in the lecture room, modern desks, new training equipment, well-furnished bedrooms and wardrobes for every student. Good food is served in a pleasant cream-walled dining hall. Indoor games are played in the cosy recreation room; netball and tennis on the wide, green lawns outside.

Students are free in the evenings and at week-ends. They may go to dances and stay out late if they want to. But most of the students often work till 10 at night, determined to pass high in the initial examination.

Comfort a Factor

The school was originated by Sister Edith Penny of the Prince of Wales Hospital who, mindful of the drudgery of her own training 30 years ago, was anxious to train nurses in a happy, homely way.

From the training school student nurses are sent to carry on their training in 10 different hospitals fed from this centre.

At the Prince of Wales Hospital, Stamford Hill, they continue training under conditions similar to those at the school. Each nurse has her own bedroom in a modern nurses' home and there are recreation and social rooms.

Nurses off duty are given breakfast in bed. But shortage of staff means that the students work 104 hours every two weeks instead of 98.

They are entitled to 28 days' holiday with pay, plus allowances for living out. Pay is at the rate of £40 ($180) a year, plus board, residence, uniform and laundry, rising to £60 ($270).

Hospital authorities believe that once the stigma of drudgery and indifferent feeding has been removed from hospital life thousands of girls will be attracted to nursing as a profession.

France May Buy Seed From Ont.

Chatham, Oct. 25 (CP)—French government representatives in Canada are negotiating with officials in Paris on the possibility of buying seed corn from Ontario for shipment this year, J. Duff Brien, Secretary of the Ontario Seed Corn Marketing Board, said yesterday. Large shipments of Ontario seed corn have been sent to Russia, Yugoslavia and Greece in the last 18 months.

British Films Enjoying Biggest Boom in History

(By NORMAN CRIBBENS)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

London, Oct. 25—(CP)—British films are enjoying the biggest boom in their history, not only in Britain but in Canada, Australia and some of the smaller Empire countries.

A spokesman for J. Arthur Rank, millionaire British miller and movie magnate, said some British films are actually making more money than Hollywood's super-movies. He named "Way to the Stars," "Madonna of the Seven Moons," "I Live in Grosvenor Square" and "Waterloo Road."

"Canada's proximity to Hollywood and the United States does not seem to have affected the success of our pictures," he said. "In fact, many theatres are making a speciality of them."

The same films—with "Dead of Night," a recent production—are drawing queues to theatres all over the United Kingdom. During one week's run in Sunderland "Madonna of the Seven Moons" drew half the town's population—about 96,000.

In Glasgow, recognized by movie magnates as the "toughest spot in Britain," the movie "They Were Sisters" has smashed all records. "Waterloo Road," story of London life during wartime, was such a hit that it had to be reissued little more than a year after its first release.

Officials of the three leading circuits — Odeon, Gaumont and A.B.C., which among them control more than 1,000 first-run theatres — agree that business done by recent British films is staggering.

Credit for the current boom goes to Mr. Rank, who now controls 10 movie production companies, and to skilled craftsmen and workmen who backed him in one of the biggest industrial gambles of the war.

He plans to spend £250,000 on documentary films presenting the British way of life.

Mastodon's Bones Are Unearthed Near St. Thomas

St. Thomas, Ont., Oct. 25 — (CP) — Bones of a mastadon or some other prehistoric monster are being unearthed on the farm of Alex Horkay on No. 3 highway, 20 miles west of here. The bones unearthed include thigh bones, 44 inches long, 30 inches wide, sections of vertabrae as large as a snare drum, lower jaw, more or less triangular shaped, each side 37 inches in length, and teeth, the largest being 7 ½ by 5 inches.

There are several bushel baskets of smaller bones in the Horkay home. It is believed other bones are still in the ground, but the boggy character of the land prevents further excavating until dry weather returns. National Museum authorities at Ottawa are being notified of the discovery, which is not the first of its kind in this locality.

Chicago Black Hawks Score 5-4 Victory Over Boston Bru ns With Only 45 Seconds to Go

Sellout at Boston Views Opening of National Hockey League

By BILL KING

Boston, Oct. 25—(AP)—The National Hockey League first of the major sports organizations to be hit by the war, today appeared heading into a glorious peacetime era.

Blessed with a sellout and promised many more by President Red Dutton, that six-club circuit launched its 1945-46 season here last night with Chicago Black Hawks eking out a 5-4 victory over Boston Bruins with only 45 seconds to go.

An overflow charity game crowd of 13,901, which contributed $21,456 to a wounded American Veterans' fund, saw those greatly strengthened teams wage a wide-open contest that was decided when Captain Red Hamill of the Black Hawks rifled in two long-range goals without assistance during the last 13 minutes of play, the "clincher" at 19:15.

The N.H.L. now will mark time until Saturday, when the Bruins engage the Maple Leafs in Toronto and the Black Hawks provide the Canadiens with their opposition in Montreal.

Before Hamill, who, like most discarded Bruins, is at his best on Boston ice, turned the tide single-handed, Boston's veteran Bill Cowley had out his forces in what appeared to be a safe 4-3 lead with one of his special solo scoring jaunts, which gave him his second goal of the game.

Max Bentley also scored twice without aid for the Black Hawks after Clint Smith had given them first blood during the seventh minute of play. Other Boston scorers were Don Gallinger and Jack Shill, two of the eight ex-servicemen who have rejoined that club.

Among others were the famed Kitchener Kids, Milt Schmidt Woody Dumart and Bobby Bauer —one of hockey's greatest lines and Terry Reardon who was wounded by a sniper in France while leading a company of Canadian paratroopers.

In addition to Hamill, the Black Hawks have been strengthened by such other returned war veterans as Max and Doug Bentley, Bill Mosienko and Big Johnny Mariucci.

CAN RETURN WITHOUT PERMISSION

Regina, Oct. 25—(CP)—Farm workers from Eastern Canada who have been engaged in harvesting in Saskatchewan now may return east without obtaining permission form Provincial government authorities, it was announced yesterday. Officials said between 2,500 and 2,600 harvesters, most of them from Ontario and Quebec, had come west to assist with harvesting.

HORNETS TAKE FOURTH STRAIGHT WIN IN LEAGUE

Wallop Cleveland Barons 7-2 Before a Capacity Crowd

By The Canadian Press

Exhibiting a fine passing attack and an almost air-tight defence, Pittsburgh Hornets took their 4th straight game and strengthened their first place hold in the western division of the American Hockey League by walloping Cleveland Barons 7-2 at Pittsburgh last night before a capacity crowd of 5,500.

The defeat was a tough blow for Barons, defending league champions who have failed to win a game in five starts this season with a record of three ties and 2 losses.

Bob Walton and Wally Wilson led the Hornet attack with two goals each. Ken (Red) Schultz, Howard Mackie and Johnny Mahaffy got the others. Tom Burlington, starry one-eyed centre, and Earl Bartholome nabbed the Cleveland scores.

At Hershey, an approximate crowd of 6,500 saw the Bears rally in the last period to earn a 2-2 tie against Providence Reds in their fifth game of the season without defeat. Bears started strong and took the lead on Hal Cooper's goal early in the opening frame but the Reds tied the count when goalie Nick Damore fumbled a smoking shot off the stick of Roger Bedard.

Red took the lead in the mid-session when Jack Lavoie scored while his team - mate Bing Juckes was serving a tripping penalty and held the lead until late in the final period when Hershey's Ken Smith sent a hard angle shot into the net to tie the count. Bears kept the offensive into Providence's zone in the dying minutes of the game but Reds "ragged" the puck and protected their tie.

When Paul Richards the lanky Tigers' catcher, performed at Muskogee, Okla., in 1928, he was a utility infielder who threw so hard the first baseman complained he couldn't see the ball and, at times, served as an ambidextrous pitcher, but his best trick was to start from first base at a dead run backwards. Fans recall that opposing pitchers used to throw the ball away in bewilderment.

Powassan Counting On Member to Play With Their Team

North Bay, Ont. Oct. 25. (CP)— Hockey fans of Parry Sound riding who had counted on their member of parliament to play hockey for Powassan Hawks in the North Bay and District Hockey Association say they are a bit disappointed by McDonald's decision to perform for Hull Volants this season.

Powassan is in the Parry Sound riding and the hockey supporters had hoped that McDonald's presence in the lineup would strengthen their entry in the northern league and provide a great drawing card.

Although Bucko's parliamentary duties may require him to live close to Ottawa, they felt he could have commuted between Parliament Hill and Powassan for league games.

Football Trouble Spreads to Scotland

London, Oct. 25 —(AP)— Trouble in Britain's soccer league, where the players are threatening to strike for more money, spread today to Scotland.

The Scottish league players turned down a compromise on their demands for a raise from £4 ($18) a match to £6 ($27).

The club owners had offered to continue the £4 pay only if players lost the match and give them £1 extra for ties and £2 bonus for winning.

Campbell Approves Montreal Signing Negro Ball Player

Toronto, Oct. 25 — (CP)—President Peter Campbell of the Toronto Maple Leafs baseball club in the International League last night signified approval in the signing of Jackie Robinson, a Negro, to a Montreal Royals ball contract.

Said Campbell:

"I see no reason why baseball should stand back on the question of Negro baseball players when other sports, such as football, track and field, horseracing and hockey present no racial barriers."

Speaking for the Toronto club, Campbell said Leafs had no objection to Royals using the Negro shortstop next season. "If and when the time arrives when we can improve our team by signing a Negro player, we will do so," he added.

BLUES AGAIN WIN

Hamilton, Oct. 25 — (CP) — A crowd of 4,000 hockey fans last night got a pre-season view of Toronto Maple Leafs when they watched an intra-team exhibition which was won by the Blue 4-2.

Blues, led by Bob Davidson, scored three times in the final period to take the verdict over Syl Apps' White team.

Scorers for the winners were Mel Hill, Bob Goldham, Jim Thomson and Ted Kennedy. Don Metz and Lorne Carr tallied for Whites.

RED WINGS WIN

Galt, Ont., Oct. 25 — (CP) — Detroit Red Wings swamped their farm team, Omaha Knights, 10-2 in an exhibition hockey game here last night before 3,500 fans.

During first period play, Ted Lindsay, a Toronto boy with Wings, sprained his ankle. It was not known immediately how long he would be out of action.

Chips Off The Sports Block

By GEORGE H. CARVER

Royals Sign Negro Star.

One of the most revolutionary moves in baseball since Abner Doubleday started the pastime over 100 years ago exploded at the Montreal Baseball Club's front office yesterday. Royals signed a Negro player to a contract. He is Jack Robinson, who becomes the first member of his race to ever crash the barrier of colored players into organized baseball ranks.

President Hector Racine and Vice-President Lt.-Col. Romeo Gauvreau of Royals, along with Branch Rickey, Jr., of the parent Dodgers, sprang this startling announcement at a press conference. In regealing the news, Racine pointed out that the Royals were aware of what a radical move this breaking of baseball's "unwritten law" was, and he expected wide repercussions.

Louis Will Kayo Billy Conn, He Says.

Joe Louis, in Los Angeles to relax, had his answer for Billy Conn's boast that he would dethrone the champion when they meet next June.

"I think I'll kayo him," the Brown Bomber said with a quiet confidence. "I think he'll lose his head just like the last time and I'll flatten him.

"Conn was beating me in the other fight, but he lost his head and I had him then. He's too cocky, too erratic."

The heavyweight champ, now 31, will be 32 before he defends his title. He conceded that his three years and eight months in the army may have slowed him down a bit, but, he insisted, "I can still beat Conn."

"The army did a marvellous thing for me," he explained. "It gave me a self-confidence that I never had before."

Webb Wins.

Cpl. Danny Webb of Montreal last night defeated Petty Officer Ben Duffy of the Royal Navy in a scheduled eight-round featherweight boxing contest at Seymour Hall when Duffy retired at the end of the third round.

The sailor, who was said to be feeling the effects of a shoulder injury suffered while in training, carried the fight at the start to Webb but the Canadian Negro coolly picked off his blows and by the third roundd was using Duffy as a punching bag.

The fans indicated they thought it was a poor ending to a poor fight.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Lester Patrick of New York Rangers has decided to put his alternate-goalkeeper innovation into practice Saturday night at Winnipeg when the N.H.L. club takes on St. Paul Saints in an exhibition display. The history-making stunt consists of changing netminders at six-minute intervals when other team substitutions also are to be made. Manager Patrick claimed last night the N.H.L. rules do not forbid the use of two goal guardians during a regulation contest.

The two puck-stoppers who will be the guinea-pigs for the Patrick experiment are Chuck Rayner and Sugar Jim Henry.

Left-fielder Hank Greenberg of Detroit Tigers, star of the World Series, was initiated as a member of the Saints and Sinners Club at New York yesterday when he was both ribbed and eulogized in customary fashion. Highlight was the presentation of a red label carrying the title "Hank Greenberg, Cub tamer."

Defenceman Ron Matthews, last years with Oshawa Generals in O.H.A. junior "A" company, has turned up with Edmonton Canadians who were eliminated for Western Canadian junior honors by Moose Jaw Canucks last spring. Other Edmonton additions include forwards Harry Groves and Harvey Ross, formerly with New York Rovers.

Amputation cases, at the Temple, Tex., military hospital have developed a new form of baseball played by men in wheel chairs, four a side, on a tennis court and using a volley ball and regulation baseball bat. The crippled vets are enthusiastic about the game.

Bobby Managoff, holder of Montreal's version of the world's wrestling championship, last night defended his title against Jumping Joe Savoldi, turning back the challenger in two out of three falls.

Scoring all their points in the final quarter, Winnipeg Blue Bombers came through with a 28-7 victory over Concordia College, from Moorehead, Minn., last night in an International gridiron game at Winnipeg. Peg's touchdowns went to McCance, Boivin, Bohunki and Hood.

TO BE GIVEN TRYOUT

Sydney, N. S., Oct. 25 — (CP) —Bryan Kerr of St. Catharines, Ont., who set a two-goal-a-game clip to lead scorers last winter in the Cape Breton Junior Hockey League, will be given a tryout with Chicago Black Hawks of the N.H.L., it was learned here yesterday.

Kerr, recently discharged from the Navy, also plays at baseball and once tried out with Toronto Maple Leafs of the International League.

Toronto, Oct. 25 —(CP)— A dappled grey trotting gelding which trained the last two winters at Point Pleasant Park in Halifax can look back today on an imposing 1945 record compiled in competition at the three-week grand circuit meet at Old Orchard, Me., and elsewhere in New England.

In 28 dashes, Bona Beau, owned by Alderman J. H. Breen of Halifax placed first seven times and was second eight times. Purchased in Ontario as a two-year-old late in 1943, Bone Beau is considered an outstanding prospect for 1946 trots, possibly at Roosevelt in New York State where night racing is popular.

Bona Beau, sired by Corporal Lee, will winter at Woodstock, N.B., in the stable of Earl Avery, well-known Maritime reinsman who steered the gelding in all races last season.

Futures: Maple Leaf Gardens in Toronto will relax its hockey monopoly long enough to stage a charity girls' softball doubleheader Nov. 9. New Orleans, Jax, girl softball champions of the world, will meet Toronto Sunday Morning Class and Toronto Simpsons, Ontario champions. Baseball comedian Al Schacht will be brought to Toronto for the program, sponsored by a service (Rotary) club. Proceeds will be donated to the Toronto, Hospital for Sick Children Fund.

Jack Kelly of West Acton, Mass., described as the greatest of all marathon runners, is entered in the around-the-bay marathon at Hamilton next Saturday. More than 20 long-distance runners have forwarded entries for the event, sponsored by Unit 153, Army and Navy Veterans of Canada.

Around the Circuit: Ron Pickell, formerly with Saskatoon Quakers and St. Hyacinthe, Que., Navy, is bidding for a netminding berth with Seattle Ironmen of the Pacific Coast Hockey League. . . . Andy Sokol, teen-aged, 175-pound backfielder of Sarnia, St. Pats, is described by Jack (London Free Press) Park as a "one-man team." Sokol, who lives in a Czecho-Slovak community, is reported headed for the University of Detroit. . . . Jack Dempsey plans a Dominion-wide refereeing tour starting in December.

SET UP HOSPITAL AT PETERBORO

Ottawa, Oct. 24 — (CP) — The Department of Veterans Affairs has set up a hospital especially for tubercular patients at Peterboro, because of the overflow of such patients at other available hospitals, chiefly in Ontario and Quebec, a spokesman said yesterday. It is not anticipated that any others will be needed to meet the emergency.

The trump is hearts. Make believe you are the declarer in the south and the lead is in your hand. Try to take six of the remaining eight tricks. After that, you may need a vacation.

Start by leading your diamond and take it with the north queen to enter dummy. Come back with the spade jack. East, of course, is forced to go with the queen. Trump it.

Hold on, there. When you trump that trick, prepare for the future. Trump with your five of hearts instead of the trey. Preserve the trey as a possible later entry to dummy with a trump. You may need it.

Now lead one of your clubs. West, of course, must win that trick with the king. That gives opponents one of their tricks. You can still afford to lose one more.

The second trick you decide to lose will depend on what lead comes from west in that spot. For as much as we have space today, let's see what may happen if he shoots his ten of trump.

Dummy puts on the deuce and east flicks the nine or queen. If the nine, you have a cinch. Take with the jack, lead trump ace, and give up a trump trick to east. Then take the rest.

Instead of the nine, suppose east plays the queen. Be a slick chick. Refuse to take it with your ace. East will be in the lead and must come forth with a trump or a diamond.

If east comes out with the trump nine, take with your jack. Lead your ace to pick up the east king and the balance is yours. What if east leads the king instead of the nine of trumps? Simply take it with your ace, lead your trump jack, and pick up the rest.

A clever problem for you is if east decides to lead a diamond instead of a trump. But tomorrow is another day.

Hunters Issued 'Nearly all' the Available Licences

Toronto, Oct. 25—(CP)—Hunters have been issued "nearly all" the available licences for the first post-war pheasant-hunting season just getting under way, an official of the Ontario game and fisheries department said yesterday.

All licences have been issued for Pelee Island, the famed district in Lake Erie off Essex county where shooting starts Nov. 1 for two days, the spokesman said. Hunters in Essex and Kent counties, where the season runs Nov. 1 to Nov. 3, need a gun licence only, however.

There are just "a few" licences left for Lincoln and Welland counties, where shooting started yesterday and continues Oct. 26 and 27 after a halt today, the spokesman said.

Licences for shooting Oct. 26 and 27 in the regulated townships also were described as "pretty well sold out."

Canada to Take Over the Alaskan Highway April 1

Ottawa, Oct. 25. (CP)—Responsibility for maintaining the Alaska Highway will pass from the United States army which built it to the Canadian Army next April 1, Justice Minister St. Laurent announced yesterday in the Commons.

The 1,000-mile stretch of road through uninhabited country between Fort Saint John, B.C., and Fairbanks, Alaska, will come under Canadian control pursuant to the agreement under which it was built as an emergency defence measure.

The army will operate it as a military highway and for the time being decision is not being taken as to future civilian use or administration.

"Two sets of considerations must be borne in mind", said the minister, acting secretary of State for External Affairs. "Future defence needs and current civil uses. With respect to the first category it may be some time before we can reach definite conclusions. There are many factors to be taken into account.

"As regards civil uses we must estimate what is best adapted to assist in the development of the country. The two aspects cannot be separated and each must affect the other".

In addition to the highway there is the chain of air fields stretching from Edmonton to Alaska. Mr. St. Laurent said the R.C.A.F. would assume responsibility for air fields on the northwest staging route on the withdrawal of the United States military authorities.

Connecting the airfields is a landline system of telephone, telegraph and teletype facilities on the whole length of the highway. The R.C.A.F. will take over operation of this landline system and the date for the changeover from United States control has been set as June 1, 1946.

Departments of government concerned are now exploring whether a system of radio communications can be substituted for the present landline system.

Mr. St. Laurent described the arrangements as "provisional" and said they provided adequate means for continuing collaboration with the United States for defence purposes as well as for assisting in development.

CONDUCTS OWN DEFENCE

Toronto, Oct. 25 — (CP)—Peter Goveryluk, who conducted his own defence, was acquitted yesterday by an Assize Court jury of charges of manslaughter and robbery with violence arising out of the death of Jean de Vaudrieuil, 75, in a Jarvis Street rooming house May 15.

PICKET LINES CONTINUE TO GROW AS STRIKES SWEEP ON

Pickets and non-striking workers swap punches with enthusiasm while police, who seem to be studio "specials," stand by, passionately nonchalant, outside the Gower St. studio of Paramount Pictures in Hollywood, Calif., as the mass picketing tide reached there. The clash above started when non-striking Paramount employees attempted to break through a line of 300 pickets. Although there was no pulling of punches, no one was seriously hurt.

Police in the role of peacemakers clash with strikers at the S.K.F. ball bearing plant in Philadelphia. Trouble started when pickets barred an office worker from entering the struck plant. There were a few bruises distributed, but no one was seriously hurt.

MID-DAY MEALS BOON TO BRITISH PUPILS

London (CP)— Educational authorities are striving to increase the total of mid-day meals available to schoolchildren throughout the country. At present, although every primary schoolchild is entitled by law to a school dinner, little more than a third of them are able to obtain it.

Official figures show that of Britain's 4,500,000 primary school children only 33.8 per cent are obtaining their school meals while in secondary grammar schools the percentage is 55.6 per cent.

When the next half-yearly figures become available it is hoped that a substantial improvement will have taken place in spite of the many difficulties facing authorities.

"Our main difficulty," said a Ministry of Education official "is the provision of accommodation rather than equipment for staff. Schools have a building priority and canteens normally form part of the school buildings."

FOR LOVELIER HAIR...

"Her hair is the first thing noticed in a girl's appearance"—Ask any man to describe the new belle of the office—"Well, she's a smooth blonde" or "she's a ginger-top with kinda cute freckles." Such being the case, a beauty-wise girl is going to look to her locks. No other single feature can do as much to create the impression of beauty as can shining, timely-coiffed ringlets. Hair responds brilliantly even to the tiniest attention, so take time to keep it at its best.

And The Walls Came Tumbling

By Joseph McCord

CHAPTER 1

Samaritan

Carol Delaine stood gazing across the sun-baked stretch of Front Street below the office window. She was so deeply absorbed in thought that there was almost a suggestion of tenseness about the slim motionless figure in a white dress. Her brown eyes were fixed, unwavering.

Those large brown eyes were Carol's most attractive feature. Set rather wide apart under dark expressive brows they were perfect in shape, fringed with lustrous lashes. An arresting contrast to the soft, straight hair, drawn back simply and gathered in a knot on the nape of her slender neck. Her hair was the color of old amber, shining.

Carol was brooding and passively conscious of it, equally aware that she should shake off her pensive humor. It did no good. But there were so many uncertainties to ponder over these days. Her tendency to muse was inherited from her father whom she was watching now. The sight of him had filled the brown eyes with wistful perplexity. It was a familiar attitude toward this only parent and it had been like that for a long time, ever since she was old enough to reason situations with a degree of satisfaction to herself. She was nearly twenty-two now and the future held nothing very definite for her.

"Secure" probably would have been the word for it had Carol attempted to formulate an accurate answer. Security, on the other hand, seemed never to feature Andre Delaine's own contemplations. His conclusions were reached readily, almost airily. And apparently he found them adequate, no matter how anyone else might be inclined to regard them.

Instead of being in his near-by tailoring shop this afternoon, Andre reposed comfortably in an armchair set in the shady entrance to the fire hall. The central figure in a group of loungers. Andy—as his intimates preferred to call him—invariably attracted an audience. A slight figure of a man with an unruly thatch of graying curls, blue eyes and a wide mouth with a whimsical twist. His snowy shirt was pulled open at the throat, but with no suggestion of carelessness. His linen trousers were fresh and carefully pressed. Spotless white shoes on his outstretched feet. Andre always was immaculate and he wore his limited wardrobe with an indefinable air. More than likely there was no reason for being in his small quarters on the sunny side of the street. Men of Jericho demanded little in the way of custom tailoring and the Delaine artisury was devoted mainly to cleaning and pressing. But there was not enough demand to keep one busy.

Carol was too far distant to catch more than the occasional sound of her father's voice, but she knew that he was holding forth on some topic in his leisurely style, a trifle grandiose yet oracular. The forefinger of his right hand caressed his thin moustache; the left held a palm leaf fan with which he gently emphasized a point now and again. Always that tolerant finality. It was a part of him. Andre Delaine never acknowledged an uncertainty.

"Uh. . . Carol." A voice behind her broke her train of thought.

"Yes, Doctor?"

The response was little more than a respectful murmur. Carol did not turn from the window. She had heard her employer moving about in his private room, knew that he was making ready for a round of visits. But she did not realize that it was an instinct in keeping with her present mood that held her eyes on the fire hall group. Yet it was nothing less. Dr. Erasmus Silverthorne was like so many other things. With such a surname he should have been large and dignified, elderly, benign in appearance and speech, instead of a lean, hard-muscled man with deep lines in his face and a sparse wiry goatee. His conversation was equally sparse. He was mirrored clearly in Carol's mind, pausing there with one hand on the knob of the outer door. The shiny serge suit, soiled Panama pushed to the back of his head. The familiar leather bag dangling against his knee.

"Going out in the country," he said. "Far as Wilcox's this time. Reckon I won't be back much before five."

"All right, doctor."

Carol turned. If she had time! She always had time—too much time. That was another vague worry. If a stranger had inquired about her work, she would have explained that she was a receptionist. The word had a dignified sound and she liked to say it to herself. That was why she wore white during office hours when it was possible, simple gowns suggesting uniforms. It was her own idea. But to the town she merely was Doc Silverthorne's office girl. After all, that didn't mean a great deal.

If the doctor had letters to write, he preferred to do them himself, with an ancient gold pen whose point was so curiously bent that no one else could use it. But Carol did do the office accounting. The system consisted of two battered card files, one labeled "alive" and the other "dead." However, the thumbed pasteboards in the second drawer were not to be taken literally. They designated many a patient who had evaded the grave to date and, with equal success, payment for the services that had kept him above ground.

"Wish you'd sort of run through the list once, Carol," the physician resumed. "Lay out the ones you think we maybe could go after again. You know."

"Yes, Doctor."

None knew better than she that collections had been increasingly difficult these last few years. So many people were existing on meager incomes, if not accepting relief, and Silverthorne, despite his brusque airs, was inclined to be too charitable for his own good. Sometimes he was apologetically tardy in handing Carol her modest salary. He just might conclude one of these days that she could do her reading and bits of fancywork at Aunt Cassie's where she and Andre made their home. Waiting patients could entertain themselves if the doctor was out. Of course it was something of a help to have a girl to answer the telephone and arrange appointments.

Carol had nerved herself to a point where she could assist in accident treatments that sometimes came to the office. Once she had saved the life of a small boy by applying a tourniquet after he had slashed his wrist on a piece of glass, only to slump into shameful unconsciousness after Doctor Silverthorne arrived to complete the work and compliment her upon her presence of mind. So far as she knew he never had revealed the professional delinquency.

With the abrupt closing of the hall door and the sound of the doctor's retreating footsteps, Carol lingered a moment at the window. Her eyes still betrayed perplexity as she observed the doctor climb into his dusty car, saw her father smile and flourish his fan as the coupe jerked past with a chatter of gears shifting. Then Andre resumed his disquisition. Everything seemed to settle back into a listless sultry tranquility. Into Jericho.

Jericho had been favored with but one brief paragraph when the Writers' Program published its State Guide. That was because General Lew Wallace's troops once camped near the junction on their way south to intercept General Jubal Early who was making a feint at the defenses of Washington. General Wallace established overnight headquarters at the Hanscomb House and a bronze plaque to that effect was set in the old hostelry's dingy wall. The Lions had done that as a mild rebuke to their government's continued lack of interest in the project. Each time Carol Delaine chanced to notice the marker she was reminded of an observation by her father, one of the sort he liked to style a "quaint conceit."

Andre was seated by the kitchen stove at the time and softly thrumming his zither, the faithful attendant on his frequent cogitations. Its music, from majestic string sweepings to plaintive little improvisations, served as an accurate index to his changing moods. Dreamy, now.

"You know," he observed to his sister and daughter who were washing the supper dishes, "if old Lew Wallace had put his mind on Jericho instead of Jerusalem, we'd have been on the map today . . if he'd made Ben Hur a local boy, I mean. That plug for Jerusalem never got it much so far as I've heard. They say the place still smells."

"So does that cigar," Mrs. Steel commented. "And you could do something by fetching in a bucket of coal, if you can stop that noise a minute." Aunt Cassie never had learned to appreciate the zither.

"As you will, Cassandra dear."

Andre bestowed one of his twisted little smiles upon Carol as he caught her sympathetic glance. He laid his instrument tenderly on the table, picked up the scuttle and disappeared through the back door humming a continuation of his interrupted melody.

Cassandra Steel was obliged to admit to herself that her brother was a good-natured something, even though it was difficult to make sense out of a great deal that he said. He never had accumulated anything and never would, a born dreamer. Baby of the family and pampered by his three sisters, of whom Cassandra was the youngest and only remaining one. Intentional or not, it seemed that she was attempting to rectify her attitude of other days.

Andre had married early, but never had brought his wife to Jericho. The girl was, or had been, an actress not famous so far as anyone knew. If she had been, it would not have salved the outraged feelings of Andre's family. Privately they doubted whether she was a good girl, even though a photograph which Carol cherished above all her few treasures revealed that her mother had dainty features, a wistful mouth and great dark eyes. Those eyes were her legacy to Carol.

When Hattie Delaine died, Andre brought his four-year-old daughter to Cassie and Peter Steel as something of a matter of course; he was in no position to care for the motherless child and the Steels were. To give them credit, they both had done their best by Carol. Andre and Peter were not in the least congenial and the former was seen in Jericho at infrequent intervals thereafter. No one ever knew where Andre's travels took him during that period but they must have been extensive. To Carol he was something of a fascinating myth until Uncle Peter passed away and her father once more became a reality.

Provident Peter Steel left his widow a modest home, a similar income and, all unintentionally, a haven for Andre who settled down for the first time in his life. He described himself as a "paying guest" at his sister's—and was, when in funds. Carol was sixteen at the time of her father's serious start in business.

TABLETS WITH ADDED IRON

BUILD UP YOUR SYSTEM WITH SYNTONA COMPOUND

Be Able to Eat Heartily; To Sleep Soundly; End Dizzy Spells; Nervousness, Headaches, Poor Digestion and Tired, Rundown Feeling.

If you feel tired, wornout and nervous; if bowels are constipated and you suffer with indigestion, gas, headaches and rheumatic pain; if you have dizzy spells and nerves are on edge so that you cannot get sound, restful sleep—take a short treatment of Syntona Herbal Compound and the chances are that you, too, may find this medicine to be just what you need to put you on the road to better health again.

Here, for example, is the recent experience of Mr. Thomas Bronson, 122 Stroud Rd., Hamilton, Ont., who said:

"For a long time I suffered with stomach disorders and my entire system became rundown. My appetite was poor and what little I did eat gave me heartburn and distress in my stomach afterward. Constipation was a daily worry to me. I couldn't seem to get my proper sleep at night, so I always felt tired out and fatigued.

"I have only been taking Syntona for one week, but I can already say that I feel a lot better. My appetite has improved and I am eating heartier meals without so much heartburn and distress afterward. My bowels are acting more regularly, and I seem to have more strength and energy, because I don't get so tired and fatigued as I did. Also my sleep is more sound and restful. I am going to keep on taking Syntona for a while, because this first week has convinced me that it is a real medicine."

Syntona is sold and recommended in Belleville at DOLAN THE DRUGGIST.

Four Big Moose as Trophies

Kapuskasing, Ont., Oct. 25 — (CP)—Back in their Southern Ontario house, Al Linfield and Harvey Baxter of Goderick and Jim Bacon of Hamilton are enjoying steaks from four big moose which they and Art Valley of Kapuskasing shot in this district. The hunters went deep into the bushland, but they killed all the moose in one day.

Petrillo Warns Broadcasters

New York, Oct. 25 (AP)— The New York Times Wednesday said James C. Petrillo, President of The American Federation of Musicians, has notified six key broadcasters they will have to employ twice as many musicians if a musical program carried on their standard station also is duplicated on a frequency modulation outlet.

Pre-Election Facts and Rumors

With civic elections but a few weeks away, there is a strange quiet in municipal circles regarding the outcome of the election of the 1945-46 edition of the city fathers.

The only stir in the hitherto placid pool of civic officialdom is the announcement of Mayor Frank Follwell that he will seek a second term and the statement of ex-Mayor Jamieson Bone that he will contest the seat he held a few years ago.

Street rumor has it that a third entrant may toss his hat in the mayoralty arena, but no confirmation thus far has been obtained.

Seven aldermen will be elected at the forthcoming elections under the new system of seven remaining in office for two years, and the other seven seats pronounced vacant. The city aldermen who will be on the election "spot" this year are Jack Allin, Ormonde Butler, Fred Chamberlain, Clarence Clapp, William Harvey and Newton Wilber. It is stated that all seven of these august gentlemen will again offer themselves for office.

But, it is reported, several other men of repute and high esteem in city circles are casting envious eyes on the seats of the municipal mighty, and one source has it that the largest number of nominations in years can be expected.

There will be four vacancies on the Board of Education and one on the Public Utilities Commission.

Fourth Scouts And Cubs Hold Investiture

The Fourth Belleville Scouts and Cubs held their investiture and going up ceremony Wednesday evening at the Belleville Collegiate. The following Cubs went up to Scouts, Senior Sixer Donald Barclay, with the leaping wolf badge, Jay Howard, Doug Phillips, and Ron Day.

After bidding their former sixers good-bye, each cub was presented with a money pouch from the pack. Two new members were invested into the troop; Bob Varley and Ronald Donavan.

The Scout Commissioner, Lt. Col. Sisler presented A.S.M. Ed Thrasher and Troop Leader Bill Thrasher with their whistles, lanyards, shoulder knots and stripes. His Worship, Mayor Follwell, former King Scout, presented the patrol leaders with their whistles, lanyards, and stripes. His talk on Scouting under Bing Hayes was enjoyed by those present.

Mr. Vanner, chairman of the group committee, presented the prizes for the best decorated baskets on Apple Day to Tom Allison and Albert Newman. Each patrol was presented with patrol shoulder knots by their respective patrol leaders.

The meeting was well attended by Kiwanians and parents.

POLICE COURT

Pleading guilty to "joy riding" when they appeared in local county police court today on charge of taking without the owner's permission an auto belonging to Garnet Little of Shannonville and wrecking it on a district side road, four young members of the Mohawk Indian Reservation had their case enlarged for one month.

According to evidence given by Provincial Constable James Driscoll the four youths together with a juvenile, had taken the car and wrecked it when it slid into the ditch. The case was enlarged on recommendation of the Crown when the court was informed restitution could be made to the owner in a month's time.

George Baptiste, also a resident of Shannonville, was given six months suspended sentence when he was found guilty of the theft of $22 the property of Mrs. Francis Bailey of Point Anne. Baptiste had picked up the money from the floor of the Bailey car when he had been given a ride to Point Anne.

On a break and enter charge, Bruce Pringle was remanded for one week while the court await instruction from the Bowmanville Boys' School.

Infractions of highway regulations comprised the balance of court with Gerald Wickens paying $12.50 after pleading guilty to a careless driving count. A second charge against the accused of failing to remain at the scene of an accident was enlarged. Failure to notify the Department following the purchase of a car cost Ernest Cole $10 and costs. Several charges of speeding and of careless driving were settled out of court.

NOTICE

Will the two gentlemen who were immediately behind one of the vehicles involved in an automobile accident on the Foxboro Road (near the Foxboro Cheese Factory) at approximately five o'clock in the afternoon of Thursday, October 11th, 1945, please Telephone 2718J or call at 71 Geddes Street. This is a most urgent appeal. Please call at once. O23,25,27

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 25 —(CP)— The base metal stocks held a margin of gains in the early session while the other three index groups were down narrowly at noon. Trading showed moderate volume at 1,115,000 shares for the first three hours.

The industrial section displayed mild weakness in the steel, food and paper groups. Building issues were firm to strong and the liquor stocks took minor losses.

Smelters gained a point, Steep Rock added 2 cents and Labrador lost 25 to 7.70.

Eldona headed the weak list in the gold group. It fell back 23 cents to 1.23 on turnover of about 150,000 shares. McIntyre lost 1 1-2, and Macassa, Kirkland Lake, Madsen, Sylvanite, Aubelle and Armistice dropped a few cents.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 25 — (AP) — Stocks rallied selectively in today's market but with considerably less vigor than attended Wednesday's retreat. Steels, motors, rails and specialties attracted bidders after a hesitant start and gains of fractions to a point or so predominated near the 4th hour.

Paramount Pictures and Sears Roebuck were among issues touching new highs. Ahead the greater part of the proceedings were U. S. Steel, General Motors, Chrysler, Goodrich, Douglas Aircraft, American Telephone, Western Union "A", Anaconda, Pepsi-Cola, Standard Brands and Johns-Manville.

Canadian issues traded included Canadian Pacific Railways, Dome Mines and Distillers Seagram Corporation. Both Canadian Pacific and Dome advanced 1/8 while Seagrams fell back 1/4.

Little Interest Shown in Death

Oslo, Oct. 25, (AP)—One day after the execution of Vidkun Quisling the only interest Norwegian civilians showed in the death of the arch-traitor was to express regret that more details of his last moments were not made public.

Norwegian newspapers carried only a one-sentence announcement that the execution of the ex-dictator had been carried out.

Mrs. Quisling, loyal to her husband until the last, is expected to receive the body. She is in seclusion and police refuse to disclose her address. They will not permit her to be interviewed without permission, although she remains under constant police surveillance.

Quisling's brother could not be reached for comment.

British Columbia Voters Make Way To Polling Booths

Vancouver, Oct. 25.— (CP)— Electors from the smallest hamlet to the largest city made their way today to polling stations to record the "will of the people" in British Columbia's first post-war election.

The Coalition administration of Premier John Hart, formed after the last provincial election when neither the Liberals nor Conservatives were able to form a government, is seeking endorsation on its past record, with the C.C.F., under its 38-year-old leader, Harold Winch, as the major opposition.

A record vote by more than 350,000 persons has been predicted although much depends on the weather. General forecast for the day was rain throughout the province with possible snow in the Kootenay and Cariboo districts. Polls open at 11 a.m., E.S.T. and close at 11 p.m., E.S.T.

There are 147 candidates in the field for the 48 seats. Voting takes place in 41 constituencies. In Vancouver, where nine members are elected in four constituencies, more than 1,000 polling stations are set up.

Half-Million Votes

Actual votes to be cast are expected to run over 500,000, since electors in Vancouver and Victoria, where three members seek seats, have more than one vote. A total of 476,819 persons are registered. On top of this an estimated 50,000 registered service personnel are expected to cast ballots.

In the last provincial general election—Oct. 22, 1941—303,901 citizens cast 458,690 ballots on a registered list of 417,839.

Tallying of all civilian votes takes place immediately after polls close. Ballots of service personnel who registered by Sept. 17, the deadline, will be announced Friday or Saturday. Other service votes will be announced about Nov. 15, after officials have checked all the ballots.

Bitter Campaign

Throughout a bitter campaign Coalition and C.C.F. leaders have emphasized repeatedly that the main issue was capitalism versus socialism.

Premier Hart in a 43-point manifesto told of his government's record since formation four years ago and announced extensive plans for the future. He stressed that electors had to choose between "a sound business administration" and "a gamble in socialism".

C.C.F. Leader Winch promised that if a C.C.F. government is elected it will institute public ownership as far as is possible provincially and termed the formation of a coalition government "a marriage of convenience".

Coalition Held Power

At dissolution last Aug. 31, 30 members supported the Coalition administration, 18, having been elected as Liberals, 11 as Conservatives and one as a straight Coalition. In opposition were 15 C.C.F. members, one Liberal and one Labor. One seat was vacant.

Contesting for the 48 seats today are 47 Coalitionists; 48 C.C.F. nominees; 21 Labor-Progressive; 16 Social Credit and 15 others. There are 13 women, five of whom are seeking re-election.

Burglary Tools Litter Floor of Bancroft Plant

Bancroft — (Special) — What is believed by police to be an organized gang of thieves broke into the Canada Packers plant here Wednesday morning and escaped with little loot. According to Frank Chittick, Canada Packers manager, the only articles missing are a few dollars taken from the cash register.

James Coughlin, employee of Canada Packers, discovered the floor of the office littered with tools; the heavy safe moved from its place to a spot in the centre of the office floor, and the rifled cash register, when he arrived at work shortly after 6:30 a.m.

A heavy crowbar, a sledgehammer, a pick and a large wrench were found on the floor of the office, which intimated that the intruders had been scared away.

A cash register, which according to Chittick contained only a few dollars was wrecked and the contents taken.

The safe, which is five feet in height, had been dragged to the centre of the floor, and apparently defied all efforts of the nocturnal visitors to crack it. The combination had been wrecked and hinges broken off. Unsuccessful at this point the intruders turned their attention to the back of the safe where apparent efforts had been made to force entry at this point. A large table had been moved to the centre of the office.

Coincidental with the attempted theft, a gasoline pump, on the premises of Hugh Bance, local service station operator gave evidence of tampering. The lock was broken off but no fuel had been taken.

Entrance to the Canada Packers plant was effected through a back door and side door entrances. Both had been effectively jimmied. Provincial Police are investigating.

Millions in Europe Facing Starvation Warns Bevin

May Cause More Deaths Than Gun or Atomic Bomb

By JAMES McCOOK

Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 26. (CP)—A stark picture of human misery that is Europe in the wake of history's greatest war was painted in the House of Commons today by Foreign Secretary Bevin as he warned of coming hunger and privation that may cause a loss of life "more devastating than the gun or the atomic bomb".

Speaking in a debate on economic conditions in Europe, the Foreign Secretary told a sober Commons:

"While the Channel can be used to stop Germans, it cannot stop germs. You cannot limit the devastation of an epidemic by a frontier or a strategic poet".

Epidemic in Prospect

Warning of the danger of a "terrible epidemic" this winter in continental Europe, Mr. Bevin commented that if the United States Congress fails to grant the requested additional $1,600,000,000 for the United Nations, Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, U.N.R.R.A. "will be broke and the situation we will have to face in a few weeks' time will be disastrous."

(The recent U.N.R.R.A. conference in London asked that member countries allot $1,800,000,000 for next year's work. Herbert H. Lehman, director-general, has said that if the funds are not made available, U.N.R.R.A. must be liquidated "with a minimum job only half completed.")

Exporting countries must make a greater contribution to Europe's food problems, Mr. Bevin continued, saying:

"I should like to see much less wheat being fed to livestock in North America and more corn and other foodstuffs shipped from South America. But here you are in a difficulty. There is a great political difference with regard to the Argentine. My information is that the Argentine is burning corn now for fuel because she cannot get heavy oil. If we could put heavy oil and fuel into the Argentine and take the corn from the Argentine for the United States, Canada and Britain and then divert wheat to the people of Europe, it would be a perfectly common sense thing to do.

"But again politics intervene."

Strong Appeal Urged

When the foreign secretary finished his grave, lengthy address Sir Arthur Salter, Independent M. P. who was advisor to the Churchill Coalition government on European Reconstruction, urged the new Labor administration to make "a strong and urgent appeal" to the United States and Canada to join with Britain in alleviating hunger and distress in Europe.

He said shortages of food, coal and clothing would not be the prime factor if millions died, but that the chief blame would be on defects in administration and organization.

"There is enough food and clothing and coal," said Sir Arthur, "but it is a matter of getting it to the proper places."

He said the British government should appeal to our "Transatlantic Allies" to give priority over allocation to the home civilian populations for food and clothing in excess of pre-war average consumption. Sir Arthur added he did not suggest that Britons reduce their standard rations or stocks.

Michael Foot, Labor, said Russia should associate itself with Great Britain in making representations to Poland, Czechoslovakia and Hungary about the deportation of Germans which he said was a "wanton and deliberate creation of a new sore when all Europe is crying out from her wounds."

Mr. Bevin said 14,000,000 or 15,000,000 persons were "moving at once" in Eastern Europe. Ten million of these were displaced persons, labor slaves and prisoners of war.

"No one knows how many Germans have gone to work in Russia," said the foreign secretary.

BathBankHold-up Case Remanded

Napanee, Oct. 26 —(CP)— Three men charged with robbing $310,000 from the Royal Bank of Canada in nearby Bath yesterday obtained their fourth remand in court here on a request for additional counsel. The trial is set for Nov. 1.

The men are Ulysse Lauzon, 23, Joseph Peltier, 19; and Walter Koresky, 22, all of Windsor, Ont. Their counsel, H. A. McNeill of Kingston, Ont., told the court he was ready to start the trial, but the men said they were not prepared to make a plea until they could be represented by James S. Allan of Windsor.

Other charges against the men, read out in court at Lauzon's request, include a joint charge against the three of robbing the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Port Perry Aug. 6.

Peltier and Lauzon are also charged with a $75,000 robbery of the Canadian Bank of Commerce at Ayr, Ont., May 9, escape from Waterloo County jail at Kitchener, Ont., July 19, and theft of an automobile and automobile licence.

Peltier appeared in court on a stretcher. He was captured Aug. 31 in Montreal after being shot in the spine by a bank teller when he allegedly attempted to cash $6,000 in stolen bonds.

The Bath robbery Aug. 20 was the largest in Canadian history. Police said a total of approximately $500,000 was taken in the three hold-ups, of which $326,000 in bonds has been recovered.

News from every town and city across Canada is gathered, sifted, and transmitted daily to the Canadian Press newsroom in Toronto, and distributed from there to your local daily newspaper.

Law Enforcement Groups Concerned Over Ease Criminals Getting Weapons

Toronto, Oct. 26—(CP)—Gangs of armed thugs, usually after cash and securities, have turned to more lethal loot — guns.

Police reported today that dangerous criminals, many of them potential killers, are making a desperate bid to get their hands on all kinds of small arms, especially weapons brought back as souvenirs by servicemen returning from overseas.

Chief Inspector of Detectives Arthur Leavitt of the Toronto police force described as "ridiculous" a condition under which Toronto citizens are permitted to hold close to 20,000 guns, as recorded in the last registration of firearms.

Police said they regarded the guns in Toronto homes as a source of concern, as many of them have been stolen recently by housebreakers and other criminals.

In addition to housebreaking as a source of guns, criminals are also obtaining weapons from underworld sources, said Inspector Leavitt. He advocated penitentiary terms for known criminals found carrying guns.

Several weeks ago a gang smashed open a box car in Northwestern Ontario and stole several guns and a quantity of ammunition.

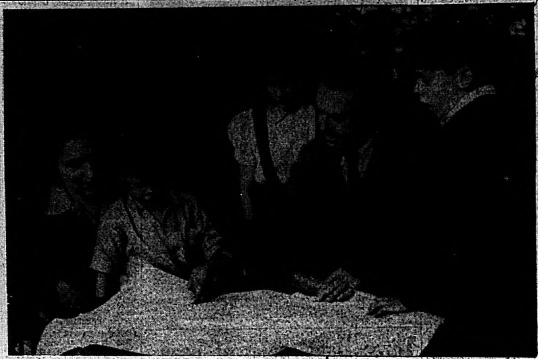
The determination shown by lawbreakers to arm themselves brought from law enforcement officials a demand that regulations governing the possession of firearms be tightened. Some said they favored limiting permits for small arms to watchmen and bank clerks.

Such a limitation was endorsed by Commissioner S. T. Wood of the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, who said the R.C.M.P. was "much concerned" with the problem of small arms in the hands of private citizens.

"In spite of army regulations and registration restrictions, many weapons are coming into the country as souvenirs," he said. "We would prefer to see that small ars are not permitted in private hands except as authorized by local authorities in cases of obvious necessity."

Confiscation of guns held by persons in the classifications of "non-essential" users was suggested in some quarters but Crown Attorney J. W. McFadden of Toronto said such action would be an intrusion on the rights of the citizen.

"If a criminal wants a gun, he will get it, and all the registration in the world won't prevent it," Mr. McFadden asserted.



"There's Ottawa," Field Marshal Alexander points out to his interested family as they study a map of Canada in the garden of their English home. Sir Harold will take up his duties as Governor-General of Canada early next year. Lady Alexander and their three children, Rose, Brian and Shane, will come with him to Rideau Hall.—(Canadian Army Overseas Photo).

GOVT. TO FORM CORPORATION TO HANDLE HOUSING

$25,000,000 Bill is Introduced into the House by Finance Minister Ilsley

By GEORGE KITCHEN

Ottawa, Oct. 26. (CP)—A bill aimed at creating a $25,000,000 government corporation to tackle Canada's No. 1 post-war problem —housing —has hurled the first barriers of parliamentary opposition.

The Bill, introduced in the Commons yesterday by Finance Minister Ilsley and given first reading after opposition criticism of the Government's Housing program, would establish a central Mortgage and Housing Corporation to operate the National Housing Act and provide discounting facilities for the loan and mortgage companies.

The Corporation, through which the government seeks to inject new energy into the drive for more homes, also would:

2.—Take over the administration of the National Housing Act in all fields except that of grants for slum clearance.

3.—Provide a supplementary source of credit for loan and trust companies to which they could turn in time of need.

4.—Provide those lending institutions with the kind of rediscount facilities made available by a central bank for the ordinary commercial banks.

5.—Through these facilities, give institutions confidence and thus enable them to meet more effectively the borrowing needs of the public.

6.—Take over some of the functions of the old Central Mortgage bank, formed in 1939 because of the "highly-unsound and top-heavy situation in farm mortgages and which now will be dissolved.

7.—Buy mortgages from the lending companies and resell them; lend to loan and trust companies on the security of mortgages and buy their debentures.

Turn to Naval Estimates

Following first reading of the Housing Bill at the evening session the House turned to the naval estimates in the War Appropriation Bill and heard from Navy Minister Abbott a statement that the question of extending instruction at the Royal Canadian Naval College at Royal Roads, B.C., was under consideration.

G. K. Fraser (PC—Peterborough West) said navy officers were too severe. A man was given a spell in the brig for having unshined shoes or loose buttons. He urged a revised strictly Canadian Naval Act. Mr. Abbott said the navy now had a streamlined wholly Canadian Naval Act.

B.C. Popular Vote Percentages

Vancouver, Oct. 26 —(CP)— Tabulation by The Canadian Press of 72 per cent of the popular vote in yesterday's British Columbia election shows that the Coalition Government won re-election with 55 per cent of the vote. C.C.F. candidates polled 39 per cent, Labor-Progressive three per cent, Social Credit 1.5 per cent and others 1.5 per cent.

In the 1941 election, Liberal and C.C.F. candidates each received 33 per cent of the vote, Conservatives 31 per cent and others three per cent.

The figures follow (percentages bracketed):

	1945	1941	1937
Coalition	179,062 (55)
C. C. F.	124,821 (39)	151,440 (33)	119,400 (29)

12,000 CANADIANS REACH HALIFAX ON GIANT SHIP

"Queen Elizabeth" Makes First Visit Since End of War

Halifax, Oct. 26. (CP) —The Queen Elizabeth, world's largest troopship, docked at Halifax today with 12,000 cheering Canadian servicemen back home from the war.

A pelting rain beat down on the broad decks of the gigantic liner, soaking the veterans who were out to get their first glimpse of the Dominion after years of war, and Halifax citizens who welcomed them back.

Six hundred civilians were included in the passenger list.

The 85,000-ton Cunard-White Star liner left Southampton last Monday on her first trip after she was turned over to Canadian authorities to bring Canada's fighting men home.

This was her first visit to Halifax since the end of the war and the lifting of the security blackout. Spectators who braved the rain lined the harbor front, nearby Point Pleasant Park, and other vantage points to catch a glimpse of her huge bulk and cheer lustily at the returning veterans.

2 Complete Units Aboard

Aboard the Ocean Queen were two complete 2nd Division units, the famed Fusiliers Mont-Royal of Montreal and the Toronto Scottish, veterans of the Dieppe Raid and the tough fighting through France, Holland and Germany.

Besides the formal civic welcome the Federal Veterans Affairs Minister, Hon. Ian Mackenzie was on hand to greet the veterans on behalf of Canada, while Maj.-Gen. H. A. Young, quartermaster general, waited to extend the Army's welcome.

Other units aboard included the 18th Canadian Field Company, Royal Canadian Engineers, from Calgary, and the 14th Field Company from Winnipeg and Regina. Four Royal Canadian artillery batteries aboard were the 2nd and 14th from Kingston, Ont., military district, the 5th of Montreal and the 26th of Windsor, Ontario.

The rest of the army men were repatriates headed for homes from Halifax to Vancouver, with more than 1,300 R.C.A.F. personnel, a few sailors, and some members of the Women's Services.

CANADA'S SENATE APPROVES UNITED NATIONS CHARTER

Both Defence and Skepticism of Russian Co-operation Heard in Debate

Ottawa, Oct. 26 — (CP) — Sharply aware of its imperfections, fervently hopeful of its possibilities, the senate approved the United Nations charter Thursday night after hours of debate that emitted both defence and skepticism of Russian co-operation which members recognized as vital to lasting peace.

It ratified Canadian participation in an organization which members conceded to have a broader and more realistic base than the League of Nations as its debate produced divergent views of the Soviet.

Senator A. K. Hugessen (L—Quebec), urging that Canada become an interpretative link between the Western powers and Russia, flatly declared that the alternative to Russian power in Central Europe was German power in Central Europe; that the Soviet moves had their counterpart in American plans for Atlantic and Pacific desire for security that was impelling every nation on earth.

Senator John Haig, Progressive Conservative leader, approved candid talking to Russia, approved telling her that democratic peoples did not sanction some of her methods. He didn't like Russian policies such as her move in treating with Germany to partition Poland in 1939. He was not sure of the Russian people being able to express their undoubted desire for peace under their system of government.

WINS ANNULMENT

Oaklane, Oct. 26 —(AP)— Lieut. Ethan Peter Bernstein won an annulment of his "Enoch Arden" marriage to Mrs. Laurie Cales yesterday. The 24-year-old woman married Bernstein in Oakland last July 9, believing her first husband, Lieut. James H. Cales, had been killed. Cales was recently released from a Japanese prison camp.

DR. ROBERT LEY HANGS SELF IN NUERNBERG JAIL

His Suicide May Mean Major Changes in the Preparations for Trial of Nazis

By GEORGE TUCKER

Nuernberg, Oct. 26 — (AP) — Bull-necked, lugubrious Dr. Robert Ley, luxury-loving chief of Hitler's labor front, hanged himself in his cell Thursday night at the Nuernberg jail, where he was awaiting trial as a war criminal.

Col. John Harlan Amen, interrogation chief, disclosed today that Ley had left a document entitled "My Political Testimony," which Amen said was "a terrific apology for his anti-Semitism." The message was directed to "my German people."

Ley also left two other documents, prepared in his cell. One was a will, addressed to his children; the other a long discourse directed to his three wives. A spokesman said he called upon his last wife not to remarry, "because I know you love only me."

His suicide may mean major changes in preparations for the trial of the 22 other leading Nazis incarcerated there. With the opening of the trial just 24 days away, Ley's death was believed to exclude the use of certain documents with high value as evidence, but pertaining only to the ex - labor boss.

Not Able to Revive Him

Ley was pronounced dead at 8:10 p.m. (2:10 p.m. E.S.T.) last night, after efforts to revive him failed. The official announcement, issued by prison commandant Col. C. B. Andrus, said the body was discovered by a sentinel who became suspicious when Ley remained seated motionless in his cell for more than two minutes.

Ley had wet the towelling to make sure the knot would not slip and had drawn the noose tight when he seated himself. The guard, who looked into the cell every 30 seconds, could see only the prisoner's knees. Apparently Ley had planned his suicide long and carefully.

JAMMED FULL OF FISH

London, Ont., Oct. 26 — (CP)— Great Slave Lake is "jammed full" of fish and may become one of the best sources of fresh fish in Canada, Dr. Walter H. Johnson, assistant Professor of Zoology at the University of Western Ontario, said yesterday. He made a survey of the lake's commercial potentialities last summer.

CHARACTER ACTOR DIES

Hollywood, Oct. 26 —(AP)— Don Costello, 42, character actor who has appeared in numerous films for the last 15 years, died yesterday. His widow, Louise, told police she found him lying across a bed, fully dressed. An autopsy was ordered.

British Columbia Coalition Govt. Returned to Power

Six Ministers Re-elected, Nine Gains From C.C.F.

Vancouver, Oct. 26. (CP)—The Coalition administration supported by Liberals and Progressive Conservatives began another term of government in British Columbia today decisively endorsed by the electors who rejected for a second time a C.C.F. bid for power.

Premier John Hart and six members of his cabinet were re-elected yesterday as his Coalition government scored nine gains from the C.C.F., most of them coming in the more-thickly populated constituencies in the southwestern corner of the province.

C.C.F. Leader Harold Winch was an easy winner in Vancouver East but his margin at the top was less than one third of his 8,600 majority in the 1941 general election.

The standings:

	1945	Dissolution	1941
Coalition ..	33	30
(Liberals) ..			21
(Conservatives) ...			12
C.C.F.	9	15	14
Labor	1	1	1
Doubtful ...	4	—	—
Ind. Lib. ...	—	—	—
Vacancy ...	—	1	—
Totals	48	48	48

The B.C. election was the third provincial vote in 11 days in which the government was re-elected. The first was in Manitoba where Premier John Carson's Liberal-Conservative Coalition government was returned to office Oct. 15, its strength virtually unimpaired and last Tuesday the Nova Scotia Liberal Government was re-elected with an unprecedented majority.

The C.C.F. did better in B.C. in 1941 when they were in a three-way battle with the Liberals and Conservatives. Although they lost nine seats to the Coalitionists, the C.C.F. salvaged some spoils of the battle by scoring gains in four constituencies, three of them widespread northern districts.

The coalition forces took the lead from the start and the re-election of the government was indicated by The Canadian Press at 10.05 p.m. P.S.T. (1:05 a.m. E.S.T.) two hours and five minutes after the polls closed.

Heavy rain and snow which swept the southern part of the province hampered voting and it appeared questionable whether the total of 453,893 votes cast in the 1941 election would be exceeded. Some 480,000 persons were eligible to mark ballots to elect 48 members in the 41 constituencies. Three have two members each and two have three.

Two outstanding candidates who met defeat were Hon. H. G. T. Perry, Minister of Education in the Hart Cabinet, and T. D. Pattullo, former Liberal premier of the province. Both lost to C. C. F. candidates, Mr. Perry in Fort George and Mr. Pattullo in Prince Rupert.

DAILY SALES RUN 10 MILLION AHEAD OF LAST DRIVE

Canadians Continue Fast Bond-Buying Pace With $87,549,550 on Thursday

Ottawa, Oct. 26 — (CP)—Continuing their fast bond - buying pace, Canadians subscribed $87,549,550 in the fourth day of the Ninth Victory Loan campaign Thursday to boost the national total in their biggest loan effort to date to $319,824,200, the National War Finance Committee reported today.

Daily sales continued to run $10,000,000 ahead of the Eighth Loan drive last spring in the Dominion's two-loans-in-one effort to raise a minimum of $1,500,000,000 for the financial problems of reconversion.

Thursday's total reached $87,549,550 compared with $76,243,950 on the corresponding date of the last drive and the cumulative National total for the first four days of Ninth Loan canvassing compared with $279,423,850 at the same point last spring.

A breakdown of Thursday's figures showed sales to individual Canadians at $48,128,600 compared with $37,706,550 last time and the individual total for the first four days stood at $167,527,600 — compared with $142,724,850.

Big Total in Three Days

Employees of the Canadian National Railways and Trans-Canada Air Lines subscribed a total of $4,535,300 in the first three days of the loan, an increase of more than $1,000,000 over the amount subscribed in the first three days of the Eighth Loan.

Armed Bandit Takes $200 From Grocery Store

St. Thomas, Oct. 26. (CP)—An armed bandit stole $200 from a grocery store at nearby Aylmer yesterday after forcing a girl clerk to open the cash register.

The clerk told police she was working in the back part of the store when she heard the cash register click. She hurried to the front and was confronted by the bandit who carried a revolver.

He ordered the girl to open the cash register, snatched about $200 from the till, and ran to the waiting car.

Car Hurtles 200 Feet Down Bluffs, Occupants Have Minor Injuries

The four, treated in hospital for shock and bruises, were Clifford Thompson, 33, William Stapley, 35, Helen McGraph, 30, and Mrs. Vera Kerr, 42, all of Toronto. Mrs. Kerr also had fractured ribs.

The four had been out for a ride. Heavy rain started to fall and when they neared the edge of the cliff the car started to skid to the edge as the brakes were applied.

The front of the car slowly dipped over the edge, then paralleled the wet clay sides for a distance of 100 feet. Striking its first objective, the vehicle hurtled for a second 100 feet before landing on twin spires of a clay formation called "the Churches."

When the car buried its nose in the soft clay, all four passengers were thrown into the front seat and the windshield was almost shattered. The two men, though badly shaken, tried to climb to the top of the bluffs but for most of the night the steep banks frustrated their efforts. They told police that before dawn they managed to climb about 40 feet before finding their path blocked.

At 7 a.m. today they finally managed to reach the top and went to a nearby house for help. Police said that had it not been for the twin spires of "the Churches", the vehicle would have crumpled on the beach or plunged into the lake.

The two women remained in their precarious position for eight hours before their male companions were able to notify police. Officers lowered ropes, climbed down to the car and then lifted the women by the ropes.

NOV. 12TH HOLIDAY FOR SCHOOL CHILDREN

School children across the province will have a holiday on November 12th in recognition of Armistice Day when peace articles were signed, signifying the end of the war of 1914-18. It has been announced by Department of Education officials in Toronto. Today word was received by L. A. Kells, secretary administrator of the local board of education that the holiday would be observed by school children.

TWO MORE GROUPS EMPLOYEES SURPASS PAYROLL OBJECTIVES

Two more groups of employees in the group payroll section of the Hastings' County Victory Loan campaign have surpassed their respective objectives in the 9th Victory Loan campaign, it has been announced by loan headquarters here.

The latest to achieve their goal in the loan are the Allied War Supplies Corporation and Redi-Heat of Deseronto, the former having achieved 110 per cent and the Deseronto firm 115 percent. Also in the group-payroll section, Trudeau Motor Sales of Belleville has now achieved 180 percent and is flying the special "V" flag significant of over-subscription.

CPL. JAS. CHRISTIE GIVEN AWARD

Corporal James (Pete) Christie, former member of the Canadian National Railways ticket office here has been awarded a "Mentioned in Despatches" according to information received in the city today.

The corporal who served with the Royal Canadian Army Service Corps during the war made his home in Toronto after being transferred to the Union Station ticket staff. He is well known in this city.

FRESH RASPBERRIES

Fresh raspberries for breakfast. That is the proud boast of Mr. James Halladay, 84-year-old resident of R. R. No. 7 Belleville. And he backed the statement up today by bringing to the news rooms of this newspaper clusters of the rich red fruit which are growing on his farm on the Belleville-Picton highway.

The berries are plentifully clustered on the canes; are of a normal size and color. A few weeks ago, Mr. Halladay saw one of his St. Lawrence apple trees burst forth into the fullness of bloom for the second time this year.

DISTRICT PLANTS ACHIEVE OBJECTIVES

Subscriptions of industrial plant employees at various plants throughout the county are coming through to help swell the Hastings' County Victory Loan total, it is reported through local campaign headquarters as two more Trenton plants have achieved their objectives. Benedict Proctor and Hinde and Dauch companies both of Trenton, were reported today as having achieved their objectives, the former having subscription of 110 per cent and the latter 100 per cent.

Went Overseas And Returns On Same Ship

Flt.-Lieut. Norman Bradford, son of Mr. and Mrs. David Bradford, Corbyville, arrived in Canada today after three years abroad in the R.C.A.F. He is one of 12,000 Canadians, who reached Halifax, this morning.

The young airman has had the experience of having left Canada for overseas and of having returned to Canada on the same troopship, the giant "Queen Elizabeth". This is her first trip to Canada since the end of the war.

Flt.-Lieut. Bradford entered the R.C.A.F. from the Belleville Collegiate Institute where he had been a student.

Magazines Will Publish Picture Of 'Lunge Catch

Far reaching advertising effects through the medium of a photograph of five men and six muskellunge are bringing some sort of fame to Belleville as the home of big fish.

Two well-known fishing and hunting magazines will "run" the picture in editions soon coming off the presses, while the publicity committees of the city and county will publish the picture in their 1946 tourist pamphlets.

The picture which was published in this newspaper a short time ago depicts the string of fighting muskies with their pround captors, Messrs. Maurice Callaghan, Maurice, Jr., "Mac" McMullen, Hazen Stairs, and John Black.

RIOTS FLARE IN BULGARIA

By WILLIAM B. KING

Sofia, Oct. 26 —(AP)— The most riotous demonstration Bulgaria has experienced in a year flared for more than an hour last night when supporters of the Fatherland Front and opposition followers clashed in front of the Hotel Bulgaria, residence of Mark Ethridge, who is touring the Balkans on a special American State Department mission.

Rival efforts to demonstrate to Mr. Ethridge that public support was behind their own political groups brought on the fighting. Unmoved, Mr. Ethridge reaffirmed his hope "to arrive at the approximate truth" by personal investigation.

Mr. Ethridge, a Louisville, Ky., publisher, was dining with Sofia journalists when the crowd began gathering. He declined to appear at a hotel window.

The throng had originally gathered to attend a memorial service for Grigor Chesmehndjiev, Bulgarian patriot whose funeral last Sept. 8 was the occasion for the first meeting of the political opposition in Bulgaria since the war.

During a speech by Kosta Loulchev, secretary of the Social Democratic Party, there were cries of "down with the opposition," "long live the Fatherland Front" and "long live Ethridge."

The crowd marched to the hotel where there were shouts for Ethridge.

Once a flying wedge — apparently made up of opposition supporters — sought to break up the solid phalanx which was cheering for the Fatherland Front.

Urban Teachers Of Centre Hastings Hold Meeting

The Urban Teachers of Centre Hastings met with Inspector A. W. McGuire at Tweed Consolidated School on Thursday evening.

The staff of the local school composed of Principal S. H. Connor, Mrs. F. McCoy, Miss G. Moran, Miss J. Love, Miss M. Elliott and Miss C. MacQuarrie had prepared an excellent program on timely topics. Mr. McGuire spoke to the teachers of the need of adequate equipment and library books if the school is to render its best service to the community.

Books on social studies, science, health, English and general reading were on display, as well as an exhibition of some of the children's work.

Teachers from Stirling were, Mr. C. A. Wells, principal; Mrs. C. A. Wells, Miss N. Montgomery, Mrs. Ruth Heath, Miss M. Armstrong, Mrs. B. Bell.

The Madoc teachers were, Mr. James Irwin, Miss L. Connor, Mrs. F. Drinkwater, Mr. W. Rankin and Mrs. W. Rankin.

Mrs. A. W. McGuire and Mrs. S. H. Connor, Tweed, also attended the meeting.

At the conclusion of the meeting refreshments were served in the Household Science room by the Tweed teachers.

New officers of the Urban Teachers' Association are, President, Mrs. Ruth Heath; Secretary, Miss M. Armstrong, Stirling.

20 Tons Relief Clothing Shipped

A weary National Clothing Drive committee rested today after several days of hard work collecting and sorting the large piles of clothing and footwear donated by city residents to the war destitute of Europe.

According to Chairman Jack White, two carloads of clothing and shoes, approximately twenty tons, were shipped from the Armouries on Wednesday night. It was reported erroneously that the loading and shipping would take place on Monday, but willing workers toiled till late Wednesday night at the job which is now completed.

Chairman White voiced the appreciation of himself and his committee at the fine co-operation shown by people from all walks of life both during the campaign, the collection and the hardest job of all, the sorting and baling of the huge piles of apparel.

"We are extremely grateful to the service club members and others, especially the many ladies who worked tirelessly during the sorting period," Mr. White said.

MARMORA

458 Attend Fowl Supper

Marmora.—The annual fowl supper under the auspices of St. Paul's Anglican Church, was marked with the usual good success. By seven p.m., there were 458 paid admissions an indication of the continued popularity of these events. In addition to the supper which was well catered for by the Ladies' Guild, there was a White Elephant table, at which Mrs. S. C. Boyd and Mrs. J. M. Brownlie presided and a fish pond staffed by members of the A.Y.P.A. Later in the evening, there was a euchre party and also a dance to further the receipts of the venture.

CISCOES REAPPEAR

St Thomas, Oct. 26 —(CP)— Ciscoe herrings, which until this fall had almost disappeared from the north shore waters of Lake Erie, have reappeared in large numbers. Port Dover gill netters are said to be fishing with only one-third of their twine, so numerous are the herring.

Britain and U.S. Tackling Urgent Jewish Problem

By E. FRASER WIGHTON
Reuters Political Correspondent

London, Oct. 26 — (Reuters) — A substantial advance in co-operation between Britain and the United States in tackling the urgent Jewish problem of which Palestine is the keystone is likely to be announced when Prime Minister Attlee makes his expected statement on the subject shortly in the House of Commons, it was believed here today.

Official quarters are silent upon the exchanges understood to have taken place between President Truman and Mr. Attlee. It has been clear for some weeks that the British government did not intend to make any public statement on Palestine until it was in a position to announce some measure of progress, towards at least an interim agreement.

Mr. Attlee's announcement, expected within a week or [illegible] [illegible] between Whitehall and Washington have been largely in the direction of seing how far Britain and the United States together could go in preparing the ground for a solution.

Details of the new moves remain undisclosed and there is no suggestion that Anglo - American co-operation has at this point committed either power to a defined program. The possibility that the problem might be one for reference to the United Nations as a whole has more than once been suggested and there seems to be nothing in the new steps anticipated which would preclude such a course at a later stage.

Three Days' Sales of Loan In County Total $826,750

Individual canvassers throughout the various canvassing districts of the county are doing a splendid job in obtaining subscriptions thus far in the 9th Victory Loan campaign it was reported today from headquarters of the Hastings' County Victory Loan committee at Belleville.

With an objective of $2,510,000 from paid canvassers, through banks and from the group payroll, already $730,750 had been subscribed by Thursday morning for nearly 30 per cent of the total, while sales in the payroll savings jumped total county sales to $826,750 or approximately 28 per cent of the total county objective of $3,600,000.

Going Well in Rural Areas . . . .

Encouraging as has been the response through banks and paid canvassers, the success of the loan in many of the rural districts has been especially encouraging.

Madoc and Marmora district for example has already achieved nearly one-half of its objective of $185,000 with 44 per cent as of Thursday morning, while the Sidney, Thurlow and Frankford area with 43 per cent of its $330,000 objective stood second.

Total subscriptions in Belleville, not counting the payroll savings subscriptions, amounted to $317,000, or 39 per cent of its $820,500 objective, while Trenton with $85,500 had 17 per cent of its objective.

Reports Delayed

In many instances payroll savings subscriptions are held up by the various plants who often send in no results to campaign headquarters until the entire plant is completely canvassed.

County salesmen who thus far have turned in a splendid performance in obtaining subscriptions include Rev. J. W. Flatt, who in two days exceeded his objective and now has over 140 per cent; D'Arcy Ketcheson, of Frankford, with 120 per cent and Leslie Ashley, of Madoc, who has not only achieved his objective but has been declared winner of first prize for the greatest percentage of applications against his given objective.

Two discharged veterans of the war who have turned in a good showing are, Richard Barrett, of this city, with 98 per cent of his objective, and Stanley Keon with 121 per cent of his objective.

With 73.[illegible] per cent of its objective attained, the Niagara, St. Catharines and Toronto Railway canvassing division headed the list. Prince Rupert Drydock was second with 51.3 per cent, and Moncton Shops were in third place with 37 per cent.

The biggest investors on Wednesday were the Imperial Life Assurance Company of Canada, Toronto, $7,500,000; Canadian Industries, Ltd., Montreal, $3,500,000; the City of Halifax and Eastern Trust Co., Halifax, both with $1,000,000; Page-Hersey Tubes, Ltd., Toronto, $1,000,000 and Canadian Kodak Co., Ltd., Mount Dennis, Ont., $1,250,000.

Past Minimum Objective

In Sudbury, workers of the International Nickel Company, Limited, have soared past their minimum $1,750,000 quota to reach a total of $1,833,800. Lake Shore Gold Mine employees are halfway to their $100,000 objective.

An Oshawa tot, five-year-old Dennis Farrow collected 500 50-cent pieces for Ninth Loan Bond, doing an easier job than in the last loan when he gathered 5,000 pennies.

The raffle promotion system was popular in many Ontario districts, with each Peterboro purchaser getting a ticket on $400 worth of merchandise and every Newmarket buyer a chance for an Ayrshire bull.

The Smiths Falls district doubled the pace of the Eighth Loan, buying $105,500 compared with $49,400 the last time. Lanark county achieved 18.2 per cent of its quota at noon.

The first Ontario unit to pass an objective was the payroll savings section in Brant County where more than the quota of $1,555,000 was pledged.

Among the armed services, the Navy became the second to exceed its quota when a total of $2,910,700 was reached for 104 per cent. Meanwhile the R.C.A.F. spurted to 146 per cent and the Army trailed with 96 per cent.

I. O. FROST
(Formerly of Belleville)

The death occurred in Edmonton, Alberta, yesterday of I. O. Frost, a former well known resident of this city. He was in failing health for some years.

The late Mr. Frost, who had reached the age of eighty-three years, was a son of the late Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Frost. His father served as a member of the Belleville council and he himself took a keen interest in civic affairs and represented Coleman Ward in the city council. During his residence here Mr. Frost was engaged as a manufacturer of show cases and left here about twenty-five years ago to reside in Edmonton. He was a member of the United Church and fraternally he was a life member of Moira Lodge No. 11 A. F. & A. M. Old friends in this city will regret to learn of his death.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Ada Canniff of this city; one son, Leon, and one daughter, Doris; three brothers, John Frost and Charles Frost, both of Belleville, and William Frost of Woodstock, N.Y.; two sisters, Mrs. Rose Abrams, Toronto, and Mrs. Frederick Cook, 284 William Street, Belleville.

The funeral will take place in Edmonton.

DR. ROBERT LEY

Others Not Informed

The 22 other top-ranking Nazi defendants were not informed of Ley's death. His body was removed to the prison morgue and buried early today in an unmarked grave.

A fanatical Nazi, Ley rose from the party ranks to a position of power as a Hitler lieutenant.

In his capacity as labor chief, Ley obliterated Labor unions ruthlessly and told all union members except Jews they were automatically members of the labor front. Those who protested either were killed or thrown into concentration cumps.

He created the "strength through joy" movement and often lectured women on the advisability of bearing illegitimate children. He also battled the Catholic Church and led the Teutonic Faith Movement, with which the Nazis sought to supplant Christianity.

Nuernberg, Oct. 26. (AP) — German Field Marshal Karl Rudolf Gerd Von Rundstedt and Albert Kesselring will go on trial for their lives as war criminals after the historic Nuernberg trials are concluded, it was learned authoritatively today.

Under the provisions of Appendix B of the war crimes indictment handed down in Berlin Oct. 18, trial is mandatory for both Von Rundstedt, who planned the Christmas breakthrough in the Ardennes last year, and "Smiling Albert" Kesselring, whose stubborn defensive tactics cost thousands of Allied lives in Italy.

Appendix B refers to the general staff and high command of the German armed forces. It specifically cites all officers who held German Army, Navy or Air Force supreme commands between February, 1938, and March, 1945.

The four major powers who drew the indictment—Britain, the United States, Russia and France—maintain that all persons who held supreme commands assumed a major responsibility "for the planning, preparation, initiation and waging of illegal wars as set forth in counts one and two of the indictment, and for war crimes and crimes against humanity involved in the execution of the common plan or conspiracy set forth in counts three and four of the indictment".

Not Less Guilty

The fact that Von Rundstedt and Kesselring were not included in the original list of 24 indicted as war criminals does not mean that they are regarded as any more or less guilty than the defendants already named, informed sources said.

From the beginning, it was a fight to get any military figures included on the original list. United States representatives' argument that high Nazi military commanders should be included in the group to face trial at Nuernberg Nov. 20 was reported to have met opposition from British, French and, in some cases, United States officers.

The first vote was three to one against naming such military figures. After extensive argument and consideration, a final vote showed three to one in favor of making them defendants. It was after this vote that Col.-Gen. Gustav Jodl and Field Marshal Wilhelm Keitel were added to the list.

THE MASTER HAT OF CANADA

GOVT. TO FORM

Thomas Kidd, (PC—Kingston) asked if proposed Fleet Air Arm recruits would be trained at Collins Bay near Kingston where Royal Navy men were trained during the war.

Mr. Abbott said the Fleet Air Arm now was the subject of discussions between the Air Force and the Navy. It was possible the Fleet Air Arm personnel would train with Air Force personnel on east and west coasts. He did not know where the last stage of Fleet Air Arm training would be carried out.

It was anticipated that many Canadians in the Royal Navy Fleet Air Arm would join the Canadian Fleet Air Arm.

Picture of Situation

Gordon Isnor (L — Halifax) drew attention to the explosion at the Bedford Basin magazine near Halifax this summer and Mr. Abbott said all possible steps were being taken to prevent a recurrence.

In introducing the new housing bill, Mr. Ilsley gave this picture of the housing situation in Canada:—

1. It may be necessary to institute some form of control over the prices of new houses to give purchasers some of the protection at present being extended to tenants.

2. Eviction and rental controls and emergency shelter regulations would remain in effect for the moment.

3. The goal of 50,000 new dwelling units for the first full construction year following VE-Day last May 8 would be "substantially attained."

4. No evidence has been found to support charges that the Crown Company Wartime Housing Limited was stock-piling scarce materials in anticipation of requirements.

5. From evidence available it was clear a large house-building program was under way.

6. The lumber situation was "very much improved," although brick still was in short supply because of labor shortages. However, output of brick was rising.

Mr. Ilsley said Canada was on the verge of a "very large, and possibly an unprecedentedly large," housing program and it would have been necessary in any case to enlarge greatly the housing administration.

In establishing the mortgage discounting facilities, the government had in mind particularly the desirability of maintaining an "adequate" flow of mortgage loans in all parts of the country and of working steadily in the direction of lower rates and more suitable terms on all kinds of mortgage lending, both rural and urban.

Donald Fleming (PC — Toronto Eglinton), official opposition spokesman in housing matters, described the government's administration of the National Housing Act as a "dismal failure" and said there would have to be more sympathetic approach to the whole housing program if anything was to be done.

Reserves Judgment.

He would reserve judgment on the new bill and he hoped that there would be representation for women and war veterans in the new corporation which it aimed at establishing.

Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre) expressed support for the legislation but said he felt it did not go far enough toward solving the housing problem. Sums of $25,000,000 which would be the total capitalization of the new corporation, were not enough for the task.

CANADA'S SENATE

History May Prove Point

Senator Thomas Crerar (L—Manitoba) asserted Russia had treated with Germany in 1939 because Munich had convinced her the Western powers would not challenge Hitler. History would prove that if they had fought Germany then, Russia would have joined them.

Of the United Nations Organization, members heard:—

Senator C. P. Beaubien (PC—Quebec) characterize its veto powers as granting the Great Powers an "Oligarchy far removed from Democracy" but submit "we have lost nothing" because a break among those Powers would destroy the charter and all it represented.

Senator Norman Lambert (L—Ontario) depict it as "the best that can be expected under the circumstances."

Senator Haig declare San Francisco would "influence Canadian foreign policy for years."

Wonder Charter Emerged

Senator Crerar contended that the "wonder" of San Francisco was that, despite the multitude of differences and difficulties, a charter had emerged at all.

Speaker J. H. King, a San Francisco delegate, predict that the United Nations assembly would eventually, supercede the security council—dominated by the Great Powers—as its "leading force."

Of the atomic bomb, they heard:

Senator Beaubien declare the world had to find peace because war had become synonymous with suicide.

Senator Lambert cite the warning that the next war might well be over before the United Nations machinery could move to stop it.

BRITISH COLUMBIA

Pattullo Defeated.

Mr. Pattullo, former Liberal party leader, left the party in 1941, in protest against formation of the Coalition government when neither Liberals nor Conservatives had enough members to form a government. He ran yesterday as an Independent and was beaten by W. H. Brett.

The Coalitionists received sweeping approval of their bid for re-election on the basis of their record during the last four years and the promise to continue a "sound, business administration." The defeated C.C.F. group had asked for support for their plan to institute Socialism as far as possible provincially.

The dissident candidates were turned down emphatically. Two Independent - Progressive Conservatives, two Independent Liberals and two "People's C. C. F." nominees were defeated.

All 21 Labor-Progressive candidates failed to gain election as did 15 Social Crediters. The only break in the Coalition and C.C.F. monopoly of seats in the new legislature was the victory of Thomas Uphill, veteran Labor M.L.A. for Fernie in the Crows Nest Pass coal-mining area.

Only Two Women Win

Sent back to the legislature with Premier Hart, Liberal leader, were Attorney-General R. L. Maitland, Progressive Conservative chieftain, and five other cabinet ministers — Trade Minister Carson, Labor Minister Pearson Agriculture Minister MacDonald Lands Minister Kenny and Works Minister Anscomb.

Hon. Norman Whittaker, Speaker of the last legislature, was re-elected, turning back the main Independent - Progressive Conservative threat, Maj. L. H. MacQueen, in Sannich.

Only two of 13 women candidates were successful, Mrs. T. J. Rolston and Mrs. Nancy Hodges, two Coalitionists who were re-elected.

None of the C.C.F. and only three of the Coalition candidates whose election was indicated on the basis of the civilian vote appeared in any danger of having their election reversed by the service vote.

Active service personnel voted for candidates in their home constituencies. Count of the balloting of service personnel who registered for the vote will be announced tonight or tomorrow. Results of the non-registered service vote is expected between Nov. 15 and Nov. 25.

No official estimates have been made of the total service vote but unofficial estimates ranged as high as 60,000 with most of the votes concentrated in the urban ridings of Vancouver where all candidates have comfortable margins now.

Military Effort Of New Zealand And Australia

Auckland, N.Z., Oct. 26 (CP Cable)—New Zealand, with a population of little more than 1,500,000, sent 135,000 men overseas for war service during the second Great War, it was announced today.

Casualties, killed, wounded and missing, were 37,497, or 28 per cent.

In the First Great War, when the population approximated 1,250,000, New Zealand sent 100,444 men to war, suffering casualties of 55,155, or 58 per cent.

In the recent conflict, 10,072 men were killed compared with 16,781 in the First Great War.

The Australian News and Information Bureau in New York said yesterday that Austra which has a population of 7,30 000, provided almost 1,000,0 men for the fighting forces in th Second Great War. Australian casualties totalled 95,561.

Noted Service to Dairy Industry

In the recent retirement of James L. Irwin, dairy produce grader in the Belleville district for the past 23 years, the cheese industry in the Central Ontario district has lost an official whose first and foremost interest was the dairy cow and the manufacture of high quality cheese.

In his official capacity as dairy produce grader Mr. Irwin has done much to raise cheese making standards and to encourage the output of high quality cheese. He was well liked both by cheese makers and patrons who placed in Mr. Irwin their full confidence in fair and just grading. His judgment of cheese quality was widely known and appreciated. On many occasions he had acted as cheese judge at the Toronto Exhibition and at the Royal Winter Fair.

But Mr. Irwin's interest in the cheese making industry went further than being a government grading official. True, he had acted in that capacity since the institution of grading back in 1923, but it was largely through Mr. Irwin's effort that the British Empire Dairy Show at Belleville was born and since its inception he has been one of its most enthusiastic officials. As honorary president of the show he is at present working on arrangement for this autumn's exhibition.

In the opinion of local dairy experts the British Empire cheese show has been largely responsible for the marked improvement in the style and finish of cheese in the Central Ontario district. This exhibit has demonstrated to makers the beneficial effect of stylishly finished cheese when appearing in a show room. It has created an incentive among makers to exercise proper attention in dressing their cheese and the show has developed a friendly competitive spirit among the makers.

The dairy industry in the Central Ontario district is indebted to Jim Irwin for his constructive interest in the betterment of cheese making.

Militarily Strong

President Truman is acting on the principle that the United States must remain strong militarily in order that the future of the United States as well as of the rest of the world may be safe. He knows that the weakness of the democratic nations in military preparedness exposed the world to the most powerful challenge of all time from the power-lust, loot-quest and the evil heart of Nazi Germany and imperialistic and militarist Japan.

Mr. Truman favors military training for youth between seventeen and twenty years of age. His plan calls for a small army, navy and marine corps, greatly strengthened national guard and organized reserve with a general reserve of all the male citizens of the United States who have undergone training.

He said that "it is only by strength that we can impress upon possible future aggressors that we will tolerate no threat to peace or liberty." He pointed to the need of emergency strength and noted that "the great difference between having universal training and having no training whatever is that in time of emergency those who would be selected for actual military service would already have been basically trained. The difference may be as much as a year's time. That difference may be the margin between the survival and the destruction of this great nation."

The President knows that in the war so recently closed, there was fortunately a time in which the United States was able to make a great stride in preparation for the inevitable conflict. There was a time when Britain stood alone against the monster might of Germany. Such a time of grace might not and probably would not be available again. Therein lies the need for preparedness.

Only a week ago General Marshall speaking on the effect the atomic bomb would have on any possible war stated that "it has increased the necessity for greater immediacy in the availability of a force to be used at the outset of an emergency for the reason that we would have to act quickly in order to terminate a destructive attack of atomic nature. . . . It would appear to be all the more necessary to be capable of aggressive offensive action because of the terrific destruction that would be carried out to the elimination of the enemy's power to launch such bombs by plane or rocket or other device."

Mr. Truman says that the general reserve "would be available for rapid mobilization in time of emergency."

This Month of October

October soon ends with Hallowe'en, an apt close to a month of varied attractions, completed harvests, work wound up for the season, days of preparation for the coming of the colder months and satisfaction that everything is in readiness for winter which must come.

October has been set in a year of unusual vagaries of weather conditions, it has given some wet weather but also some of the most to be desired. There have latterly been days suggestive of Indian Summer, mild and with a delicate touch of fading glory soon to disappear in the depth of winter. There was a spell of springlike winter stretching on through the early part of this year but spring itself had a cold touch, summer brought ideal living conditions yet the crops bore the marks of the influence of the unseasonable weather in the early spring.

What will the winter bring? Will the mild close of last winter bring a reaction in more severe weather in the coming months? Autumn has yet almost two months to go but a good share of that is what is ordinarily known as early winter. If the law of averages is to be expected there is then a possible chance of colder weather. But the weather can be depended upon to be wilful and perform not quite according to the predictions of anyone.

About this month there is a sense of plenty and of richness. The weather is mild yet at night there are hints of the chill and frost to come. Nature is at rest for another year, except in its outer aspects, its rain or sleet or snow, its winds and its cold in the months ahead. Nature seems to be just waiting, her work done and she is entering into rest from the period of growth. There is a sense of meditation that broods over all the acts and thoughts of humans and over nature at this time.

This season has not the wildness of some other times of the year. There is nothing of atomic explosiveness about these days for that remains for other seasons when there is the wild night, the cold day, when the earth is lashed and nature is in a mood of tempestuousness.

Rather October furnishes the mellow season with its moods of rest and richness and fullness and its pervading spirit of meditativeness which lends many to ponder over the universe, its works and its ways and to gain a possible insight into the spirit of life at this season, at once so glorious in its coloring and in its suggestiveness.

Odd Prayers

Some day I should like to edit an anthology of strange prayers, says a writer in The London New Statesman. There is the famous prayer that began: "Doubtless, O Lord, Thou has seen it reported in today's Manchester Guardian . . ." There is the case of the Scottish minister who, with Queen Victoria in his congregation, exhorted Her Majesty "to go forth like a he-goat upon the mountains." The latest addition to my collection comes from a reader who heard the vicar at his parish church pray for "those who are in any way afflicted or distressed in mind, body or estate—especially those who will give their votes this week."

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why are Italians sometimes called "dagos"?

"Dago" is believed to be a corruption of "Diego," a common Spanish first and Christian name equivalent to "James" in English.

So many Spaniards bear the name that "Diego" was at one time a generic name in England for any Spaniard.

Thomas Dekker, the English dramatist, wrote as early as 1613: "The Diego (the Spaniard) was a dapper fellow."

For more than a century English and American seamen have applied "dago" to Spanish, Portuguese, Italian and other dark-complexioned people from southern Europe.

In the same manner they apply "Dutchman" indiscriminately to Germans, Norwegians, Swedes and Danes as well as to the natives of the Netherlands.

In "Two Years and a Half in the Navy" (1832) an American named Enoch Cobb Wines, referring to the Spanish inhabitants of Minorco, wrote:

"These Degos, as they are pleasantly called by our people, were always a great pest when we were in the harbor of Mahon."

John Russell Bartlett did not include the term in the first edition of his "Dictionary of Americanisms," published in 1848, but in the fourth edition of that work, published in 1877, he noted:

"Dagos, originally people of Spanish parentage, born in Louisiana, now applied there to all Italians, Sicilians, Spanish and Portuguese."

Later "dago" came to be applied specifically in the United States to the lower class of Italian laborers and immigrants.

As such is acquired a stinging, contemptuous connotation that is keenly resented by those to whom it is applied and consequently it is now seldom used except carelessly or when an insult is intended.

Conference Spotlight

By C. R. BLACKBURN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Quebec, Oct. 26—(CP)—The Food and Agriculture Organization Conference of the United Nations now in session here at the historic Chateau Frontenac can do little or nothing about the starvation problems of millions now suffering, but the need for such action keeps crowding in on all committee discussions.

This gives rise to the assumption in many quarters that the new organization has to do with the feeding of the 180,000,000 now on the starvation border line in Europe and probably more than that in Asia.

The F.A.O. can only plan for long term programs of advice to governments to lead them to adoption of agriculture, fishing and forestry policies designed to so increase production and improve distribution that no peoples anywhere in the world need be undernourished or lack shelter.

The immediate problem of relieving these suffering want and privation because of the wastage and wreckage of war must be handled by individual governments and the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Probably everyone who has heard of India knows that dried cow manure is used for fuel in that country but few would realize the significance of that fact to agriculture. Sir Herbert Howard, adviser on the Indian delegation, told a committee that if natural fuels could be made available to the people of India the saving in cow dung would fertilize 13 per cent of India's food producing acreage.

The F.A.O. conference is following the pattern of most United Nations conferences in one respect particularly. A small army of correspondents from many nations attend the opening then, after a few days, begin to disappear like snow in midsummer as editors lose interest and send them elsewhere.

SUNK BY BOMB

San Francisco, Oct. 26—(AP)—Crew members of the Malama, repatriated from a Japanese prison camp, revealed Wednesday that the Matson Line ship which disappeared in the Pacific early in the war with Japan, was sunk by Japanese bombs dropped by a carrier plane. Disappearance of the ship was one of the mysteries of the early days of the war. All hands were captured by the Japs.

STRYCHNINE POISONING, LOCKJAW AND "HYDROPHOBIA"

A characteristic sign of strychnine poisoning is the occurrence of spasms or convulsions, and in some instances strychnine poisoning is mistaken for "lockjaw" (tetanus) because spasms or convulsions characterize tetanus too. In one instance a little tot playing about the house came upon a package of red sugar coated tablets of strychnine and ate some as "candy." Presently the child went into convulsions, unfortunately, at the time, there was a tremendous "mad dog" campaign on and the pragmatic health department seized upon the opportunity to stampede the credulous public—the health department doctors (usually doctors, who, for want of a practice of their own, are glad to take a job that assures them the means of living), anxious to please the politician in control, "pronounced" the case "hydrophobia"—and just rabies, if you will notice, but "hydrophobia" which the politicians prefer as being, in their shrewd estimation, the more frightful term—started Pasteur treatment immediately, but pointed out with regret that it was 'too late', for the child succumbed within 24 hours.

It was odd, that case of health department "hydrophobia". According to the child's parents the child had been apparently perfectly well up to the abrupt occurence of the first convulsion. The parent knew of no wound, scratch or bite by dog or animal altho a puppy in the neighborhood often played with the children. There was nothing wrong with the puppy and the parent knew of no dog or other animal in the neighborhood that was vicious or behaving strangely. The parent admitted that there was a box of red sugar coated tablets in a cupboard, left there for a year or two, and the children could have found them.

The very abruptness of onset of the spasms or convulsions, out of a clear sky, strongly suggests strychnine poisoning and weighs almost as strongly against the inference that the child has any illness or disease.

If lockjaw (tetanus) occurs, following some wound, puncture, scratch or abrasion, there is usually if not always a premonitory or invasion stage, lasting a few days, during which there is vague "sore throat" or complaint of some stiffness in the neck or tightness in the jaw or inability to open the mouth as widely as before and perhaps some difficulty in chewing and swallowing.

All of the somewhat stereotyped textbook descriptions of alleged rabies in man—it is notable that even Dr. Osler's Practice of Medicine is no exception—are composite pictures, made up from what this and that author has said about it. However, the textbooks all agree that there is a premonitory stage lasting at least several days, during which the patient is irritable, sleepless, apprehensive, depressed or melancholy and, as Oscar expresses it, "has a constant sense of impending danger." No spasm or convulsion in any description of human rabies or "hydrophobia" until a later stage.

As for that "constant sense of impending danger"—no wonder the victim of "hydrophobia" phobia is so scared. Isn't that what the health department people stage these periodic mad dog scares for?

King Wants Atomic Energy Used Solely For Peace Promotion

London, Oct. 26 — (CP) — The King last night called upon the world's scientists and statesmen to use atomic energy "solely for the promotion of peace and raising of standards of life everywhere."

He addressed students of the Imperial College of Science and Technology at its centenary celebration. His broadcast speech was carried to Canada and the United States.

"Regard your knowledge and your skill always in the light of a trust for the benefit of humanity and thereby ensure . . . that science may never be put to uses which offend the higher conscience of mankind," the King told the students.

For world statesmen, he asked for the acquisition of wisdom so "the means may be found, ere it is too late, of insuring that new knowledge recently gained is used solely for the promotion of peace and the raising of standards of life everywhere."

FINDS RADIO SET

Lindsay, Oct. 26 (CP)—A schoolboy found a transmitter radio set attached to a parachute in a tree top near here. It was learned that the set was released by balloon Sept. 18 by the United States Weather Bureau at Buffalo, N.Y., and parachuted down automatically when the balloon apparently burst.

Only Miracle Can Prevent Tragedy Of Humanity in Europe This Winter Unparalleled in Our Time

London, Oct. 26 (CP Cable)—George Mooney of Montreal, chief executive officer of the European office of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration, said today that "only a miracle will prevent a human tragedy in Europe this winter unparalleled in our time."

Just returned from an extensive inspection tour of western and central Europe and the Balkans, Mr. Mooney said in an interview that "we are dangerously close to winning a very hollow victory" unless the flow of relief supplies to war-stricken peoples can be maintained and in some countries increased. He added:

"The worst drought in a quarter century has resulted in harvests of 50 to 60 per cent of normal. Millions are homeless and existing in holes dug in the rubble of their ruined cities and towns. Hundreds of thousands still are trekking the roads looking for a place to live.

"There simply is no coal for domestic heating. Water, sewer and gas systems either are not operating or are in imperfect repair. Meat is unobtainable in many places. Even vegetables are difficult to get. . . . Tuberculosis and other pulmonary diseases are on the increase. It is a bleak, depressing scene."

Mr. Mooney said the need for everything—food, medical supplies, clothing, footwear—is critical. "They need them now and January and February will be too late."

War Surplus Materials Bring $34,173,800

Montreal, Oct. 25 (CP) —War surplus disposals in Canada to date have realized $34,173,800, it was announced today by War Assets Corporation, the government owned company entrusted with the sale of surplus war materials.

The average monthly disposals have increased from approximately $825,000 in the first year of operation to more than $4,000,000 in the first six months of this year. The swing is still upward.

Sales to date of the various classifications of materials were, in round numbers, as follows:

Machine tools and equipment, $4,772,300; real estate and buildings, $4,181,100; ships and equipment, $3,472,700; scrap, $3,468,500; aircraft, parts and equipment $3,415,100; metals, $3,031,300; miscellaneous consumer goods, $2,575,500; automotive equipment $2,508,700; clothing and footwear, old and new, $2,467,300; miscellaneous machinery $2,275,700; hardware, plumbing, electrical goods, $1,147,700; office and camp equipment, $410,500; radio and radar equipment, $832,400; auction sales, $115,000.

Most of the clothing and footwear went to relief agencies for use in Europe.

Although a number of types of aircraft, declared surplus by the R.C.A.F. have been disposed of by sale both in Canada and beyond, there is only one type remaining in stock that is licensable in Canada by the Department of Transport, which now is available for purchase from War Assets Corporation, it was stated today at the head office of the corporation.

Jury Refuses To Reduce Charge As Agreed Upon

Welland, Ont., Oct. 26 —(CP)—A motion made by Defence Counsel H. A. Rose, K.C., and endorsed by Crown Prosecutor Hugh Donald, asking that the manslaughter charge against Albert Reuben Barton, 28, of Niagara Falls be reduced to common assault to which he would plead guilty, was refused by the Supreme Court jury here, after a full morning of consideration and the trial continued with Barton giving evidence.

Mr. Justice E. R. E. Chevrier had charged the jury that he endorsed the plea of common assault since it was in his personal opinion that the charge, laid in connection with the death of George Davyes, 48, was nothing but a drunken brawl. The jury asked to hear more evidence before making a decision, and after further consideration asked to go on with the manslaughter charge.

Taking the stand, Barton told the court he was "definitely not sober" when the fight occurred, and that he had spent the evening in Niagara Falls, N.Y., drinking beer. He met Davyes, whom he described as being under the influence of liquor, coming back across the bridge, and Davyes told the accused man he "would get him." After crossing to the Canadian side of the bridge, a scuffle between the women in the two parties ensued, and Davyes came from behind and struck Barton. He hit back and they both fell to the ground, Barton testified. Later, Davyes again came at him and struck him and Barton pushed him under the chin with the heel of his hand.

Davyes staggered backward and fell, striking the cement sidewalk with his head, Barton, not thinking Davyes was badly injured, left the scene and went to the house of a friend, where he was picked up by police shortly after.

In evidence in the case yesterday, Pathologist Dr. Lorne Whitaker of St. Catharines had testified that Davyes died as the result of a hemorrhage caused by a wound on the back of his head, believed to have been caused when he fell.

WEDDINGS

BRONSON—ALLISON

A pretty Autumn wedding took place on Wednesday, October 10, at the United Church, Boulter, when Eva Elaine, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Allison, Boulter, Ontario, became the bride of F./O. Lewis L. Bronson, son of Mrs. J. D. Pennock and the late J. L. Bronson, Boulter, Ontario. The groom's uncle, Simon Bronson, of Trenton, officiated at the ceremony.

The church was tastefully decorated with pink and white asters, ferns and foliages. Miss Jennie Stringer presided at the organ.

The bride, who looked charming in a floor-length gown of white satin and net, with finger-tip veil held by a tiara headdress, entered the church on the arm of her father to the strains of the Bridal Chorus from Lohengrin. She carried a bouquet of Sweetheart roses and fern.

The bridesmaid, Miss Reta Nix, cousin of the bride, wore a floor-length gown of heavenly blue satin with shoulder-length veil of net. She carried a bouquet of pink roses and fern.

Little Miss Marjorie Bronson acted as flower girl, wearing a long gown of pink organdy over satin and carried a nosegay of baby 'mums and carnations.

The groom was attended by his brother, Mr. Blair Bronson. The ushers were Mr. Boyd Beckel and F./O. Jack Dunstan.

During the signing of the register Misses Mildred and Thelma Bronson, also in floor-length gowns, sang "Dreamland of Love". As the wedding party left the church Mendelssohn's Wedding March was played.

Refreshments were later served to about fifty guests at the home of the bride's parents. The bride's mother received in a flowered silk jersey frock with corsage of roses, assisted by Mrs. Pennock, mother of the groom, wearing black trimmed with fuchsia and a corsage of roses. The toast to the bride was proposed by student minister, Mr. Beckel and responded to by the groom.

The groom's gift to the bride was a chest of flatware. The bride's gift to the bridesmaid was a pair of pink gold earrings set with brilliants; to the flower girl, a silver bracelet. The groom's gift to the groomsman was a leather wallet and to the ushers, a leather wallet and lighter.

Following a dance given in Fraser Lake School, the happy couple left for Cochrane and points north, the bride travelling in a suit of nut brown gabardine with lime accessories.

The couple received many beautiful and useful gifts. They will reside in North Bay.

Guests from a distance were from Toronto, Belleville, Brighton, Wellington, Trenton and Bancroft.

Women's Activities

WOMEN'S LEAGUE

The October meeting of the Catholic Women's League was held in Sacred Heart School on Tuesday evening, with a large attendance of members and the President, Mrs. E. D. O'Connor occupying the chair. Mrs. O'Connor gave a very interesting report of the Diocesan Convention held at Smiths Falls on October 3rd and 4th. Mrs. Rose Johnston and Miss Mary Hughes gave reports of Red Cross and war work.

Rev. Father Farrell then addressed the members urging them to renew their efforts to make the coming bazaar a greater success than before. He also recommended the saying of the Holy Rosary in the home during the month of October. A letter of resignation from the Treasurer, Mrs. K. Macdonald was read by the secretary. Mrs. Macdonald is leaving to reside in London with her husband who has recently returned from overseas. The president expressed her regret in losing Mrs. Macdonald and Rev. Father Farrell also expressed regret at her departure and paid tribute to her help in parish activities. Mrs. Charles Crawford was appointed treasurer for the remainder of the term.

Tickets were then passed out to the members to be sold on a pair of white wool blankets which will be raffled at the bazaar. A few games of bingo were played and the meeting closed with the National Anthem.

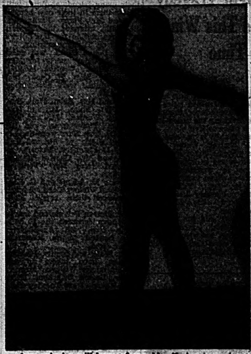
Good Posture a Beauty "Must"



Arm-swinging will have a favorable effect on your stance

By HELEN FOLLETT

ONCE again, your good looks preacher is going to harp on the subject of posture, which is not only an appearance of courage and energy. A woman who has poise, style and confidence, carries herself pridefully. The head is never drooping, shoulders are never thrown forward. With head balanced, chest lifted, the shoulders assume an easy, natural position.

The shoulders must not be held rigidly because if they are, a woman looks bossy. If they are not up to par, try this exercise:

Shoulder Exercise

Lie flat on the floor, feet about fifteen inches apart. Lift the hips, making a bridge of your body. The weight will be mostly on the shoulders. Roll from one side to the other, pivoting on the heels. Do not use your hands for support. This is a splendid method of getting rid of adipose tissue that has collected on the upper portion of the back.

Arm-swinging exercises will have a favorable effect upon the chest as well as the shoulders. Straighten out arms like a propeller and pivot forward, far to the side, far back, then return to first position. This movement is much like lantern swinging. Six times with one arm, six with the other and repeat.

Good posture is impossible unless the spinal column is fully extended. Do that, hold in the abdomen, and the rest of the frame will fall into line. If the body slumps, all manner of defects can come upon one. Results include imperfect breathing, causing poor aeration of the blood with its consequences; digestive troubles due to lack of oxygen.

With good posture, the internal organs fall naturally into their true positions, breathing is deep and full, bringing good coloring to the complexion.

The Marry Go Round

Classifying Wives

I sometimes wonder if the average man would rather be married to what is popularly known as a Perfect Wife, who would have a hot dinner waiting for him promptly on The Minute every evening, or to one of the more uncertain sort, who might have a surprise waiting for him, just every so often.

Some men value creature comforts and punctuality above all things. They like to punch a time clock at the old front door, and to be greeted by the fragrant aroma of a broiling steak or a roasting fowl.

Perhaps that's because their wives have trained them that way. But you'll seldom meet any carefree bachelors who enjoy dining every night at the same place, at the same moment.

It has been said that in certain instances the Perfect Wife is so punctual about meal hours, and so injured or so shocked when a man is twenty minutes late, that home hours must be as exacting as army hours.

Of course, it is comforting to go into a spic-and-span house and to know just where to find your slippers and where to put your hand on the bi-carbonate and to be sure that the buttons will be on your shirts.

But some people question whether a man really enjoys having a woman fussing around, picking up things and looking hurt when he spills his ashes on the carpet? Does he, they ask, get a lot of comfort out of a house that is kept going like a boiler-factory half the time, so that it will be as neat as an operating room the other half?

And then there are those men who have a touch of the "Bohemian spirit" and who might prefer the sort of wife who could serve a Lucullan feast—with all the pet dishes which the doctor had forbidden—one day; and the next day might think it great fun to be greeted with a cheery, "Come on Honey, let's go around to Tony's and have some spaghetti, tonight—our kitchen's on a strike."

But after all's said and done, the woman who makes the best life-mate is the one who knowingly marries a comfort-lover, and goes ahead and makes his life comfortable; or the one who chooses a "blithe spirit" and fills his home hours with spice, variety, charm and surprises.

In short, the ideal wife is one, who makes the sort of life you want, because she is on your wire, whether she's a business girl, a home-girl, or a career-girl. She is no longer standardized.

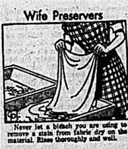
At least, that's what I think. But, no doubt, if I were a man, no matter which kind of girl I married, I'd often wish that I'd married the other kind. That's human nature!

Fashion Flashes

Firmly established is the restaurant suit, an alternative to the long-skirted dinner dress. A youthful and pretty model is of black woolen, the basque jacket trimmed with a cluster of snowy ermine tails. It is worn with a full-skirted dress of black woolen with sleeveless top of white moire.

Higher and higher go the crowns in some of the new millinery collections. A tall-crowned hat is of gold hatter's plush with very small clothe brim. Hat is trimmed with a band of brown blond lace and has a large, brown mesh veil.

Wife Preservers



Never let a bleach you are using to remove a stain from fabric dry on the material. Rinse thoroughly and well.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Are You Reconverting Yourself?

Speaking of "reconversion" — Oh yes you were! Everybody is! And each of us is eagerly looking forward to it, and hoping that it will be all that we hope and dream and expect!

That all the new houses will be air-conditioned and stream-lined and superlatively beautiful, and that all the new cars will be as comfortable to ride in and as easy to drive as a baby-carriage, yet completely equipped. And all the new fashions in clothes and in architecture will be out of this world!

But, meanwhile, with the war over and the enemy subdued, it's a terrible temptation to sink back into the little old grooves, and revive all the personal quarrels and squabbles and spites and enmities and be just as reactionary and unconstructive as you please. Look at the strikes and the bitter fights, and see what they're doing to keep us from getting back on our feet!

Yet, now is the time for personal reconversion or reconstruction. It's going to be a brand new world! And if you don't reconstruct YOURSELF to fit it, you're going to be as out-moded as Godey's Ladies Book, and as utterly out of place as an umbrella and rubber boots at a fashionable wedding!

Too bad! You and I can't tell them how we want the world "reconstructed" or reconverted. But we CAN, each of us, go into his own private world and "take stock" and throw out all the trash — the hard-shelled prejudices and moth-eaten bigotry and dusty, musty old cynicisms and ingrowing jealousies. Yes, and the foolish feuds and spites that are corroding our minds, and all the left-over hatreds that are eating at our hearts.

And then we can open wide the windows of tolerance and let in the fresh air of reason and the sunshine of love, and pick over the old rag bag of antique notions and passe customs and habits, that are cluttering up our lives. And perhaps, we'll find a brand new enthusiasm or a brand new love or a brand new philosophy which will stimulate our war-tired souls and give our hearts a big lift!

We can go through our own mental houses, and throw away all the foolish beliefs and associations and unconstructive thoughts that are in the way. And then we can modernize and streamline our ways of thinking to fit the new life ahead.

This is the psychological moment for "Personal Renaissance"—the golden hour for self-renovation and self-reconversion! Weed out that little garden called Life and plant a few new interests and hopes and ideas, and a lot of faith and charity and brotherly love in it — and watch it bloom!

For "if everyone would reconstruct or reconvert HIMSELF or HERSELF, the world would be rebuilt (and nearer to our heart's desire) in a miraculous short time

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Shyness is a Poor Match-maker

Unfortunately there is no exact science of mate selection. You have to scout 'round and observe what makes people get along well together and what makes them quarrel and separate.

The tremendous increase in unhappy marriages, which has caused the divorce ratio to increase from one in six to one in five in the United States, has been chalked up to the boom in war marriages.

If you should be interested in private documentary evidence which has come to me from soldiers and from some of the girls they've married hastily, I should say shyness must take the blame for numberless unhappy unions.

Many servicemen —farm boys, men from small towns, men whose jobs have kept them at work to the exclusion of any social life —have fallen hook, line and sinker for the smart bobby-soxer who's picked them up on the street corner and done all the work of getting acquainted. Your shy male wallflower has done a good deal of dreaming about home, wife, kids, but has never had sufficient confidence or the time to go after these things.

The young miss who gives him the high sign, reversing the taken-for-granted sex order of courtship, and does all the work of getting acquainted seems to him a divinely appointed angel to mitigate his loneliness.

Well, there you have it. A fairly wide range of acquaintance with the opposite sex is one of the best guarantees of a successful marriage. The shy young man who's never had time to get acquainted and who judges women by his excellent mother and his decent sisters at home, is no inspired picker when he comes to the Big City, heartsick with loneliness.

He doesn't know where to go or from whom to get a cheering word. Naturally, he falls for the laughing eyes of the girl with whom it is no trouble to get acquainted. This is the type of girl who marries for the allowance. Some of them have made several marriages and collected money from all their husbands.

The female who holds the champion all-high rating for multiple marriages with servicemen was not a girl in bobby-sox with floating hair, but a rather hard-boiled-looking number well along in her thirties. She specialized in shy servicemen who couldn't speak for themselves. Strangely enough, when the law caught up with this female bigamist, several husbands tried to bail her out, and stood up for her in court.

The best advice is "Know the girl". Try to find out what's behind cosmetics and the hair-do. Try to be a bit more realistic than romantic in choosing your mate.

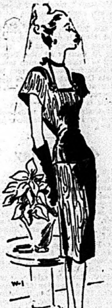
Winning Number

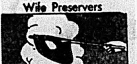


Smart frocks of black moire.

By VERA WINSTON

THE DEFTLY handled dress of moire or faille is always a sure-fire winner in the fashion race, since it is nice as is, and also an important background foil for jewelry. Black moire is used for this flattering frock which provides its own jewelled accent. Twisted and tied around the neck and pinned down with jewelled clips on either side of the square neckline is a narrow pearl-studded black ribbon. The short sleeves are loosely flared, the bodice is shaped into a long basque line. The skirt has one flared gore in centre back below the large self bow at the back of the waist.

Wife Preservers



To steam a velvet garment or piece of velvet, hold over steam until thoroughly damp, and then use a piece of soft silk and rub in the direction of the grain. After the silk treatment, use a soft brush. The flat, dull look of old velvet will disappear with this treatment.

Hip-Reducing by Exercise

Chili Williams here demonstrates a reducing exercise.

By HELEN FOLLETT

WHEN a woman's figure widens out like the spreading chestnut tree, she can expect to travel in slow-moving traffic. There's no skip in her heels and, as she grows older, she gets slower and slower.

Mrs. Hippy should never have let herself get that way. If she had fought fat cells when they were young, it would have been an easy battle.

Reducing Abdomen

We offer this day some exercises for reducing the abdomen, hips and thighs. Help along the good work by cutting down on fats, sweets and starches, food elements that are stored away in the body if not enough energy is exerted to burn up calories

Stand tall. Come up on the toes, at the same time lifting the arms high above the head, touching the backs of the hands together. These movements must be done with enough spirit to give a hard pull on the muscles of the mid-section. Down on the heels and repeat. The idea is to flex muscles leading from the ribs to the hips.

Flat on Bed

Lie flat on the bed on your back, hands under the buttocks for support. Lift the legs slowly until you are fairly standing on the back of your neck; lower them slowly. Nothing like this one for flattening bulges.

To lessen the circumference of calves and thighs, do the goose-step. The family will enjoy seeing you perform.

Hands on hips, feet six inches apart. March. Keep the legs rigid, lift them as high as ever you can. Try to keep to a straight line. You may think this is easy, but it isn't, not if you do it with energy and balance. Come upon the toes as high as you can. You'll feel a muscle pull from ankles to hips.

The Experts Say

By HELEN BANNERMAN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 26 (CP)— For convenience, versatility and ration value it is pretty hard to beat ground meat and it rates especially high with the small family who can't easily cope with larger cuts of meat.

There are a dozen ways in which ground meat may be used and even hash can be given style if served as shortcake over split baking powder biscuits.

There are two schools of thought on meat loaves. Some like a brown, crusty loaf and others a soft, moist loaf. The same meat mixture can produce either type

For a brown crusty loaf they suggest that the meat be moulded lightly and baked in a shallow roasting pan. When they want a moist loaf they line a deep loaf pan with wax paper and pack the meat more solidly into the pan.

When company comes and the meat ration needs stretching, this might be the answer....Baked Stuffed Peppers, as prepared in the Agriculture Department's testing kitchen.

Cook one cup of macaroni, broken in ½ inch lengths, until tender, then drain and rinse in cold water. Cook six green peppers in boiling salted water for five minutes; rinse in cold water; cut a slice off the stem end, remove seeds and core. Saute ¼ cup of sliced onion and one cup (½ pound) minced raw meat in two tablespoons of fat until the meat is browned. Add the macaroni, one well-beaten egg, one teaspoon of salt and a dash of pepper. Fill peppers with the mixture, replace slices from stem end. Bake in a moderately hot oven, 375 degrees fahrenheit, until the peppers are tender, about 20 minutes.

Dried fruits are particularly noteworthy as a source of iron, says the Nutrition Division There is a concentration of this mineral in the drying of the fruit and also the average serving of dried fruit tends to be larger than if the fruit were fresh.

As an example they cite plums and prunes. Two fresh or stewed prune plums are an average serving, but when they are dried and served as stewed prunes, the average serving is from four to six, hence the amount of iron obtained is greatly increased.

The division's nutritionists also point out that, because vitamin C is so easily destroyed by heat and air to which fruit is exposed in drying, dried fruits are negligible as a source of vitamin C. This vitamin is present in varying amounts in fresh and commercially canned fruits. Therefore, when dried fruits replace other fruits, care must be taken that vitamin C is supplied by other foods in the day's meals.

When hard and soft coal are being used together they should be kept apart until they meet in the furnace. Proper proportions of each are necessary for successful results....three shovels of anthracite to one of soft coal.. hence the separation beforehand. If they get mixed in the bin they won't be in the proper proportions in the furnace. Firing practice should be the same as when anthracite alone is used.

Belleville Section Of W.M.S. Holds Annual Meeting

The Twentieth Annual Meeting of the Belleville Section of the Woman's Missionary Society of the United Church was held in Mount Pleasant (Rawdon) United Church on October 19th, with the vice-president of the Presbyterial, Mrs. Sills in the chair.

The session was opened with a worship service conducted by West Huntingdon Auxiliary. After the business the address of welcome was given by Mrs. Townsend. Then. Mrs. McCreary was called upon to introduce the study books, and after reviewing the books on Africa, explained the three-fold study of this year, Africa, the Crusade for Christ and re-habilitation.

Mrs. Roy Sills and Mrs. R. Cranston gave a beautifully rendered solo, "Take Time to be Holy."

Mrs. Spafford was called upon to introduce all the guest speakers. Mr. K. Stewart was to speak on the W.M.S. part in the Crusade. Every member is expected to be back of it for Christians have answers to the problems of the world. The Crusade plan is that members dedicate themselves and then reach out to others.

Another guest speaker, Mrs. Thomas, at one time taught in the United Training School and is, at present, on the Literature Committee of the conference branch in Toronto. The third guest speaker, Miss Chappell, was for many years in Japan and at present is the candidate Secretary of the Woman's Missionary Society.

Miss Ethel Morden, speaking on supply work, explained that this year the W.M.S. was asked to aid the nearest missionary and that would be the Missionaries in North Hastings. Mrs. Hamilton gave the report for periodicals taken in all departments of the Society.

Mrs. Priest gave the roll call. It was stressed that the leaders must have the help and co-operation of every member at every meeting and that members strive to build up every department of the Missionary Society.

More Ministers, Workers Needed

The highlight of the morning program was the address by Mr. Stewart. He said there was reasonable expectation that every member of every organization of the W.M.S. should be a Crusader for Christ for the Church and press the cause for his kingdom. Leaders see the need for reconcentration of efforts especially now, that the ministry of God's son should be extended to those in dire need. There is need in Canada, both in rural areas and in great cities. It is a disturbing factor that the Church is not reaching the non-church groups.

"There is a shortage of Missionary workers and a shortage of ministers," said the speaker. "There are 573,000,000 in other lands, who have been untouched and never before had an opportunity of hearing the story of Jesus and His love. If we want action and really wish to do something we have great areas. Let us take as our motto, 'Let your light shine,' that through the days and years we may become more helpful in aiding the multitude to reach Jesus Christ."

The quiet half hour, which brought the morning session to a close was conducted by the auxiliary of Bridge St. Church, Belleville.

Bethany Auxiliary opened the afternoon session with an inspiring devotional service.

Good Reading Required

Mrs. Ernest Thomas led a discussion on "What shall we read?" Canada faces the greatest social crisis in her history. The whole church should see the vision and share the responsibility.

"What is our part in the program of this reconstruction?" she asked. "It is based on truth and justice and we must realize the importance of Christ through all. We are called upon to be intelligent concerning our Church, and our resource is information that comes from reading. We have a great variety of reading in our Missionary periodicals and literature. Our part in the changing world is more than we realize for it is Missionary work that has led to the development of all countries. Let today's reading shape tomorrow's world."

Mrs. Atton spoke of the work of Baby Bands, stressing the importance of keeping young mothers and their children interested in Mission work. Mrs. Harrison gave a very interesting talk on Mission Band work, illustrating it with posters and folders done by her own band.

The dedicatory prayer, after the offering was given by Mrs. H. Ketcheson.

Opportunities For Good

Miss Chappell gave the closing address of the session. She stated, "we are living in a critical history and will look back on the year 1945 as a year of great significance. Besides victory there is a post-war era. We find ourselves in a new atomic age—an age for power of good or evil that we cannot grasp. We are living in a time for infinite possession of evil and also good. The W.M.S. have thrown their power into the scale for infinite good."

"In the new age there are opening doors to enlarged opportunities, and we must give increased efforts to give our time, abilities, money or material resources to strengthen the forces for good. There is a great need for the gift of workers for the task of the world.

We pray that for the women of Japan there is emerging a new day. The government is turning to Dr. Kagawa for advice and one at the head of education in Japan is a Christian. We pray that the church will come into the light. We should prepare for re-establishment of our work in Japan, and in the meantime should see that we keep well-informed about that country."

The meeting was closed with scripture and a song, "Into a tent where a gypsy boy lay," sung by twenty-three Mission Band children.

REDS SEEK MORE PLANTS

Stuttgart, Oct. 25 — (Reuters)— A secret list of 40 German plants in the zones of the Western Allies which the Soviet government is seeking to remove to Russia as partial payment of reparations includes a high percentage of Germany's vital industrial factories, it was learned today. . .

The list includes both the Krupp and the Hermann Goering works, both in British territory, and it is believed the Russians also are seeking two big I.G. Farben chemical plants and three shipyards, also in the British zone.

Blackest Market In Paris Today Is in Money

By FRED BACKHOUSE
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Paris, Oct. 25—(CP)—Of all the black markets in France, the blackest is in money.

In Paris alone, a huge traffic in sterling, dollars and gold keeps the gendarmes hopping busily, lines the pockets of the unscrupulous, and is the shame of foreign visitors who knew France before the war.

Police say Allied troops are as much to blame as racketeering Frenchmen for this trade which is throwing additional tangles into the country's muddled financial structure.

Prices paid in the side streets for pound or dollar bills are miles above official values. A £1 note (officially 200 francs) will get 300 francs from any barman, and as much as 600 francs if you care to look for the "right" places.

Canadian or American dollar bills (50 francs) sell for 100 francs to a middle-man in the game, and as much as 186 francs to his boss.

The obsolete British gold sovereign, originally worth £1 ($4.50) ,is the most eagerly sought coin. They are rare, but if you have one it is worth around 5,000 francs, or about $115, to a "marche moir" operator.

Paris police are not only interested in crushing this racket, but also try to find where all the foreign money goes, since most of it, they believe, finally is being hoarded by big black-market men trying to hold their illicit profits in what they consider a "safe" curency.

Allied soldiers on leave or in transit from Britain are one of the chief sources of supply. With five smuggled pounds in his pocket a serviceman can double his money in his first hour in Paris and spend a couple of days' leave in the high-priced city and at no cost at all.

Plans for Civic Reception Made

Cobourg, Oct. 25—(CP)—Plans for the civic reception for the 14th Field Battery, which was recruited here in September of 1939, were put into high gear with the announcement yesterday that the unit would arrive in Cobourg at approximately nine o'clock Sunday morning.

The Cobourg Kilties Band, ex-servicemen and ex-members of the 14th Field Battery, will meet at the armories on Sunday at 8.00 a.m. and will proceed to the railway station. Upon arrival of the troop train, the parade will be joined by the 14th Battery Regiment, after which it will move off down Division Street and west on King past a saluting stand which will be located on the south side in front of Allen's store.

In front of the town hall, Cecil Carvethfi Warden of Northumberland and Durham counties and Mayor Roy Dodge of Cobourg, will officially welcome them. The parade will then proceed to the armories for dismissal where they will be greeted by their relatives and friends.

Football Fans in East Canada Will be Served With Another Six-Game Dish on Saturday

Attraction Centres on the Intercollegiate Game at Toronto With Queen's University

By ANDY ROSS
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Eastern Canadians have another full-course football dinner to enjoy this weekend with five scheduled games and an exhibition tilt being served in the Interprovincial, Ontario and Intercollegiate circuits.

With the Big Four race already decided in an easy amble to playoff berths by Ottawa's massive Rough Riders and Toronto's opportunity-snatching Argonauts, most of the interest centres on the revived intercollegiate's second Saturday of grid antics and on the Ontario Rugby Football Union, where Ottawa Trojans will try to make good a mathematical chance to gain the play-offs.

The Trojans, idle last Saturday, entertain Ted Reeve's strengthened Balmy Beach outfit in what promises to be the day's feature attraction. The Balmies are tied with Toronto Indians at five wins and a loss apiece, followed by Hamilton Wildcats with six points for three victories and Trojans with four for two winning efforts.

But, Wildcats have lost four and even by winning in their last appearance can't amass more than eight points. The Trojans still have three to play, including tomorrow's crucial tangle, and could achieve a second-place tie — provided they win all three and the Beaches or Stukians go winless from here in.

Wildcats will play Windsor's fizzling Rockets in an exhibition game at Sarnia, which Dame Rumor says will be back in the O.R.F.U. fight next season.

Hamilton is the setting for one Big Four game between the Tigers and Rough Riders. All eyes will be focused on two Ottawa players, Frank Mathers and Steve Marko.

Mathers, who started the season with Winnipeg Blue Bombers, was finally given the green light to don a Rider uniform this week and it will be the big backfielder's first appearance in the East. Marko, who was discovered by coach Ross Trimble working in a Hull, Que., manufacturing plant, hails from Weschester, Pa.

The double-blue visit Montreal Hornets for a game which should prove little strain on Coach Ted Morris and his lads. The Hornets will have their ace quarterback Johnny Fripp of Ottawa in the lineup for the first time, while Argos have received an O.K. on the signing of Joe Krol, starry former Western University and Hamilton Wildcat triple-threat who took a brief whirl at the money game with Detroit Tigers this fall.

As the Big Four finish their schedule tomorrow Rough Riders will open a home-and-home championship series at Toronto Nov. 3.

In the Intercollegiate, McGill Redmen have a return bout with Western at London and Queen's University invades Varsity Stadium in Toronto. Smothered 20-7 by Western last week, McGill has been working hard all week and have added Bob Bartlett and Doug Bulloch.

On the Toronto campus, an all-faculty committee staged a pep-rally Friday in the hopes of stirring up a little more enthusiasm among the post-war swollen student body. The Varsity squad went down fighting 19-15 at Kingston last week and hope to turn the tables this time.

BUFFALO BISONS GOAL HUNGRY AGAINST EAGLES

New Haven Defeated 9-1 While Capitals Score Shutout Against Reds

(By The Canadian Press)

The goal-hungry Buffalo Bisons went wild at New Haven last night and tagged a 9-1 defeat on Eagles to earn their first victory of the season in the American Hockey League. The scoring spree spread to Indianapolis where Capitals rallied behind goalie Tommy Wilson to turn back Providence Reds with a 8-0 shutout.

At New Haven, Len Halderson and Hec Pozzo led the Buffalo attack with a hat trick performance each while Frankie Eddolls, Doug Lewis and Larry Thibault drew the other red lights for the victors. Goalie Ceryance was denied a shutout when he fumbled a shot fired at close range by Jack Hewson at 6.25 of the final session.

After taking a three-goal lead in the initial period, Bisons came through with a five-goal splurge in the mid-session while both teams were limited to a sole marker in the final frame.

Combining an irresistible attack with an air-tight defence Capitals walloped Reds in easy fashion. While Wilson, substituting for the injured Floyd Perras, held the usually high scoring Reds, Caps pushed all of their goals past Paul Leclerc in the past two periods.

Scoring honors were shared by Pete Leswick, Les Douglas and Norm McAtee, each of whom bagged two goals. Harry Brown and Tony Bukovitch netted the other Indianapolis markers.

Chips Off The Sports Block

AWAY TO A GOOD START

Upwards of thirty hockey players and enthusiasts of the city got together at the Y.M.C.A. the other night and laid the solid foundation of a Belleville hockey club. The meeting was productive of a lot of things, principal among which was the forwarding of a city entry in the Van Horne hockey series, an annual Kingston tournament.

Speedy St. Louis, and Clare Williamson were appointed a special delegation which will go to Kingston tonight to discuss plans for the forthcoming series. Gene LaBonne and some others will go along and spend a couple of hours getting their skating legs loosened up.

The boys have decided to work on a strictly co-operative plan. Each will share in the profits and every player, coach and official will have a voice in the voting on important club matters.

For instance next Monday night the second meeting of the club will be held at the Y where a coach will be selected by the common consent of the players. A business manager, who is well acquainted with the handling of such matters will also be appointed across the board.

Mayor Frank Follwell, always interested in sport, dropped in at the meeting and publicly commended the boys on their spirit in organization of the team under such conditions. He wished them all the luck in the world and promised civic assistance. A delegation of the club will wait upon the City Council at its next meeting to request a grant which will send them off on the financial right foot.

The boys, however, are not letting the grass grow under their feet. With no ice available they are already getting into some sort of condition and hope to make arrangements with Y officials which will assist them in readying themselves for the long winter grind.

There was plenty of enthusiasm at the meeting which augurs well for the future of the club. It is anticipated that some forty or fifty players and supporters will turn out for the meeting next Monday where several important wrinkles will be ironed out.

The co-operative idea seems to have clicked in its first attempt here and the boys are falling in line with none of the usual pre-season antipathy and argumentative feeling that usually prevails.

Gene LaBonne was appointed a committee of one to inquire into the possibility of securing hockey equipment which is believed to be in the city. It looks, verily, as though the hockey season has started in a promising manner.

TRIO OF TROPHIES

It will definitely be trophy night at the Hume Arena on Friday, November 2, when the Gardens Athletic Club will stage special tournaments in three classes.

The George De Vuyst Trophy will be awarded to the winner in the 135 pound. The one hundred-fifty pounders will battle for the new handsome silver mug which has been donated by the Belleville branch No. 99 of the Canadian Legion, while the boys who fight around the 118 mark will strive for a new cup which will be known as the Kurtz Trophy. This silverware will be donated by the Gardens Athletic Club management.

Such popular boys as Bill Westfall, Glen Dafoe, Jimmie MacDonald, Jerry Downes, George Polmanter, Frankie Morton, Don Shore, Art Duby, Frank Mondeville and others will enter in the various classes.

There will be no matchmaking prior to the tournaments and opponents' names will be drawn at the ring previous to the start of each tournament. It looks like a pleasant evening for boxing fans of the city.

College Football Attendance up 17.1 Per Cent

(By The Canadian Press)

Showing the largest increase in the east, College football attendance in the United States has shown a climb of 17-1 per cent over the aggregate turnout of fans for the same period in 1944. Crowds at eastern games are approximately one-third better than those of last season but there has been a decrease of seven per cent in attendance at Pacific Coast fixtures. A survey at New York showed peak turnout to be the 70,000 at the Yankees' Stadium there for the Army-Michigan contest.

Baseball Commissioner A. B. Chandler said at Washington yesterday he had received no reports on the signing of Jackie Robinson, colored shortstop of Kansas City by Montreal Royals. He had no protest from the negro American League over the alleged raid of that organization by Branch Rickey in obtaining the player.

Cleveland Barons, off to a poor start in the American Hockey League after winning the championship last Spring, yesterday purchased defenceman Alex Motter, 32, from Detroit Red Wings in an effort to bolster the rear guard.

With Bruce Woodcock, British Empire Champion, reported available for bouts in the United States, Promoter Mike Jacobs said at New York yesterday he had cabled an offer for a match with Gus Lesnevich, World Light Heavyweight champion, in January.

Such noted runners as Johnny Kelley of West Acton, Mass., and Sgt. Scotty Rankine will start in the annual Army and Navy Veterans' 19-mile race at Hamilton Saturday afternoon. To date, 24 entries have been received. Kelley, twice winner of the Boston Marathon, and Rankine, who established the record of one hour, 45 minutes and 20 seconds for the route in 1936, are co-favorites. Rankine has won the event five times.

Declaring that the major loops were not drafting any more players from his organization, President Clarence Rowland warned yesterday the Pacific Coast Baseball League would fight for big-league standing. He said it would be operating on a par with the National and American circuits not later than 1949.

Intra-Squad Game Ends in 2-2 Draw At the Gardens

Toronto, Oct. 26 — (CP)—The Toronto Maple Leafs of the National Hockey League made their annual pre-season Toronto appearance last night before 13,637 fans in an intra-squad game in which the Blues and the Whites played to a 2-2 tie.

After a slow start both teams were travelling at a near mid-season clip in the latter stages, particularly Bob Davidson's Blues who came from behind with two third-period goals to match the pair the Whites tallied in the second.

Stars of the fixture were the 2 goalies — Aldege (Baz) Bastien for the Whites and young Gordie Bell, the sensational netminder from Portage la Prairie, for the blues. Frank McCool, rookie award winner of last season, did not appear in the nets although he handled the Blues from the bench. Syl Apps also was on the sidelines because of a broken nose he received last night in a game in Hamilton.

Garth Boesch from Regina and Jackie Hamilton, just out of the Navy scored the Whites' goals. Bob Goldham, also a navy alumnus, and Ted Kennedy scored for the Blues.

The Leafs open the scheduled season this Saturday in Toronto when they entertain Boston Bruins.

Toe Blake Saves Canadians Defeat

Montreal, Oct. 26—(CP)—With one second to go before the end of the game, Toe Blake saved Montreal Canadiens from defeat with a goal that enabled the National Leaguers to tie the count 3-3 with a Quebec Senior Hockey League all-star team.

Canucks took a drubbing from the all-stars and the 5,000 spectators at hand for the first 50 minutes of the game, but Blake's goal came as the climax of an all-out effort by Habitants who peppered goalie Gerry McNeil's cage from all angles in the last 10 minutes.

The tie gave Canadiens a one-goal margin in the three-game series they have played against the Q.S.H.L. all-star aggregation. The first game ended in a 3-3 stalemate at Ottawa Saturday, while Canucks defeated all-stars 7-6 in Montreal Sunday for their only victory.

Sports Roundup

(By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.)

New York, Oct. 26. (AP)—During the recent Jacksonville Fliers-Fort Pierce Amphibs football game, Leo Akin, former Bears tackle, who plays for the Jacksonville navy outfit, walked over to the bench, handed a tooth to one of the coaches and remarked: "Just hold this for me, will you?" Then he returned and told his opposing lineman, "If you want to play rough, I'm going to kick the stuffing out of you". . .Later Akin wondered why the referee hadn't called a time out against Jacksonville. . . . "That's easy," explained Wat Dubzinski, team captain. "I told the referee it was a time out for faulty equipment."

Dots All Brothers

The Rangers finally will make their hockey experiment of alternating goalies Chuck Rayner and Jim Henry with every second player change during tomorrow's exhibition against St. Paul. There have been times when the Rangers could have used two at once and still lose. . . Paul Robeson, Jr., and Jim Del Signore not only are half the new backfield that Cornell will spring on Yale tomorrow, but they can form a swell hot piano team in their spare moments. . . Trouble is the game will be played on the field, not a piano. . . . Gordon Richards, champion British jockey, has ridden more than 100 winners this season and has a lifetime total of 2,887 up to Oct. 15.

Canadian Sport Snapshots

By ELWOOD REDDING
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 26—(CP)—Something basic has happened to Canadian football, and unless some small town with a big bankroll takes a surprise shot at the big-time within the next few years, it has happened for keeps. That is, the decline of the American import.

In the game's modern history, imports possibly have had more importance than any other single factor. They were salted into lineups in Regina, Calgary, Edmonton, Vancouver, Montreal, Ottawa, Toronto, Hamilton — and in 1935 Winnipeg won the Canadian championship on imports alone. This year, there is scarcely an import on the horizon.

There's a good reason; the rising Canadian interest in football as a sandlot and schools game — the same type of interest that makes cup hockey players the best in the world. The lineups today are loaded with youngsters who have spent every autumn since they got long pants behind schools, on boulevards or vacant lots, kicking and throwing a pigskin.

Prime example of this reversal is Winnipeg, whose Blue Bombers once were the most import-happy club in the country. Bombers probably will win in the west again this year, with players developed mainly through a Winnipeg emphasis on schools football which started after the big import year of 1935. And possibly (don't snarl, Toronto, this is just an example) Ottawa Rough Riders will be the opposition. Their most important import (barring possibly Steve Marko, brought to work in Ottawa by an anonymous good fairy) would be Frank Mathers, who learned his football in Winnipeg schools.

Toronto's perennial strength in football can be attributed to the same factor. Every autumn evening the streetcars here are full of be-ribboned, feathered-hatted children going home from the dozens of schools football games that are played every week. Montreal and Ottawa both have thriving schools leagues, and while Montreal's experience in football this year has caused alarm and despondency in the Quebec metropolis, it's likely a passing phase — part of the routine of getting started after the wartime layoff. And it's doubtful they'll turn to imports as the remedy.

Looking over the full picture, it must be heartening for the unsung characters who keep the sandlot and schools leagues going. It's to them the credit belongs, now that we're growing our own.

There are eight cards left in each hand. Hearts are trumps. As declarer in the south, you are in the lead. Take six of these tricks against any defence.

Against any defence means any cards played by opponents to any trick. Each different card led or played by an opponent may bring up a different situation. Let's look at one of them.

Lead a diamond and win with dummy queen. Return a spade and trump in south with the heart five. Lead a club. West wins with the king. Assume west leads the trump ten in that spot. Dummy plays the deuce.

If east plays the nine, take with your jack, lead your ace and another trump that is won by east. That gives you the six tricks.

Instead of the nine, if east plays the queen, refuse to win. If he then leads the trump nine or trump king, win and lead your high trump. That gives you the six tricks you are after.

But when you let east keep the trick with his trump queen, he may return a diamond instead of a trump. If he does, you must pull some clever plays to get the rest.

With such a diamond lead from east, trump with the trey. Then, do you know what? You should overtake your trick with dummy heart four. That lets dummy lead a spade.

If east trumps that, overtrump and take the rest. But if east sluffs a diamond on the spade, sluff a club. Dummy leads another spade and east is smothered into playing a trump. Overtrump and take the rest.

You thus see why you first trumped with your five instead of the trey; and why you trumped with the trey instead of sluffing a club.

Now try a different situation. When west takes the club trick, suppose he leads a spade or a diamond. Ain't that somethin'.

ALBERT TAKES B.C.I. JUNIORS BY 6-0 SCORE

Displaying a complete reversal of form, the Albert College Juniors stepped into Belleville Collegiate in the second junior game of the season and came out on top by a score of 5 to 0.

Last week's game finished with B.C.I. in front by a score of 12 to 1, and the improvement in the College boys took the Collegians by surprise. In fairness it must be said that B.C.I. lost men in between the two games by injuries in practice.

The game started off with Albert forcing the pace, and B.C.I. were shortly forced to rouge on a long kick by Merkley, when Lill and Lemon brought down the runner. Play centred around the B.C.I. half of the field for practically all of the first half, and late in the second quarter, Ed Steacy snagged the B.C.I. kicker behind his own line, to add 2 points to Albert score. Half time score: Albert 3, B.C.I. 0.

The second half opened with Albert still driving, although BCI showed more signs of life, with Haggis and Cameron running and tackling well. Two onside kicks by Albert went for single points, when quick action by BCI secured the ball behind their own line.

McCaughey was the most effective man on the field, his ball toting both through and around the line, and his snagging of forward passes continually advancing the ball for Albert.

This is the second game that eleven of the twelve men on the Albert team had pulled the iron-man stunt, by playing the full 60 minutes.

The line-ups—

Albert—Congdon, flying wing; Steacy, half; Taughter, half; McGaughey, half; Merkley, quarter; Lemon, snap; McKenzie, inside; Summers, inside; Nicholson, middle; Beardsall, middle; Lill, end; Lipson, end; alternates: Bahnsen, Bullock, Mattocks, Cohen, Solomon, Simmons, Mealey, Hayman.

B.C.I. and V.S. — Bone, flying wing; Bradshaw, half; Bullied, half; Haggis, half; Cam Cameron, quarter; Day, snap; Green, inside; Keays, inside; Langman, middle; Milligan, middle; Stebbins, ends; Shiels, end; alternates: Bush, Campbell, J. Denton, Neal, Stewart, Strahan, Watkins, Wood.

Officials: Referee, Eddie Schrieder; Umpire, Jackson.

First New Cars Off Production Lines To Priority Users

Ottawa, Oct. 25—(CP)—Munitions Minister Howe disclosed today that all passenger cars in a reserve pool established by the government early in 1942 now have been released.

With the exhaustion of this pool users now will have to wait for new production. Mr. Howe has already indicated that first cars off the production lines will go to priority users.

When production of passenger cars was halted in 1942 the pool of 4,500 cars was built up to assure a supply to such essential users as doctors and police.

Brighton, England — (CP) — Borough Engineer D. J. Howe said wanton damage amounting to £200,000 ($900,000) was done to Brighton during the military occupation.

Two Main Bouts Feature Wrestling Card at Hume Arena; Flanagan Beats Jackson, Sirois Disqualified

The two jumping jacks of the wrestling ring hereabouts, Pat Flanagan, Toronto and Joe Jackson, of North Carolina treated the faithful to another fine exhibition of the mat game at the Hume Arena last night with the popular Pat getting the nod in the second of two scheduled main bouts.

It was a typical Jackson-Flanagan bout with all the agile trimmings that characterized the previous two meetings of the pair. It was a nip-and-tuck-battle all the way with Lady Luck smiling first on one and then the other.

There was little or nothing of the badman-hero style which is usually featured in main bouts and both Jackson and Flanagan went all out to give the faithful nearly an hour of tasty mat calisthenics. Both favor speed more than brute strength and last night's show was one of those things that had the crowd on its feet several times.

Once Jackson leaned toward the villain's role of the piece when he threw Flanagan out of the ring and attempted to keep him there. But the opposition had no desire to do his wrestling outside of the ropes and quickly hopped the "fence" to smother Jackson in a flurry of high kicks, drop - kicks and other wrestling high jinks.

The second main bout of the evening saw the former popular Sergeant Walter Sirois turn bad man in an unexpected move and earn the ire of Referee Cliff Fox who disqualified him in his bout with the good-looking Vic Christie after thirty minutes of aggressive battling.

Sirois, who up to last night had displayed none of the unorthodox methods which are usually the stock-in-trade of the wrestling 'villains' turned loose an exhibition that quickly had the crowd rooting for the opposition.

The big bad sergeant had Christie in dire straits on several occasions but the handsome guy from California, by dint of some clever work managed to thwart the fall. Sirois however was not handing out any yes-man tactics and used practically everything in his bag of tricks to defeat the latest threat to the crown of Whipper Billy Watson. He did this so well that even the referee got fed up and finally waved Sirois to the showers, disqualified.

Sandy O'Donnell a newcomer to Belleville, who hails from Missouri lived up to the fabled slogan of his state and was promptly "shown" a few wrestling tricks by Aaron Stein in the curtain raiser. O'Donnell, a tall blonde bloke uses an aggressive style of wrestling with little care for the finer points of the game. However, he met a crafty opponent in the Jewish lad from up west and was forced to say 'uncle' after eighteen minutes of lively milling.

Farmers Demand Roads Open for Motor Traffic

(An Editorial in The Huron Expositor, Seaforth)

Last winter has apparently taught a number of rural municipalities some lessons about preparedness. At least, we have noticed where some such municipalities have accepted, or are about to accept, delivery of modern mechanized tractors and plows with the anticipation of keeping their concession roads open for motor traffic in the months to come.

It is well to be forehanded, because the country world has permanently placed itself up on rubber tires, and come what may, it is going to remain there regardless of the weather. In other words, the people on the back concessions are demanding open roads for all in winter, as well as summer, regardless of the amount of snow that may fall.

Their claim that the cost of keeping the highways and country roads in their district falls just as much on them as the favored few whose farms are situated in the favored zones. And the claim is a reasonably just one and the demand for similar service reasonable.

But driving over the average concession road makes one wonder how this demand can be met. No snow removing equipment, however powerful, can keep a concession road open that only has a ten-foot surface without shoulders. And until these roads are widened, the concession farmer is not going to get much benefit for the taxes he spends on snow removal.

Widening the roads would cost money, of course but so does snow plowing, so why put the cart before the horse? There is another point about the concession road that should receive some attention, not only by the councils, but by the farmers themselves. If these roads were widened, properly drained and shoulders properly leveled, it would not only simplify and cheapen the cost of open roads in winter, but would make the new mechanical equipment available for cutting the grass and weeds from fence to fence in summer. And there is a desparate need for some such work as that.

Supercharge Ruse Won

London, Eng.—Field Marshal Montgomery said this week that a ruse enabled his 8th Army to overwhelm the Germans and Italians at El Alamein in Egypt and send them retreating across North Africa.

Misled Enemy

Speaking at a commemoration dinner on the third anniversary of the historic battle, Field Marshal Montgomery said the strategy misled the enemy as to the direction of his attack and set the stage for the break-through at the south end of the battle line.

He also explained why, at what appeared to the outside world to be the critical moment of the battle, he withdrew certain divisions into the reserve:

"After some 36 hours or so of fighting, I realized that the enemy resistance was too great to allow me both to break out into the open in the north and also to roll up the enemy front north-to-south. I, therefore, gave up the latter operations.

Very Serious

"Instead, I put every single thing I had into the attack in the north. I developed a series of strong attacks, all by night, which were all so related to each other as to make the enemy think that my intention was to break through in the north—on the axis of the coast road. Such a break-through would have been very serious for the enemy and he concentrated all his German troops in the north to defeat it.

"I well remember the evening when my intelligence staff told me that they had located the southern flank of the purely German troops. The remainder of the front to the south was held by Italians. This was exactly what we wanted.

Final, Tremendous Blow

"I pulled the armored divisions into the reserve, rested and refitted them for a few hours, and put in one final and tremendous blow at about the south end of the purely German flank and partly on the Italians.

"The operation was called "supercharge" and it was commanded by Gen. (Lt. Gen. Sir Bernard C.) Freyberg, who also led it personally in his tank.

"The Germans were overwhelmed. The Italians broke. Three armored divisions were passed through the gap. The battle was won."

(Gen. Freyberg commanded the New Zealand 2nd Corps which fought its way across North Africa and up the Italian Peninsula with the British 8th Army. One of the Empire's most gallant military figures, he won the Victoria Cross in the First Great War and came out of retirement to command New Zealand's overseas forces in the second conflict. Last September he was appointed governor-general of New Zealand, effective next February.)

AWARDED BRONZE STAR

Chicago, Oct. 25 (AP)—Joe E. Brown, the screen comedian, was awarded the bronze star medal last night for meritorious service in entertaining troops "in adverse weather and despite a gruelling schedule." The medal, highest open to United States civilians, has been awarded only one other civilian the late war correspondent, Ernie Pyle.

REAL CHRISTMAS DINNER

Toronto, Oct. 26 (CP) — Sgt. Robert Clayton, who spent the last four Christmases in a Japanese prison camp, came home yesterday to a "Christmas" celebration. About 25 relatives and friends sat down with him to a dinner of two roast geese, two square feet of "welcome home" cake and 16 pumpkin pies.

And The Walls Came Tumbling

By Joseph McCord

CHAPTER 2

The town defined him variously, from being utterly worthless to the easier and more lenient verdict of "funny." He was nobody's fool. Many were wary of his manner of speech which so often was mockingly polite, filled with unfamiliar allusions. Yet he could be entertaining if he chose. Never more so than when leaning gracefully against the Hanscomb House bar, one foot on its rail and turning a whisky glass slowly in his slim fingers as he delivered an opinion or recounted some experience. Then, he could make the veriest commonplace sound like poetry, although he drank moderately and handled his liquor as a gentleman should. And his rapier-like tongue could reduce any garrulous inebriate into shamed or sulky mumblings.

Carol knew all these things but, to her, he was a superior being and she was passionately devoted to him. During these later years her love for him had assumed something of a maternal aspect, in spite of the fact that he was perfectly able to defend himself against anything and anybody. But he was her "Andy."

She called him that at his insistence.

He still was in the background of her thoughts as she sorted through Doctor Silverthorne's delinquents at his old roll-top desk. Almost mechanically she laid aside cases who should be able to pay something on account and probably would not. The oldest offenders were reserved for the top of the desk so that the doctor would not become discouraged as he calculated the possibilities. She always did it that way.

The task was nearly completed when a nervous start sent a card fluttering from her fingers to the floor. The siren on the roof of the fire hall was emitting its whining roar. Carol darted to the window in time to see a scattering of the assembled chairs in the open doorway. Men were running. The motor of the red pumper coughed; then followed resounding explosions.

As the crimson vehicle roared into the open, Andre leaped gracefully on its running board. He was not a member of the Alert Volunteers but a self-appointed buff who seldom failed to respond to an alarm. He looked up at the window across the street, glimpsed Carol and saluted boyishly with his fan. She waved back then lingered as the walling of the klaxon grew fainter and fainter. Apparently the fire was not close at hand.

She had finished with her cards and was deep in a romance from the drug store's library when another interruption came. Her head lifted at the sound of slow footsteps in the hall, a peculiar progress that somehow made her know that the person was limping and would be coming in. The door opened and a man stood framed there. A stranger. And young.

He was bareheaded. His black hair receded in waves off a sunburned forehead. There was something grim in the set of his square jaw and he was scowling, even after his eyes rested on Carol's eagerly attentive face.

"Hello, nurse," he offered shortly. "Is the doctor about?"

"No, sir. But I expect him before very long." She left her chair and came toward him "Have you hurt yourself?"

"I'm afraid so." His mouth relaxed in a slight smile that made Carol think of her father. "I saw the doctor's sign out front .... thought the Silverthorne might be a hunch. This is a case of a rusty nail."

"Oh! You've run a nail in your foot!"

"I didn't miss."

"Please sit down." She indicated a chair in her best professional manner.

"And read an ancient magazine I suppose," was the ungracious retort. Nevertheless he hobbled to the big rocking chair and dropped into it.

"No. I want you to let me see your foot. Take off your shoe."

His gray eyes stared up into her brown ones. Soberly.

"Dear lady, don't you know that a man's bare foot is the ignoblest work of God?"

Carol raised her brows a trifle at the patient's estimate of the male foot.

"Grown-ups' feet aren't supposed to be beautiful. I never saw but one pair that was."

"Yours?"

The stranger had crossed his knees and was undoing the lace of his right shoe. His glance shifted to Carol's trim suede oxfords.

"No. Not mine."

He said no more, only gave a grunt of discomfort as he removed the shoe and bared his foot. Carol leaned closer.

"Can you tell if it went in deep? Was it a long nail?" she asked.

"I thought it came out the top, but I see it didn't. Long enough to hurt like the devil." He exhibited his sole and punctured instep.

"A rusty nail, you say?"

"Nice and rusty. Yes, I know it's dangerous," he added harshly. "I heard all about that when I was a kid. I've been expecting my jaws to lock any minute. But I hope they don't until I get a chance to talk to.... a party."

"You must see the doctor about that foot," Carol interposed gravely. "It could be dangerous of course. Will you let me disinfect it put some gauze on it while you're waiting for Doctor Silverthorne?"

"Go ahead."

He watched her curiously as she prepared swab with deft fingers and dipped it in a bottle she brought from the inner office. "I'm afraid this will hurt a little."

"Are you telling me?" He winced as the treatment got under way and Carol noticed his brown fingers tighten their clasp on his ankle. She applied a bit of sterile gauze and snipped a length of adhesive from its spool to hold it in place.

"Where did you have your accident?" she inquired. "I hope it wasn't on our streets. If it was, I'll report it to the Lions Club or somebody."

"Oh, no. I can't blame your town altogether." He was replacing his sock. "I was prowling through an old building out near the tracks. It's a wreck mostly."

"You must mean the Jericho Canning Company plant. They went out of business a long time ago."

"I gathered as much. Some name your burg has." Once more his mouth relaxed in a near smile. "This all makes me think of the story of the Good Samaritan. In more ways than one."

There was an answering smile in Carol's eyes as she rose to her feet. "I hope you're not inferring that you've fallen among thieves on your way."

His answer was prompt, but accompanied by an inscrutable stare. "You may have something there. I wasn't thinking of that, though....merely of your kindness as a binder-upper."

"But you will wait and see the doctor?"

"Yes, I'll see him. But I want to go down on the street for a few moments. Most of the citizenry seems to have gone to a fire."

"I expect so." Carol smiled at the memory of her father's debonair fan waving. "It must have been out in the country somewhere," she conjectured. "The engine hasn't come back yet."

"Does the doctor of the imposing name have evening hours?"

"Yes, sir. From six-thirty to eight."

"That's fine. I'll drop up." The patient drew on his shoe gingerly but did not lace it.

"I wish you would. And I wouldn't walk about any more than I had to." Carol had seated herself again at the desk. "Will you please let me have your name?"

"Dennison, C. H."

"And the address?"

"Um... make it Jericho for the moment. It appeals to me. I'm registered at the hotel over the way. Hanscomb, is it?"

"Yes, sir." She regarded him with a slightly puzzled air, but forbore asking further questions. She would have liked to.

"I thank you very much for your kindness, Miss...." He paused in his limping progress to the door.

"Miss Delaine," she told him.

"Delaine?" Again that inscrutable stare. "Odd ...May I ask how you spell it?"

"D-e-l-a-i-n-e."

"Your ancestors must have been French."

"I believe they were. I don't know very much about them."

"It's probably just as well," was his cryptic comment. "Good-by." And he was gone.

It was after five when Doctor Silverthorne came back from his call. Carol could hardly wait for him to get off his hat before she started to tell him about her patient.

"He had stepped on a nail, a long one and rusty," she said.

"Now, now, take it easy, young lady. He's not the first man to step on a nail and I don't think he'll be the last. At least he won't be the last if he takes care of it."

But Carol was excited. It wasn't often that she had a chance to take care of a patient and this was no ordinary patient. She had been thinking about him all afternoon, almost to the exclusion of all other matters. He wasn't a handsome man, but there was something interesting about him. She wondered what had brought him to Jericho and how long he would be here. He didn't look like a salesman. There was an out-of-doors suggestion about him. She was really solicitous about his injured foot and betrayed it in her report to the Doctor.

"All right Carol, you seem to have fixed him up first rate."

"Oh, thank you Doctor."

"And did you tell him to stay off it and come and let me take a look at it?"

"Yes. And he promised he would."

"And did you fill out a card for him?"

"Yes, I did that too." Carol smiled, ever so slightly.

"I reckon it won't give him any trouble," was the doctor's notion. "For his sake I hope he comes back. Always danger of infection if those things aren't looked after at the start."

"That's what I was afraid of."

"Did you sort out my cards?"

"Yes, sir. They're over there on the desk beside the file boxes."

"I'll go through them tonight."

At the supper table Carol's thoughts were diverted from the incident by her father's account of the afternoon fire.

"It was on Jed Harper's place.. off Thirty-six after you cross Middle Run," he explained in answer to a question from Aunt Cassie. "You can see the big red barn from the highway,...house sits in a grove of maples."

"Of course I know the place. Was it a bad fire?"

"Good fire. It took the barn and the silo. All his hay. He'd got a few head of stock out by the time we rolled in. The boys kept the fire from spreading. That was about all they could do since Jed's two cisterns were not any too full. One Centertown company was there and half the cars in the county."

"What a shame," sighed Carol. "I hope Mr. Harper was insured."

"He would be. Shrewd fellow, Jed." Andre watched a stream of cream curl down through the contents of his iced coffee tumbler, gray head tipped meditatively. "There have been a lot of country fires off and on since the depression. Pays to keep things insured."

Must Meet Wheat Demands.

To avoid disaster this year, demands for wheat made by the British and American zone commanders in Germany must be met "but it must come from the territory where the wheat is — there is no other way."

The only way to feed Europe properly, said the Minister, was for the surplus areas in the east and centre of the continent to feed the industrial areas.

He disclosed that Winston Churchill's Coalition government at one time had thought there possibly might be some kind of central German government left, but as the war went on it became obvious that the Hitler regime intended to leave anarchy in Europe if it could not win.

"I hope and long for the day when all nations will put their trust in a world organization, because I don't think that frontiers and spheres of influence are as important as they used to be . . . I don't believe the transfer of territories means so much in security, but there it is: nations who have been attacked look for security."

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 26 — (AP) — Investment demand continued to prop selected stocks today although selling opposition was sufficient to make the market a slightly mixed affair.

Dealings dwindled after a fairly active opening and the direction was notably cloudy near the fourth hour. Steels, selected rails and specialties attracted purchasers.

At tops for 1945 or longer with gains of fractions to a point or so were International Paper, Paramount Pictures, Schenley and RKO.

Canadian issues met some demand but generally were unchanged. Lake Shore was off 1/4.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 26. (CP) — The Mining groups were narrowly higher at noon today on the Toronto Exchange and other groups were down slightly. Volume was about equal to that of previous days this week at 1,285,000 shares for the first three hours.

The paper issues worked higher, showing point gains for the 6 per cent Abitibi Pfd., St. Lawrence Corporation and Minnesota and Ontario while Brown Company Pfd, Consolidated and Great Lakes Paper voting added fractions.

Bear Exploration traded in heavy volume on a gain of 10 cents on the news of an underwriting and optioning of treasury stock. Gains of five cents or more came through for Pamour, Lingman Lake, Donalda, Little Long Lac and Duquesne. Mining Corporation, Pend Oreille, Steep Rock and Waite-Amulet were stronger base metals.

Those Involved In Sugar Theft Given Sentences

Pleading guilty to a charge of receiving four bags of sugar knowing the same to have been stolen, Kenneth Bradshaw, local Dundas Street grocer, was sentenced to two months in the common jail by Magistrate T. Y. Wills in city police court Friday morning.

Two local youths, Clifford Neal and Douglas Thompson, aged 18 and 17 years respectively, also appeared in court for sentence on a charge of stealing the sugar from Hannah's Bakery, and were each given suspended sentence for one year and ordered to pay costs. A local juvenile, jointly charged with stealing the sugar, later appeared in juvenile court.

According to the story told to the court by Inspector C. Hayes, the three boys had entered the Hannah Bakery and after stealing the sugar had sold it to Bradshaw who took it to a point outside the city in his truck. The sugar was later recovered, the court was told.

"This case is serious in two aspects" commented Magistrate Wills before passing sentence on Bradshaw. "It involves trafficking in an article which is rationed and three young boys have gotten into trouble."

Gets Suspended Sentence.

Found guilty of attempting to steal an auto, the property of John Shannon, Front Street, Bernard Boomhour, Rossmore, was given suspended sentence for six months. In passing sentence consideration was given to the fact that the accused was drunk at the time of the offense. When asked if cancellation of his liquor permit would do any good Boomhour replied "it would make no difference."

Licence Suspended.

A Foxboro resident was sentenced to ten days in jail and his driver's licence suspended for three months when found guilty of being in charge of a motor vehicle while drunk.

Nineteen cases were listed for hearing before the court, in addition to five juvenile cases, two cases of non-support being enlarged until a later court.

Truman to Review 7 Miles of Warships In Hudson River

Navy to Receive Tribute Of Country it Protected

New York, Oct. 27 — (AP) — Seven miles of battle-grey warships, mighty units of the proud United States Navy, were arrayed in the Hudson River today for a spectacular Navy Day review by President Truman.

Guns a-bristle and battle banners flying, the vessels stretched from the shadows of mid-Manhattan skyscrapers to Spuyten Duyvil seven miles up the river to receive the tribute of the country they helped to bring to victory.

President Truman, in New York for the first time since he entered the White House, was to open Navy Day observance at 10:30 a.m. E.S.T. at the New York Navy yard, commissioning the 45,000-ton aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Then, at the head of a 46-car motorcade, the President planned to tour 25 miles of city streets and review a parade of 2,000 Navy men and women.

At Central Park, he was scheduled to make a speech described by his press secretary as the most important he ever made. It was to be his first major address on foreign policy, made against a background of stirring world developments.

Aboard the battleship Missouri, the President had a luncheon engagement with Vice-Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, commander of the Atlantic Fleet.

Millions were lining New York's Riverside Drive and New Jersey's Palisades to see the Commander-in-Chief, aboard the the destroyer Renshaw, inspect the 47-ship armada in the Hudson from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30.

Britain to be Represented

Her ports crowded with warships and skies filled with planes, the United States today celebrated the exploits of the Pacific and Atlantic fleets and gave thanks for the victory they helped to win.

President Truman, reviewing an impressive display of seapower stretching seven miles up the Hudson river, led the nation in its observance of Navy Day.

All along America's coastlines, millions crowded aboard famous war vessels riding proudly in home ports after months and years of battle. Spectacular displays of air power were planned, with 1,200 planes in the New York celebration alone.

Britain's Royal Navy was to be represented at the New York celebrations by admiral of the fleet Sir James F. Somerville, head of the British Admiralty delegation in Washington.

Naval attaches of Australia and Canada were also invited by the president to take part in the New York ceremonies and all British ships in American ports were directed by Rear Admiral J. W. A. Waller, British Navy Maintenance and Supply representative in the United States, to dress ship in honor of Navy Day.

At San Francisco, the battleships South Dakota, Alabama, Wisconsin and Indian rode at anchor, with the Carrier Yorktown and Bon Homme Richard and other fleet units.

Los Angeles planned a parade of 15,000 and a spectacle at depicting the signing of surrender terms by the Japanese aboard the Battleship Missouri. The Missouri, itself, was among 47 warships in New York harbor.

Troops on Move

By The Canadian Press

Due at Victoria — H.M.S. Glory (Friday) with 158 Canadians and 1,300 British servicemen repatriated from the Far East.

Arrived at Halifax— S.S. Queen Elizabeth (Friday) with more than 12,000 Canadian service personnel.

NONE REPORTED MISSING

Orillia, Oct. 27 (CP) — Orillia police were still puzzled today about the identity of a human foot—chopped with an axe from the still-warm body of a 12-year-old boy, according to medical experts and found at a street intersection in central Orillia three weeks ago. No persons have been reported missing in this district recently. The foot was the only part of the body found.

NEED HAVE NO FEAR

Regina, Oct. 27 (CP) — Premier T. C. Douglas said in a statement of his government's policy yesterday Saskatchewan's business men need have no fear of interference by the C.C.F. government in "any legitimate business undertaking which is rendering a service to the community and does not constitute a monopoly."

Five Arrested, Believed to be 'Polka Dot' Gang

Toronto, Oct. 27—(CP)—Police said they were holding on vagrancy charges five men they believe to be members of the "Polka Dot" gang who have perpetrated a series of bank holdups and other robberies in Ontario. No names were given.

Police said then men, arrested early this morning, had appeared in court and were remanded without bail. Patrol Sergeant E. Sisson and a newcomer on the force, 20-year-old Earl Snyder, just released from the navy, captured the men after a chase through city streets in the western section of Toronto.

Following a wave of robberies and hold-ups across Ontario city police here received information that the Polka-Dot gang might have a hide-out just north of Toronto. A number of places in North York township on the northern fringe of the city were searched.

In northwest Toronto during the night the five arrested men were seen in a motorcar to which the police gave chase. The pursued car was overtaken at Van Horne and Dufferin Streets and Cadet Synder held all five suspects in the car at the point of a sawed-off shotgun until Patrol Sgt. Sisson was able to get out of the car and other officers appeared on the scene.

When arrested, none of the five had polka-dot handkerchiefs, the distinguishing mask of the gang. Neither did they carry arms.

In court Crown Counsel Norman Borins opposed any bail for the suspects. "These men are suspected, of being associated with what is now known as the Polka-Dot Gang," he said.

Stevedores Agree To Return to Work

London, Oct. 27 (CP) — Stevedores at Bristol and Avonmouth agreed today to return to work immediately and to appeal to striking workers at other British ports to take similar action.

Their decision was sent to Arthur Deakin, general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union which has urged the workers to go back to the docks.

In London, dockers voted to stay on strike until the government intervenes. Thomas Powell and J. P. McLoughlin, leaders of the London strike committee, urged those attending a mass meeting to appeal to the labor government of Prime Minister Attlee for an extension of its nationalization policy to include the docking industry.

Yesterday 1,200 dock workers at Belfast quit work in sympathy with the strike across the Irish Sea which has called more than 41,000 British dock workers from their jobs. More thousands of troops were sent to major ports in the United Kingdom to unload food ships left stranded by the work stoppage arising from a demand for a pay increase of $1.80 daily.

NAVAL ESTIMATES UNDER SEARCHING EXAMINATION

Corvettes, Fairmiles Now Declared Surplus But Frigates Retained For Training Purposes

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — In a searching examination of naval estimates, the Commons covered the Royal Canadian Navy yesterday from stem to stern.

It was a steady five-hour grind of questions and answers as Navy Minister Abbott piloted the estimates, part of the 1945-46 war appropriation bill, through an item-by-item study.

Under questioning by opposition speakers, some critical of certain items, Mr. Abbott said:

1. Corvettes and Fairmiles, used effectively against the enemy during the war, had been declared surplus and now were for sale.

2. Some frigates, slightly larger than corvettes, had been retained for training purposes.

3. Until conditions of service in the post-war force had been decided personnel would receive pay and allowances on the war-time scale.

4. Recruiting for the navy was suspended in June but probably would be resumed in a month or two.

Conditions to be Announced.

Mr. Abbott said conditions of peacetime service would be announced before next March 31 and if anyone who had signed on in the interim force decided the terms did not suit him he would be relieved of his undertaking to serve until September, 1947.

Plans for the peacetime force called for larger ships, such as cruisers, aircraft carriers, destroyers and ancillary craft, and it was hoped ships of the permanent navy would make cruises to various parts of the world.

Mr. Abbott took under consideration an "excellent" suggestion by Maj. E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops)—that the government study the possibility of pooling—for economy—the signal training facilities of the three armed services.

Replying to Howard Green, (PC—Vancouver South), who asked if it was planned to maintain facilities for the manufacture of naval guns, Mr. Abbott said this would be difficult because there were ample stocks of guns on hand and it was not even known whether these would be useful in a future war.

At one point, during discussion of an item covering ammunition, L. E. Cardiff (PC—Huron North) asked if the item included shells for hunters' guns, to which the Minister quipped:

"No, we do not indulge in duck-shooting in the navy except by accident".

Mr. Abbott said that as a result of the end of the war the navy had more ammunition than it could use and surpluses were being "drowned" in the sea. The $9,000,000 item for ammunition in the current estimates included $5,000,000 for ammunition already delivered and $4,000,000 for ammunition manufactured before contracts could be cancelled.

Surplus depth charges and other types of ammunition were being dumped at sea because this was considered more economical than storing them in magazines.

Hope Skills Not Lost.

Mr. Abbott said he hoped for a "close liaison" during peacetime between the services planning departments and heavy industry, which had been the main source of big guns in Canada. It was to be hoped the skills developed in Canada during the war would not be lost. A cabinet committee had maintained such liaison during the war and some similar arrangement may be made during the peace.

Archbishop Says Atom Bomb "Hand Writing on Wall" Unless Controlled

London, Oct. 27 — (CP) —Unless controlled by an international organization, the atomic bomb is "the handwriting on the wall" foreshadowing fulfillment of Biblical prophesies of the end of the world, Most Rev. Dr. Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York, said today.

"Our statesmen must create some international organization to whose hand the secret and manufacture of these bombs may be entrusted;" the Archbishop wrote in his November Diocesan letter.

The Archbishop said the international organization "must control such overwhelming force that it could retaliate at once on any nation that attempted to decide an issue by a sudden attack on its adversary."

"The Biblical declaration that the end of the world will come suddenly," he said, "is driven home to us with fresh meaning: 'The Heavens shall pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works which are therein shall be burned.'

"The writing on the wall of threatened doom and destruction can now be read clearly by all thoughtful men.

"It is sheer wishful thinking to take comfort in the thought that some defence against the atomic bomb will be found.

"The nations have discovered some of the greatest secrets of nature without learning how to use them rightly. The atomic bomb has suddenly brought us to the edge of a precipice. Fear that we may be compelled to plunge into its depths may make us realize that science and material property cannot save us from destruction."

SELECTION OF FAO DIRECTOR KNOTTY ISSUE FOR PARLEY

Generally Expected, However, That Sir John Orr Will Accept Post

By CLYDE E. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Oct. 27 (CP—One of the knottiest problems of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization Conference—the selection of a director-general and an executive committee—may be decided at a plenary session tentatively planned for this afternoon.

Originally scheduled for yesterday this meeting had to be postponed because of the absence of a number of delegation leaders who had left the conference temporarily while committee work absorbed the delegates.

It was generally expected, according to gossip around the Chateau Frontenac corridors, that Sir John Orr, Scottish nutrition expert and member of parliament, would be the conference's selection for director-general, and that he would accept. However, there is expected to be a fight to get this appointment for one of the other countries represented here and some debate may take place in plenary sessions.

Studied at Glasgow.

He studied ten years at Glasgow university from which he graduated in three faculties—arts, science and medicine—and last week he was elected rector of his Alma Mater for a three-year term. He was Knighted in 1935 for his services in movements designed to raise health standards everywhere by nutritional science and the distribution of sufficient food among under-fed peoples.

As a scientist, Sir John founded and directed until his recent election to parliament for the Scottish Universities, the Rowett Institute for Research in Animal Nutrition in Aberdeen. As a practical farmer, he gained experience in operation of the institute's 1,000-acre stock farm, and he owns and actively operates a large mixed farm in Angus County.

There seems no likelihood that any additional countries would sign the constitution today. Thirty-four countries have signed, and two, Bolivia and Ecuador, have been accepted as full members, but their signing has been delayed, because they have no delegation here.

Soviet Russia's delegation, while taking full part in deliberations and committee work, and contributing valuably according to the conference chairman, L. B. Pearson, has not yet received authority from Moscow to sign the constitution.

RUSSIA REFUSES CHINESE TO LAND TROOPS AT DAIREN

Distinct Uneasiness Prevails in Chungking About Russia's China Policy

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Oct. 27 — (AP) — A feeling of distinct uneasiness prevailed in Chungking today about Russia's China policy, as indicated by Moscow's reported refusal to allow Chinese government troops to land at Dairen and Port Arthur.

This alleged refusal was considered by some here an open violation of Chinese Sovereignty over Manchuria, specifically acknowledged by Russia in the recent Sino-Soviet pact.

Official Chinese quarters showed pronounced reticence in discussing Sino-Soviet relations, in obvious fear of incurring Moscow's displeasure, but strong undercurrents of resentment were not difficult to trace.

Chinese circles were perturbed about the alleged Russian transfer of much of Manchuria's movable wealth, which from testimony of reputable witnesses was accepted here as fact.

Junior officials assigned to posts in Manchuria privately confided to friends that all Chinese appointees were required tacit if not explicit approval of Soviet authorities.

Although the Sino-Soviet pact provided that Russian material aid to China be made through the central government, different quarters here claimed this clause was not being fulfilled. They complained that Moscow had not severed all lines with Chinese Communists.

Resume Defiant Attitude

The Communists, who at first seemed awed by the Sino-Soviet pact and anxious for agreement with Chungking, lately have re-assumed a defiant attitude as evidenced in repeated accusations that central government troops provoked clashes in different parts of the country.

Another sign that not all was going well between Chungking and Moscow was a reported Russian request for China to pay the cost of the Soviet invasion and occupation of Manchuria.

Still another cause for concern was the troubled situation in Inner Mongolia, about which the central government and the Communists were vieing for supremacy, each accusing the other of provoking clashes likely to lead to open civil war.

Adding to the general uneasiness here was admission today by both factions that protracted negotiations between the government and the Communists to settle major issues were deadlocked. It was rumored in Chungking that President Chiang Kai-Shek planned shortly to make an important statement acknowledging the deterioration in relations betweens Chungking and Yenan, Communist headquarters.

VICTORY LOAN NEAR ONE-THIRD MARK WITH RECORD

$406,085,550 Reached Going Into Closing Day of Campaign's First Week

Ottawa, Oct. 27. (CP)— Canada's ninth and largest Victory Loan for a minimum of $1,500,000,000 to finance her reconversion, swept on today on a tide of continued heavy subscriptions across the nation and the National War Finance Committee announced the total had reached $406,085,550 going into the closing day of the campaign's first week.

The five-day figure was more than $50,000,000 ahead of subscriptions at the same point of the eighth loan drive last Spring when the total for the first five days was $356,027,250.

Friday's sales were $86,261,350 against $76,603,400 for the corresponding day of the last loan. Breaking down Friday's figures the committee said general sales to individuals and payroll subscriptions totalled $45,375,800 compared with $39,563,300 for the camparable day of the eighth loan and large-investing business firms and corporations subscribed $40,885,550 yesterday compared with $37,040,100.

Overall sales in Alberta at the end of the fifth day of the loan amounted to $15,151,600 on a quota of $51,000,000.

Workers in every plant in every city, town and village in the four Ontario units of Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Leeds and Grenville, and Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry exceeded their payroll objectives. Many of the 45 plants promptly set themselves new quotas.

Bowlers Play for Bonds.

In Vancouver, 300 teams representing 1,500 bowlers are taking part in a "bowling for bonds" tournament. Bowlers are paying a $1 entry fee and prizes total $1,500 in Victory Bonds. A similar competition is planned for golfers next week.

Provincial Headquarters in Montreal announced last night the Quebec total stood at $81,762,005 or 14.92 of the $421,000,000 objective at the end of the fifth day. The five-day total for Montreal Island hit $60,990,950 for 19.55 per cent of quota.

In the first four days of the drive 168,836 Ontario subscribers applied for $141,278,500 worth on a provincial target of $679,345,600.

Lanark County was $204,050 ahead of the pace of the eighth loan, with applications from 17,490 individuals totalling $799,850 or 25 per cent of the county's quota. Perth led the communities with $222,500.

In the "Special Names" category the biggest subscribers Thursday were the Manufacturers Life Insurance.

Roosevelt's Vision Lauded at U.S. Naval Ceremony

Truman Says Late President Helped to Stem Aggression

New York, Oct. 27 (AP) — President Truman commissioned the Aircraft Carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt today as a symbol of the United States pledge to the United Nations to help "stop any international gangster."

In his first New York speech since he suceeded the man whose name is inscribed in bronze on the mighty new warship, the president paid warm tribute to Mr. Roosevelt's foreign and domestic policies and stressed international co-operation. Mr. Truman said:

"This ship is a symbol of our commitment to the United Nations' organization to reach out anywhere in the world and to help the peace-loving nations of the world stop any international gangster.

"A hundred hours after leaving New York this ship could be off the coast of Africa. In five days she could cross the Western Pacific from Pearl Harbor to the Philippines. This vessel alone could put more than 100 fighting planes over a target.

Law to Reign Over Force

The president said the United States will strive to bring that day closer when law rather than force will be the "arbiter of international relations." Until then, he urged that the nation make sure that "no possible aggressor is going to be tempted by any weakness on the part of the United States."

"One of the pleasant duties in the exacting daily life of a president is to award honors to our fighting men for courage and valor in war," Mr. Truman said. "In the commissioning of this ship, the American people are honoring a stalwart hero of this war who gave his life in the service of this country. His name is engraved on this great carrier, as it is in the hearts of men and women of goodwill the world over—Franklin D. Roosevelt.'

"If anyone can be called the father of the new American navy which is typified by this magnificent vessel, it is he. From his first day as president he started to build it.

Worked for World Peace

"Even as he started to build the navy, he began to work for world peace. By his realistic good-neighbor policy, by reciprocal trade agreements, by constant appeal to international arbitration instead of force, he worked valiantly in the cause of peace. By his constant battle for the forgotten man he sought to remove the social and economic inequalities which have so often been at the root of conflict at home and abroad. And when he saw the clouds of aggression forming across the seas to the east and to the west, he issued warning after warning which, had they been heeded in time, might have staved off this tragic conflict.

"But through it all, he never faltered in his work to build up the American Navy. For he understood, as few men did, the importance to the survival of this country of the mission of its navy — the control of the sea. The Axis powers understood. That is why Germany so tried to drive us from the sea by her submarines. That is why Japan tried to destroy our navy. They knew that if they succeeded, they might conquer all the nations of the earth one by one, while the Allies were helpless to reach each other across the oceans of the world.

"We won the Battle of the Oceans. By that victory the United Nations were knitted into a fighting whole, and the Axis powers were doomed to defeat everywhere."

"Having done all this for war, can we do any less for peace? Certainly we should not. The same riches, the same skill and energy of America must not be used so that all our people are better fed, better clothed, better housed; so that they can get work at good wages, adequate care for their health, decent hours for their families, security for their old age, and more of the good thinks of life.

"When we see these goals before ourselves we know that we are carrying on the work and the vision and the aims of the man whose name is on this ship. And no man in our generation, or in any generation, has done more to enable this nation to move forward toward those objectives."

Ley's Farewell Note Tells of Shame At Being Classed As a Criminal

Nuernberg, Oct. 27 —(Reuters) —Dr. Robert Ley, German Labor front chief who committed suicide in a prison cell Thursday night, left a note expressing satisfaction at his treatment, but declaring he couldn't stand being a criminal.

Written in German, the note said:

"Farewell — I can't stand this shame any longer. Physically nothing lacking, food good, warm in my cell, Americans correct and partially friendly.

"Spiritually I have reading matter and write whatever I want. I receive paper and pencil. They do more for my health than necessary and I may smoke and receive tobacco and coffee.

"I may walk at least 20 minutes every day. Up to this point everything is in order, but the fact that I should be a criminal—this is what I can't stand."

Wants Reconciliation.

Ley's statement, declaring the Nazis "have foresaken God and therefore were forsaken by God," asserted the Nazis themselves must tell the youth of Germany that anti-Semitism was a "mistake" because "the youth will not believe our opponents."

The one-time German Labor Leader outlines a three-point "plan" through which, he said: "Jews and Germans can live together" and Germany can "solve the Jewish problem."

Ley's document, released after he was buried in an unmarked grave, said:

"The outspoken anti-Semites have to become the first fighters" for this idea. "They have to find the courage to conquer themselves. They have to show their people the way. God has taught me that in my cell in Nuernberg."

Ley was one of several Nuernberg prisoners awaiting trial who have professed interest in religion since their capture.

"In anti-Semitism we have violated a basic commandment of His (God's) creation," Ley wrote. "Anti-Semitism distorted our outlook and we made grave errors.

"To tolerate the Jew is not enough. We have to eradicte distrust. We have to meet the Jews with open hearts and on a clear basis. We have to clean up our mutual relationship," he said.

Plan for Jews.

This was Ley's plan:

(a) First, the creation of a board of Jews and anti-Semites, honestly prepared to travel this road and to find the conditions under which Jews and Germans can live together.

(b) Executive committee, again Jews and Germans together, to execute the agreed-up on arrangements.

(c) An organization for re-education and propaganda to disseminate these ideas down to the smallest village.

His latest idea, Ley said, was not the admission of a mistake, but a logical conclusion drawn from what had happened to Germany. It was, moreover, a conclusion that could only have been reached by one who had been an anti-Semite. And this, said Ley,

Truman to Review 7 Miles of Warships In Hudson River

Navy to Receive Tribute Of Country it Protected

New York, Oct. 27 — (AP) — Seven miles of battle-grey warships, mighty units of the proud United States Navy, were arrayed in the Hudson River today for a spectacular Navy Day review by President Truman.

Guns a-bristle and battle banners flying, the vessels stretched from the shadows of mid-Manhattan skyscrapers to Spuyten Duyvil seven miles up the river to receive the tribute of the country they helped to bring to victory.

President Truman, in New York for the first time since he entered the White House, was to open Navy Day observance at 10:30 a.m. E.S.T. at the New York Navy yard, commissioning the 45,000-ton aircraft carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt.

Then, at the head of a 46-car motorcade, the President planned to tour 25 miles of city streets and review a parade of 2,000 Navy men and women.

At Central Park, he was scheduled to make a speech described by his press secretary as the most important he ever made. It was to be his first major address on foreign policy, made against a background of stirring world developments.

Aboard the battleship Missouri, the President had a luncheon engagement with Vice-Admiral Jonas H. Ingram, commander of the Atlantic Fleet.

Millions were lining New York's Riverside Drive and New Jersey's Palisades to see the Commander-in-Chief, aboard the the destroyer Renshaw, inspect the 47-ship armada in the Hudson from 3:30 p.m. to 5:30.

Britain to be Represented

Her ports crowded with warships and skies filled with planes, the United States today celebrated the exploits of the Pacific and Atlantic fleets and gave thanks for the victory they helped to win.

President Truman, reviewing an impressive display of seapower stretching seven miles up the Hudson river, led the nation in its observance of Navy Day.

All along America's coastlines, millions crowded aboard famous war vessels riding proudly in home ports after months and years of battle. Spectacular displays of air power were planned, with 1,200 planes in the New York celebration alone.

Britain's Royal Navy was to be represented at the New York celebrations by admiral of the fleet Sir James F. Somerville, head of the British Admiralty delegation in Washington.

Naval attaches of Australia and Canada were also invited by the president to take part in the New York ceremonies and all British ships in American ports were directed by Rear Admiral J. W. A. Waller, British Navy Maintenance and Supply representative in the United States, to dress ship in honor of Navy Day.

At San Francisco, the battleships South Dakota, Alabama, Wisconsin and Indian rode at anchor, with the Carrier Yorktown and Bon Homme Richard and other fleet units.

Los Angeles planned a parade of 15,000 and a spectacle at depicting the signing of surrender terms by the Japanese aboard the Battleship Missouri. The Missouri, itself, was among 47 warships in New York harbor.

Troops on Move

By The Canadian Press

Due at Victoria — H.M.S. Glory (Friday) with 158 Canadians and 1,300 British servicemen repatriated from the Far East.

Arrived at Halifax— S.S. Queen Elizabeth (Friday) with more than 12,000 Canadian service personnel.

NONE REPORTED MISSING

Orillia, Oct. 27 (CP) — Orillia police were still puzzled today about the identity of a human foot—chopped with an axe from the still-warm body of a 12-year-old boy, according to medical experts and found at a street intersection in central Orillia three weeks ago. No persons have been reported missing in this district recently. The foot was the only part of the body found.

NEED HAVE NO FEAR

Regina, Oct. 27 (CP) — Premier T. C. Douglas said in a statement of his government's policy yesterday Saskatchewan's business men need have no fear of interference by the C.C.F. government in "any legitimate business undertaking which is rendering a service to the community and does not constitute a monopoly."

Five Arrested, Believed to be 'Polka Dot' Gang

Toronto, Oct. 27—(CP)—Police said they were holding on vagrancy charges five men they believe to be members of the "Polka Dot" gang who have perpetrated a series of bank holdups and other robberies in Ontario. No names were given.

Police said then men, arrested early this morning, had appeared in court and were remanded without bail. Patrol Sergeant E. Sisson and a newcomer on the force, 20-year-old Earl Snyder, just released from the navy, captured the men after a chase through city streets in the western section of Toronto.

Following a wave of robberies and hold-ups across Ontario city police here received information that the Polka-Dot gang might have a hide-out just north of Toronto. A number of places in North York township on the northern fringe of the city were searched.

In northwest Toronto during the night the five arrested men were seen in a motorcar to which the police gave chase. The pursued car was overtaken at Van Horne and Dufferin Streets and Cadet Synder held all five suspects in the car at the point of a sawed-off shotgun until Patrol Sgt. Sisson was able to get out of the car and other officers appeared on the scene.

When arrested, none of the five had polka-dot handkerchiefs, the distinguishing mask of the gang. Neither did they carry arms.

In court Crown Counsel Norman Borins opposed any bail for the suspects. "These men are suspected, of being associated with what is now known as the Polka-Dot Gang," he said.

Stevedores Agree To Return to Work

London, Oct. 27 (CP) — Stevedores at Bristol and Avonmouth agreed today to return to work immediately and to appeal to striking workers at other British ports to take similar action.

Their decision was sent to Arthur Deakin, general secretary of the Transport and General Workers Union which has urged the workers to go back to the docks.

In London, dockers voted to stay on strike until the government intervenes. Thomas Powell and J. P. McLoughlin, leaders of the London strike committee, urged those attending a mass meeting to appeal to the labor government of Prime Minister Attlee for an extension of its nationalization policy to include the docking industry.

Yesterday 1,200 dock workers at Belfast quit work in sympathy with the strike across the Irish Sea which has called more than 41,000 British dock workers from their jobs. More thousands of troops were sent to major ports in the United Kingdom to unload food ships left stranded by the work stoppage arising from a demand for a pay increase of $1.80 daily.

NAVAL ESTIMATES UNDER SEARCHING EXAMINATION

Corvettes, Fairmiles Now Declared Surplus But Frigates Retained For Training Purposes

By GEORGE KITCHEN
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 27 — (CP) — In a searching examination of naval estimates, the Commons covered the Royal Canadian Navy yesterday from stem to stern.

It was a steady five-hour grind of questions and answers as Navy Minister Abbott piloted the estimates, part of the 1945-46 war appropriation bill, through an item-by-item study.

Under questioning by opposition speakers, some critical of certain items, Mr. Abbott said:

1. Corvettes and Fairmiles, used effectively against the enemy during the war, had been declared surplus and now were for sale.

2. Some frigates, slightly larger than corvettes, had been retained for training purposes.

3. Until conditions of service in the post-war force had been decided personnel would receive pay and allowances on the war-time scale.

4. Recruiting for the navy was suspended in June but probably would be resumed in a month or two.

Conditions to be Announced.

Mr. Abbott said conditions of peacetime service would be announced before next March 31 and if anyone who had signed on in the interim force decided the terms did not suit him he would be relieved of his undertaking to serve until September, 1947.

Plans for the peacetime force called for larger ships, such as cruisers, aircraft carriers, destroyers; and ancillary craft, and it was hoped ships of the permanent navy would make cruises to various parts of the world.

Mr. Abbott took under consideration an "excellent" suggestion by Maj. E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops)—that the government study the possibility of pooling—for economy—the signal training facilities of the three armed services.

Replying to Howard Green, (PC—Vancouver South), who asked if it was planned to maintain facilities for the manufacture of naval guns, Mr. Abbott said this would be difficult because there were ample stocks of guns on hand and it was not even known whether these would be useful in a future war.

At one point, during discussion of an item covering ammunition, L. E. Cardiff (PC—Huron North) asked if the item included shells for hunters' guns, to which the Minister quipped:

"No, we do not indulge in duck-shooting in the navy except by accident".

Mr. Abbott said that as a result of the end of the war the navy had more ammunition than it could use and surpluses were being "drowned" in the sea. The $9,000,000 item for ammunition in the current estimates included $5,000,000 for ammunition already delivered and $4,000,000 for ammunition manufactured before contracts could be cancelled.

Surplus depth charges and other types of ammunition were being dumped at sea because this was considered more economical than storing them in magazines.

Hope Skills Not Lost.

Mr. Abbott said he hoped for a "close liaison" during peacetime between the services planning departments and heavy industry, which had been the main source of big guns in Canada. It was to be hoped the skills developed in Canada during the war would not be lost. A cabinet committee had maintained such liaison during the war and some similar arrangement may be made during the peace.

Archbishop Says Atom Bomb "Hand Writing on Wall" Unless Controlled

London, Oct. 27 — (CP) —Unless controlled by an international organization, the atomic bomb is "the handwriting on the wall" foreshadowing fulfillment of Biblical prophesies of the end of the world, Most Rev. Dr. Cyril Forster Garbett, Archbishop of York, said today.

"Our statesmen must create some international organization to whose hand the secret and manufacture of these bombs may be entrusted," the Archbishop wrote in his November Diocesan letter.

The Archbishop said the international organization "must control such overwhelming force that it could retaliate at once on any nation that attempted to decide an issue by a sudden attack on its adversary."

"The Biblical declaration that the end of the world will come suddenly," he said, "is driven home to us with fresh meaning: 'The Heavens shall pass away with a great noise and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also, and the works which are therein shall be burned.'

"The writing on the wall of threatened doom and destruction can now be read clearly by all thoughtful men.

"It is sheer wishful thinking to take comfort in the thought that some defence against the atomic bomb will be found.

"The nations have discovered some of the greatest secrets of nature without learning how to use them rightly. The atomic bomb has suddenly brought us to the edge of a precipice. Fear that we may be compelled to plunge into its depths may make us realize that science and material property cannot save us from destruction."

SELECTION OF FAO DIRECTOR KNOTTY ISSUE FOR PARLEY

Generally Expected, However, That Sir John Orr Will Accept Post

By CLYDE E. BLACKBURN
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Quebec, Oct. 27 (CP—One of the knottiest problems of the United Nations Food and Agriculture Organization Conference—the selection of a director-general and an executive committee—may be decided at a plenary session tentatively planned for this afternoon.

Originally scheduled for yesterday this meeting had to be postponed because of the absence of a number of delegation leaders who had left the conference temporarily while committee work absorbed the delegates.

It was generally expected, according to gossip around the Chateau Frontenac corridors, that Sir John Orr, Scottish nutrition expert and member of parliament, would be the conference's selection for director-general, and that he would accept. However, there is expected to be a fight to get this appointment for one of the other countries represented here and some debate may take place in plenary sessions.

Studied at Glasgow.

He studied ten years at Glasgow university from which he graduated in three faculties—arts, science and medicine—and last week he was elected rector of his Alma Mater for a three-year term. He was Knighted in 1935 for his services in movements designed to raise health standards everywhere by nutritional science and the distribution of sufficient food among under-fed peoples.

As a scientist, Sir John founded and directed until his recent election to parliament for the Scottish Universities, the Rowett Institute for Research in Animal Nutrition in Aberdeen. As a practical farmer, he gained experience in operation of the institute's 1,000-acre stock farm, and he owns and actively operates a large mixed farm in Angus County.

There seems no likelihood that any additional countries would sign the constitution today. Thirty-four countries have signed, and two, Bolivia and Ecuador, have been accepted as full members, but their signing has been delayed, because they have no delegation here.

Soviet Russia's delegation, while taking full part in deliberations and committee work, and contributing valuably according to the conference chairman, L. B. Pearson, has not yet received authority from Moscow to sign the constitution.

RUSSIA REFUSES CHINESE TO LAND TROOPS AT DAIREN

Distinct Uneasiness Prevails in Chungking About Russia's China Policy

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Oct. 27 — (AP) — A feeling of distinct uneasiness prevailed in Chungking today about Russia's China policy, as indicated by Moscow's reported refusal to allow Chinese government troops to land at Dairen and Port Arthur.

This alleged refusal was considered by some here an open violation of Chinese Sovereignty over Manchuria, specifically acknowledged by Russia in the recent Sino-Soviet pact.

Official Chinese quarters showed pronounced reticence in discussing Sino-Soviet relations, in obvious fear of incurring Moscow's displeasure, but strong undercurrents of resentment were not difficult to trace.

Chinese circles were perturbed about the alleged Russian transfer of much of Manchuria's movable wealth, which from testimony of reputable witnesses was accepted here as fact.

Junior officials assigned to posts in Manchuria privately confided to friends that all Chinese appointees were required tacit if not explicit approval of Soviet authorities.

Although the Sino-Soviet pact provided that Russian material aid to China be made through the central government, different quarters here claimed this clause was not being fulfilled. They complained that Moscow had not severed all lines with Chinese Communists.

Resume Defiant Attitude

The Communists, who at first seemed awed by the Sino-Soviet pact and anxious for agreement with Chungking, lately have reassumed a defiant attitude as evidenced in repeated accusations that central government troops provoked clashes in different parts of the country.

Another sign that not all was going well between Chungking and Moscow was a reported Russian request for China to pay the cost of the Soviet invasion and occupation of Manchuria.

Still another cause for concern was the troubled situation in Inner Mongolia, about which the central government and the Communists were vieing for supremacy, each accusing the other of provoking clashes likely to lead to open civil war.

Adding to the general uneasiness here was admission today by both factions that protracted negotiations between the government and the Communists to settle major issues were deadlocked. It was rumored in Chungking that President Chiang Kai-Shek planned shortly to make an important statement acknowledging the deterioration in relations betweens Chungking and Yenan, Communist headquarters.

VICTORY LOAN NEAR ONE-THIRD MARK WITH RECORD

$406,085,550 Reached Going Into Closing Day of Campaign's First Week

Ottawa, Oct. 27. (CP)— Canada's ninth and largest Victory Loan for a minimum of $1,500,000,000 to finance her reconversion, swept on today on a tide of continued heavy subscriptions across the nation and the National War Finance Committee announced the total had reached $406,085,550 going into the closing day of the campaign's first week.

The five-day figure was more than $50,000,000 ahead of subscriptions at the same point of the eighth loan drive last Spring when the total for the first five days was $356,027,250.

Friday's sales were $86,261,350 against $76,603,400 for the corresponding day of the last loan. Breaking down Friday's figures the committee said general sales to individuals and payroll subscriptions totalled $45,375,800 compared with $39,563,300 for the camparable day of the eighth loan and large-investing business firms and corporations subscribed $40,885,550 yesterday compared with $37,040,100.

Overall sales in Alberta at the end of the fifth day of the loan amounted to $15,151,600 on a quota of $51,000,000.

Workers in every plant in every city, town and village in the four Ontario units of Lennox and Addington, Frontenac, Leeds and Grenville, and Stormont, Dundas and Glengarry exceeded their payroll objectives. Many of the 45 plants promptly set themselves new quotas.

Bowlers Play for Bonds.

In Vancouver, 300 teams representing 1,500 bowlers are taking part in a "bowling for bonds" tournament. Bowlers are paying a $1 entry fee and prizes total $1,500 in Victory Bonds. A similar competition is planned for golfers next week.

Provincial Headquarters in Montreal announced last night the Quebec total stood at $81,762,005 or 14.92 of the $421,000,000 objective at the end of the fifth day. The five-day total for Montreal Island hit $80,990,950 for 19.55 per cent of quota.

In the first four days of the drive 168,836 Ontario subscribers applied for $141,278,500 worth on a provincial target of $679,345,600.

Lanark County was $204,050 ahead of the pace of the eighth loan, with applications from 17,490 individuals totalling $799,850 or 25 per cent of the county's quota. Perth led the communities with $222,500.

In the "Special Names" category the biggest subscribers Thursday were the Manufacturers Life Insurance.

Roosevelt's Vision Lauded at U.S. Naval Ceremony

Truman Says Late President Helped to Stem Aggression

New York, Oct. 27 (AP) — President Truman commissioned the Aircraft Carrier Franklin D. Roosevelt today as a symbol of the United States pledge to the United Nations to help "stop any international gangster."

In his first New York speech since he suceeded the man whose name is inscribed in bronze on the mighty new warship, the president paid warm tribute to Mr. Roosevelt's foreign and domestic policies and stressed international co-operation. Mr. Truman said:

"This ship is a symbol of our commitment to the United Nations' organization to reach out anywhere in the world and to help the peace-loving nations of the world stop any international gangster.

"A hundred hours after leaving New York this ship could be off the coast of Africa. In five days she could cross the Western Pacific from Pearl Harbor to the Philippines. This vessel alone could put more than 100 fighting planes over a target.

Law to Reign Over Force

The president said the United States will strive to bring that day closer when law rather than force will be the "arbiter of international relations." Until then, he urged that the nation make sure that "no possible aggressor is going to be tempted by any weakness on the part of the United States."

"One of the pleasant duties in the exacting daily life of a president is to award honors to our fighting men for courage and valor in war," Mr. Truman said. "In the commissioning of this ship, the American people are honoring a stalwart hero of this war who gave his life in the service of this country. His name is engraved on this great carrier, as it is in the hearts of men and women of goodwill the world over—Franklin D. Roosevelt.

"If anyone can be called the father of the new American navy which is typified by this magnificent vessel, it is he. From his first day as president he started to build it.

Worked for World Peace

"Even as he started to build the navy, he began to work for world peace. By his realistic good-neighbor policy, by reciprocal trade agreements, by constant appeal to international arbitration instead of force, he worked valiantly in the cause of peace. By his constant battle for the forgotten man he sought to remove the social and economic inequalities which have so often been at the root of conflict at home and abroad. And when he saw the clouds of aggression forming across the seas to the east and to the west, he issued warning after warning which, had they been heeded in time, might have staved off this tragic conflict.

"But through it all, he never faltered in his work to build up the American Navy. For he understood, as few men did, the importance to the survival of this country of the mission of its navy — the control of the sea. The Axis powers understood. That is why Germany so tried to drive us from the sea by her submarines. That is why Japan tried to destroy our navy. They knew that if they succeeded, they might conquer all the nations of the earth one by one, while the Allies were helpless to reach each other across the oceans of the world.

"We won the Battle of the Oceans. By that victory the United Nations were knitted into a fighting whole, and the Axis powers were doomed to defeat everywhere."

"Having done all this for war, can we do any less for peace? Certainly we should not. The same riches, the same skill and energy of America must not be used so that all our people are better fed, better clothed, better housed; so that they can get work at good wages, adequate care for their health, decent hours for their families, security for their old age, and more of the good thinks of life.

"When we see these goals before ourselves we know that we are carrying on the work and the vision and the aims of the man whose name is on this ship. And no man in our generation, or in any generation, has done more to enable this nation to move forward toward those objectives."

Ley's Farewell Note Tells of Shame At Being Classed As a Criminal

Nuernberg, Oct. 27 —(Reuters) —Dr. Robert Ley, German Labor front chief who committed suicide in a prison cell Thursday night, left a note expressing satisfaction at his treatment, but declaring he couldn't stand being a criminal.

Written in German, the note said:

"Farewell — I can't stand this shame any longer. Physically nothing lacking, food good, warm in my cell, Americans correct and partially friendly.

"Spiritually I have reading matter and write whatever I want. I receive paper and pencil. They do more for my health than necessary and I may smoke and receive tobacco and coffee.

"I may walk at least 20 minutes every day. Up to this point everything is in order, but the fact that I should be a criminal—this is what I can't stand."

Wants Reconciliation.

Ley's statement, declaring the Nazis "have foresaken God and therefore were forsaken by God," asserted the Nazis themselves must tell the youth of Germany that anti-Semitism was a "mistake" because "the youth will not believe our opponents."

The one-time German Labor Leader outlines a three-point "plan" through which, he said: "Jews and Germans can live together" and Germany can "solve the Jewish problem."

Ley's document, released after he was buried in an unmarked grave, said:

"The outspoken anti-Semites have to become the first fighters" for this idea. "They have to find the courage to conquer themselves. They have to show their people the way. God has taught me that in my cell in Nuernberg."

Ley was one of several Nuernberg prisoners awaiting trial who have professed interest in religion since their capture.

"In anti-Semitism we have violated a basic commandment of His (God's) creation," Ley wrote. "Anti-Semitism distorted our outlook and we made grave errors.

"To tolerate the Jew is not enough. We have to eradicte distrust. We have to meet the Jews with open hearts and on a clear basis. We have to clean up our mutual relationship," he said.

Plan for Jews.

This was Ley's plan:

(a) First, the creation of a board of Jews and anti-Semites, honestly prepared to travel this road and to find the conditions under which Jews and Germans can live together.

(b) Executive committee, again Jews and Germans together, to execute the agreed-up on arrangements.

(c) An organization for re-education and propaganda to disseminate these ideas down to the smallest village.

His latest idea, Ley said, was not the admission of a mistake, but a logical conclusion drawn from what had happened to Germany. It was, moreover, a conclusion that could only have been reached by one who had been an anti-Semite. And this, said Ley,

The Reverend Rural Dean Payne read a paper on "Church Union from the Historical and Doctrinal Standpoint". This was followed by a paper on "Church Union from the Practical Standpoint", by the Reverend F. A. Smith, B.A., Rector of Trenton.

These papers were much appreciated by all present. An interesting discussion followed, which was effectively summarized by the Lord Bishop of the Diocese.

Votes of thanks were tendered to the readers of the papers, The Reverend C. C. and Mrs. Brazill, and the ladies of the parish, for their hospitality.

Obituary

LATE LIONEL GEO. HARRIS

The funeral of the late Lionel George Harris took place from the Martin Funeral Home Chapel, Church Street, on Friday afternoon, under the joint auspices of Eureka Lodge, A.F. and A.M., and Belleville Branch No. 201, Army and Navy Veterans in Canada.

The service at the Chapel was conducted by the Rev. J. Grant Sparling, rector of Christ Church, who also officiated at the committal service at the graveside.

The Masonic rites were conducted by the lodge Master, Wor. Bro. C. E. Meyers, and Wor. Bro. R. E. Houston, and Rt. Wor. Bro. R. D. Adams. A large number of Masons attended the obsequies.

Members of the Army and Navy Veterans branch here attended in a body with divisional berets and medals of the First and Second Wars, being worn in a last tribute to a gallant departed comrade. Honorary bearers were members of the A. and N. as were the flower bearers.

Conducting the simple, yet impressive graveside rites of his organization was Mr. J. Lazenby, past president of the Belleville branch. At the conclusion of the service, the Veterans deposited red poppies in the grave, stood briefly at attention, saluted and marched away.

Later the Last Post and Reveille sounded a final tribute to a gallant soldier.

Honorary bearers were: Herbert Collins; G. H. Carver; Leonard Fry; William McKenna; William Black and George Hammett, all of the Army and Navy Veterans. Active bearers were "Sandy" Lummiss; Arthur Osterhout; Col. D. Green; George T. Woodley; George McIntosh and Fred Godfrey. Interment took place in Belleville cemetery.

WILLIAM ROSS
(Shannonville)

William Ross of Shannonville died in the Belleville General Hospital early Saturday morning. Death was due to injuries sustained when he was hit by a truck last Monday evening on Dundas Street east. He was in his 57th. year.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MARSHALL B. TERRILL
(Trenton)

Trenton, Oct. 27 (Special) — Marshall Birdwell Terrill, of Trenton, died suddenly at the home of his sister, Mrs. L. Coepper, Grosport, Ontario, on Thursday, October 25th. He was 37 years of age and was a son of Mr. Sherman Terrill.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the Weaver Funeral Home, Trenton, and interment took place at Carrying Place.

Late MRS. JOHN HENCHLIFFE
(Wallbridge)

Wallbridge — A large number of relatives, neighbors and friends gathered at Wallbridge Church last Monday afternoon to pay their last tribute of respect to an aged and highly respected citizen, Mrs. John Henchliffe. A most impressive message was given by the pastor, Rev. H. H. Hillis, and the choir gave a most appropriate selection. Interment was in Frankford Cemetery. The pall bearers were Messrs. Clem. H. Ketcheson, S. M. Nicolson, J. N. Chisholm, German Moore, Frank Harris and Jas. Sine.

Mrs. Henchliffe was the last of a family of twelve, her parents being Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Kemp of Warkworth, Northumberland County. When Mrs. Henchliffe was quite young the family moved to Cashel, Hastings County, and here she married John Henchliffe and made their home. About forty-six years ago they moved to Sidney Township and settled on the farm now occupied by Mr. Barton Henchliffe. After several years of successful farming, the farm work becoming a little too strenuous, they moved to Wallbridge village where they since resided. Mr. Henchliffe died about fifteen years ago but Mrs. Henchliffe still retained the home. About five years ago Mr. and Mrs. Jas. Henchliffe moved in the house with her and have cared for her since. The late Mrs. Henchliffe was a most faithful member of Wallbridge United Church and took a keen interest in all its organizations and everything that had for its object the uplift of the community. She was a life member of the W.M.S. and though for the last few years she was unable to attend the meetings her heart was in the work.

She is survived by three sons, James at home, Bert of Dryden, Ont., and Edwin of Toronto, also an adopted daughter, Laura of Toronto. Her oldest son, Will, died about fifteen years ago. The family have the heartfelt sympathy of the community in their sad bereavement.

FELIX JOSEPH MURPHY
(Melrose)

Felix Joseph Murphy died at his home at Melrose, Tyendinaga Township, early Saturday morning after an illness of several months' duration. Born in Tyendinaga Township, he was in his 29th. year and was a son of Mr. James Murphy and his wife, Mary Ann Kennedy. All his life was passed in the township where he was born and he was engaged in farming.

The late Mr. Murphy was a member of the Holy Name of Mary Church at Marysville, and in connection with the parish he was a member of the Altar Society and the League of the Sacred Heart.

Surviving him are his parents, three sisters, Rev. Sister Mary Alma of Moose Jaw, Sask.; Mary of Toronto, and Bernice at home; one brother, Timothy of Oshawa.

Funeral announcement will be made later.

HERBERT JAMES WATSON
(Campbellford)

The death occurred at the Belleville General Hospital on Friday, October 26th. of Herbert James Watson of Campbellford. Mr. Watson had been a patient in the hospital where his wife is also a patient, since Oct. 11, when the car in which they were driving was in collision with another car near Foxboro.

The late Mr. Watson was born 73 years ago and spent practically all his life at Burnbrae, where he followed farming. In November, 1944, he retired and moved to Campbellford where he has since been living. He was a member of the Presbyterian Church at Burnbrae and was held in highest esteem by the entire community.

He is survived by his wife, one sister, Mrs. Charles Hutcheon of Campbellford and one brother, William Watson of British Columbia.

Funeral notice appears in another column in this issue.

Recommend Victory Bonds for Discharged Active Service Veterans

County Victory Loan committeemen today highly recommended Victory Bonds as being one of the best investments for the discharged active service veteran looking for a safe place to put his gratuity payments while waiting to buy that dream home or acquire a business interest.

Hundreds of Army, Air Force and Navy personnel from Hastings County have received their discharge within the past two or three months, it was pointed out. With gratuity and re-establishment credits now commencing these could be used to make the initial instalment on a Victory Bond. The balance could be paid in easy deferred payments through their local banker.

Prospects point to a decreased interest rate in the near future, according to Victory Loan authorities. Thousands of Canadians, therefore, are taking advantage of the 9th. Victory Loan as a safe investment at double bank interest.

A. G. Austin, Wooler, Elected President Of Telephone Assoc.

A. G. Austin, president of the Murray-Brighton Telephone Co., Limited, with headquarters at Wooler, Ont., was unanimously elected president of the Canadian Independent Telephone Association at the annual meeting of that organization held in Toronto on October 24, and 25.

Introduced as the president-elect to the organization at the annual banquet held in the Crystal Ballroom of the King Edward Hotel, Mr. Austin told the 300 members and guests of the Association present, that the years ahead of independent telephony would be difficult and require the utmost of every man and woman and company in the industry. He referred to the reconstruction job ahead after years of short supply of materials necessary to efficient telephone service; and to the labor problems associated with telephone service of the kind properly expected by subscribers now and when reconstruction of plant and lines can be completed.

President Austin received an inspiring response and ovation following his brief address of acceptance of the responsibilities of chairman of the Board of Governors for the ensuing year. He has long served in the independent telephone field as a member of various important committees and as a member of the Board of Governors for many years. His father, the late D. S. Austin, was president of the same Association in 1924.

34th Field Battery Likely to Arrive Home As a Unit

Unofficial word has been received in the city that the 34th Field Battery, R.C.A., now overseas, will arrive in the city as a unit within the next two or three weeks.

Officers of the reserve battery here, it is understood, will call a meeting of repatriated officers and other rank personnel of the original unit, and others who served with it overseas, in the immediate future to draft tentative plans for a reception for the only city unit that served overseas as an entity.

It is understood that the greater majority of the original battery is now home and only a skeleton personnel of those who went overseas five years ago remains with the unit.

Announcement will be made of the meeting and all ranks of the original battery as well as those of the reserve unit here will be asked to attend.

Kinsmen Continue To Send Cigarettes To Boys Overseas

Despite the boredom of patiently awaiting their "turn" to be repatriated home from overseas, members of the active services seldom fail to write the local Kinsmen Club in appreciation of smokes received through the Kinsmen Fag Fund. Again this week a dozen or more letters of appreciation were received by Kin "Buster" LaBarr thanking the local club for their gesture in continuing to send fags.

The following Belleville boys were each shipped three hundred cigarettes by the Belleville Kinsmen Fag Fund:

C. Allison; A. Angel; E. Aylesworth; R. C. Brown; C. E. Buker; W. Bush; J. E. Clarke; F. Douglas; T. Draddy; R. Finkle; John Gardiner; W. Green; E. Halpin; W. L. Hayes; A. Kalman; R. L. Keegan; J. LEY'S FAREWELL

"is why only you, my German people, may dare to invite the Jews to make their future home with you. It is not strange that nearly all Jews all over the world understand German? Hate and love lie close together.

"Who will help you rebuild, my German people? It is a question of confidence. The prerequisite is and remains the solution to the Jewish problem in Germany. German people: Be a good family father, make an honest balance. You have been totally defeated, yet you possess a marvellous logic, idea, and are a great people. God shows you the way. Learn from your downfall. Reconcile yourself with the Jew. Invite him to make his home with you.

Is the Jew prepared to go alone? If he is intelligent—yes. If not, then I cannot change that. At least I have done my duty by showing humanity the road. God showed me. If the Jew refuses my plan, then the depicted world catastrophe will take its inevitable course."

Ley had attempted suicide four times before he hanged himself, and he prescribed poisoning for his three children before his arrest last May, United States intelligence agents disclosed today.

Ley's secretary, Hildegarde Brueninghoff, said he gave her several vials of poison and sent her to the Bavarian Alps with his children last April when the Nazi collapse drew near.

"Take this if the Russians close in on you, and be certain my children get it", she quoted Ley.

When American troopers arrested Ley, an officer knocked poison capsule from the labor leader's hand before he could cram it into his mouth.

Gave Poison to Goebbels.

Ley told interrogators he had tried unsuccessfully to kill himself on three other occasions—twice by shooting and once by poison.

Ley's pretty 20-year-old mistress said the Nazi labor boss and Propaganda Minister Joseph Goebbels made a suicide pact, and that Ley supplied poison for Goebbels, his wife and five children, reported to have died in the Chancellery before Berlin's fall.

Another of Ley's secretaries, Paula Muller, told intelligence agents that Ley was as close to Hitler as any one in Germany until Mrs. Ley's death.

Mrs. Ley was found dead, locked in her bedroom, in December, 1942. She had been shot through the head.

"Hitler was a regular visitor to the Ley home", Miss Muller said, "and never came without a bouquet of flowers which he insisted on presenting to her personally."

During the visits, which would last three or four hours, she added, Hitler sat by Mrs. Ley on a divan near the fireplace.

"Hitler called to express his sympathy", she said, referring to the night of Mrs. Ley's death, "but he never again visited the

Belleville Division of C.N.R. Rallies to Ninth Victory Loan, Vice Pres. Pringle Opens Campaign

The objective for the Belleville Division employees of the Canadian National Railways in the 9th. Victory Loan drive was announced on Friday by J. F. Pringle, vice-president and general manager, Central Region at a rally held in the shops officially opening the campaign on the division. Mr. Pringle spoke before a gathering of more than 350 officers, key-men and canvassers, who come from all parts of the division, which includes the territory of the railway extending from west end of Brockville yard to Scarborough in the west and north to Midland, Lindsay, Haliburton and Kinmount. He announced that the divisional objective was $457,900, and that of the Southern Ontario District, of which Belleville Division is a part, as $2,404,200. "Results to date are most encouraging," he said, "and there is no question that our objective will be oversubscribed."

Safest and Best Investment

Mr. Pringle was accompanied by R. C. Johnston, general superintendent, Southern Ontario District, and, R. J. Holmes, Central Region Victory Loan Committee representative, who also spoke briefly to the railwaymen. W. G. Doherty, superintendent of the Belleville Division, presided at the meeting, and urged the workers to back the current loan to the fullest possible extent, because in addition to showing our gratitude to our fighting men, it is the safest and best investment in the Dominion. N. Thompson, chief clerk to Mr. Doherty, is campaign manager for the division.

Fine Shewing of Division.

In his opening remarks, Mr. Pringle touched upon the fine showing that the Belleville Division had made in the past, pointing out that in the 8th. Victory Loan campaign, the Belleville Division workers had obtained 110% of their objective.

"The 9th. Victory Loan has been described by the Minister of Finance as "Canada's Greatest Loan," Mr. Pringle said, "in that it aims to cover the nation's borrowing for a 12 month period. The Belleville Division objective is based upon 10½ per cent of the anticipated payroll for the next 12 months, whereas the objective in former loans was based upon 12½ per cent of the payrolls for a six months period."

Seven Vital Reasons.

Seven vital reasons why every employee of the Canadian National Railways should subscribe to the 9th. Victory Loan were given by Mr. Pringle. He looked upon them as debts of honor which every Canadian, regardless of his vocation, must help the nation to meet.

The proper care, restoration to health, if possible, and the rehabilitation of the sick and wounded.

The return home under best possible conditions, on both sea and land, of the many thousands of the fighting services now overseas, a movement which will continue well into the new year before it is finished.

The payment of war service gratuities and re-establishment credits, the training of the returned men for suitable jobs and giving them a proper start in civilian life, things of the utmost importance both to the future of the men and the country.

Pensions which must be provided for the disabled, and for the widows and children of the men who will not come back.

To meet the cost of liquidating existing war contracts, as the war effort had to continue until the last enemy surrendered and peace was assured.

To maintain Canada's share in the expense of the forces required in the European army of occupation to maintain peace and order in Germany and assure against a future war.

To assist those overrun and Germany-occupied countries, Belgium, Holland and France, which were robbed of food and clothing and industries and tools of production destroyed, to get back on their feet, both from a humanitarian standpoint and that of self-interest; for export trade is essential to the future prosperity of Canada.

Railways Have No Reconversion Problems.

"These are the purposes," Mr. Pringle continued, "for which the money you loan the Government will be used. They all are essential purposes. We, on the railways, are more fortunate than those employed in most other industries. We have no reconversion problem. We simply go on using the same tools and producing the same commodity that we have during the war years—and that commodity is transportation. It may be in a slightly lesser quantity; but we do not have to shut down for re-tooling and few, if any, of our men will have to change their jobs. For that reason railwaymen are in a much better position to subscribe to this loan than those in a great many other industries.

"Let me impress this fact upon you: railway prosperity depends upon the prosperity of this country. We cannot be prosperous unless other industries are prosperous, manufacturing and producing goods for us to transport and earning money with which to travel upon our trains. For that reason, if for no other, we are vitally interested in this loan, as the prosperity of Canada for the next year and, perhaps, for years to come, depends upon the Ninth Victory Loan being fully subscribed."

Ministers Honored By Association Before Departure

The Belleville Ministerial Association paid tangible tribute to two of its members at the Y.M.C.A. the other night on the eve of their departure from the city.

Honored by their associates were the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne, rector of St. Thomas' Anglican Church, who was recently appointed Diocesan Commissioner for the Diocese of Ontario, and who will make his headquarters in Kingston, and the Rev. J. A. Dilts, minister of Holloway United Church, who has accepted a charge at Calvary Church, Hamilton. The Rev. C. A. Perkins, B.Th., of Hamilton, will replace Mr. Dilts here in an exchange of pulpits.

The Rev. J. G. Hornsby, newly elected president of the Ministerial Association, presided at the meeting and following a brief eulogistic address presented Mr. Payne with a handsome automatic pencil. The Rev. H. O. Eastman, association secretary, addressed Mr. Dilts and on behalf of his organization presented him with a similar gift.

The recipients made suitable replies of appreciation for the thoughtfulness of their association colleagues and expressed their regret at the severance of happy associations in the city.

Other members of the association present also spoke in honor of the departing members.

IN MEMORIAM

COLDEN — In loving memory of Norman Colden who passed away two years ago, October 28th., 1943.

A beautiful memory of a loved one so dear,
We cherish still with love sincere.
His smiling way and pleasant face are a pleasure to recall.
He had a kindly word for each and died beloved by all.
Some day we hope to meet him,
Some day, we know not when,
To clasp his hand in a better land,
Never to part again.
—Sadly missed by Mother, Sister and Brothers.

PHILLIPS — In loving memory of a dear husband and father, Fred B. Phillips, who passed away October 28th., 1944.

Loving and kind in all his ways,
Upright and just to the end of his days,
Sincere and kind in heart and mind,
What a beautiful memory he left behind.
—Sadly missed by Wife and Family.

COLDEN—In loving memory of our dear brother, Norman James Colden, who passed away October 28, 1943.

His life is a beautiful memory,
His death is our silent grief.
He steps in God's beautiful garden,
In the sunshine of perfect peace.
So leave him in God's keeping,
The rough road safely o'er,
And our dear brother we loved so well
Has only gone before.
—Sadly missed by Lulu and Arnott.

PICTON

County Passes Million Dollar Mark in Drive

Picton, Oct. 27—When returns are tabulated today, Prince Edward County will have passed the million dollar mark in the 9th. Victory Loan. Up to noon yesterday returns were $899,900, the day's sales, in general canvass, being $115,750. This is 63.3 per cent of quota.

At the end of the fourth day, Prince Edward still led the province in percentage of general canvass quota achieved. The County had 55 per cent; Middlesex West 40; Lincoln County 31 and Etobicoke Township 30.

Picton leads districts in the county with $588,300 or 90 per cent of quota. Others in order are: South Marysburgh, $32,650 or 65 per cent; Wellington, $64,400, or 61 per cent; Bloomfield, $55,900, or 50 per cent; Sophiasburg, $49,800, or 47 per cent; Hallowell, $57,550, or 38 per cent; North Marysburg, $12,750, or 30 per cent; Ameliasburg, $16,850, or 17 per cent; Athol, $11,500, or 15 per cent; Hillier, $10,150 or 13.5 per cent.

To date there have been 664 applications. Figures do not include the two air stations.

Reeve Donald Thompson of South Marysburgh Township, is the first rural salesman to reach his objective with $24,350 from 42 applications.

Films were shown at rallies in Ameliasburg Thursday night and at Cherry Valley last night. The band of No. 3A, District Depot, Kingston, under W.O.1 Jesse, is to give a concert Sunday night in the theatre here. Films will also be shown.

Communist Leader Charged With Provoking War

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Oct. 27 (AP) —A charge of provoking civil war in China was flung Friday at Mao Sse-Tung, Chinese Communist leader who recently reached broad peace agreements at a conference with President Chiang Kai-Shek.

"The responsibility rests entirely with your side," declared Gen. Fu Tso-Yi, commanding China's 12th war zone, in making the charge. He said:

Chinese communist soldiers have attacked central government troops at points between 150 and 250 miles west of Peiping.

The communists are sending more than 100,000 reinforcements into the area.

The "approach of invading forces" has necessistated the evacuation by government troops of five cities "to avert civil war."

"There's a limit to our patience," Gen. Fu messaged Mao. "Further armed assaults by communist troops will place us with our backs to the wall. Communist forces must be responsible for any crisis that may result."

He added "I must make it crystal clear I have received no order from Generalissimo Chiang Kai-Shek to return fire."

Gen. Fu told Mao the attacks were occurring in Suiyuan Province in inner Mongolia. He reported the evacuation in that province of the cities of Liangchen, Lungshengchwang and Fengchen and of Yangkao and Tienchen in northern Shansi. Fu said his troops withdrew on his orders although he did not list those points as in communist hands.

Meanwhile, the government reported progress in plants for central government troops to relieve United States marines in northern China. Some troops have arrived at Tzehsien in southern Hopei, the province in which Peiping is situated.

Premier Stalin To Resume Work In Near Future

By EDDY GILMORE

Moscow, Oct. 27 (AP)— The Russian people expect Premier Stalin to return to his heavy duties in the Kremlin about two weeks hence, refreshed by a vacation.

Dispatches circulated abroad that Premier Stalin is ill have not been repeated here. The presumption among the Russians is that their 65-year-old leader, who left the capital Oct. 9 for a destination never announced, will be back in time for celebration of the Nov. 7 anniversary of the revolution.

The Generalissimo customarily has delivered an address on the eve of the Nov. 7 holiday, and it is assumed that he will speak again this year.

Premier Stalin's constitution is strong. He had several colds during the war which kept him in bed a few days, but they were nothing serious.

As a young revolutionist he experienced a difficult life, being arrested eight times and sent to Siberia seven times. Despite all that, he was never seriously ill.

If Premier Stalin were seriously ill, precedent for an announcement was established during Lenin's last serious sickness. At that time the press carried details of Lenin's condition, his doctor and who called on him.

'Temendous Bluff' By 8000 Aussies Held in 89,000 Japs

Manila, Oct. 27 (AP)—"A tremendous bluff" by Australian forces in the southwest Pacific has been fully appreciated for the first time now that Aussie forces have occupied Babaul on the northeastern tip of New Britain.

When the Rabaul Japanese surrendered, their garrison totalled 89,000—almost twice what had been expected. This garrison had been contained by an Australian force at nearby Jacquinot Bay never exceeding 8,000.

"It was a tremendous bluff strengthened when he changed the name of the 5th division to the 11th division and the Japs thought they faced two divisions," an Australian officer said.

Lonely Iona is Rich in Lore; Scottish Isle Poor in Children

By JAMES LANSDALE HODSON

I am writing on Iona in the Western Isles and as I write the rain beats on the corrugated iron roof and the walls of this cottage and lashes the windows. Not for a week has the landscape painter, my host, done any real work. Rain and wind have prevented it. I, on the contrary, have no excuse for not working, which I look on as a pity.

Dr. Johnson once remarked here that the man isn't to be envied whose piety isn't increased on this isle (whither St. Columba brought Christianity over 13 centuries back). One could add that he would be a wonder if his powers of philosophy were not increased also. For nowhere do the heavens move more swiftly and follow bursts of sunshine with bursts of tears.

Peaceful Setting

But Iona has this great merit—man can be at peace here. I believe there is one motor truck on the island, but I have not seen it. We lugged our bags a mile and a half from the jetty to this cottage. We trek down at night to a wooden hut which is the post office to pick up our mail. No woman works in this house — a painter, botanist and dramatist and your humble servant do their chores and talk; talk of ghosts part of the time. "And they say strange things happen in the Highlands. Did you hear of the sailing ship that came into the Loch, a lovely ship, none knowing her, and as they watched she just disappeared—aye, just dissolved."

Well, it is not only wraiths that vanish. Folk vanish, too. Sir Walter Scott said that 130 years ago Iona had over 400 people. Sixty years ago she had 243, then 15 years ago, she had 141. Today she has no more than 70. The school has but four scholars and they are in three classes, a child of seven forms one class, two girls of nine the second and a boy of 13 the third. I came on the boy, blue eyed, his face and legs beaten ruddy by wind and rain, driving four cows to the milking. You will have said that he was a worthy son of Iona for he could milk his cows, and speak Gaelic and likes geography better than aught else he learns. (I smelled a sailor in that.) But alas! He belongs to Rutherglen, Glasgow.

Buried German

This surprised me. But it did not surprise the kilted farmer who commanded the Home Guard in the war and had to bury a German airman with military honors, and who was sore beset at not knowing the right procedure (one Home Guardsman had put his rifle on a stone wall and at the crucial moment to fire the salute could not find it). No; the kilted farmer said: "There isn't a boy on Iona. For 20 years there wasn't a marriage." And when I showed surprise at that, too, he explained that it often happens that a brother and sister grow up on a croft, working it together, and she doesn't marry, for how can she leave him? And he doesn't marry for that would mean her leaving the croft. Every body knows, do they not, that two women can not live in the same house, one now the mistress and the other one who was the mistress before the wife came? So the brother and sister grow old together, or a man is faithful to his mother and won't wed till she dies.

A man like that was sweet on a girl who lived 12 miles across the water and he would take his boat and row that 12 miles one night a week and be working on croft by 7 o'clock the next morning. For 20 years he did that and they were both nearing 50 when he married her. Too old then for children. To a town-bred man like me it seems great nonsense, but it helps to explain part of the reason, at all events, that children are few in the Highlands.

Dislike Factories

There are many other reasons of course. There was Lord Leverhume, which once opened a factory on Lewis, and no doubt he thought that would draw the Highlanders back to the Highlands, or keep them there anyhow. But does a Highlander who had his croft and his boat and could please himself what hours he worked, and at what, suddenly want to turn into a factory hand, summoned by a buzzer and maybe forced to clock in? Not always by any means. And so they found. Crofters are born free, and however badly poverty hits them they do not like industrial chains, and this doubtless will be a problem to be solved when the Highlands get those light industries that are coveted. Other reasons did I say? I recollect being told on Skye between the wars how in the sixteen hundreds and seventeen hundreds Edinburgh had its manufactury for making spurious title deeds, and that crofters were beguiled on to ships and shanghaied to far off lands, what time their cottages were fired to the heavens and their lands stolen.

Whatever is the truth of that, the men of Skye more than once marched with pick and shovel, with pipers playing, and staked a claim for land and built a good deal of that house (for some were remarkably modest houses) before the law took its leisurely course or had even started on it, yea and had even taken two crops off the land before the law moved.

Discovery in Highlands

The rugged Highlands of Scotland are in the news with the reported finding by British scientists of a mineral which is thought to be of the greatest importance in the course of development of atomic energy. It is said, "we have reason to believe this mineral probably would be better than uranium for producing atomic bombs. There seems to be no doubt of its existence in sufficient quantities to supply Britain with generations of atomic power."

Here is another instance of the march of science. As the explosion of the atom causes adjacent atoms to explode and so on, so every discovery of science brings many new changes and developments in its train.

So goes on man's quest leading far within the hinterland that the world of a generation or two ago knew little about. That process will no doubt continue into fields the world cannot even dream of today. The quest of science for truth is relentless because man believes that the greater the knowledge and the more nature's secrets are revealed, the more their benefits can be applied to the welfare of humanity. Science will not halt but will tirelessly explore every avenue of possible expansion of knowledge.

Government Training Centre in Action

An important part in the resettlement in industry of the men and women of Britain whose careers have been interrupted by war service is being played by the Government Training Centres, where free industrial training is provided, with living allowances during training. For the organization of these centres the Government has consulted employers and unions in over fifty industries.

In the London "News Chronicle" recently, Ernest Watkins gave the following description of a Government Training Centre he visited in a suburb of London, dealing mainly with the building trades and capable when in full operation of taking five to six hundred trainees at a time. He said: "At the moment it is running courses for carpenters, joiners and bricklayers. Before long it will be covering plumbers, plasterers, painters and wood machinists too. Each of the trades requires a six months course. When I was there a Guardsman, wounded twelve months ago in Italy, was spending his last day in sharpening his chisels before taking up a job as a fully trained carpenter and joiner. All the courses have a basic plan. The trainee first learns the elements of the job and the handling of the tools he will use. He then makes miniatures of the jobs he will tackle later, then makes and fits into a model house the parts with which he is concerned. He then works on a full size specimen house in the Centre itself, and finally it is intended that he work on the erection of actual houses in the neighborhood. He learns what theory there is in his job from the work he does, not the other way round. At the Centre he has to conform to normal, industrial discipline. He clocks in and out and has to justify any absences.

A carpenter starts by learning to make all the joints and unions he will encounter in house building and is given a set of tools with which he works throughout and which he retains when he leaves. After that he makes all the wooden sections for the roof, joists, doors and windows for a house, and of the arches and frames used by a bricklayer on the same job. He then starts to build a fullscale house at the Centre, and as bricklayers and other trades are working on the same site he learns how to fit his work into theirs. After that it is only a matter of more and more practice to acquire real industrial skill. So, for each other trade.

The important thing about all the training given at these centres for whatever trade is that the syllabus is designed by a joint committee of employers and unions in that trade. The result is that you know you are learning the actual, current practice in the trade and if that practice changes so will the syllabus change. This particular centre trained over eleven thousand people for war work so it has had a good deal of experience in the technique and teaching of industrial craft and the organizing and effective running of a centre. Disabled and released men and women are working there side by side which is a good thing for the disabled for it gives them confidence that they can hold their own in the industrial world. All are tested each month and before they pass out, and if a man does not try he will probably find himself told not to come back any more. But practically all the men there are really making the best of their chance."

Storms About Britain

Gales, blowing at the rate of one hundred miles an hour, and mountainous seas have struck at Britain's south coast. On a seventy-five mile front of coast mines have been washed ashore, damaging the invasion walls which Hitler's men never got near enough to see. Even huge dragon's teeth of concrete were undermined and tilted or tumbled into the sea. The Nazis never got near the Isle of Albion. After war and storm Britain endures.

Inthe storm of this week nature has shown herself in her wildest mood, pitching loosened German mines dangerously near the giant liner Queen Mary and beaching a Liberty ship.

The island home of the British race has weathered warfare and storm in the long course of her history. Nature made an island for this race and there they have been in security. There they developed their freedom and democracy. Their island home gave Britain protection through nature and gave the world in the early days of the war time to get ready to launch its bolts against the would-be invader. Britain was an impenetrable defence against the Germans and back in the sixteenth century against the naval and military might of Spain. The storms may beat about the British Isles but the Isles remain, their very insularity is a bar that could not and cannot be crossed.

Dr Ley Gone

Dr. Robert Ley, head of the German Nazi labor front under Hitler, died on Friday a suicide in Nuernberg prison while waiting trial on charges of war crimes. It was not his first attempt at suicide for at his arrest he tried to take his life by drinking a vial of poison but was frustrated. Every precaution possible had been taken to prevent any attempt upon his own life but by tearing a towel into strips and knots he found a means of self-destruction.

He bore a sinister reputation as one of the most fanatical of the Nazis, being a violent hater of the eJwish people.

In a political testament he left to "my German people" which has been released by the Nuernberg authorities he said Nazi anti-Semitism was the cause of Germany's failure and that "in anti-Semitism we violated a basic commandment of God's creation." He asked the Germans to get rid of anti-Semitism and admit their mistakes. At the head of the testament he wrote: "We have forsaken God and therefore we were forsaken by God."

Like Himmler and Goebbels he went the way of suicide.

The Blitz Begins at Home

(New York Post)

The Nuernberg indictment says that theer is no living with a nation that denies the right to live of its own inhabitants. For the first time in history it makes an international crime of what used to be thought of as matters for purely internal concern. If this principle becomes part of international law, we need have less fear of a knockout blow from the atomic bomb. As the recent history of Germany demonstrates, an aggressor nation can launch a surprise blitz against others only after it has blitzed its own liberal opposition. A world which is legally equipped to move against the beginnings of tyranny anywhere, even within a nation's borders, is a world that has found one defence against the atomic bomb.

JUST FOLKS

By EDGAR A. GUEST

U. S. N. — 1775-1945

For seventy and one hundred years the navy lads have sailed
The seven seas to guard the flag, and never once have failed.
They've braved the bergs of northern lanes, typhoons and tropic gales
And for tradition's golden book have lived heroic tales.

They've spread their canvas to the winds, then hauled it down for steam.
They've built into accomplished fact what genius used to dream.
Their list of glorious names is long: Paul Jones to Ernest King,
And in between are countless more to whom will memory cling.

There's Nimitz now and Halsey, too, and every boy and man
Who trod the decks and trained the guns that overcame Japan.
Afloat, submerged and in the air! How true the course it steers!
A navy that has kept the faith one hundred seventy years!

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

Oct. 27th., 1925

Mr. and Mrs. F. C. Anderson, Ann Street, have returned home from Toronto.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilson McCue of Smiths Falls, are visiting the latter's sister, Mrs. J. R. Cummings and Mr. Cummings, West Bridge Street.

Miss Evelyn Wilson, West Huntingdon, has returned home after visiting her aunt, Mrs. L. L. Miller, in Syracuse, N. Y., for four weeks.

Mr. Adrian MacDonald, professor of English at the Normal School, Peterboro, addressed the members of the Women's Canadian Club here yesterday. The president, Miss Anna Hurley, presided and expressed the appreciation of the audience to Mr. MacDonald for his interesting address.

Mrs. R. P. Orne, Bleecker Avenue, is visiting friends in Portland and Bangor, Maine.

30 YEARS AGO

OCT. 27TH, 1915

Mr. Charles Payne, who has been associated with Mr. Frank M. Field, K.C., in Cobourg, has come to Belleville to reside and will enter the law office of Mr. E. Guss Porter, K.C., M.P. Mr. Payne studied law here some years ago in the office of Messrs Porter and Carnew.

Mrs. H. Ackerill, John St., is visiting her daughter, Mrs. E. V. Illsey, in Windsor, Ontario.

Sergt.-Major Howard Sharpe of this city is now attached to the 80th Battalion, Kingston, as instructor.

Mr. and Mrs. E. Parliament of Salem were recent guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wesley Parliament, Massassaga.

A large shipment of hogs was made from here today to Montreal. The price ranged from $9.00 to $9.10.

40 YEARS AGO

OCT. 27TH, 1905

Mrs. John Williams and Miss M. Holden are the delegates from Belleville to the annual convention of the Women's Christian Temperance Union which is now in session in Brockville.

A gold brick valued at $2,200.00 was the result of eleven days' crushing at the Craig mine in North Hastings.

Services commemorative of the 50th anniversary of Sidney Township have been in progress recently. At the tea meeting addresses were made by the Rev. J. E. Robeson, Rev. George Robinson, and Rev. E. A. Tonkin, former pastors, and the Rev. R. H. Leitch of Belleville, and the Rev. H. W. Foley of Bayside. The pastor of the church gave a very interesting historical sketch of the church and its pastors.

50 YEARS AGO

OCT. 27TH, 1895

The Hon. George W. Ross, Provincial Minister of Education, although in the city unofficially, is having a busy time. Thursday afternoon he visited the D. and D. Institute and Albert College. In the evening he enjoyed a quiet time with some friends at the home of his son-in-law Mr. Cameron Brown, editor of the Daly Sun. Friday he visited the Convent on John Street, the Separate school, the Central School and the High School. He was given a hearty welcome at all the schools and will carry away with him pleasant recollections of his visit to this city.

The Bible study class at the Y.M.C.A. this evening will be lead by Mr. N. D. McArthur.

Ald. James H. Sterling has returned home after spending some time in Chicago, Ill.

Capital Closeups

By JACK BRAYLEY

Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 27 (CP)—It has been a committee-conscious commons this week with some members complaining they need roller skates to do full credit to their responsibilities. Maj. Leonard Tremblay quipped he "quartered" himself one day to make the rounds.

Maj. Tremblay, Liberal member for Dorchester in Quebec, arrived late and breathless at an external affairs committee meeting and explained he had been making the rounds, visiting three other committees on which he served.

The committees have a pleasant, intimate informality with members smoking and remaining seated while speaking.

They often take the opportunity of giving vent to pet personal peeves when they have a prominent witness under examination.

For instance, the Railway Committee listened intently to R. C. Vaughan, head of the big C. N. R. system, outline a program involving millions of dollars.

Then Tom Reid, (L—New Westminster) suddenly remembered some trouble he had with a telephone in one of the system's hotels on the west coast. Mr. Vaughan said he'd look into it and, taking an envelope from a vest pocket, he jotted down the complaint.

The Veterans Committee was considering the matter of dischargees, cut off from mustering out benefits by reason of some misdemeanor.

"Why," said George Cruickshank (L—Fraser Valley), "it's getting so bad the boys at some of the camps in my province are afraid to go out and get drunk—a freedom which any member of parliament has."

"Speak for yourself," said Howard Green (PC—Vancouver South).

"Well, if they don't, they should," said the irrepressible George.

Pipes and bells: The din of the last peal of carillon bells died away and the sound of the pipes squealed into the night on Parliament Hill at the vesper hour.

While Carilloner Robert Donnell got his music ready for the next number, Tom Reid, ardent Scot and Liberal member for New Westminster whose office in in the front of the building, blew his pipes so they could be heard almost to Wellington Street — 200 yards away.

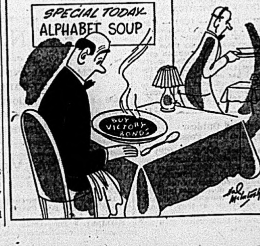
But the bells began to bang and tingle again with the lively Irish "Rose of Tralee" and the wild Scottish air from Mr. Reid's pipes was drowned.

Tommy Atkins: Never since British garrisons withdrew from Halifax and Esquimalt bases have so many famous regular imperial regiments been represented in Canada as during the recent movement of released prisoners from the west and east coast for embarkation for England.

Passing through the capital the other day were men bearing the shoulder patches of famous regiments such as The Middlesex—the Die-hards—the Royal Norfolks, the Loyal North Lancs, the Suffolks and the Gordon Highlanders.

Most of them had been in the far east 11 years—on garrison duty at Hong Kong and Shanghai when they were captured. In that time Tommy Atkins at home had changed from the old-style trousers and tunic with brass buttons to the utility battle dress.

The veteran regulars were first equipped with the new outfits when they reached Victoria on their way home. A Middlesex corporal told this reporter: "What a lark—no buttons to polish."



'WORLD IN VERY GREAT DANGER' DECLARES EDEN

Nations Are Not Joined Together Despite Warning of Atomic Bomb

Leeds, Yorkshire, England, Oct. 27—(CP)—Anthony Eden said in an address Friday that the world "is unquestionably in very great danger and nations are not joined together," despite the terrible warning of the atomic bomb.

The wartime Foreign Secretary said no one country, however powerful, even would be strong enough to dominate Europe, still less to dominate the world.

"A third world war would mean the annihilation of the human race," he told an audience at Leeds University where he received a degree of Doctor of Laws.

"In the closing months of the second world war this flaming message has been stretched across the path of all nations: 'Seek peace or face destruction'."

"The terrible nature of that warning has failed to produce any healthy consequences. The nations are not joined closely together. Unhappily, the tendency today is rather in the reverse direction. The world unquestionably is in very great danger. We need cool, calm and understanding leadership.

"If ever the nations begin to throw atomic bombs about at each other, no individual nation's security, however well guarded, is going to avail it very much."

General Bennett Leaves Inquiry Probing Escape

Sydney, Oct. 27 (CP)—Lt.-Gen. H. Gordon Bennett, Commander of Australian forces in Malaya when it fell to the Japanese, walked out of a secret Australian army court of inquiry Friday as it prepared to investigate his escape from Malaya.

"I considered it would not be proper for my reputation and future to be left in the hands of the present tribunal," he declared.

Gen. Bennett said in a prepared 2,500-word statement that he remained with his Australian 8th Division until shortly after hostilities had ceased. He said he had not obtained permission from the British Commander-in-Chief in Malaya, Lt.-Gen. A. E. Percival, to escape, because "Gen. Percival had already surrendered his forces to the Japanese and therefore had relinquished his authority."

Gen. Bennett said his principal reason in leaving Malaya was to take back to Australia valuable information he had acquired as commander.

The court continued its inquiry in secrecy after Gen. Bennett's departure.

SENTENCED TO BE HANGED

St. Johns, Que., Oct. 27—(CP)—Ovilda Samson, 53, of Sherbrooke, Que., yesterday was found guilty of the murder of Marie Anne and Leone Tougas, spinster sisters who were killed in their St. Johns home Sept. 1 by blows from an iron bar, and was sentenced by Mr. Justice Louis Cousineau to be hanged at Montreal prison Jan. 11th.

THE NEUROTIC IN THE CONSULTING ROOM

If any neurotic who reads this twaddle should be enough worried or frightened by what I say, or by what I imply, to consult a physician about his or her health or lack of it, any of four things can happen:

1. If the doctor is a Class F doctor he may laugh at the patient for coming with such a trivial complaint.

2. If the doctor is a successful business man with the reputation of having a large practice to maintain, he may listen patiently and knowingly to the patient's fatuous display of inside knowledge of "nerves" and ladle out a line of sympathy to the poor geek, and send the patient away no wiser than before, with a prescription for the latest fancy sedative or "nerve tonic." Ten dollars. Report at 2 next week.

3. If the doctor is a good doctor he may interrupt the patient's explanation of his or her trouble to say: Yes, yes, but let's leave nerves and nervous exhaustion out of it while we try to find out what is the matter. You are to answer my questions as well as you can without referring to nerves or their functions—for only in that way can the doctor even try to make an honest diagnosis. By such unbiased study and examination the doctor may find a clue to the trouble and perhaps correct the nutritional deficiency, the faulty habit or the error in hygiene that causes the trouble.

4. Through thorough and repeated physicial examination the doctor may discover that the trouble is—well, we need not speciy here, but say some low-grade chronic disease for which, now that we know about it, treatment will give much more help. In my mind are four such chronic diseases that too often masquerade as "nerves" or "neurasthenia", but this being a health column I shall not name any such disease. I've said all I think a doctor should say outside of the consulting room, and I hope I haven't frightened or worried anyone more than enough to persuade him or her to consult a good doctor.

For your own health's sake, when or if you do consult a physician, don't try to explain to the doctor that your "nerves" are all shot and don't under any circumstance fool along with the notion that you can get any real benefit from taking bromides, barbiturates or other sedative or hypnotic drugs.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Allergy

I must tell you how grateful we are for the advice in your pamphlet "Relief for Allergy." My son having "grass fever" in June was helped greatly and I cry from the rooftops for the relief I have had from dust allergy which kept my nose constantly dripping water and irritated and swollen nostrils. I have passed the pamphlet on to several friends and they have all obtained highly satisfactory results. (Mrs. S. S.)

Answer—Thank you. Copy of the pamphlet "Relief for Allergy" mailed on request, if you provide stamped envelope bearing your address.

V-I-T-E Spells Youth

If you belief you and your readers invented the term VITE you will find it is not exactly new—it is used in a novel about the early history of Quebec. (A. N.)

Answer—Ah, but the novel was written years after my readers and I coined the word VITE. Our term is pronounced to rhyme with kite. When we coined it I didn't know about a French word spelled vite pronounced to rhyme with beat, used as a direction in music—quickly, lively. What our term means is explained in the booklets "V-I-T-E Spells Youth" and "The Seven Keys to Vite." The first is for growing children and 'teen age persons. The second is for Adults and mature persons. For the first send 10c and stamped address envelope. For the second send twenty-five cents and stamped self addressed envelope. Do not use a clipping—ask for what you want. If you want both booklets inclose thirty-five cents and one stamped self addressed envelope.

Missionary

After reading your column for several years I have come to the conclusion that you are a missionary in the most important field of health. I have received much benefit from your teachings and advice, for which I am grateful. (B. J. T.)

Answer—Well, I hope you will continue to get a little amusement out of it as you get accustomed to looking to see what, if anything, I have to say today. If it turns up some fine day missing don't assume that Ol' Doc Brady has gone to the inglenook. Chances are it will be just another bit of temper on the part of the advertising manager.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why is dew a sign of fair weather?

Many people believe it never rains when the dew falls. They regard the presence of dew in the morning as a sign that it will be a fair day.

There is some scientific basis for the belief. The U. S. Weather Bureau explains the relation between rain and dew as follows:

Dew is formed when objects near the ground cool to temperatures below the dewpoint. During the day the ground gets warm. After nightfall the moisture in the warm air rising from the ground comes in contact with the cooler air above the surface and condenses as dew on grass, plants and other objects. Dew forms when the air is still and the sky clear. These are the conditions near the centre of a well marked anti-cyclone, where rain does not occur. On the other hand, dew forms but slightly, if at all, on windy and cloudy nights. Hence, in general, heavy dew is a sign that the day will be fair.

Why is a cat said to have nine lives?

The saying that a cat has nine lives is very old. It was proverbial long before Shakespeare's day.

The idea was probably suggested by the fact that a cat is more tenacious of life than most other animals. Those who have tried to kill cats will appreciate this fact.

Besides, the cat has a great facility for alighting rightside up and its feet are well padded to break the fall.

Attempts have been made to trace the legend about cats having nine lives to ancient Egypt, where these animals were objects of worship. It is often said that Pasht, or Bastet, the cat-headed goddes, had nine lives and that this circumstance gave rise to the common expression. Egyptologists, however, find no authority for the statement. Bastet, being a goddess, would naturally be regarded as immortal. But nine was a favorite mystic number among the Egyptians as well as among other ancients and it may have in some way been associated with the cat-headed goddess.

Flying the Atlantic Easy As a Train Trip

Throughout the war, correspondents described Atlantic crossings in troopships, Army air transports and bombers, telling of discomfort, adventure and heroism. Now the Atlantic is crossed daily by civilians in flying boats in about the same time (between New York and Ireland) as it takes by rail to go from New York to Chicago, and in considerably greater comfort, writes Roberts Stern, in New York Herald Tribune.

The first stories of these post-war flying boats are also their valedictories, for they are already disappearing replaced by land-based planes, one-third again as fast, and carrying many more passengers.

The new planes are to have reclining seats, not berths, and in them travellers can lie behind drawn curtains, as in Pullman sleepers, and prop themselves upon their elbows at night to look out of windows at the airplane's wing and pontoon, with a skyful of stars above and a sea of cloud far beneath, and the flash from the motors shooting past like a firefly from time to time, as the flight engineer shifts from one fuel tank to another.

••••

The flying ace who brought me to Europe had a strictly priority passenger list: two Chinese, members of the French mission returning to Paris, American and Swiss business men, a State Department courier, a uniformed Army scientific consultant, a lieutenant colonel of the United States Army general staff, and W. E. Burghardt DuBois, a writer.

All men, they were shepherded, waited upon and mothered by a pretty, authoritarian and extraordinarily efficient stewardess. Untiring, she told them where to sit, briefed them on the use of the life jackets (you must not inflate them until you are clear of the airplane, otherwise, if the cabin fills with water, their buoyancy will pin you against the roof, and you will not be able to use the emergency exits), took away their hats and coats (offering nose-drops to the man who would not give his up), plied them with food and drink, and when the time came to make up the berths, scrambled about the uppers so energetically that she bumped her forehead several times with flying strap buckles, for which she refused all sympathy.

One striking feature of an eastward flight, in which you are racing toward the sun, is that your meals are closer together than on land, because it gets later faster.

About 10.30 New York time, soon after we had left behind the grayish hook of Cape Cod and were over a sea that seemed almost as blue as the Mediterranean sky, the stewardess said it was time to have lunch so that we would be ready for dinner at Botswood, Newfoundland, the first stop.

She asked us whether we wanted Manhattans, martinis, or sherry, and her martinis were as good as the best obtainable in New York. They were followed by a piece of steak at least two inches thick, vegetables, ice cream and coffee, ('watch your coffee, as it gets rough", she said, but it didn't).

••••

The airplane is divided into compartments, each seating eight and sleeping four, with four seated, two and two on each side of the aisle, as in a Pullman sleeper. Lunch was eaten on tables hooked under the windows. Smoking (cigarettes only) was permitted in the centre compartment, away from the gas tanks, except when the plane was on the water or th berths were made up.

The sea soon disappeared under clouds, which in turn disappeared when the airplane was over a wooded country with hundreds of lakes, which was Nova Scotia. Then, another sea crossing and Newfoundland appeared—a rugged, brown country of rocks and water with no signs of human life at the part of the coast over which the airplane passed on its way across the island.

A Newfoundlander, on his way home from a business trip to New York—a second passenger for Botwood only—watched for his home town, but it was obscured by clouds, which vanished only for the arrival at Botwood, a bleak little fishing village with a large R.C.A.F. post, where the passengers had dinner at five p.m. Newfoundland time—an hour and a half later than New York time.

Overcoats were necessary ashore and the return to the heated airplanes was like a return home. The stewardess and the purser, which was the title she gave to a man who seemed to be her assistant, started making up berths before the long, low strip of sunset color had disappeared from the sky, and the Chinese, Swiss and French passengers were ready for bed immediately.

She left one smoking compartment unmade in which three Americans and an Englishman settled down to a bridge game, while the State Department courier read a detective story, and to these five she served ham and cheese sandwiches and hot coffee.

The captain said the next morning that he had flown almost to Iceland to avoid a storm, but none of the passengers was aware of the weather except for a very brief bumpy period at about 11 p.m., London time, to which most of them set their watches before retiring.

The arrival at Foynes, Ireland, was at about 9 a.m., Irish time (one hour later than, London time, to every one's consternation) after eighteen hours of flying from La Guardia Airport.

It was no more tiring than an over-night trip by train and much more pleasant.

Cologne Is City of Many Problems, Black Market, Housing, Transport

By ROSS MUNRO
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Cologne, Oct. 27 (CP) — In gloomy, devastated Cologne, armed patrols of British guardsmen move through the streets to prevent hungry Germans from pilfering the food stores.

In front of the magnificent cathedral, standing alone in the downtown ruins, a swaying, ugly crowd gathers nearly every day. It is Cologne's black market, which frequent police raids fail to destroy.

These are only two of the problems facing the British military government headquarters here, on which six Canadian officers are serving. The Canadians are Maj. C. G. Carroll of Toronto, in the executive and administrative branch; Maj. J. R. Dickie of Moncton, N.B.; Maj. Ted Scott of Montreal and Maj. Bert Dunn of Cowansville, Que., all in the public utilities section; Maj. J. A. Fournier of Montreal in the labor branch and Capt. H. H. Chalk of Toronto, handling commercial problems.

Cologne, smashed by bombing and shelling as badly as the worst sections of the Ruhr and almost comparable to Berlin, is one of the major problems in the Rhineland for military government. Food is scarce for civilians and although the ration provides for 1,400 calories a day, everyone cannot obtain these rations regularly.

The result has been an outbreak of thefts from food stores and military government found it necessary to call on the guards division, occupation force in this area, to put patrols in the streets day and night.

There is little undamaged housing in Cologne and living conditions are appalling. Yet there are 400,000 Germans in the city and hundreds are returning each day. Before the war, the population was 800,000.

Transport here is the crying need as it is throughout Germany. It is needed to bring hard coal from the Ruhr for the industries of Cologne. Only a few are operating now—a glass works, a cement factory and a motor car factory—and they are only employing a few hundred men each.

Thinks New World Security Group Should Settle Jew-Arab Dispute

By DEWITT MACKENZIE
AP Foreign Affairs Analyst

One of the most dangerous of the crises which are threatening international peace is that growing out of the dispute over whether unrestricted Jewish immigration should be permitted into Palestine.

This involves the historic question of the establishment of a Jewish national home in the Holy Land. A host of homeless Jews in Europe—refugees from the Hitlerian storm—are crying for a raising of the barriers. Arabs in Palestine, and in neighboring countries are offering bitter opposition and threats of armed strife are in the air.

The situation demands quick adjustment, but it bristles with complications. The British government, which holds the mandate for Palestine, is trying to handle this hot potato, and the matter has been the subject of conversations between London and Washington. There has been a growing feeling in England that the United States should share in the responsibility of trying to reach a solution.

Well informed circles are expecting the British government to make a statement in the immediate future. Whether this will relate to the exchanges with Washington remains to be seen.

This column yesterday suggested the Javanese revolt against Dutch rule, and the native rebellions in French Indo-China, might well be taken up by the new world security organization for settlement. The question of self-determination is a logical one to come before all the United Nations.

Why shouldn't a similar program be applied to the Palestine difficulty? There could be no better jury before which to lay the case than the full assembly of the new League of Nations. Any matter affecting the Palestine mandate naturally would fall to the security organization as successor to the League of Nations which originally granted the mandate to Britain.

This idea doesn't involve any suggestion that Britain be asked to surrender the mandate. The point is that the problem of the Jewish national home has got too big and complicated for any one country to handle. Indeed, it is doubtful if the decision of any single country would be accepted by both sides to the controversy.

169,929 ALREADY RETURNED

Ottawa, Oct. 27 (CP) — Arrival of 12,000 servicemen at Halifax aboard the troopship Queen Elizabeth brought to approximately 169,929 the number of army and R.C.A.F. personnel brought home from Europe since VE-Day, May 8, it was unofficially estimated here.

The stepped up repatriation of servicemen was ahead of schedule since the repatriation target for the two services between May 8 and the end of this year had been set at 160,000.

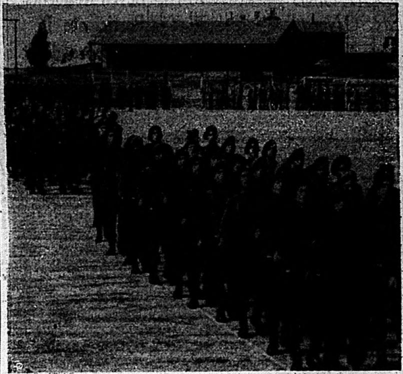
POWERFUL JEWISH BRIGADE ON REVIEW IN PALESTINE



The eyes of the world are on Palestine today as the fight for a Jewish homeland has been revived. The Arabs say that Palestine must remain Arab. There have been threats of a Jehab (holy war) that would set the entire Near East ablaze. But the Jews, too, have armed power. Here is a view of the Jewish brigade, formed before the war, with British authorization to defend their settlements against the Arab threat. It is more powerful now than ever. Photo is from the March of Time's "Palestine Problem."

JURY REFUSES TO INDICT

New York, Oct. 27 — (CP) — A Grand Jury Thursday refused to indict Bud Elmer Linderman, 23-year-old cowboy held in $7,500 bail on a homicide charge in connection with the death Sept. 26 of Detective Frank M. McGrath. The jury found that the detective had not identified himself in the dispute with Linderman and that Linderman acted in self-defence.

Mr. and Mrs. Willet Johnston, of Belleville, attended the Brock-Thompson wedding in Watertown, New York, on Tuesday.

Mr. and Mrs. Hugh H. Thompson, of Denver, Colorado, are spending a short time with Mr. and Mrs. James M. Hudgins, Dunbar Street.

Mr. and Mrs. J. Doyle are spending the weekend with Mr. and Mrs. W. S. Turner, Brantford.

Mrs. F. G. Faulkner has returned from Toronto and is now staying at the home of Mrs. MacTavish, Catherine Street.

Mrs. A. Keene and Mrs. C. Keene have returned home after spending a few days visiting Mr. and Mrs. R. Parkinson and Mr. and Mrs. J. F. McCabe, in Hamilton. While there they made a trip to Niagara and St. Catharines.

Roddy Cameron, of 29 Queen Street, has been elected secretary of the Commerce Club at Queen's University, where he is a student. This year Queen's has a record registration of 2,300, of whom more than a 1,000 are ex-service personnel.

Mrs. H. A. Cook, Toronto, her daughters, Mrs. Timothy Munroe, Port Credit, and Mrs. William Black, Hollywood, Calif., visited with her brother, George O. Tice on Friday afternoon. Mrs. Black recently flew to Regina to visit her sister, Mrs. Cecil Howe.

The Contact Club of Christ Church held a successful bridge and euchre party, Thursday evening in the Parish Hall. Prize winners included: Bridge—Mrs. Wilma Reddick, J. A. Watkin, Miss Betty Clark, L. Blaker, Mrs. E. Elder, A. E. Smith; Euchre—Mrs. B. Laughlin, A. Smith, Mrs. D. W. Adams, Roy Perry, Mrs. R. Gilmour and A. Everett. Raffle winners were Miss Lenore Wilkes, Mr. C. Jeffery, Miss L. Warham, Mrs. E. Holst.

Mrs. H. Giles, Mrs. W. Hammett and Mrs. S. White were hostesses at a delightfully arranged miscellaneous shower held at the home of the latter, Pine Street, on Monday night in honor of Miss Hazel Hammett, bride-to-be of this month. Twenty guests were present and cards and bingo were enjoyed during the evening. Miss Hammett was presented with a beautiful basket of gifts for which she graciously thanked her friends. Refreshments were served at the conclusion of a very enjoyable party.

WEDDINGS

SHANNIK—DOUGLAS

The Emmanuel Anglican Church at Greenview, Ontario, was the scene of a pretty Autumn wedding on October 19, at two p.m., when the Rev. R. F. Gardman, B.A., united in marriage Joyce Edith, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ewart Douglas, Greenview, Ontario, and Ross Emerson, son of Mr. and Mrs. Guster Shannik, of Musclow, Ontario.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore a lovely floor-length gown of white sheer with sweetheart neckline and long sleeves. Her three-quarter length veil of white net was held in place with a bridal wreath. She carried a bouquet of red roses and maidenhair fern and bouvardia. Her only ornament was a lovely gold locket, gift of the groom.

Miss Helen Douglas, sister of the bride, wore a lovely floor-length gown of pink sheer. Her three-quarter length veil of pink net was held in place with pink flowers. She carried a nosegay of pink roses and white and pink carnations and bouvardia.

Mr. Norman Shannik, of Belleville, brother of the groom, was best man.

Following the ceremony a lovely supper was served at the bride's parents' home and the dining room was beautifully decorated with pink and white streamers and white bells. The bride's table was centred with a three-tier wedding cake. There were fifty guests present.

In the evening a reception was held in Maynooth Hall, where the bride and groom received many lovely and useful gifts. Later the bride and groom left on their honeymoon to Toronto and points west.

There were relatives present from Toronto, Belleville, Kingston, Oshawa, Hermon and Fort Stewart.

MANCHESTER—TOMS

Queen's University Chapel, Kingston, was the scene of a quiet wedding, October 27, when Gwendolyn Dorothy Toms, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Eric S. Toms, Belleville, became the bride of Donald Fraser Manchester, son of Mr. and Mrs. P. Manchester, of St. John, N.B. Rev. Dr. Kent, principal of Queen's Theological College, officiated. Wedding music was played by Miss Joyce McLaren, of Kingston.

Given in marriage by her father, the bride wore aqua blue crepe with touches of black lace and black accessories and carried a bouquet of American Beauty roses. Attending her was Miss Margaret Clarke wearing a gold crepe frock with brown accessories and carrying a bouquet of bronze 'mums.

Mr. David Baird, St. John, N.B., attended the groom.

After a reception for the immediate families, the bride and groom left for a motor trip through Ontario. They will reside in Kingston.

VAN NATTER—MACPHERSON

A quiet wedding was solemnized in the Regular Baptist Church, Front Street, Belleville, at 1.30 p.m., on Thursday afternoon, October 25, when Jessie Alma, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert MacPherson, Hermon, Ontario, and LAC. Verl W. Van Natter, son of Mr. and Mrs. James Van Natter, Elk Point, Alberta, were united in matrimony by Rev. Morley R. Hall, of Napanee. The ceremony was performed in the presence of a few intimate friends of the young couple.

The bride, looked lovely in a dress of blue wool with corsage of American Beauty roses, fern and a bit of Scotch Heather. She was attended by Mrs. J. D. Kenzie, who wore a green wool suit, black hat and corsage of American Beauty roses and fern.

The bridegroom was attended by Mr. J. D. Kenzie, pastor of Belleville Regular Baptist Church.

Following the ceremony the happy couple left amid showers of confetti and the best wishes of their many Belleville friends for a trip to Western Canada, Michigan and Chicago, Ill.

Fashion Flashes

A SMART LINE distinguishes one designer's collection. This is a high-necked surplice closing for the bodice and a two-tiered, diagonal peplum on the skirt, making for a very wide V. Nice in gray woolen with a gilt-nailhead-studded green snakeskin belt.

ONE OF THE BEST of fashions is the fur-lined or fur-trimmed coat that is good on its own and even better when combined with a matching skirt to make a suit. The snugly belted topper or the loose, boxy, flared, rippled-back coat are the two favored types.

A WELCOME REVIVAL is that of the winter-white hat. A charming hat of winter-white beaver felt is trimmed with pearl embroidery on a black velvet band, and has a filmy black veil edged with narrow black velvet.

GETTING READY for the record southern season, one shoe designer shows a three-layer wedge shoe of red, sapphire-blue and creamy yellow kidskin, the upper combining the three colors with fine piping in contrast.

VERY GOOD for the right type is the casual dress, glitter-trimmed and finely detailed. Winter-white sheer wool crepe is used for a simply-styled frock that is collarless and has extended wing shoulders. It is striped from neck to hem with black sequins, and jet buttons make the low closing on the bodice.

IDEAL COAT for youngsters to wear over suits, and with sweaters or dresses, is the pea jacket, a little box coat. Nice in clan plaid in green, blue and red, and worn with matching beret. High revers and flap pockets mark the double-breasted model.

Have you noticed the feeling for brown trimmed with black? This color alliance is seen frequently, especially in high-bracket clothes. Deep redding brown woolen trimmed with black Persian is a frequent formula for coats.

Seven Residents Participate In Radio Broadcast

Although the auditorium of the Belleville Collegiate was not filled to capacity for the show, local residents who missed the Kinsmen sponsored "Ontario Panorama" radio broadcast and stage program really missed out on a high class evening's entertainment.

Seven persons with out of the ordinary occupations, were interviewed by Gordon Sinclair, journalist and author. with their stories going out over the air on the Willard Chocolates Limited program which is heard every Friday evening over CFRB. On the following program local and outside talent was seen and heard in dancing and musical numbers with H. G. Wedderburn, young dancing star from Toronto, receiving high acclaim from an enthusiastic audience.

During the evening a cheque for $50 was handed over by Willard's Chocolates to the local Kinsmen Club to be used in their service work.

Tells of Flame Thrower

Executive official at Stewart Warner-Alemite Corp., Stan Hagerman was the first local resident interviewed by Gordon Sinclair, he telling about the flame thrower manufactured by his company during the war years. Mr. Hagerman had good news for those in need of a radio in that he stated his company's first post-war models would be ready for the market either in November or December of this year.

Miss Catherine Ford, teacher at the Ontario School for the Deaf, told of teaching technique at the O.S.D. Deaf pupils are admitted to the school at five years of age with the normal child requiring four to five years longer to complete the entrance examinations than the average "hearing" child. Approximately 50 per cent of the deaf children are born deaf with as many acquiring their deafness after birth, she stated.

Designed "Eisenhower" Jacket.

Clothing designer at Deacon Brothers Ltd., Mr. Reginald Hinchey told of re-designing existant R.C.A.F. clothing at the outset of the war and later of designing what is now known as the "Eisenhower" jacket. Many of the principles learned in clothing manufacture would be applied to civilian clothing in the post-war years, according to Mr. Hinchey.

A local sports figure and possibly the only Belleville athlete to become a member of a major league baseball club, Ralph McCabe, was briefly interviewed, he stating he had never played ball until he was 17 years old. After playing with various amateur teams he turned professional and played with Toronto, Albany and Wilkes Barre where he had 15 wins during the past season. During a nine-game winning streak he had pitched a no-hitter in July and at the end of the season was purchased by the Cleveland Indians.

Gold Beating Described.

As the only gold leaf beater now working in Canada, William Gee, North Front Street, told how he pounded gold leaf for seven and one half hours before producing the finished article. Miss Maisy Parry, four-year employee of the Dominion Parasite Laboratory on Dundas Street, told of her work among entomological specimens and termed the spruce saw fly and the spruce bud worm the most destructive parasites known locally.

As the last man to be interviewed Robert Hart of the Black Diamond Cheddar Cheese Company told how Hastings County last year had produced 8½ million pounds of cheese, most of which had been shipped to England. In the opinion of Mr. Hart the advent of meat rationing in Canada may possibly serve to educate Canadians into eating more cheese.

Fine Dancing Program.

One of Toronto's outstanding young dancers, 16-year-old H. G. Wedderburn, stole the hearts of his Belleville audience as he appeared on the stage following the radio broadcast in several solo numbers. As an added attraction he appeared in a dual number, a ballroom specialty, with Belleville's own Barbara Diment.

Appearing in several numbers, members of Miss Diment's dancing class were enthusiastically received. The group delighted the audience with tricky song and dance numbers. The same stage show with slight variations will be presented this evening without the radio broadcast.

Other local talent heard on the stage program included Harold Barrett, who sang two solos; Bruce Sills, accordionist; Arthur Duby, soloist, and Bill Navin, at the piano. Norman Garbutt acted as master of ceremonies for the Kinsmen stage program, while Don Savage was M.C. during the radio show.

Adult Education Subject of Talk By Dr. Corbett

The first meeting of the present term of the Belleville Lecture and Study Club was held in the library of the Collegiate on Friday evening.

The speaker, Dr. E. A. Corbett, was introduced by Professor Simpson, of Albert College. Dr. Corbett has been Director of the Canadian Association of Adult Education, a national organization, for ten years.

Dr. Corbett opened his address with the statement that adult education has been a fight for freedom of discussion, freedom of assembly, and freedom of speech. He stated that the discussion technique was essential in education.

Adult education, stated Dr. Corbett, first was organized in England as the Mechanics Institute, by Francis Place, a little London tailor. At that time, 1827, adults had to be taught to read and write.

The Lords opposed this because the people would then start to find out about the Government and to criticize it. The Industrial Revolution, continued the speaker, acted as the impetus for the movement.

Work Continued

The work of adult education was continued by James Lovett, whose philosophy, said Dr. Corbett, is that followed today, i. e., the need of the working man to find a way of learning of his own.

The movements for adult education in Canada were largely started in Nova Scotia, stated Dr. Corbett, who is a native of that province himself. They spread throughout Canada and were particularly active in Ontario.

Although many people living today got their basic education through the libraries of such movements as the Mechanics Institute, there is no trace of the movements at present. When they lost the fight for freedom of discussion, they soon ceased to exist.

Universities Take up Task

The universities, through their extension courses, stated Dr. Corbett, then took up the task. He was, himself, Director of Extensions at the University of Alberta. While occuying that position he learned how vital discussion was for the success of adult education. He humorously told of professors being sent to country schools to lecture on the foreign policy of the King of Siam, or on the social habits of the grasshopper. "Without discussion," stated the speaker, "no amount of books, lectures and films are of any value."

"The Association of Adult Education, has become the possession of the people; it has moved beyond officialdom," said Dr. Corbett, and went on to describe how the Association had changed towns from poverty-stricken, defeated places to modern, clean "going concerns", simply through educating the people.

Praises Present Government

Dr. Corbett paid tribute to the present Ontario Government, which has accepted the responsibility of adult education. He feels that the other provinces will follow in this decision.

In closing, the speaker stated that the chief argument for adult education is that only minor problems of life are met by elementary education and that the real work of conversion and conviction is done in mature life.

Following the address, the members were given an opportunity of asking Dr. Corbett questions.

The Marry Go Round

LOVE TAKES A HOLIDAY

Every broken love affair adds a little something to a woman's charm — and subtracts a little something from her heart.

The acid test of a girl's love is not her willingness to go through fire for a man before marriage, but her willingness to go through poverty with him after marriage and still think him the finest man in the world.

Nature made love a lottery for woman. But man makes it a lottery for himself by always preferring the girl who can keep him guessing and worrying to the one whose love is a dead sure thing.

A woman is always surprising a man! It's a "surprise" to him when she falls in love with him, no matter what he has done to try to make her love him. And no matter how long or ardently he has chased her, he is always "surprised" when she catches him.

A lot of money will make almost any man look just like Prince Charming to the sort of girl who has always pictured Prince Charming in a Santa Claus outfit, carrying a pack of gifts.

When a woman knocks marriage, says Cynical Sybil, it is usually because, when shopping for a husband, she was short-changed. But when a man denounces matrimony, it is because he short-changed himself, by choosing a wife while his brains were on a vacation.

Alas, the honeymoon is over when a man can sit down calmly and enjoy eating a hearty dinner opposite a wife with whom he is not on speaking terms.

Love always goes harder with a girl than with a man. Because when a man feels love "coming on," he rushes for an antidote—a new girl or a change of scene; but a girl just gives herself up to it, as she would a headache, and let it have its way with her.

Theoretically, the wedding is the point at which the bridegroom begins kissing the bride—and all the other fellows stop

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

London and Paris Schools Acquaint Soldiers' Brides with Life Over Here.

Brides' schools in London and Paris for girls who marry our servicemen are carried on as merrily as the proverbial marriage bell.

Canadian and American girls may fret and fume over the fact that the cream of the serviceman crop are marrying foreign girls over there. But the "Go" sign has been given in those countries. As one indignant woman from New York wrote me: "Foreign countries seem as glad to ban and bless their daughters and bid them goodbye as a mother with a multitude of unmarried girls on her hands".

Not only the Red Cross but sundry American alphabetical agencies and certain British publications are offering articles such as "A Bride's Guide to America". A certain item in the guidebook may cause Americans to grit their teeth. We are, as you may realize, a nation of friendly souls. We're apt to talk to people on trains, ships, even our neighbors over the back fence, without waiting for an introduction.

The British, on the other hand, are apt to be more exclusive and look down their noses at the overfriendly attempts of Americans to become acquainted without benefit of introduction. So the British bride is warned about Americans' friendliness, and told to accept it as an evidence of good faith.

Suppose, for instance, you're hanging out your clothes on the line, and a strange woman greets you over the back fence. She is not trying to lead you into a confidence game. It's just her effort to make you feel at home.

Certain words are used differently in England and America. An English dentist doesn't talk of filling your tooth. He speaks of it as "stopped". The British bride, when she goes to the butcher for Sunday's dinner, is apt to ask for a "joint" She mustn't think the butcher is "spoofing" (razzing) if he offers her the hip joint of a steer or a sheep. What she wants is what we call a "roast." If she shows polite amazement when everyone refers to men as "guys", let her remember that in Merry England they are called "blokes".

The Red Cross will serve as a greeting committee, and also family, from the time the ship docks until the girl is en route to her new home. She will be furnished with coffee and doughnuts (probably her first experience with the latter delicacy.) And if she has a baby, canteen nurses' aides will see what she is supplied with milk, diapers and blankets.

Home service workers will contact relatives to make sure of the bride's safe arrival in her home, no matter how remote. All of these attentions have caused a girl in New Orleans to write me asking why these foreign girls are treated like queens. But, let us remember, when our fore-mothers came here, they, too, were foreign, unless we happen to be great-granddaughters of "Sitting Bull" or "Rain-in-the-Face".

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

A Mother's Remembrance for a Wedding Anniversary

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Several months ago my son was killed in action overseas. He had been married for several years, and I think the world of his wife. Always on their wedding anniversary I gave her a gift, and always (even while he was in service) my son sent her flowers. Now, as the date of their wedding anniversary is approaching, I am wondering if I should give her a gift. I am so afraid that if I don't give her anything on this day, she will think that I don't care about her any more, when really I love her so very much. If your advice is that I should give her a gift, do you think I should give her flowers, or linens, or what should the gift be?

Her Mother-in-law.

On this anniversary day, so full of precious memories to her, she will particularly need your loving thoughts and your loving gestures, and they will be another bond between your heart and hers, another memory of your son shared together. My suggestion is that you give her two gifts; one from you, linens or whatever gift you know she would welcome for her home; and the other, some flowers sent by you in the name of your son. In the box with the flowers I suggest you enclose a note or card, saying something like this, "On this day, so sacred to you and Bill, I am sending you these flowers, in his name. I know he would want me to carry on the loving vow he always made to you of sending you flowers on your wedding anniversary."

Should a Divorce Change Her Name?

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Please settle a point which is causing a heated argument between my sister and me. I maintain that, although a widow retains her husband's name (Mrs. George Smith), this is not true in the case of a divorcee, who should drop her divorced husband's first name and in its place use her maiden surname prefixed by "Mrs.".

Using fictitious names as an example in my sisters' case, let's say that her maiden name was Mary Johnson, and that her husband's name is CHESTER SMITH. My sister is about to apply for a divorce, she has a 2-year-old son, and she insists that, after her divorce, it is the correct way for her to continue to use the name of MRS. CHESTER SMITH. I disagree, and maintain that, after her divorce, she should call herself MRS. JOHNSON SMITH. Please give us your advice.

Sister

Your advice to your sister is excellent, I, too, think it would be wise for her to use, after her divorce, the name Mrs. Johnson Smith, since (1) this retains her son's surname, and (2) since this form of name immediately, and most conveniently for all occasions, indicates her status as a divorcee.

However, it is true that your sister doesn't have to change her name, although I should think that, with a divorce, she would prefer to change it, if only because of possible future name complications. If Chester Smith, her ex-husband, were to remarry, it would certainly create an embarrassing situation for her (and probably for her child, later on) if there were two Mrs. Chester Smith's)

Blue Velours Tricorne

ONE PERENNIAL swipe from the military for women is the tricorne. What wonder that in the season after Victory it is chosen to wear smartly, in feminine cockiness?

The hat photographed here is a new version. . . .a larger three-cornered hat, its brim rolled in three separate curves to the crown. It is royal blue, and dashing both in color and style.

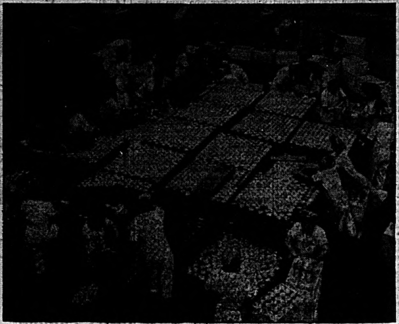
Record Salmon Catch in British Columbia Supplements Canada's Meat Ration

Eighty Per Cent of B.C.'s 1945 Salmon Cannery Production to go Overseas

Here's a hefty gill-netted salmon about to be weighed. To the crew of this B.C. salmon fisherman who may net $5,000 during a good year, he represents big business.



Thousands of cans of salmon being packed by these Indian girls at the British Columbia Packer's Nass plant will soon be furnishing main courses for hungry Europeans. Of British Columbia's 1945 cannery output, 80% will go overseas.

This huge brailer, manned by hand with the aid of a block and tackle, transfers as many as 300 salmon at a time from seine net to ship's hold. Seine nets are expensive ($2,000 to $4,000) but in one catch they will net up to 5,000 salmon.

A salmon seiner unloads the day's catch into this fish conveyor which carries it into the plant to be canned in just 24 hours flat from the time it leaves the water.

200 P. C. Increases in Salmon Run Record Catch Augments Meat Ration

By ALAN PHILLIPS
(NBA Staff Writer)

Good news for meat rationed Canadians and meat-short Europeans comes from British Columbia where the world's biggest salmon fleets this year trolled and trapped a 200 per cent greater catch than in 1944. In many parts of the country fresh or frozen salmon steaks are bolstering citizens' meat rations, while 80 per cent of the output of B.C.'s 20 canneries will go to blunt the edge of European hunger.

With Canada's heavy industry undergoing a transitional period, B. C. fishing has taken up much of the employment slack. Fifth largest provincial industry, it employs 23,000 men and women, the majority in canneries.

Big Business

B. C. canneries are big business. They take the bulk of the salmon catch; clean, cook and can the fish in 24 hours flat from the time they leave the water! Every bit of the fish is used; head, tail and fins become fish oil, the insides fish meal, used for commercial fertilizer and cattle feed. From the liver comes vitamin oil.

Most of the balance is distributed fresh or frozen in Canada. Some is mild-cured, a few kippered or pickled. Dry salting, prevalent in the pre-war period, is discontinued.

Meagerly-rationed Britons and Europeans will receive 80 per cent of B. C. salmon packers' large 1945 output. During the war Britain received all except that supplied to the services and in the Red Cross for distribution to prisoners-of-war.

Profits Big if Run Good

For fishermen, a good salmon run means large profits. A boatowner with a capital investment of $15,000, nets a clear $2,000 and shares the cannery profits with the seven-man crew. A good July and August may bring each man from $5,00 to $40,000.

Seine nets, 1,400 feet long, 55 feet deep costing from $2,000 to $4,000, have the greatest productive value. Their catch runs up to 5,000 salmon at a time. Gillnets, averaging about $400 apiece, are commonest. Trolling may bring the independent fisherman a profit of $50 a day. Indians are permitted to use beach or drag seines at the mouths of rivers or streams.

The B. C. salmon run begins about the first of July, ends about the last of August. It is the greatest salmon run in the world. The fish spawn in fresh water; return to their spawning ground to die in cycles lasting from two to six years according to type. Biologists have never solved the mystery of where the salmon go during their salt water cycle, nor the instinct that returns them at maturity to die.

Queen Mary Rolls At Anchor off Isle of Wight

London, Oct. 27 (CP)— The great liner Queen Mary with 1,000 passengers aboard rolled at anchor off the Isle of Wight in mountainous mine-strewn seas yesterday in the fourth day of gales which wrecked four small vessels with an indicated loss of 14 seamen.

For the second day the Queen Mary was unable to proceed into her dock at Southampton because of waves 50 feet high in Britain's worst storm in 20 years.

Countless thousands of mines were reported in the raging seas and the waves were breaking up minefields planted in the war. The admiralty said 65,000 mines were sown in fishing waters of the east coast alone and only 6,500 had been cleared.

Thirteen lives were reported lost when an unidentified Belgian fishing vessel went down late Wednesday. The 710-ton sloop, H.M.S. Saltburn and the tug Swarthy collided and were wrecked. Another small ship, the name of which was not immediately given, sank during the night with one known dead. About 100 survivors were saved from the derelicts.

The gales, sometimes reaching 90 miles an hour, tossed at least 40 ships perilously close to shore in the Straits of Dover.

The 10,000—ton United States hospital ship John J. Meany ran wild during the night in the Straits of Dover, slewing broadside down a narrow lane of tossing ships. The Meany barely avoided collisions before her anchors finally gripped the sea bed and brought her to safety. The Meany had 492 German prisoners of war and four French repatriats aboard and was bound from the United States to Europe.

Five miles of English Channel beaches were wrecked. Coastal villages were damaged. Millions of tons of seawater poured through gaps crushed in seawalls.

A wild mine exploded on the Folkestone beach, shattering windows within 500 yards.

Numerous houses were unroofed, trees were uprooted and fences were levelled.

Reporter Exposes Loose Conditions In Paris Radio

Paris, Oct. 27 (AP)— Christian Basque, reporter for the Paris Matin, thought things were being run too loosely at the radio diffusion nationale—the French government-controlled radio.

So by his own account, the reporter went to its offices and announced he was new director of broadcasts. He said he was shown to an office. He stamped all material submitted for broadcast.

Basque said he kept this up for two days and before walking out, went to the microphone himself and announced the result of his investigation of the French radio would be published the following day in the Paris Matin. It was.

Carrying Revolver And Crowbar Bandits Get $265

Toronto, Oct. 27 (CP)— Two men, one armed with a revolver and the other with a crowbar, herded five men employees of a west-end restaurant on Dundas Street into a small basement office Friday and escaped with $265 from a strong-box. They also forced employees to give them the small amount of money they had in their pockets.

The holdup occurred just after the restaurant had closed and the employees were together in the kitchen. Entry was gained through a first-storey window and by use of a ladder.

Also adding to the mounting crime list sweeping the Toronto district was another holdup, a robbery with violence and two shopbreakings.

Two 'teen-aged masked bandits last night held up the proprietor of a Chinese laundry on Silverthorn Avenue and took $20. Police believe they are of the same gang that has robbed several Chinese laundries and restaurants in the last few weeks.

William Fleming, 72 was attacked last night by a young thug in front of his suburban Mimico home, beaten into semi-consciousness and robbed of $35.

The Breslin drug store in the western midtown section of Toronto, was robbed of a small amount of cash by break-and-enter thieves, while a vault in the Alexander Lithographing Company in midtown was smashed open with a hammer and $30 taken.

American R.C. Fairy Godmother To Canadians

New York, Oct. 27 (CP) — The role of fairy god mother to two young Canadians in love was played here Thursday by the American Red Cross.

It provided a "proxy mother" and a best man for the wedding of Donald R. Stewart, discharged R.C.A.F. aircraftsman of the R. C. A. F. from Whitehorse, Yukon Territory, and Miss Anne Germaniuk of Alberta.

Stewart and his fiancee were dead-set on a New York wedding at the famed "Little Church Around the Corner". But they didn't know anyone here. So they appealed to the Canadian Red Cross Society, because Donald's mother, Mrs. Lillian Stewart, was manager of the Red Cross warehouse in Vancouver.

Col. C. A. Scott, Commissioner of the Canadian Red Cross, got in touch with New York officials and a call for volunteers was sent out. Mrs. Katherine E. Stark volunteered as "proxy mother," and her son Malcolm Stark, recently discharged from the United States navy, agreed to be best man.

Rev. Charles A. Weatherby performed the ceremony and said afterwards, "they were a lovely couple."

AIRLINES FLAGSHIP ARRIVES

One of Accused Says He Is a Jew

Lueneberg, Germany, Oct. 27 — (AP)—Ignatz Scholomowicz, one of 45 Belsen concentration camp guards on trial for war crimes startled a British military court today by asserting that he is a Jew.

Two affidavits accused him of beating prisoners at Belsen. Schlomowicz expressed surprise, saying he said he thought his accusers were his friends.

The defendant on trial with the "Beast of Belsen", Joseph Kramer, asserted that he fled from Vienna through six countries and six concentration camps and the Gestapo finally accused him of "behaving in an anti-German way."

Schlomowicz said he was sent with 1,500 other Jews to Oswiecim and "only seven of us are left from the original group."

"I was put in the selection parade and chosen for work instead of the gas chamber," he testified.

TEACH BOYS TO KNIT AND BAKE

Toronto, Oct. 27 — (CP) —D. W. Gordon, Inspector of Industrial Arts and Crafts for the Ontario Department of Education, told the Royal Commission on Education yesterday that boys should be taught to knit, sew, bake and cook and girls should get training in manual arts, adding that the policy already is in practice in some centres.

Probe Responsibility For Group of Words On Victory Loan Poster

Ottawa, Oct. 27 (CP)—Finance Minister Ilsley said in the Commons an investigation was being made to place the responsibility for a victory loan poster which carried an almost "unintelligible" group of words which might be taken to seflect on the government.

Replying to questions from Lt.-Col. Alan Cockeram (PC— York South), Mr. Ilsley said he did not know whether the wording —part of the design of a poster — was inserted by someone who was facetious or malicious.

Col. Cockeram displayed the poster and said the wording on a replica of a war bond carried a group of words that might be translated as: "the government of the Dominion of Canada forever have gone too far to be of any good because...." and the rest was not distinguishable.

Mr. Ilsley said the wording had been discovered too late to have distribution stopped. His concern was that anyone should use a victory loan poster in such a manner.

"You wouldn't be worried about the reflection on the government, o course?" interjected Karl Homuth (PC—Waterloo North).

"We used the poster in Nova Scotia," shouted George Cruickshank (L—Fraser Valley), referring to his party's victory in the recent Provincial general election there.

WOODCOCK WANTS LESNEVITCH TO COME TO BRITAIN

British Heavyweight Cannot Come to U. S. and Finding it Difficult to Get Opposition

London, Oct. 27 — (Reuters) — Since heavyweight champion Bruce Woodcock of Britain is unable to leave his job as railway fitter and cross the Atlantic to fight the world light heavyweight champion, Gus Lesnevich, it was suggested here today that perhaps Lesnevich would come to Britain.

London promoter Jack Solomons said:

"If Lesnevich would make the trip to this country I could offer him very tempting terms."

Meanwhile Woodcock is looking for opponents in Britain and finding it a tough job.

"I would like to fight every six weeks," he said today.

Lou Novikoff Case Again Bobs Up in Baseball

By The Canadian Press

With the major leagues' draft meeting scheduled for Chicago Nov. 1, the Lou Novikoff case bobbed up in baseball circles again yesterday with a revival of claims the "Mad Russian" had been railroaded by Chicago Cubs to their Los Angeles farm team. Novikoff is one of 700 class AA players subject to draft and if another senior club gets him over the bargain counter it will stifle the rumor he is destined for New York Yankees in part payment by the Cubs for pitcher Hank Borowy.

Chicago White Sox added coal to the fire by announcing they had offered Los Angeles twice the $7,500 waiver or draft prise for Novikoff.

Quebec City's 33rd International Bonspiel Jan. 21-27 has already attracted entries from 40 Canadian and six United States curling clubs for a total of 96 rinks. Entries have been accepted from Kingston, Sarnia, Chatham, Toronto and other Ontario cities, as well as from Detroit.

Conny Smythe, general manager of the Maple Leafs in the NHL, announced yesterday he had given up his racing stable by disposal sale and would devote his attention to hockey. Because of war disability, he was unable to give interest to both sports.

President William L. Veeck of the Milwaukee Brewers said yesterday he was negotiating for the sale of his majority stock in the American Association club because of the illness of his wife. By showmanship and player deals he had made the Brewers the three-time pennant winners of the league since 1942.

The list of minor players eligible for draft by major baseball clubs, released at Chicago yesterday, showed that teams were more willing to reduce their defence service rosters. Among the three class AA leagues, 396 players in military service were offered for draft, compared with 308 on active playing lists.

McCOOL IS OUT DUE TO ULCERS

Toronto, Oct. 27 — (CP)—Goalie Frank McCool, who led Toronto Maple Leafs to a Stanley Cup last season, yesterday told the National Hockey League club he prefers to remain on the sidelines this year because of illness.

McCool, troubled with stomach ulcers, will miss the Leafs' opening game here tonight, Maj. Conn Smythe said. He will be replaced by Aldege (Baz) Bastien, called back while on his way to join Pittsburgh Hornets of the American League.

Hockey gossip from up around Peterborough has it that the rinkless Petes hockeyists are looking afield for teams to play with. Seems as though the boys in the Liftlock City would welcome and intermediate "B" loop comprised of squads from Norwood, Omemee, Belleville, Trenton and perhaps Oshawa or Whitby or both.

That sounds like an interesting proposition and with the hockey guns here firing plenty of the old H.E. and enthusiasm increasing by leaps and bound, there is no reason why this city should not ice a fairly good Intermediate "B" squad. As a matter of fact the proposition should be welcomed by the players and officials of the new "Co-ops" for they will be at a loose end when the Van Horne series is kaput.

The idea could be discussed at the meeting being held at the Y.M.C.A. on Monday gloaming when the players will vote on appointments of coaches and other team officals.

Toronto's Maple Leaf Gardens will once more re-echo to the cheers of the hockey faithful when the Leafs and the Boston Bruins, ancient ice-lane foes pry the lid of the National Hockey League in Conn Smythe's bailiwick.

Incidentally the Leafs kentors weeded out the regular squad from the young army they had enlisted for the teams basic training. In the goal spots will be McCool and Bell; defence Pratt Morris, Goldham, Stanowski, Baldwin and Thompson, and up front will be Schriner, Carr, Bodnar, Davidson, Kennedy, Hill, Taylor, Stewart, Ezenicki, Apps and Don and Nick Metz.

Seven of the budding Leafs will go to Pittsburg including Bast Batjen ,goal; defenceman, Ernie Dickens and forwards; Boesch, Klukay, Hamilton, McMurdy and Irvine.

Memories.

Seven years ago today the schooner "Bluenose" pride of the Luneburg fishing fleet, successfully defended the International Fisherman's Trophy by defeating the "Gertrude L. Thebaud," queen of the Gloucester fishing fleet. And that brings back memories of the cub days when one of the first assignments we had was aboard the then brand new "Bluenose" when she went on her trial trips off Halifax. . . . Before a spanking breeze that whipped the Atlantic off Halifax harbor into frothing whitecaps, she ripped through heavy seas on a thirty-mile triangular course. . . . Cap'n. Gib Walters, husky skipper, was at the helm and the way he handled the then latest style in streamlined schooners was a treat, even for landlubbers. . . . There was a score of naval and civilian officials on board not to mention a lot of skippers from the city and district. . . . Green water ran in her scuppers as the trim ship heeled to the breeze and the green matched the complexions of several on board, especially the members of the Fourth Estate. . . . With ten miles to go, the natural nautical scenery and shore lines of Nova Scotia gradually faded from view and this writer saw heaving ocean and moving coastline through a foggy haze. . . . The lunch served on board prior to the trials was lost in a mist of whirling spray. . . . From that time on we confined our sports coverage to golf and baseball.

Jet-Plane Pace Set by Germany, British Superior

In revealing many of the secrets of German aircraft, Britain's air ministry is both admitting the Germans' earlier lead in jet and rocket-propelled aircraft and hinting that British post-war development begins where Germany left off. That can be said to be true of rocket-driven aircraft, but in jet-driven aircraft Britain was gradually overhauling Germany when the war ended, writes E. C. Shepherd, aviation expert of The London Sunday Times.

This does not mean Britain was applying the gas turbine with the same freedom and on the same grand scale as Germany. Britain was not content to hurry the imperfect gas turbine into service and accept a short working life as a fair price for high performance. The Germans had to use such methods as were still available when the Allied sea and air blockades had done their worst. Royal Air Force observers in Germany toward the end of the fighting were of the opinion that the German jet engines or gas turbines had an average working life little more than 24 hours.

Longer Lifetime

No British gas turbine went into service until it had much better prospects than that E. W. Hives, chief of the Rolls-Royce, design and production team, recently assured me that the life of British jet units was many times better than that of the Germans.

The popular estimate sets the life at about 300 hours. No authority will commit himself to that estimate, largely because development is still so fast that no engine runs 300 hours without a modification or improvement involving the replacement of a working part.

The German method was not to wait for either high reliability or high power, but to build aircraft around turbines immediately they were fit to deliver the new form of thrust, despite their strictly limited period of service. Since a gas turbine is quickly and easily replaced, this may have been the right policy in wartime. It certainly gave Germany results even in her extremity. A curious outcome was that Germany finished the war with the world's fastest heavy bomber.

Jet-Driven Craft

This was a jet-driven bomber which could take a total bomb load of 10,000 pounds. Its development illustrates the German policy of expediting the application of the gas turbine. This bomber, with a span of 66 feet and weighing 47,500 pounds all up, was fitted in the first place with six moderately powered jets. It was about to be fitted instead with two jets capable of a thrust equalling 8,000 horse power each. In either form its top speed was about 530 miles an hour. If the bomb-load was limited to 7,000 pounds, this Junkers 287 bomber had a range of 1.175 miles. It could thus have raided England from Germany.

The six turbines were originally of 2,500 horse power each. The most powerful German jet of that period gave an output of 3,000 horse power. The next type more than doubled that power. This swift progression permits an understanding of development of British jets.

If the Germans, severely limited in high grade metals, could do that, the British can be supposed to have made equal strides and added better consumption rates and a better powerweight ratio.

British Secrecy

What happened with British jet development was that it was nearly smothered by secrecy. Britain was so afraid of leakages after having sent the first Whittle engines to America in 1942, that aircraft designers had only the haziest notions of what was likely to come from the engineers. Consequently engines were fit for use before aircraft were designed for them. Britain had no jet bomber and only two jet fighters when the European war ended. However, her jet engines were superior in every way to anything in Germany.

Germany had saved Britain many experiments.

Rocket propulsion is a different story. This was short-duration work mainly devoted to fighters for interception of bombers at great heights. In this chemical engineering, the Germans were far ahead of the United Nations. The little Messerschmitt 163 rocket fighter, in service for the last six months of the European war, shows what could be done with the help of rocket propulsion in interception.

Climbed Rapidly.

This machine took just over two and a half minutes to climb to 30,000 feet. Improved by the Junkers Company and rechristened the JU-263, this fighter could climb to 49,000 feet in three minutes. There was something still more startling on the way—a rocket fighter driven up vertically at an initial rate of 37,000 feet a minute. This plane, called "Natter," was intended to get in among the Fortresses with rocket projectiles, after which the pilot was to descend in a parachute.

Navy - Pennsylvania Clash at Philadelphia is the Standout Game of Day

By MURRAY ROSE

New York, Oct. 27 — (AP) — The United States Collegiate football frolics move into the final half today with a flock of outstanding games that will have a great bearing on Bowl selections, Conference titles and the mythical national championship.

Heading the best program of the season to date is the Navy-Pennsylvania clash at Philadelphia. The big Penn Quakers, whose goal-line has yet to be crossed, are ranked seventh nationally to Navy's third and will furnish a true test as to whether the Middies are all they're cracked up to be.

Army, the No. 1 power, meets Duke here in the Polo Grounds and the Cadets will be shooting for the 21-0 'par' set up by Navy's victory over the Blue Devils. The Cadets remember the 7-6 half-time lead the Blue Devils held over them last season.

In the midwest, three games share top billing. Ohio State's Buckeyes, knocked over by Purdue last week, will be aiming to do the same to the Minnesota Gophers. The unbeaten Tulsa Hurricanes tangle with once-tied Indiana Hoosiers. Purdue, off last week's performance, is favored to make its perfect record 6-0 at Northwestern's expense.

Notre Dame, the No. 2 team of the country, probably will clear the bench against Iowa.

A New Year's trip to Pasadena's Rose Bowl may be at stake at Seattle where the once-beaten Southern California Trojans collide with Washington's Huskies, losers only to California. U.C.L.A. kept in the running for the Pasadena prize by stopping Oregon 12-0 last night.

In other games last night, North Carolina State defeated William and Mary 20-6, Detroit nipped Drake 19-14, St. Louis edged out the Naval Air Station 19-13, and Miami, Fla., trimmed Miami, O., 27-13.

Acquitted of Charge of Illegal Practice of Medicine

Hull, Que., Oct. 27 (CP)—William McCaffrey, 72-year-old Farrelton, Que., farmer, said to have performed "near miracle" cures of physical ills through application of holy oils and prayer, was acquitted in Hull police court Friday on two charges of having practised medicine illegally.

The charges were laid by the Royal College of Physicians and Surgeons of Quebec and the case was heard last Friday before Magistrtae Roland Millar.

SOVIET UNION RECOGNIZED

Berlin, Oct. 27 —(AP)— The Soviet Union has formally recognized the right of German states in the Russian occupation zone to make their own laws and ordinances.

An order issued by Marshal George K. Zhukov contained only one qualification: The German legislation must not be contrary to laws and orders of the Allied Control Council or those of his own headquarters.

Halifax, Oct. 27 (CP)—The experts seem agreed that Maritime hockey is in for a big season this winter, the only thing yet uncertain is how big. But that should be pretty well lined up after today's Maritime Amateur Hockey Association meeting at Truro.

Halifax is all set to go with a four-team loop consisting of Navy, R.C.A.F., Army and civilian Crescents, but there is general agreement that the brand of play won't be quite as classy as during the past few seasons when there was a flock of service talent to choose from.

The sailor squad from H. M. C. S. Cornwallis—minus the Goldhams and the Stewarts—just "won't be back" and the Cape Breton League has struck snags of disinterest.

Around New Brunswick there is talk of a loop consisting of Saint John, Moncton—now that the hub has its rink back—Sackville, and Amherst, while St. Joseph's also is interested.

Prince Edward Island plans are indefinite yet, but Charlottetown is almost certain to have a senior and junior league of some kind.

Athletic Cabinet

Perusal of Premier Angus L. Macdonald, Nova Scotia cabinet list shows a wealth of former athletic talent. Angus L. himself is a former rugby football star and coach, Attorney General J. H. MacQuarrie once was a burly star with Dalhousie pigskin chasers, Industries Minister Harold Connolly was no slouch as a baseball player, and the newest member of the government, Agriculture Minister A. W. (Art) MacKenzie once was a star shortstop. Another Liberal member, Dr. James MacLeod is a former Maritime intercollegiate heavyweight boxing champion.

Here And There

Gordie Drillon of Moncton, N. B., erstwhile storm centre of N. H. L. camps, will appear next at Debert Camp, N.S., as a war services sports director. The Truro Bearcats are anxious to get their claws on him.... Charlottetown has joined the list of communities where an athletic field is being projected as a practical, sane war memorial. The proposed centre would include a baseball diamond, football field, and cinder track for track and field.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 817
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

A tough bridge problem is far more fun than solitaire for many card players. Maybe it is for you. If so, lay out these cards:

NORTH
♠J 10 9 8
♥4 2
♦Q
♣3

WEST
♠5 4
♥10
♦9 8 6 3
♣K

EAST
♠Q
♥K Q 9
♦J 10 4
♣4

SOUTH
♠None
♥A J 6 5 3
♦5
♣7 6

You are south as declarer with hearts as trumps and it is your lead. Your problem is to take six of the remaining eight tricks.

Lead a diamond and trump dummy's spade return. Lead a club for west to win. I have already explained the plays if west leads the trump ten. Instead, suppose he leads a spade or a diamond.

If west leads a spade, dummy has a higher spade. East has no spades or clubs by this time. With two diamonds and three trumps, he must either trump that spade trick or sluff a diamond.

Suppose east trumps that spade trick with the nine of hearts. Simply overtrump with your jack and lead your ace of trump. Then give up a trump trick to east and take the rest.

If east trumps the spade trick with his heart queen, you must let him keep that trick. And on it, strangely enough, you must not sluff your club. Instead, throw away your heart six on it.

That gives up the second trick you can afford to lose. But east is in the lead and must send forth either a diamond or a trump. If he leads a trump, take both trump tricks and win the rest.

But east may not lead back a trump. More than likely, he will lead a diamond instead. If he does lead the diamond, trump it. But be sure the trump you use is the trey.

Overtake your trey of trump with your dummy four of hearts for the purpose of having dummy lead. Let dummy come back with the deuce of hearts and merely cover the trump played by east. Then lead your high trump and the rest is yours.

When west takes his club king, suppose he leads a diamond instead of a heart or a spade. See what you can do with that one.

In Manhattan

New York, Oct. 27 (CP)— Pte. Irwin Shaw, whose pre-war works included the imaginative drama "Bury The Dead," and the somewhat hammy script for motion picture "Commandos Strike at Dawn," spent seven months in the United States Signal Corps in Africa and Arabia.

From this background, he wrote "The Assassin", a melodrama based on the assassination of Admiral Darlan in Algiers, late in 1942. Like a combination of his earlier works, it is both taut drama and trashy pathos.

Protentious speeches and long gaps in the action marred the play's Broadway premiere last week following a brief run in London. Frank Sundstrom, a slender young Swede making his American debut in the role of the killer, takes what acting honors are available, but his performance also is spotty.

If Mr. Shaw could make up his mind whether he is trying to write like Clifford Odets or like William Saroyan, his work would be much more clean-cut and less open to misinterpretation. Better still, if he wrote like Irwin Shaw at his best more of the time, he would become one of the most important of practising playwrights.

One of the more pleasant — if less important—events of the season was the revival of "The Red Mill," a 1906 Victor Herbert musical.

Eddy Foy, Jr., son of one of the greatest comics of them all, stole most of the show with his old-fashioned mugging and rubberlegging. Paula Stone—daughter of Fred Stone who starred in the original—co-directed, and another of the stepping Stones, Dorothy played the feminine lead.

The atomic bomb made pretty thorough mincemeat of Hiroshima and Nagasaki—but it left its mark on Broadway too.

Dozens of bars and night clubs feature a ghastly concoction of dubious ingredients labelled "The Atomic Bomb" (one sip and the customer is up and atom).... A comedian is billing himself as "the atomic comic"..... A stripteaser working the New Jersey spots across the Hudson River calls herself "the anatomic bomb."

Klein, administrator of the institute, was sentenced to death after trial at Wiesbaden, Germany.

MR. KING LUNCHES WITH CHURCHILLS

London, Oct. 27 —(CP Cable) —Prime Minister Mackenzie King lunched yesterday with Mr. and Mrs. Winston Churchill at the London residence of the former Prime Minister.

The Canadian Prime Minister's visit followed his reception yesterday by Queen Mary at the London home of the Queen Mother. Mr. King had luncheon with the King and Queen earlier in the week.

VICTIM OF STABBER

Ensign Peter P. Emge, 21-year-old naval officer son of Dr. Ludwig A. Emge, prominant San Francisco physician, who was mysteriously stabbed to death in San Francisco. A policeman is examining the body in the Folson St. hallway where it was found. A former Stanford University student, Ensign Emge had recently returned from combat duty in the Pacific aboard the aircraft carrier Petrof Bay.

Seven Players Again Amateurs

Toronto, Oct. 27 —(CP)— Seven hockey players who have been in professional ranks were given amateur status today by Hanson Dowell, president of the Canadian Amateur Hockey Association.

Those reinstated were: Peter Morin, Germain Bergeron, Jack McLean, Alfred Kunkel, William (Legs) Fraser, Stanley Rooke and Wilfred (Bucko) MacDonald.

Morin, on Canadiens contingent reserve list, was in the R.C.A.F. and formerly played with Montreal Royals' named razzle-dazzle line in the Quebec Senior League; Legs Fraser was a reserve goalie on the Canadiens' team and played part of last season with Eddie Shore's Buffalo club.

Bucko MacDonald, now a Liberal member of the House of Commons, played his last year of professional hockey with Rangers last season. It is intimated he may play with Hull Volants in the Quebec Senior League. McLean played with the Stanley Cup champions, Toronto Maple Leafs.

Bergeron played for Providence in the A.H.L., while Rooke was on the contingent reserve of the A.H.L. Buffalo team. Kunkel was listed on Boston's contingent reserve.

RECOGNITION BY U. S. IMMINENT

Washington, Oct. 27 —(AP)— Recognition of the new revolutionary government in Venezuela by the United States and most other American republics is imminent, the State Department said.

In response to questions from reporters, a Department spokesman said that it is likely that the date for recognition of the new regime will be set within two days. This government has not yet heard from all the other American republics on the matter he added.

Sam Smith, head of British Lion studios of Britain, passed away recently. One of those responsible for the production of "In Which We Serve" and other fine films, he entered theatre business in Western Canada. One of his early jobs was to select British films for showing in Canada and, upon returning to England, the land of his birth, he saw great opportunities in the film industry and remained . . . Looking through a film book of 1910, I noted the name of a coming star—Antonio Garrido Monteagudo Moreno. That must have been before theatre marquees . . . Among the films I would like to see is Charlie Chaplin's famous burlesque of Carmen. It has never been brought out during any of the Chaplin revivals.

"The Enchanted Forest," an outdoor film in color, is a rare treat, it's said, and even Walt Disney likened it to his own work, although it is not a cartoon . . . Both enlisted in the British Army from Hollywood . . . Leave it to Samuel Goldwyn to do the startling thing. He has sold half the shares of his company to his employees at one dollar per share . . . They say that the Duke of Windsor will become the representative abroad of the British film industry.

Director of that excellent film "Anchors Aweigh" was George Sydney, whose father owns the rights to the song, having had his ear caught by it 16 years ago. He purchased all rights from the widow of the composer for $1,000. George was 11 then and never thought he would have any future professional connection with it . . . They're calling Kathryn Grayson "The Curve". . . . Bob Hope owns the Hope Metal Products Co. of Cleveland. He had a strike on his hands recently. Saw nothing funny in it, they say . . . The fact is that he was playing the dollar slot machines and one of them got stuck. He shook it so hard it toppled over on his foot . . . George Sanders has this to say about women in "Bel Ami": "Women should be kept in ignorance. To educatr a woman is like leaving a razor where a monkey can find it." Says Nazi Menace Exists in Argentina

Buenos Aires, Oct. 27 (AP) — John Cabot, United States Charge D'Affaires, in a formal statement today declared a Nazi menace still exists in Argentina and said it is "properly a matter of international concern."

In an obvious reference to the lack of constitutional government in Argentina, whose 14,000,000 people have been governed the last 2½ years by military leaders, Mr. Cabot said: "It is not incompatible to state a self-evident truth that the government and people of the United States cannot help but feel greater affinity and warmer friendship for those governments which rest on the periodically and freely expressed consent of the governed."

SCHOOL GIRL IN POLICE LINEUP

New York, Oct. 27 —(AP)— A blond, 16-year-old high school girl was in police lineup Friday, charged with homicide in connection with the hatchet-slaying of a 71-year-old tailor.

Police said the girl was Lena Theresa Nienstedt. Her arrest resulted, they said, because she played "hookey" from school and was investigated by a truant officer.

The officer reported her truancy to police, who said they went to her home and found a small hatchet, bloodstained clothing and the wallet of a tailor, John Wagner.

Govt. Sets 35c. Price For Export Alfalfa Seed

Ottawa, Oct. 27 (CP) — The Special Products Board announced today it would purchase thru' the Seed Export Office at Lindsay, Ont., seeds of Alfalfa for export and set the purchase price at 33 cents a pound, F.O.B., Winnipeg.

The announcement said the price was set on the basis of 99 per cent purity, 90 per cent germination, not more than one-half of one per cent weed seeds and not more than one United States noxious weed seed in 10 grams.

The board said that if markets could be obtained, alfalfa of lower specifications than these would be accepted, subject to discount for lower quality.

The board has been authorized to distribute to producers on the basis of participation certificates, any profits accruing from its transactions.

Rio De Janeiro, Oct. 27 —(AP) —Tension prevailed in this Brazilian capital yesterday after a night in which the armed forces and police were on the alert over rumors of an impending revolution.

War Minister Gen. Pedro Aurelio De Goes Monteiro directed the army to keep clear of politics. "It is necessary," he said, "that the army remain united now more than at any time in our history, withstanding all political passions that would plunge the nation into a fatal civil war."

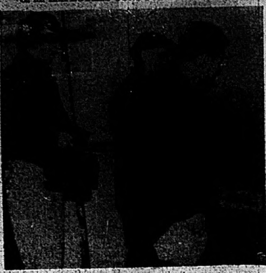
G. M. EMPLOYEES CONDUCT STRIKE VOTE



Gear axle employees of General Motors, shown at W.L.B. headquarters in Detroit, Mich., when they took part in the U. S. strike poll of the 300,000 U.A.W. employees of G.M. Walter Reuther made a statement that "Every human effort" would be made to settle across the conference table, the union demand for a wage increase of 30 per cent.

And The Walls Came Tumbling

By Joseph McCord

CHAPTER 3

"Andre!" Mrs. Steel put down her knife and fork to stare across the table accusingly. "You're never hinting...."

"Dear no. I was just thinking if any stock were worth anything it might pay me to be careless with a can of cleaning fluid some day. But I'm too near the fire hall." He glanced at Carol. "How about the insurance on this place, Cassandra? I don't believe I ever asked you, did I?"

"I've got some," was the tart reply. "But don't you get the idea you're going to set my house on fire. Not that I'd put it past you. I know well enough you smoke in bed."

"I pledge you my word. But I shall be interested to see if Jed builds another big barn or decides he can do with a little one. After all," he mused, "a man must turn an honest penny these days if he can. There are ways now and then....with luck. Carol, my dear?" He changed the topic abruptly. There was a teasing light in his blue eyes.

"Yes?"

"I think someone is going for a little ride this evening."

"Thank you. I'd love to. When are we starting?"

"I'm not taking you. The oil has to be changed in the wheelbarrow before I can run it. I mean Wige. I saw him polishing his car as we came in town. It must be nice to keep bankers' hours,...and a jallopy."

Mrs. Steel sniffed audibly.

"Was he?" Carol inquired without any show of interest.

"He was. Pleasant night for a drive. But 'ware the moon. It's in the full. Treacherous. It just might carry your swain off his feet."

"It could happen."

"You're hopeless," Andre sighed. "I'm beginning to think my passion for romance passed you by. A little more sugar if you will."

Carol passed him the old-fashioned silver bowl in silence. She could not respond to his light mood now. Perhaps it was that mention of Wige, otherwise Wilbur Lennon.

Wige was accepted by all Jericho as Carol's boy friend — the town's way of saying fiance. The two had been playmates and schoolmates, "kept company" in the years following high school. Wilbur invariably was referred to as a nice boy, steady and industrious. Carol sometimes wished he might have scattered just a few and not too—wild oats in the background of his excellence, but she was very fond of him for all that.

Numerous times during the last two years he had proposed and she had hesitated to give him the answer he wanted, vaguely disappointed at his lack of ardor although it had no bearing on her decision. He couldn't help being practical about everything, she supposed.

Wige was a teller in the Jericho Savings Bank and his job no doubt was as secure as the institution itself, but his salary never would amount to much so long as old Silas Higgins employed him. Still worse, he was the sole support of a widowed mother and a crippled younger brother. They owned a place at the edge of town and Wige believed if Carol would marry him and come to the Lennon home they could manage nicely. That was the main reason for her continued refusals, although there had been times when the future seemed so dreary that she was tempted to try it. The only near security in sight, the one escape.

"You'll be jumping out of the frying pan into the fire," Aunt Cassie told her promptly when Carol hinted at the idea in a despondent moment. "I'm not saying anything against Amanda Lennon.... much. But she's a whiner. And let me tell you one thing. I've kept my eyes open a good many years and I've never yet seen a house big enough for two families. Different blood, I mean. You could be a sight worse off than you are now. Gettting married isn't all there is, sometimes."

Andre's attitude had been quite different when Carol confided her problem. She told him almost at once, for he had a way of always understanding things. He was improvising on his zither and took a long moment before venturing the question:

"Do you love Wige?"

"I think so, Andy," was the hesitant answer. "But it's not the way....not the way I'd like it to be. I mean it isn't the way I've always thought and hoped love.. Oh, you know what I mean!"

"Love's a very wonderful thing. Marvelous. I knew it once and I wouldn't trade the memory for anything I ever hope to have in this old world. If you could remember your mother...."

A plaintive little strain.

"Oh, I wish I could, Andy! I do wish she were...."

"Yes, yes. I know. If you're not altogether sure, my dear, no one can tell you. But don't spoil anything. That matters most." He played on.

Wige and his shiny little car did put in an appearance. There was another thing Carol thought as she watched the familiar figure saunter toward the porch. Wige didn't ask for dates. Almost invariably it was Wednesday, Saturday and Sunday evening. If he'd only be less automatic, make her guess now and then. So patiently methodical about things.

"Hello," was his nonchalant greeting. "Hot day, wasn't it? How about a little ride? Don't often see it like this in September."

"Not tonight, Wige," He was no more surprised at that abrupt refusal than Carol herself. He might want to park in the moonlight, say things she somehow couldn't listen to tonight. If he mentioned budgeting for four she could scream. "I....I have a headache", she lied unhappily. "It's so nice and cool out here. Pull up the armchair and talk to me. I'm not dressed to go out, anyway." She tried to make it all sound sincere.

Wige complied, but conversational attempts proved a dismal failure. Carol felt a twinge of remorse. She hadn't intended to be rude and she was almost on the point of confessing that she had changed her mind and would go driving, when a long roadster swerved in behind Wilbur Lennon's parked car. It halted and a man got out.

The moon had risen above the trees. Its pale light revealed the newcomer as tall, broad-shouldered. He stared deliberately at the Steel house then started toward its picket gate. He limped.

Carol caught her breath sharply. It was Mr. Dennison!

When Doctor Silverthorne reached his office after supper he found C. H. Dennison in the reception room, foot propped on a chair and reading one of the old magazines about which he had spoken jeeringly to Carol Delaine. Dennison had been perfectly sincere in his promise to see the doctor. His father had been a physician and the young man was well aware that the seemingly trifling wound might have serious consequences. It made him more uneasy than he would have cared to admit.

He, too, must unconsciously have been influenced by the sound of Doctor Silverthorne's name for he sat staring almost rudely at the physician and made no attempt to introduce himself. But the doctor helped out with a blunt:

"You the man who ran a nail in your foot?"

"Why, yes. I was...."

"Come on in here."

Silverthorne unlocked the door to his inner office and entered, leaving his patient to follow. "Girl told me about it," he explained as he divested himself of his coat and hat. "Sit down there and take off your shoe. I'll look at you."

"Mind if I smoke here?"

"Not if you think it steadies your nerves. It doesn't."

In spite of the pain, Dennison could not but admire the quick sureness of the doctor's muscular hands as he probed and cleaned the wound. "Not very deep," was the verdict when the final dressing began. "You're a healthy-looking specimen and I don't think it will give you any trouble. Not spending any time here I reckon?"

"I'm likely to be around town for a few days."

"Then see me if it troubles you. Don't fool with it. And don't walk more than you must tonight. That's all."

Dennison slowly drew on his sock as if he wanted to prolong the situation a moment. In rather more friendly a fashion than he had exhibited before he observed:

"You have a very capable office ....assistant."

"Carol's a good girl. I'm going to give you something to put on that cut tomorrow. You can change the dressing yourself. Watch out for any sign of inflammation of course." He was scribbling a few words on a gummed label.

"Thanks. She told me her name was Delaine."

"It is."

"May I ask if she is related to Andre Delaine here?"

"Her father."

" I see." Dennison drew on his shoe. "I never had the pleasure of meeting Mr. Delaine." Silverthorne shot him a glance over the top of his spectacles. "But I want to," his patient continued. "I gather that Mr. Delane is something of a local....politician."

"Andy?" The doctor applied the label to the top of a tin box. "I've never so much as heard of his casting a vote. But I might be wrong," he amended with professional caution.

"I dare say he wouldn't be at his shop this evening."

"I doubt it."

"May I ask where he lives? I think I will call on him."

"Down the street about three blocks, on your right. He makes his home with his sister, Mrs. Steel. Directly across from the Episcopal church. Anybody can show you."

"Thanks." Dennison got to his feet. "How much do I owe you, Doctor?"

"A dollar."

"For two visits....and medicine?"

"One visit. The salve goes with it."

"Very reasonable. Good night, Doctor." A bill changed hands.

"Good night."

Dennison had no trouble in locating the Steel house although he was not aware there was anyone on the porch until he reached the steps and Carol's slim figure emerged from the shadow.

"Ah, good evening, Miss Delaine."

"Good evening.... Mr. Dennison."

"Is your father at home? Do you suppose he would see me for a few minutes?"

"Why, yes....I'm quite sure. Please come in." She moved to the screen door and held it open. "How is your foot now?" she asked as he accepted her invitation with a slight bow.

"Better, thanks."

She followed him into the narrow hall. Andre was in sight. He was at the dining room table, a pitcher of ice water at his elbow and a deck of cards spread on the cloth. Idiot's Delight was his favorite solitaire—singularly appropriate, he was apt to explain. Carol walked swiftly to the door, to announce in a low voice:

"A gentleman to see you, dad."

"Who?" Andre studied a card. "That damn duece of spades again.

"It's....his name is Dennison."

"Tell him to come here."

As Dennison passed her, Carol lingered in the hall to observe the meeting. She heard the caller say briefly:

"I hope I'm not intruding, Mr. Delaine, but I'd be glad if you would give me a few minutes of your time."

"Why not?" Carol experienced a slight shock when she saw that her father did not rise or extend his hand. "Sit down," she heard him add. "May I offer you a drink of water? Sorry to say I have nothing better."

Lancashire Turns Again to Cotton

By JAMES LANSDALE HODSON

I drove this morning via Rossendale Valley, Lancashire, to visit a stone-built cotton mill owned by a firm whose origins are 130 years old, whose records tell how Luddite rioters smashed the first power looms 11 years later, and how the cavalry who were sent for either didn't arrive in time or, having arrived, were almost useless.

I mention this beginning to show how old is this trade and what a continuity it has. This firm has made some of the jungle green webbing worn by our troops in Burma. When Liverpool was blitzed and the raw cotton burnt an experiment was tried for salvaging it; they have used cotton thus burnt on the quays and cotton that had lain on the sea bottom in a sunken ship for over a year (the fumes and stench from it were so bad that the work people had to use gas masks). No lack of initiative, you will see.

Production Council

When in 1941 the government's demands for cotton fabrics had grown more and more urgent a works production council was started. This is a thoroughly democratic body wherein the workers are in a large majority; they could, one of the directors smilingly said, stop him smoking in his office if they wished. Production since this works production council was set up has risen from 50,000 pounds of yarn weekly to 72,000 pounds, with roughly the same number of workers and at least one-third of that improvement in output the management attribute to the existence of the council.

It had led, among other things, to the creation of canteens, a nurserp or creche at the Mill where mothers can bring their children (over 60 children use it at the moment) and to the formation of a music and drama society. Incidentally, about 80 percent of the work people have never been inside a theatre although, of course, most of them were filmgoers.

Enlightened Behavior

If anybody wanted good evidence of what enlightened behavior by employers will achieve, I believe he might find it at this mill. The shortage of labor in Lancashire cotton mills is acute, but this mill has very nearly all it requires. The industry as a whole needs 200,000 operatives, and strenuous efforts are being made to attract back this number who left the trade when 40 per cent of the mills are shut down about 1940 and 1941 to release workers for other munitions. It is going to be a stiff job winning them back, but if every mill had a works production council and the amenities of the one I have described, a good part of the problem would be solved. This particular firm has another important feature—it gives an output bonus which at the moment is adding about 10 per cent to the normal wages.

But the brutal fact is that probably no more than a tenth of Lancashire's cotton mills—and it may be less—have works production councils and are equipped with canteens. Those with a nursery you could count, I daresay, on the fingers of one hand. This is an industry that is 150 years old, with a lot of out of date buildings and machinery. When Sir Stafford Cripps, the new Labor president of the Board of Trade, began to look around and see which industry to tackle first in the shape of encouraging reorganization (as distant from the nationalization which is going to be carried out in coal, iron and steel) be hit on cotton.

Two Reasons

This was natural enough for two reasons: (a) Its importance in Britain's exports; (b) Its need for being brought completely up to date. Sir Stafford came down to Lancashire within a few days of taking over his new job, called the cotton leaders together, and made it plain that nationalization was not at present contemplated, but asked for reorganization, more modern machinery and more double-shift working. More bulk production, more personnel management, more joint consultations — all these were mentioned.

The opportunities for the trade to expand again are tremendous. In 1913 we exported seven billion yards. By 1938 or 1939 it had dropped to two billion yards. Lately we have been exporting, owing to war conditions, no more than some 400,000 yards. It will be a fight and take time to climb up to the two million yard mark again. How far above that we can go few people would predict, but the downfall of Japan will leave the markets at all events open. Lancashire cotton leaders both employ workmen and talk great prosperity for five years—a period which seems to me pretty modest.

Nobody in Lancashire has forgotten what happened after World War 1, when the boom resulted in many cotton mills being sold and refloated at extravagant prices only to be engulfed in the slump. The county was strewn with financial and human wreckage. I believe we shall be wiser this time.

But if industry's chances are tremendous in a world desperately short of cotton goods, the difficulties are great also. First there is a shortage of 200,000 operatives; second, the problems inherent in reorganizing the industry with about 300 spinning companies (mostly with one or two mills but one corporation having 40 or 50) about 900 weaving firms, 500 dyeing and finishing firms, 250 doublers and waste spinners and some 2,000 firms and merchants.

It would be wrong to suggest that the entire Lancashire cotton trade supports Sir Stafford Cripps and welcomes the government action.

Londoners Are Living Bleak Lives

To avoid being lynched by Londoners who read this, I had better say that I am an Englishman with war service in army and R.A.F. and that I have had some bombing as a civilian householder, writes the New York correspondent of The London Daily Express.

For nearly five years I've been living in New York, I have been rediscovering England for the past 10 days.

Americans have no idea what life is like in England now. They have no idea of the bleakness and the drabness, and the shortages that have reduced living to its present low level.

Puzzling Situation

Today in London it is hard for me to realize that I am in the capital of a victorious ally.

There have been flags flying and captured German war machines on view during Thanksgiving week. But there is no atmosphere of triumph or rejoicing.

The chief thought in the minds of Londoners is about food. The rationing is obviously fair and efficient. But there is so little to go round. There is such an effort needed to keep one's stomach reasonably happy between the so-called meals!

Shock No. 1 came with my first on English soil.

This was breakfast, after I had landed from the British flying boat which carried me across the Atlantic. (British Overseas Airways have just three flying boats with which to operate their ocean service four days a week in each direction, you may know, in competition with America's tremendous offensive on the world's skyways).

Unappetizing Meal

That meal consisted of strong—almost milkless—tea, dry cereal that was glued in its bottom centre to the plate (it would have been floating in fresh milk in America), and desiccated egg mixture that passed as an omelette. An American child would have thrown the whole lot on to the floor....

I know now that this was, according to present standards, a good average meal.

But I think the food shortage was best brought home to me by an incident in my hotel.

I was waiting for a friend, and in the lounge tea was being served. Groups of people sat patiently round tables. At long intervals a waiter would pass through.

Near me was a family party — father, mother, boy and girl. At last the waiter placed some empty cups on their table.

"Anything To Eat"

The girl child, about eight, stole up to her mother's side and, with the emphatic enunciation of Margaret O'Brien, asked: "Is he going to bring anything to eat?"

Other shocks were provided by this queue habit—queues for everything.

By the dirtiness of London streets; the smell of bad drains in Oxford Street; the squalor of late night in Leicester Square and Piccadilly; the threadbare clothes, the thin bodies; the lined faces; the down-turned mouths.

And the shortage of labor that makes it impossible to buy a suit of clothes-to-measure that would be ready this side of Christmas, and impossible to get an hotel breakfast without a wait of half an hour to 40 minutes.

"Impossible"? There is too much use of that word in London now. "Sorry, can't be done." "Quite impossible." "You can't do that, I'm afraid."

In this past week I've heard it all the time. I've met it in almost all my contacts—with shops, restaurants, offices, ministries and individuals. Everything I suggested was "impossible",—whether it was booking a table for lunch, getting a shirt washed, or seeing someone of moderate importance this side of doomsday.

Wants "Blitz-Peace"

I would like to see England launch a "blitz-peace"; a streamlined national effort to make post-war conditions more enjoyable.

This is, I know, an American idea. The Americans believe in the "pursuit of happiness." however fatuous such a pursuit may be, I must say that the notion that life is an experience that should be enjoyed—rather than merely endured—has an appeal.

An elderly woman I was lunching with suddenly sighed. "Oh, for a new frock!" She gazed wistfully into her empty coffe cup.

She has no coupons.

People can not get all they want, I know. But can't something be done to make life a little more cheerful? Even a priority on paint with which to put a touch of color on to the face of battered old London would be something.

Did you say "impossible?"

Ordered to Stay Away From Stratford for 2 Years

Stratford, Oct. 27 (CP)—Gerald W. Knechtel, Kitchener, was ordered to keep out of Stratford for two years and was given suspended sentence for that period when he was convicted by Magistrate A. F. Cook today on a vagrancy charge.

The man was picked up at the rear of a city gasoline station on Oct. 18 and police testified he was acting in a suspicious manner, that binoculars, cotton gloves, flashlight, pliers, screwdriver and a small amount of food were found on him, and that he had tried to get rid of the pliers and screwdriver.

Knechtel who claimed to be a naturalist, said he became flustrated when he saw the police who, he said, "looked as if they were out to get some one."

NINE CHARGES AGAINST FORMER PATROLMAN

Baltimore, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Forty-nine charges of burglary, attempted burglary and carrying a deadly weapon were filed Thursday against Paul H. Maenhoudt, former Baltimore city patrolman who, witnesses testified, committed the crimes while on duty. Police said the man is the most-charged defendant in Baltimore's history.

Caretaker Overpowered In Hamilton Restaurant

Hamilton, Oct. 27 (CP)— Two armed bandits overpowered the caretaker of a Hamilton restaurant early Friday and escaped with approximately $100 in cash.

Police said caretaker George Lcioo, 52, was walking toward the kitchen when two masked men jumped him. They bound his legs and arms with wire and gagged him with a towel.

The thugs, one carrying a small revolver, emptied the cash register and escaped through a rear door. After freeing himself, Lcioo notified the police.

He said the men must have hidden in the basement before the restaurant closed as both front and rear doors were locked when they attacked him.

PROGRESS BEING MADE

Winnipeg, Oct. 27 — (CP)—Negotiations for settlement of the Dominion - wide packinghouse workers dispute continued here yesterday before Mr. Justice S.E. Richards, government - appointed mediator. Mr. Richards said "The atmosphere is still amicable and progress is being made."

SENATORIAL DEMANDS FOR PROBE

Washington, Oct. 27 — (CP)—Testimony that nearly a ton of meat and butter was found in a naval officer's locker in Hawaii—and that a penalty was imposed on the man who reported it — set off senatorial demands Thursday for an inquiry into the whole system of United States Navy courts-martial.

FREE PRESS IN CHINA

Shanghai, Oct. 27 — (CP) — Henry R. Luce, editor and publisher of Time and Life, Inc., said yesterday he is optimistic about the creation of a free press in China when the war emergency ends, declaring "it will be a great opportunity for China and the world press to tell the story of China in true perspective."

COMPLETION OF ALASKAN HIGHWAY

Washington, Oct. 27 — (CP)—President Truman said Thursday some progress has been made in discussions looking to completion of the Alaska Highway. He said he is in touch with Governor Walgren of Washington and State Secretary Byrnes concerning the highway.

"Lest We Forget"

They Signed His Name

It was his all—his future—his time to play a part in the world of his own years—It was his life!
But he offered it to the cause he saw was just—

He signed his name to play a part in Victory.

And later, they put it on a cross.

He counts on you—and us—to keep a promise given that should Victory be won—all shall be well with those who survive.

Victory over all our enemies has been attained—now to the task of fulfilment, of promises and obligations that must be kept.

You know them well!
The wounded to be healed—body and mind.

Widows and orphans sustained—

Pensions for those who cannot meet the task of civil occupation.

And for those partially disabled.

Assistance for those who can—and must—rebuild the careers they laid aside for you.

You know your debt to these—
The story of your help is greatly written in the records of Victory Loans and other home front activities in these past years.

But still the job is here to be completed—
"So much to do—So little time"

He signed his name—and later they put it on a cross—

We live to enjoy those things for which he died—
Can you do less than

INDONESIANS CLASH WITH BRITISH TROOPS

Mother, Nine Children Perish in Fires

Disaster Strikes Homes in Lachute, Que., Haileybury

Victims Burn to Death In Beds in Small Houses

Haileybury, Ont., Oct. 29—(CP)—Fire which started from the explosion of a coal oil can swept through the log cabin home of Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Hacquard, 20 miles south of this Northern Ontario community, late Saturday night, and claimed the lives of their five young sons who were burned to death in their beds.

Half an hour later, 23-year-old Mrs. Hacquard, unattended by doctor or midwife, gave birth to her seventh son as a New Liskeard resident rushed her 27-year-old husband to Haileybury hospital for treatment for burns suffered when the coal oil caught fire.

The tragic sequence of events which nearly wiped out the family began when Hacquard tried to get more heat from a box stove so that his wife would be comfortable while he drove his truck nine miles to Latchford, the nearest point from which he could telephone to Dr. W. O. Arnold of Haileybury to tell him that the time for the confinement had come.

As Hacquard poured coal oil over the stubborn fire in the box stove, the two-gallon kerosene can exploded, splashing blazing oil around the room and setting Hacquard's clothing ablaze.

He dashed from the cabin, followed by his wife who threw a blanket around him to smother the flames on his clothing. Together, they beat out the fire on the oil-soaked clothing.

Could Not Get In

By that time, the fire inside the cabin had gained headway. Flames were shooting from its one door, making it impossible for the couple to attempt to rescue the five little boys who had been sleeping when the fire started.

They could only look on helplessly while the fire levelled the home they had built three years ago. In it the family had lived a happy, though isolated life as the father earned a livelihood by cutting wood and clearing what was to be their farm.

Before the timbered walls of the cabin settled into the glowing embers, the grief-stricken couple turned away and slowly, helping each other along, made their way through the chill autumn night half a mile to the cabin occupied by their nearest neighbor, Henry Deschamps.

Deschamps made them as comfortable as possible on separate bunks and sent a boy and an elderly man to the Ferguson highway, 200 yards away, to flag a passing motorist and obtain help.

Soon the boy and man returned, accompanied by E. Frisby of New Liskeard, whom they had stopped on the highway.

Burned From Body

Frisby later told police that when he first saw Hacquard, the man's clothing had been burned from his body. He obtained socks, rubbers and a blanket from Deschamps, wrapped Hacquard as best he could, and drove him to hospital in Haileybury. He said Hacquard appeared to be burned from waist to knees.

Meanwhile, in the Deschamps cabin, with no doctor or midwife in attendance, Mrs. Hacquard gave birth to a baby boy.

Later in the night, a neighbor, Mrs. Bowers, arrived to assist her, and in the morning Dr. Arnold arranged for her and the baby to be brought to hospital here in an ambulance. Last night, in spite of shock, Mrs. Hacquard was reported "doing nicely."

Her five sons who died in the flaming cabin were Rosaire, aged six; Gaston, four; Floriant, three; Real, two; Rejean, aged one year. Another son died in infancy.

Nipissing district authorities have asked Dr. Arnold, a Temiskaming district coroner, to hold an inquest. The fire was in Nipissing, just south of the Temiskaming boundary.

Lachute, Que., Oct. 29 — (CP) —A mother and four small chilchildren, Flora, six, Aurore, four, here last night when their two-storey farmhouse burned to the ground. The dead are: Mrs. Evangeliste Desabrais, 25, and her children flora, six, Aurore, four, Jacques, two, and Huguette, one year of age.

Police said that Evangeliste Desabrais, the husband, was outside the house when the flames shot up and enveloped the wooden structure and was unable to go to the rescue of his trapped family.

The fire, Desabrais told police, broke out about 9.30 p. m. He smelt smoke and went outside to investigate. Suddenly he saw flames raging inside the house, and he was unable to reach the room in which his wife and four children were. Firemen were summoned from Lachute, eight miles east along the Lachute-Hull highway, but the building was destroyed.

Origin of the fire was undetermined. Desabrais said a small furnace in the basement of the house was not lit at the time. An inquest will be held today.

OTTAWA OFFICER DIES FOLLOWING WOUND IN LUNG

Three Facing Attempted Murder Charge Will be Arraigned for Murder

Ottawa, Oct. 29 (CP) — Detective Thomas Stoneman of the Ottawa police force, died in hospital today following a five-day fight for life which ended when pneumonia complicated the critical lung wound he suffered when shot in a street fight last Wednesday.

Police said the attempted murder charges against Wilfred D'Amout, 25; Eugene Lamber, 24, and Albert Henderson, 24, all of Ottawa, would be automatically raised to murder when they appear in court November 1.

The 37-year-old detective was shot point-blank through the shoulder when he grappled with one of three men who had been prowling about parked cars. Lambert and D'Amout were arrested at the scene after a back-alley chase and gun-fire and Henderson was picked up in a downtown rooming house later in the day.

Their connection with the October 22 burglary of three submachine guns and six automatic pistols from the Canadian War Museum and a district store robbery was established and the weapons and other assorted loot recovered.

A native of Mortlach, Sask., Stoneman was one of the best-known and most popular members of the Ottawa police department.

Orders Christian Curriculum Must Be Restored — Demands School Accounting

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Oct. 29 — (AP)—Unofficial Japan took hope today from President Truman's enunciation of foreign policy that Nippon eventually might regain a place in the economic and political society of nations, but not one government official would comment.

Marquis Koichi Kido, one of the Emperor's closest advisers, spent the entire morning in conference with Hirohito after reading Mr. Truman's speech in Japanese newspapers. Kido's aides said they did not know whether the speech was discussed. The Mikado, described as a diligent student of Japanese newspapers, presumably had read Mr. Truman's address, which was printed at length.

Hirohito's Income

The newspaper Yomiuri Hochi, meantime, reported that Hirohito's annual income was approximately $1,000,000 from stocks and extensive land holdings and that the Imperial Household's annual budget was approximately $1,666,666. In its unprecedented, page one discussion of Imperial finances, Yomiuri said nearly one-fifth of the budget came from public funds over which the Diet had no control and the remainder from investments.

On the occupation front, Gen. MacArthur ousted Japanese officials from St. Paul's Episcopal University, directed the Japanese government to restore the Christian curriculum there immediately, and demanded an accounting of 81 other schools once supported by United States gifts.

The directive charged that St. Paul's had been transformed into a non-Christian school by the Japanese government in January, 1943; that it had been looted and that its stone crosses had been destroyed.

On the political front, Domei reported that most young Japanese peers want to forsake their titles and assume a commoner status, following the lead of Prince Fumimaro Konoye. Konoye is expected to become active in conservative politics if his request to resign his title is granted by the Imperial Household.

"The peerage system has become nonsense," Domei quoted Count Coriyasu Arima, former Minister of Agriculture, the source of its story.

Concrete proposals for dissolving Zaibatsu — the great Japanese commercial and financial combine — are expected to be issued early in November in joint proposals by three of the firms concerned — Mitsui, Mitsubishi and Sumitomo.

Mitsui is understood to have drawn up a plan approved by the executive directors of the Mitsui family, with which the other members of Zaibatsu are expected to concur.

Mothers Ready to Pay 70 Marks For Candy Bar in 'Black Market'

By CHARLES LYNCH

Berlin, Oct. 29 — (Reuters) — On Berlin's "blackest black market in Europe," where the price of one cigaret now has been stabilized at four marks (40 cents), desperate mothers are prepared to pay up to 70 marks for a bar of chocolate for their children.

Cigarets are regarded as the currency in nearly all black market transactions.

A little, bespectacled black market operator who was eager to sell me anything from a motorcar to silk stockings — any number of pairs in any size or color — gave this report on current prices in the German capital.

Cigarets, four marks each. ("Some American soldiers are under-cutting, selling for three marks on the street," he said.)

Chocolate, 40 marks for one small bar;

Silk stockings, fully fashioned and neatly boxed, 50 cigarettes;

Soap, 25 marks a cake;

Binoculars, 300 cigarets.

Despite fabulous prices for luxury items, the cost of living — or rather, of existing — in Berlin remains relatively low. A German can buy all his rations for a week with 10 marks ($1.00 or 2 1/2 cigarets).

VAPORIZED PENICILLIN MAY CURE HER

Under a plexi-glass tent, Sandra Evans, seven months old, inhales vaporized penicillin which, held in a glass container, is diluted in a saline solution. Suffering from a hitherto incurable ailment (cystic fibrosis of the pancreas), Sandra was first given six years to live. Now, with the new treatment, doctors hope she will soon be cured.

Truman Gives U.S. Foreign Policy At Navy Day Rally

Will Not Recognize Govts. That are Installed by Force

New York, Oct. 29 — (AP) — President Truman proclaimed to the world on Saturday a 12-point foreign policy based on the use of military power to preserve peace while planning to outlaw the atomic bomb. "Loss of faith in the effectiveness of international organization," is the great threat to peace, he said. "In an atomic age it would be nothing short of disastrous."

Until world co-operation reaches the state where atomic methods of destruction can be "definitely and effectively outlawed forever," the United States will hold the weapon as a "sacred trust."

Mr. Truman expressed willingness to exchange fundamental scientific information in talks with Britain, Canada "and other nations," but emphasized that "those discussions will not be concerned with the processes of manufacturing the atomic bomb or any other instruments of war."

"Discussion of the atomic bomb with Great Britain and Canada and later with other nations cannot wait up on the formal organization of the United Nations," he said. "These discussions, looking toward a free exchange of fundamental scientific information, will begin in the near future."

Made at Navy Rally

The president's first over - all statement of foreign policy since he took office last April was made at a Navy Day rally in Central Park.

It came in the midst of intense diplomatic efforts to bring about better relations with Russia and a few hours after disclosure that Marshal Stalin had received an undisclosed message from Mr. Truman through United States Ambassador W. Averell Harriman.

Mr. Truman said differences which exist among the Allies 'are not hopeless or irreconciliable."

With a possible view to conditions in the Balkans, however, he stated emphatically that the United States would "refuse to recognize any government imposed upon any nation by the force of any foreign power."

He set forth four purposes for which the United States must remain powerfully armed: to enforce the peace of defeated enemies, to support the United Nations, to defend the Western Hemisphere and to defend the United States.

Made More Urgent

The atomic bomb makes the solution of international problems "more urgent than we could have dreamed six months ago," Mr. Truman said, but it "does not alter the basic foreign policy of the United States."

That policy he described as one of "friendly partnership with all peaceful nations and of full support for the United Nations organization." He defined it in these 12 principles:

He will visit military districts in Eastern Canada during November and December, and Western districts in January.

200 CHINESE FEARED LOST

Hong Kong, Oct. 29 —(AP)— Approximately 200 Chinese were believed to have lost their lives when the 300-ton Chinese motor ship Ching Cheung sank nine miles off Hong Kong at daybreak yesterday, 24 hours after being disabled by a boiler accident. Two junks picked up 130 survivors.

WARFARE GROWS IN INTENSITY INNORTHERNCHINA

Govt. Forces Suffer 15,000 Casualties and Communists' Losses Also are Heavy

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Oct. 29. (AP) — Reports of heavy fighting between Chinese Communist and Central government troops in North China pictured today a country locked in civil war—real though not officially declared.

Warfare is growing in intensity in Shantung, Shansi and Syiyuan provinces, said dispatches received in Chungking.

The Chinese press attributed to Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan, governor of Shansi now visiting Chungking, a statement that government forces suffered 15,000 casualties and Communist losses "also were heavy" in fighting centring around Changchih, strategic town in southeastern Shansi which Yen conceded the Reds captured.

Independent reports said wherever the Communists were retreating along railways they were destroying tracks and blowing up bridges.

This explained the slow movement of President Chiang Kai-Shek's troops which are proceeding along the Peping-Hankow and Tientsin-Pukow railroads to replace United States railroads to the Peiping-Tientsin area.

Reports Circulate

Insistent reports that the Russians were supplying the Communists with captured Japanese war material continued to circulate in Chungking, but no one in authority would allow himself to be quoted.

Other reports told of bitter fighting in 11 provinces, mostly in North China, but including central parts of the country and Kwang-Tung province, on the southeast coast.

The New China Daily News, Communist publication, estimated 800,000 central government troops were battling the Reds. Neutral observers said they believed this figure was exaggerated, but all quarters conceded the fighting was serious.

PROGRESSING FAVORABLY

Toronto, Oct. 29 —(CP)— W. B. Common, K.C., Senior Counsel of the Attorney-General's Department in Toronto, was reported "progressing favorably" at his home here last night after suffering an attack of acute indigestion in Napanee, Ont., Thursday.

PIGS CAUSE COLLISION

Toronto, Oct. 29 —(CP)— Pigs which wandered out of a driveway last night were blamed by North York police for causing a collision in which five Toronto residents were injured. Police said a driver swerved to avoid the pigs and struck another car.

Filipino Heroine is Witness At Trial of Jap General Yamashita

Manila, Oct. 29.. (Reuters)—Nurse Gliceria Andaya, Filipino heroine of the Red Cross building incident in Manila in which it is alleged 400 men, women and children were killed with hand grenades, today testified at the trial of Gen. Hobun Yanashita on war criminal charges.

She said she was stabbed in the left breast with a bayonet when she remonstrated with the Japanese commanding officer after she saw a woman rushing into the building holding the body of a bayoneted baby in her arms.

She saw a Japanese soldier shoot a 3-year-old in the face three times and 20 women and children killed by shooting and bayoneting, she told the court.

Earlier it was testified that four Japanese sailors in Gen. Yamashita's command killed or wounded 100 women and children in a bloody orgy in a Red Cross Aid station.

Bullet-headed Yamashita, defeated at every turn in legal skirmishing which opened the hearing, followed legal arguments carefully with the assistance of a personal interpreter, but appeared to understand considerable English.

Patricinia Abad, 26, testified that four Japanese sailors savagely bayoneted and shot the 100 women and children here last February. The orgy continued more than an hour although there was no resistance.

Her arm in a sling, Mrs. Abad testified that she cowered behind a cabinet with her 10-months old daughter in her arms. She was shot through the elbow and bayoneted nine times. Three thrusts went through her body and fatally injured her baby.

The four Japanese slaughtered more than 50 of the women and children, Mrs. Abad told the military commission of five United States generals trying Yamashita for his life on a charge that he was responsible for crimes committed by his command.

Capt. Norman J. Sparnon, Melbourne, Australia, who preceded Mrs. Abad, identified translations of captured Japanese documents which definitely showed that Yamashita commanded the 14th Imperial army group at the time of the atrocities.

Truce Reported Arranged After Bloody Fighting

25 of British Indian Force Estimated Killed

By RALPH MORTON

Batavia, Java, Oct. 29 — (AP) —Indonesian Nationalists using armored cars and light tanks killed an estimated 25 members of the British Indian Force at Soerabaja Before President Soekarno of the "Indonesian Republic" was reported to have arranged a truce today at the big naval base.

A British officer made the casualty estimate, but did not include pockets surrounded by the natives. The officer said that many women and children in internment camps in the area had been killed by the natives.

The fighting at Soerabaja was the bloodiest of the Allied occupation of the Island of Java. Military equipment which the natives had taken from the Japanese included at least 20 armored vehicles and machine-guns and mortars, the officer said, adding that the hard-pressed British troops had used even their "cooks and cobblers" in the fighting.

Desperate Fighting

Before the truce a couple of companies of Rajputana Rifles fiught desperately from the Darno hospital and the British Consulate. A company of British engineers at the Darno barracks and Darno station, where the most bitter fighting took place, radioed: "Running out of ammunition. Unless you send help we'll be overrun."

One British company detailed 8 men to protect a jail where there were 35 Dutch women and children. The company commander reported that he heard several shots at the jail followed by screams and said he feared the building had been overrun and the internees killed.

Asked how many natives the British forces had taken prisoner, Maj. J. R. H. Orr of Poona, India, said. "We had quite a few, but I heard we just took their pants off and let them go." Later he said that seven natives were being held.

Soekarno rushed to Soerabaja in an R.A.F. plane in an attempt to get the natives to halt the fighting.

Airstrip Held by British Mahrattas

I flew with Soekarno and two of his cabinet into Soerabaja and returned to Batavia in the only plane to get in and out of the naval base. When we arrived we found the airstrip under fire and held by a thin patrol of British Mahrattas.

As a result of

As a result of the subsequent truce firing died down in the headquarters area of the British 49th Brigade and in the centre and southwestern portions of Soerabaja. Some firing still was going on in other areas of the city, but it was reported that the situation generally was quieter.

The first six hours of the battle were known to have taken the life of one Indian Sepoy. A British officer and several Indian soldiers were reported wounded.

SALES DURING FIRST WEEK LOAN ARE 499,185,250

Average for Individual Purchasers $396.51 as Compared to $264.08 in Last Loan

Ottawa, Oct. 29 — (CP)—Canada's Ninth Victory Loan campaign entered its second week today with approximately $1,000,000,000 to go to reach the $1,500,000,000 minimum objective within the remaining fortnight.

Hard-working tabulators at National War Finance Committee headquarters said they had no new figures from those issued Saturday because of the Sunday lay-off in sales. But they said emphasis in this biggest of all war loan drives was on the individual purchaser and calculated the average individual purchase at $396.51 so far, compared with $264.08 in the Eighth Loan drive last spring.

At the close of the first week of campaigning Saturday cumulative sales totalled $499,185,250 compared with $432,008,000 for the opening week of the Eighth campaign. Saturday sales alone were $93,099,700 against $75,980,750.

As of Saturday total sales to individuals reached $256,870,000 towards the general sales and payroll purchase objective of $800,000,000. The figure compared with $221,100,650 at the corresponding date last spring.

One-Third of Total

First six full days of the Ninth Victory Loan campaign brought general canvass and payroll savings purchases across the Dominion to about one-third of the total objective in those combined divisions.

Purchase of bonds by servicemen with war service gratuities was far ahead of expectations, and in most instances additional staff had to be called in to handle the rush of applications.

A huge investment of $30,000,000 by the Sun Life Assurance Company of Canada, announced by President Arthur B. Wood in Montreal, added mightily to Saturday's total. Other large subscribers included Hudson Bay Mining and Smelting Company, Winnipeg, $3,000,000; Workmen's Compensation Board, Vancouver, $2,500,000; Canadian Car and Foundry Company Limited, Montreal, $2,500,000; Dominion Engineering Works Limited, Montreal, $1,500,000; Fraser Companies Limited and Subsidiary, Restigouche Company Limited, Edmundston, N.B., $1,000,000.

At Lachine, Que., a returning draft of 1,300 RCAF personnel purchased more than $163,000 worth to contribute to the 171 per cent of quota achieved by the service. The Army was close behind with 170 per cent and the Navy trailed at 122.

BOTH AT FAULT

Toronto, Oct. 29 —(CP)— Mayor R H. Saunders of Toronto said Saturday after a five-hour conference at City Hall that both the Toronto Children's Aid Society and the Toronto Department of Health were at fault regarding the plight of seven children found living in filthy quarters in a Dufferin Street flat.

TWO MORE PLANTS ADDED TO LIST

Two more Belleville plants were added, to the constantly growing list of county industrial plants which have achieved 100 per cent subscription to their 9th Victory Loan objective, it was announced through County Victory Loan Headquarters. Latest plants whose employees are reported as having subscribed 100 per cent of their objective are Mead Johnston and Company of Canada, and the Stewart Warner-Alemite Company.

INQUEST ADJOURNED UNTIL NOVEMBER 2

Preliminary inquest looking into the death of William Ross, Shannonville, who died in Belleville hospital following injuries received in a motor accident, was held Saturday afternoon. Following identification of the body the inquest was laid over until Friday evening, November 2nd.

SMALL GIRL INJURED WHEN DAIRY WAGON RUNS OVER LEGS

Three-year-old Joan Tanner, 21 Stone Street, received painful injuries Sunday morning when she fell from a milk wagon owned by a local dairy with the rear wheel of the vehicle passing over the little girl's legs. Examination at the hospital by Dr. Gibson revealed no bones had been broken.

The Tanner girl with a playmate, Terrence Schofield, had climbed into the wagon as it stood on Stone Street as the driver was delivering milk. When the driver called the horse from the end of the street the two children jumped from the vehicle, the girl falling under the rear wheel. The girl was picked up by Joe Rapino and taken into his house and was later examined at the hospital.

DEALERS REPORT FAIR SUPPLY AMMUNITION

There is a fair supply of ammunition available for deer and other hunters in the city, a hardware dealer said today. "There is no great supply and the hunter who has some left over from last year will be lucky."

Apparently ammunition is not under a quota. It is merely a question of the volume received by retail dealers from manufacturing sources.

It is understood that manufacturers have been working at top speed during the last few weeks, but as the dealer points out, there are a lot of communities in Canada, and equitable distribution means but a fair supply for all concerned.

JET PLANE WILL BE OVER CITY TUESDAY

The R.C.A.F. Gloster Meteor jet-propelled, twin-engine fighter now touring Quebec and Ontario will fly over Belleville and Trenton between ten and ten-thirty Tuesday morning, weather permitting, it was announced today. It will be flown by Squadron Leader E. L. Baudoux D.S.O., D.F.C., of Stellarton, Nova Scotia, in charge of the R.C.A.F. party.

The aircraft attracted large crowds at Montreal, Saturday, where it demonstrated its remarkable climbing power as it whipped over the city at 520 m.p.h.

The plane will be on display to the public at Trenton Air Station in the afternoon between two-thirty and four-thirty.

NEWSPAPER AD. BRINGS RESULTS

An indication of how important and practical Ontario-Intelligencer ads, are is shown by the fact that a sailor, leaving for the west coast on Tuesday, happened to drop his wallet just before boarding his train. A telephone message from Toronto to his parents told of his loss. Some time later Mr. S. H. Wannamaker, 335 Charles Street, picked up the wallet and inserted a found advertisement in the Ontario-Intelligencer. Within a very short time the owner was established and, thanks to Mr. Wannamaker's honesty and thoughtfulness, a sailor lad will be made happy when he learns of his good fortune.

Three Industries Achieve Objectives

Three more city industrial plants have achieved their respective objectives in subscriptions to the 9th. Victory Loan, it was announced today through campaign headquarters, in Belleville. Employees of Mead Johnson and Co., and the Stewart Warner-Alemite Corporation have subscribed 100 per cent of their plant objectives, while the Consolidated Optical Co. Ltd. has achieved 105 per cent.

Splendid Prizes And Program For Hallowe'en

A full evening of entertainment with games and contests to suit the occasion, will be enjoyed by children at the Armouries and at the Y.M.C.A. on Wednesday night, according to members of the local Kinsmen club, sponsors of the Kinsmen "Shell Out" program.

Costume parades with a local band leading the march are scheduled to take place from the Y.M.C.A .at seven o'clock and from the Armouries at eight o'clock.

In addition to the program there will be prizes presented to the successful boys and girls who sell or collect the most "Shell Out" tickets, while each child attending at either the Armouries or the Y.M.C.A. will receive an individual bag of candy and an orange.

The major prizes which every boy and girl in the city are striving for are shiny new bicycles for the highest boy and highest girl selling "Shell Out" tickets, while the highest boy and highest girl in each school will received a pair of skates and boots. Highest pupil in each individual class room will receive $1 cash awards.

Cash prizes of $5 each will go to the boy and girl at both the Y.M.C.A. and Armouries for collecting most tickets on Hallowe'en night, while a toboggan will go to the boy and girl wearing the best costume at the "Y".

At the Armouries there will be comedy and western movie thrillers, while Ross Bertram, Toronto magician, will be on hand with his bag of tricks to mystify his audience. Rounding out the program will be "The Ripleys", hand balancing and acrobatic troupe and Ernie Bruce, musical comedian.

Everett H. Liddle Veterans' Officer For the District

Former salesman with the National Grocers Company Limited, and a veteran of the First Great War, Everett H. Liddle, has received the appointment as Veterans' Officer with the Unemployment Insurance Commission at Belleville, it has been announced. Mr. Liddle's duties will commence immediately, it was stated.

Appointed by the Civil Service Commission, Mr. Liddle's duties will be interviewing returned men and giving them information under legislation regarding gratuities and the Veterans' Land Act and giving advice regarding training on the job or going back to school to fit them for jobs in civilian life.

With over three years' experience overseas during First Great War, Mr. Liddle will have interests of returned men at heart. He enlisted with 39th. Battalion in January of 1915 and went overseas in June of the same year, serving in England until the following January. Then he was transferred to the 19th. Battalion and served in Belgium and France, being invalided back to England in April, 1917. He was returned to Canada and discharged in July of 1918. In the years since he served for three terms as secretary-treasurer of the G.W.V.A. in Belleville.

Upon his appointment as Veterans' Officer, Mr. Liddle tendered his resignation with the National Grocers and on Friday evening was presented with a pen and pencil set on behalf of the staff members of the Belleville branch. The presentation was made by the manager, R. E. Hackborn.

Special Services Held at Two Marmora Churches

Marmora, Oct. 29 — Laymen's Sunday was observed at St. Paul's on Sunday with special services which were largely attended. Rev. C. C. Brazill, rector of Stirling, officiated in the morning with W. J. Cottrell, lay reader, reading the lessons. The preacher delivered an arresting discourse on Rev. 3:15 "I know thy works, that thou art neither cold nor hot: I would thou wert cold or hot." He pointed out that indifference is the greatest of challenges facing the Christian Church and that men accept a perilous position to merely respect the church. The fact that the Son of God who shared in the creation of the world, entered into the experiences of human life and died upon the cross to draw men unto God calls for a devotion to His church and a love for Him, with all our heart, with all our soul and with all our mind. At evensong the rector, Rev. J. M. Brownlee, officiated. His address to the congregation dealt with the unconscious influence we exercise in the lives of others.

Marmora United Church.

A former pastor who came to Marmora United Church for his first change ofter his ordination and spent six years here, in the person of Rev. W. P. Woodger, of Cobourg, was the preacher at the 71st anniversary services at St. Andrew's on Sunday. Both services were attended by large congregations. Also returning to her native village to render a solo at each service was Miss Flora Sanderson of the Metropolitan United Church choir, Toronto. The senior choir rendered special music at the morning service and in the evening the combined junior choirs of St. Andrew's and Deloro provided special music.

Student Body Of Albert College Attends Service

With the new heating plant being used for the first time, the student body of Albert College attended Evensong at Christ Church on Sunday. The Head Master, the Reverend Bert Howard, D.D., assisted in the service which was conducted by the rector, Rev. J. Grant Sparling, the Reverend Everett Smith, and Lay Reader George Meades. The choir, under the direction of Mr. Arthur Simpson, sang for an anthem Mozart's "Jesu, Word of God Incarnate." A descant for boys' voices was featured in one of the hymns. Mrs. Grace Calvert presided at the organ.

In his sermon the rector drew attention to the witness and influence of quiet devoted people, and spoke of the power which they had exerted on history. He challenged the congregation to be people of devotion in order that they might be re-builders of broken lives.

The flowers on the altar were in memory of the late Flight Sergeant Arthur Martin, and those in the sanctuary and baptistry in memory of the late Lionel Harris and the late Mrs. Colling.

Obituary

FELIX JOSEPH MURPHY
(Melrose)

The funeral of Felix Joseph Murphy took place this morning from his home at Melrose to the Holy Name of Mary Church at Marysville, where Requiem Mass was celebrated by the Rev. Father C. F. O'Gorman, who also said the committal prayers at the graveside in St. Mary's Cemetery.

The bearers were Morgan Shaughnessy, James Shaughnessy, Joseph Murphy, James Brennan, John Forstell and Harold Callaghan.

LATE MRS. CATHERINE M. HAGERMAN
(Corbyville)

The funeral of Mrs. Catherine Marion Hagerman, wife of Mr. Charles Harry Hagerman, Corbyville, took place Saturday afternoon from the Martin Funeral Home, Church. The service in the chapel and at White's Cemetery, Sidney Township, was conducted by the Rev. J. G. Hornsby, minister of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

The bearers were Clintoon Rutter, William Gray, William Hogan, Robert Davidson, Thomas Hallam and Jacob Mattis.

BYRON CAMPBELL
(Morganston)

Byron Campbell of Morganston, Northumberland County, died in the Belleville General Hospital early Sunday morning. He was sixty-eight years of age and was a patient in the hospital two days.

LATE BERNARD COOK

Marmora, Oct. 29 — The funeral of the late Bernard Cook took place on Saturday morning from the residence of his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Charles Cook, Marmora Township and was largely attended. High Requiem Mass was celebrated by Rev. H. J. Farrell at Sacred Heart Church and interment was made in Sacred Heart Cemetery. The tragic death of the deceased in a car accident on Thursday morning, has cast a gloom over the entire community. The many floral and spiritual offerings testified to the esteem in which the deceased was held. Besides his sorrowing parents he is survived by two sisters and two brothers, Marjorie of Syracuse, N.Y.; Jean, John and Francis at home. The pall bearers were Tom Byrnes, Clarence Shannon, John Warren, Joe Clairmont, James Bibby and Fred Kelleher.

ALEXANDER GILLEN

Madoc, Oct. 29 — A former resident of Madoc and well known by the older residents of Madoc village and vicinity, Mr. Alexander Gillen passed away in Toronto, on Tuesday last in his 87th. year. He was born in Madoc Township, the son of the late Mr. and Mrs. John Gillen. Surviving him are one son, John, residing in Western Canada; one daughter, Mother Superior of St. Joseph College, Toronto; one sister, (Margaret), Mrs. Chas. Bronson, of Picton. His wife, Miss Hawkins, predeceased some years ago.

The funeral took place Thursday morning from Tufts and Kelly funeral parlors, Madoc, to the Sacred Heart Church where Mass was sung by Rev. Father Hyland. Interment was in Sacred Heart of Mary Cemetery.

HUGH R. KELLER
(Madoc)

Madoc, Oct. 29 (Special)—Hugh R. Keller died at his home here on Sunday after an illness of several years' duration with heart trouble.

Born at Healey Falls, fifty-three years ago the late Mr. Keller was a son of the late Roderick and Sarah Keller. For thirty-five years he lived in this village and was electrical engineer with the Madoc Hydro Commission for some years. In the community he was held in high esteem and to many friends his death has brought much regret. Mr. Keller was a member of St. Peter's Presbyterian Church, and fraternally he was a member of Madoc Lodge, No. 48, A. F. & A.M.; Madoc Chapter, No. 161, R.A.M.; King Baldwin Preceptory, Belleville; Rameses Shrine, Toronto; Order of the Eastern Star, No. 143, and the Madoc Bowling Club.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Blanche Nicholas; three daughters, Mrs. Harry (Myrtle) Statham, Madoc; Mrs. Charles (Elsie) Kerteston, Toronto; Mrs. Harvey (Dorothy) Brolley, Toronto; two sons, Claude of Ottawa, and Gerald at home, both of whom have just returned home after serving with the armed forces overseas; three sisters, Mrs. George Peeling Galt; Mrs. Charles Pallister, Campbellford, and Mrs. Helen Bertrand, Campbellford; two brothers, George Keller, Bumley, Mich., and Fred Keller, Campbellford.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

PROVINCIAL LEADERS IN BY-ELECTION

Quebec, Oct. 29 —(CP)— Provincial government leaders entered the Beauce constituency provincial by-election campaign yesterday with Premier Duplessis telling a meeting at St. Joseph that his Union National government was elected for five years and would continue in office "no matter what our opponents may say." Opposition Leader Godbout, speaking at East Broughton, said that next spring "we will be in administration of the province."

Holloway St. Church Congregation Honors Rev. J.A. Dilts and Mrs. Dilts

Presentations of Gifts Made Sunday Evening Prior to Departure for Hamilton

Cleverly arranged so that the element of surprise was complete to the last detail, the congregation of Holloway Street United Church paid tangible tribute on Sunday evening to its departing minister, the Rev. J. A. Dilts, who with Mrs. Dilts leaves in the immediate future for their new charge at Calvary Church, Hamilton.

Mr. Dilts preached his farewell sermon to his congregation on Sunday morning and in the evening was the guest speaker at the anniversary services of Tabernacle United Church, where a capacity congregation heard his final message.

Invited to join a "Fireside Chat" in the Sunday School parlors of Holloway Street United Church after his sermon at Tabernacle, Mr. and Mrs. Dilts were surprised by the presence of practically the entire congregation.

The surprise was complete a few minutes later when Mr. George T. Woodley, preceded by an eloquent address, presented the minister and his wife with a handsome coffee table and table lamp.

Express Regrets.

In addresses of appreciation for the gifts, Mr. and Mrs. Dilts expressed their regrets at the severance of five years of happy associations. Both spoke of the splendid co-operation and happy fellowship which existed between themselves and the congregation as a whole. They mentioned the flourishing condition of the church organizations, especially that of the Young People's Society.

But more surprises were in store. Scarcely had the ovation accorded them died away than Miss Pat Thurston, of the Y.P.S., read an address to Mr. and Mrs. Dilts and Mr. Harry Denton presented them with a beautiful set of candlestick holders and a crystal fruit bowl, on behalf of the young people of the congregation.

Refreshments, served by ladies of the congregation and a number of young people, terminated an evening that was highly enjoyable yet tinged with regret at the departure of Mr. and Mrs. Dilts from the city.

Change in Hunting Date Makes Some Of the Boys Unhappy

Release of what is called an eleventh-hour announcement by the Ontario Department of Game and Fisheries, changing the date of the deer hunting season south of the French and Mattawa Rivers from November 12th. to November 5 to November 27 has resulted in many local hunters being in a dither of excitement with visions of hunting disappointment looming in the distance.

For it seems, a number of the potential hunters, men who have trekked to the northwoods annually, had made arrangements for vacations to start on the date first announced. Now that the change in date has been announced, difficulties in changing the date of vacations are being experienced, and the boys aren't the least bit happy about the whole thing.

A number of them criticised the changing of the original date, or at least the time of its announcement in no uncertain terms. "This could have been done weeks ago," they complain, "so that we could have made arrangements for our holidays to coincide with the opening date. As it is, every one is confused—and well, some of us may not be able to get away."

ATTLEE MAY GIVE VIEWS ON ATOMIC BOMB

London, Oct. 29 —(CP)— Parliamentary circles said last night Prime Minister Attlee may give his views on the atomic bomb and Palestine sometime this week.

Tabernacle Ch. Celebrates 135th Anniversary

"Some churches, today, unfortunately have become comfortable clubs for the family. Bowling alleys, tennis courts, etc., are all right in their place, but the church must be a place where the Christian gospel is presented in all its richness," the Rev. J. W. Houston, Tabernacle United Church minister, declared on Sunday.

Speaking to a capacity morning congregation on the occasion of the church's 135th. anniversary, Mr. Houston painted an interesting word picture on "The Church of Today and Yesterday."

"Peoples and nations today," he said, "speak of a new world order. This was created by Christ 2,000 years ago when he founded the Christian church and left behind a splendid example, an organization and a work to be carried on. Today we think of the church as a divine society, a world-wide fellowship and a universal brotherhood."

The church has become a conquering army, a tremendous camp of men who by means of a new idealism will conquer and add to the abundance of Christian spirit in mankind.

Still Distrust.

There is still great distrust among people and nations, and the church is challenging the world along lines of nationalism. There is need for more than patriotism, Mr. Houston declared, there is a crying need for all to be concerned with the welfare of God's children everywhere. "My Country, right or wrong," is not good enough. Nations have failed to solve world problems thru' intense nationalism.

"The church had good men yesterday and it has good men today," the speaker said. "What is needed is nothing less than the proclamation of the grace of God which must be brought to the world in as persuasive a manner as possible, and with an evangelical message. The church lives today for the bettermen of mankind."

Should Demonstrate.

"The grace of God," he added, "should be proclaimed with a certain prophetic note, not with a broadcast that the end of the world is coming, but by the eternal principle that if men disregard it, they will be broken."

The church should demonstrate the Kingdom of God to the world and bring it into its life so that the church will control that life individually and nationally.

"Let the influence be manifest," Mr. Houston concluded. "The world needs Christian principles as never before, in all walks of life and by proclaiming these principles will emulate the great men of the church of yesterday."

The musical part of the services added greatly to the impressiveness of both morning and evening services. During the morning service the choir offered two anthems, "Repent Ye" by Scott, and "With the Voice of Singing," by Martin Shaw. The offertory solo was "Claire de Lune" by Debussy and the organ postlude, "Festal March," by Calkin.

Farewell Sermon.

The Rev. John A. Dilts gave an inspiring sermon "Christ Calls for Crusaders," at the evening service. Outstanding musical features were a repetition of the anthem "Repent Ye" and the tuneful "Cherubim Songs" by Bortniansky, sung by the choir under the direction of Mrs. Morley Duff. A quartette composed of Messrs. Shortt, Colclough, Wynne and Duff offered selections and a tenor solo by Jack Deacon, and a euphonium solo "My Heart at Thy Sweet Voice" by Robt. Stebbings were much enjoyed. A ten-minute "hymn-sing" was held previous to the evening worship.

DEATHS

KELLER — At Madoc, Ontario, on Sunday, October 28th., Fred Keller, age 53 years.

The funeral will be held from his late residence, on Wednesday, October 31st., to St. Peter's Presbyterian Church for service at 2.00 p.m. Interment Keller's Cemetery, Healey Falls.

Members of Staff Presented with Gifts

Glen Robertson, member of the composing room staff for the past three years, was given a handsome fountain pen on the eve of his departure for Toronto where he has become associated with a printing firm.

Roy Peacock, of the editorial staff, who recently deserted the ranks of the bachelors for the happiness and comfort of the benediction environment, and his bride, the former Miss Mary Roscoe, also a member of the staff, were presented on Saturday with a Kenwood blanket, and felicitations of the staff.

Expressions of appreciation on the part of all recipients were given, and the life of the newspaper resumed the even tenor of its way.

Stirling Resident Dies After Being Struck by Car

Sustaining fatal injuries when struck by a car driven by Annette Poirier, 17, of Havelock, as she was crossing the street in Stirling on Friday afternoon, Mrs. Jessie Hamilton, of Stirling, died in Belleville General hospital, early Monday morning. According to provincial police who investigated the accident, Mrs. Hamilton had been talking with the driver of a truck parked at the curb and apparently had started across the street without looking. Becoming confused she had turned back toward the sidewalk and was injured as she was struck by the headlight and fender of the auto driven by Miss Poirier.

SAFE-CRACKING THIEVES AT WORK

London, Ont., Oct. 29 —(CP)— Safe-cracking thieves put in a busy weekend in Western Ontario, striking at Ingersoll, Dutton in Elgin County and Thamesville in Kent County. Police said yesterday the net loot was more than $200 in cash and $1,500 in Victory Bonds.

1. No territorial expansion, no plans for aggression, no objective "which need clash with the peaceful aims of any other nation."

2. Eventual return of sovereign rights and self-government "to all peoples who have been deprived of them by force."

3. No territorial changes involving friendly peoples except with their "freely expressed wishes."

4. Self government for all peoples prepared for it "without interference from any foreign source."

Co-operation Urged

5. Co-operation with the Allies to help defeated enemy states "establish peaceful democratic governments of their own free choice" and a world "in which Nazism, Fascism and military aggression cannot exist."

6. No recognition for any government imposed upon a foreign power and prevention where possible of "forceful imposition of such a government."

7. Freedom of the seas for all countries and "equal rights to the navigation of boundary rivers and waterways and of rivers and waterways which pass through more than one country."

8. Access of countries "on equal terms to the trade and the raw materials of the world."

9. The right of "the soverign states of the western hemisphere, without interference from outside the western hemisphere" to "work together as good neighbors in the solution of their common problems."

Improved Living Conditions.

10. Economic collaboration among all nations for improved living conditions and "establishment of freedom from fear and freedom from want."

11. Freedom of expression and freedom of religion "throughout the peace-loving areas of the world."

12. Preservation of peace through the United Nations "composed of all the peace-loving nations of the world who are willing jointly to use force if necessary to insure peace."

"We have assured the world time and again—and I repeat it now—that we do not seek for ourselves one inch of territory in any place in the world. Outside of the right to establish necessary bases for our own protection, we look for nothing which belongs to any other power. . .

"We seek to use our military strength solely to preserve the peace of the world. For we now know that that is the only sure way to make our own freedom secure. That is the basis of the foreign policy of the people of the United States.

"The foreign policy of the United States is based firmly on fundamental principles of righteousness and justice. In carrying out those principles we shall firmly adhere to what we believe to be right; and we shall not give our approval to any compromise with evil.

Cannot Attain Overnight

"But we know that we cannot attain perfection in this world overnight. We shall not let our search for perfection obstruct our steady progress toward international co-operation. We must be prepared to fulfill our responsibilities as best we can, within the framework of our fundamental principles, even though we recognize that we have to operate in an imperfect world."

Of his foreign policy declaration he said:

"It may not be put into effect tomorrow or the next day. But none the less, it is our policy; and we shall seek to achieve it. It may take a long time, but it is worth waiting for, and it is worth striving to attain.

The ten commandants themselves have not yet been universally achieved over these thousands of years. Yet we struggle constantly to achieve them, and in many way we come closer to them each year. Though we may meet setbacks from time to time, we shall not relent in our efforts to bring the Golden Rule into the international affairs of the world.

Through Difficult Phase

"We are now passing through a difficult phase of international relations. Unfortunately it has always been true after past wars, that the Unity among Allies forged by their common peril, has tended to wear out as the danger passed.

"The world can not afford any let down in the united determination of the Allies in this war to accomplish a lasting peace. The world can not afford to let the co-operative spirit of the Allies in this war disintegrate. The world simply cannot allow this to happen. The people in the United States, in Russia, and in Britain, in France and China, in collaboration with all other peace-loving people, must take the course of current history into their own hands and mould it in a new direction—the direction of continued co-operation. It was a common danger which united us before victory. Let it be a common hope which continues to draw us together in the years to come. . .

Requires Moral Stamina

"Building a peace requires as much moral stamina as waging a war. Perhaps it requires even more, because it is so laborious and painstaking and undramatic. It requires undying patience and continuous application. But it can give us, if we stay with it, the greatest reward that there is in the whole field of human effort. .

"The immediate, the greatest threat to us is the threat of disillusionment, the danger of an insidious skepticism—a loss of faith in the effectiveness of international co-operation. Such a loss of faith would be dangerous at any time. In an atomic age it would be nothing short of disastrous.

"There has been talk about the atomic bomb scrapping all navies, armies and air forces. For the present, I think that such talk is 100 per cent wrong. Today control of the seas rests in the fleets of the United States and her Allies. There is no substitute for them. We have learned the bitter lesson that the weakness of this great republic invites men of ill-will to shake the very foundations of civilization all over the world.

Mission Not Changed

"What the distant future of atomic research will bring to the fleet which we honor today, no one can foretell. But the fundamental mission of the navy has not changed. Control of our sea approaches and of the skies above them is still the key to our freedom and to our ability to help enforce the peace of the world. No enemy will ever strike us directly except across the sea. We cannot reach out to help stop and defeat an aggressor without crossing the sea. Therefore, the navy, armed with whatever weapons science brings forth, is still dedicated to its historic task: control of the ocean approaches to our country and of the skies above them."

Hunting Tragedies Calling for Safety Complex

(By W. H. COLCLOUGH, Vancouver; in Stratford Beacon-Herald.)

"It's terrible," moaned the grief-stricken mother. "He was so young, and he went away this morning so happy and carefree, and then in three hours they sent me word that he was dead."

Indeed it was terrible, and here we are again into that season of the year when carelessness takes its heart-breaking toll in the hunting field. This young man, not quite 18, had left home that day with the happiness and abandon of youth going out to have a good time. He knew about firearms, and had been warned scores of times as to the handling of a gun. And then the unexpected happened, as it so frequently does in the hunting field, when his dog became mixed up in a fight with another dog. The youth, anxious to protect his pet, rushed in and shoved the stock of his gun between the fighting canines. Then, bang! An ounce and a quarter of No. 5 chilled shot tore through his body, and the young man crumpled right there in the field.

If this story could be written in six words and then painted on the gun barrels of every hunter it would undoubtedly save some lives. The day that this young man was shot the press carried the news of another young man shot in much the same manner in Old Ontario. Geography makes little difference.

• • •

The other day we picked up a young man in the woods who was sporting a brand new rifle. He was very proud of the weapon, a present from his mother. He tossed the gun about like a walking stick—and we beat a hasty retreat when we discovered it was loaded all ready to pull with the safety marked "off."

Of course, there are going to be accidents and more accidents when such stupid carelessness as this sets the trap. The crop of new and youthful hunters in Canada this year is the greatest ever experienced by the Dominion. The war slowed down hunting, and now five years' accumulations of eager nimrods are roaming the field. In this group there are men who will take either their own lives or those of hunting companions.

• • •

There is a law which pulls a man before the magistrate for carelessness in the operation of a motor car; and, while hunting at the moment seems to be restricted on account of too many laws, we would like to see a law enforced which would take the guns out of the hands of the careless hunter. A loaded gun in a motor car, carrying a loaded gun even with the safety "on" in the presence of anybody, or loading a gun other than filling the magazine except when alone all carry possible death for somebody. Surely something can be done to avoid turning "I didn't know it was loaded", into a funeral procession.

Old-timers will remember when the percussion caps on the old muzzle-loaded guns were removed just the moment the hunter came into the yard or approached a dwelling house. A modern gun may be made safe with much less effort, and while it may be consistently argued that "accidents will happen," the dismal fact remains that 95 per cent. of gun accidents involving death or mutilation are just plain carelessness.

• • •

Hunting is probably the finest sport offered to men. It has everything in it which a husky man enjoys. As he grows older he might want to kill less, but the great outdoors and the elusive deer or wild goose will always be a challenge. Canada has the hunting grounds—none better in the world—and it would be a step in the right direction if an intensive educational program were started as to how to handle a gun. Newspapers, magazines, hunting clubs and the like could do much in bringing about a safety complex. We need more hunters like the old one who, the other day, registerd his protest of carelessness by leaving his hunting companions. Such lessons are not forgotten—and in this manner lives are saved.

PALACE ALMOST COMPLETED

Tokyo, Oct. 29. (AP)—A vast underground palace to which Imperial headquarters had planned to flee was almost completed by the Japs by the end of the war. It was in Mount Sushiro, 150 miles northeast of Tokyo.

HE CAN'T PUT CHEERS IN THE BANK!

The flag waving and the welcome home is swell . . . But when the party's over, he's got a peacetime problem to solve . . . he has a living to earn! Winning the war is no use—to him or to you—unless he has the means of winning the peace, too!

Here's what he needs: He needs a home. He needs to complete his training for the job the war interrupted. He needs a job. He needs a future. Sure, he has discharge grants. Perhaps a pension. And other basic benefits. But who's going to pay for them? And who's going to pay for the opportunity to put these benefits to work?

Victory Bonds will do it! Your purchase of Victory Bonds this time is to put Canada's veterans back on their feet, give them a chance to keep themselves on their feet. Buying all the Victory Bonds you can possibly afford is the peacetime equivalent of "pass the ammunition." Peace can have its victories, too, but only if you help him win them . . . for himself—for you—and to keep Canada itself a "going concern".

Remember when you sign up for the 9th Victory Loan that it is your only opportunity for twelve months to invest in Canada. Buy more Victory Bonds this time, for our veterans today — for yourself tomorrow!

Second Week of Loan Sales Begins

Canadians have been showing for the past week that they know there are good reasons for buying Ninth Victory Bonds.

Heavy subscriptions continued Saturday to round out the best first week of sales of Victory bonds in war bond history. The outlook for the future sale is of the brightest.

There is no difficulty in making sales. The people have long since become bond-conscious. The great mass of the people except those who were old enough to buy government bonds during the First World War, have during the Second World War been holders of government bonds for the first time in their lives. They have already seen the value in such an investment—they have helped the war effort and the boys and men at the front, they have bought something which is the best investment and the safest they could buy, they have laid up in these bonds a reserve which lends them confidence, they have done something that is of the greatest importance in preventing inflation and now they are buying also to finish the uncompleted job. For there is the problem of conversion to peace and there are the problems of expenditure which follow the war, such as rehabilitation and reconversion, pensions, and care of the men who have suffered permanent disability.

As the second week begins the enthusiasm with which the people of every part of the Dominion greeted the loan continues as the canvassers go about. Many are increasing their purchases over what they have bought in previous years.

U. S. Naval Review

One of the greatest sights that the eye could see was viewed on Saturday in the Hudson River at New York with seven miles of United States warships for the great Navy Day review. Here in the famous river, named for a great sailor, were warcraft to receive the tribute of the American people in one of the most impressive natural settings in which a fleet could be at review. The millions who were there could see from the natural amphitheatre of the banks of the Hudson, along the world-famed Riverside Drive in New York City, and on the New Jersey Palisades the great armada of fighting ships to which the United States and the United Nations owe a great debt for what the men and fleet of the United States navy with the men and ships of the other Allies did in crushing the might of Germany and Japan. Nature made that magnificent river and its banks for just such a scene in one of the world's greatest cities and the leading city of the New World.

Both Canada and the United States have natural scenes which inspire these nations with a lofty vision of the future. During the recent war, Quebec was twice the choice of the conference of the Allied leaders of Britain and the United States as they toiled with problems facing the prosecution of the war to victory. No more impressive settings for naval ceremonies are to be found anywhere in the world than in the Hudson and the St. Lawrence. Such settings and scenes have the quality of impressing upon everyone who sees them with their majesty.

Those millions who on Saturday viewed American naval might in the Hudson can never forget what they saw, the present, and in their mind's eye, the future, for this great power was developed for peace and security of the United Nations and the rest of the world.

It was fitting that in this scene there should be a ship dedicated in name to the memory of the late President Franklin Delano Roosevelt, formerly secretary of the U. S. Navy which he helped to build to this great strength which had its test in the recent war in which the wisdom of his effort and his vision were rewarded with victory, though he did not live to see the triumph, which he knew was sure.

C.N.R. and Ninth Loan

Belleville, division point on the Canadian National Railways, numbers among its citizens a great number of employees of this great national industry of transportation and takes more than ordinary interest in the effort put forth by the system to make the present Ninth Victory Loan the greatest of the loans. The meeting held in the C.N.R. shops in this city last Friday which brought together more than three hu[illegible] officers, key-men and canvassers for the division for the purpose of opening the campaign, shows with what heartiness, enthusiasm and energy the railways have made sure as far as they are concerned of the success of the present financial undertaking of the Dominion.

Vice President and General Manager J. F. Pringle spoke at length and made a comprehensive presentation of the loan and outlined the seven vital reasons why every railroader of the C.N.R. should subscribe. At the same time he presented a clear statement of the place of the railways in the national economy and development in these words, "railway prosperity depends upon the prosperity of the country. We cannot be prosperous unless other industries are prosperous, manufacturing and producing goods for us to transport and earning money with which to travel upon our trains. For that reason, if for no other, we are vitally interested in this loan as the prosperity of Canada for the next year, and perhaps, for years to come, depends upon the Ninth Victory Loan being fully subscribed."

Something Wrong Here

(Ottawa Journal)

In the Nova Scotia provincial elections of Tuesday the Liberals got 145,646 votes (53 percent.) and elected 28 members.

The C.C.F. got 35,233 votes (13 percent.) and elected two members.

The Progressive Conservatives got 94,383 votes (34 percent.) and elected no members.

Something wrong about a voting system which produces that.

It is argued, of course, that once a Government takes office, and regardless of its party complexion, it represents, or tries to represent, all the people. It is a nice theory, but, we fear, not true. Moreover, a voting system which, as has happened in this Nova Scotia case, deprives a legislature or parliament of the voice and point of view of more than one-third of the population, can hardly be desirable. Not under our democratic theory of discussion and debate.

The Journal has never favored proportional representation voting; we think that it is too complicated, and, under certain circumstances, holds danger of deadlock. There is, however, something to be said for the transferable vote, which is different from proportional representation — and it may be the time has come in Canada to look into it.

550,000 Blood Donations

Nearly 550,000 blood donations were collected throughout the Dominion by the Canadian Red Cross clinics from January 1945 up to the closing of the National Blood Donor Service on August 21st.

Dr. John T. Phair, Chairman of the National Blood Donor Committee, stated at the meeting of the Red Cross Central Council that more than eight hundred certificates have been presented to Canada, to date, to persons who have given twenty or more blood donations.

The three-month survey of the blood needs of all hospitals throughout Canada is now in progress, looking to the possible early development of a peace-time National Blood Donor Service. Dr. W. E. Stanbury, in charge during the war of the blood service throughout Britain under the British Ministry of Health, is heading the survey.

JUST FOLKS

FAMILY FRIEND

Though I'm made of steel and rubber, I'm the thing that set men free
From the narrow limitations of the life which used to be.
I gave them lakes for fishing, and the woods and hills to climb,
And for their serene enjoyment I made possible the time.

I'm the thing that gave them sunshine and a patch of land to till,
And the chance to stretch the distance between home and shop and mill.
I'm the friend that gave them quiet, when the night comes slipping down,
For I took them, and their children, from the noises of the town.

I gave them back their friendships, which had slipped too far away,
When I made glad visitations just the journey of a day.
All the joys to life I've added since my coming countless are.
"Who and what am I?" you ask me. "Just the family's motor car."

SLAIN IN LORAIN

Lorain County officers were searching for a killer and a motive in the pistol slaying of the 25-year-old wife of a homecoming sailor in the down-town section of Lorrain, Ohio. Police were working on a theory that Mrs. Helen Duffield (shown) was shot to death by a jealous suitor. Mrs. Duffield's body was found in a car, three hours after she was shot in the same car, by the killer who then raced through Lorain at 80 miles per hour.

Looking Ahead in Ottawa

(By the Ottawa Staff of The Canadian Press)

Ottawa, Oct. 29. (CP)— The Wings which will cover Canada's compact 16-ship peacetime navy may be there by courtesy of the R.C.A.F.

Defence Minister Abbott has said the whole matter of the Fleet Air Arm now is under discussion by the Defence Council. And this body will have to make up its mind soon for the first new carrier is being delivered to Canada next January with the second following within six months.

Each will carry special crews of about 1,200 men, a good proportion aircrew and ground mechanics. These men will have to be trained to take over the new carriers.

Mr. Abbott has intimated that he hopes to get his nucleus from Canadians in the Royal Navy Fleet Air Arm. He also has intimated there may be a training arrangement made with the R.C.A.F.

Hon. C. G. (Chubby) Power, former Air Minister, has expressed the feeling that the Air Force should at least look after the training of the flying sailors. And he gave a hint that perhaps the R.C.A.F. should be attached to the ships. He added the idea of airmen in bell-bottom trousers seemed ridiculous.

Canadians who have gone into the Royal Navy Air Arm trained under R.C.A.F. air instructors and Royal Navy ground instructors at Collins Bay, Ont. Mr. Abbot has said it was possible the navy personnel might train with the Air Force on east or west coasts but he did not know where the last stage of Fleet Air Training would be carried out. Collins Bay, situated on Lake Ontario near Kingston, provided a seemingly ideal spot to give the sailors a taste of over-water experience.

Military Adviser

A reliable source has said that while it seems unlikely a successor will be appointed to succeed Lt.-Gen. Maurice Pope as military adviser to Prime Minister Mackenzie King it is possible that a high-ranking navy or air force officer may be named.

Time source said the military adviser was attached to the Prime Minister as a wartime measure and chiefs of staff thus were relieved of the responsibility of being available to Mr. King to give advice on war problems.

Mr. King insisted he didn't want to take the staff chiefs away from their busy war work and asked for a high officer who could advise him on military matters.

With the war over, Staff Chiefs are more readily available for conferences. But an informant said that Mr. King was so pleased with the military adviser arrangement which put him in close and constant liaison with the defence departments that he might decide to continue the office. And if he did it would seem possible he would choose a navy or air force officer this time.

Hon. Louis St. Laurent, acting Minister of External Affairs, said that no decision on the appointment or abandonment of the post would be made until Mr. King returns to Canada from Britain. And with the situation so intangible there has been no speculation as to who might be chosen for the important post.

There has been speculation, however, that Gen. Pope's selection to head the Canadian military mission to Berlin is an indication that he may be headed for a diplomatic career.

MURMURS THAT DO NOT SIGNIFY

Through an odd combination of circumstances I knew as much when I was a sophomore medical student as I'd ever know. The circumstances were (1) I had a brand new stethoscope, (2) Grandma O'M. had but one lung left—on the basis of what she declared the great Dr. Shattuck of Boston had told her when she was a slip of a gerrul, and (3) I was stone deaf in one ear. So after a thorough listen with my fine new stethoscope I broke it gently to the other members of the family that I heard no breathing sounds at all. Grandma O'M was vindicated, after years of tush-tush. "There, now, I tell you, Ellen, that boy knows as much now as he'll ever know!"

My difficulty was not that I had but one good ear—for with that ear, if there is reasonable quiet, I can hear rales and things which are hardly audible to ordinary ears—I mean my hearing in that one ear is better than the average hearing of people with two good ears—that is, always provided there are no confusing noises in the environment.

There are a good many poor geeks walking around, oh, so carefully lest they overexert themselves, under the morbid obsession that they have "heart trouble" when in fact they have nothing the matter with the heart or the circulation except the disturbances of function arising from fear or anxiety arising from the suggestion or the bald assertion of some bumbling doctor that there is a "murmur" or that there is "a leaking valve", or that the heart is "weak" and the patient had better "take things easy" and be careful to avoid all strain.

As a matter of fact a systolic murmur (abnormal sound with the normal sound made by contraction of ventricle) may be heard in the examination of the heart of a perfectly healthy young adult in various postures, in different phases of breathing or after exercise. So the mere hearing of a "murmur" does not necessarily signify that there is anything the matter with the heart.

Then there are a good many more people who are barred from enjoying good health by the blood pressure obsession. Some of these are just simple minded—they take seriously whatever morbid suggestion the nostrum mongers, diet or food "specialists" and assorted near-doctors and queer-doctors who cater to the ignorant. And some are the wiseacres, who make it their mischievous business to find out just how many "points" high their blood pressure is and go on from there doctoring themselves.

Well, then, do I mean to say that a person can or should do nothing about it if his or her blood pressure is. . .? No, I don't. But if you ask me about it honestly and not just to see whether you think I know what I'm talking aboupt, I say, to wit and as follows:

Never mind your blood pressure. It's none of your business.

And don't let any one know I told you, but if I were you I would not put much faith in a doctor who mumbled or muttered about a murmur or about blood pressure if he did not explain exactly what he thinks about it or what to do about it.

QUESTIONS & ANSWERS

Hernia

Thank you a million for sending my husband to Dr —— for injection treatments of hernia. He had about sixteen injections in all and was not much inconvenienced at any time. He is so happy to be cured with having to go to the hospital. He is more active now than he dared to be for several years past.

(Mrs. L. S. W.)

Answer—Thank you, Ma'am. Any reader who asks for it in writing (no clipping, please) and incloses stamped self-addressed envelope, may have the pamphlet on Hernia. My special lists of physicians are still fragmentary (since departure of so many of the best doctors for military service) but if I know of a doctor in your vicinity who is skilled in ambulant treatment of hernia I am always happy to name him for you.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Which is correct, "Porto" or "Puerto" Rico?

On May 17, 1932, President Herbert Hoover approved the following joint resolution of Congress:

"That from and after the passage of this resolution the island designated 'Porto Rico' in the Act entitled 'An Act to provide a civil government for Porto Rico, and for other purposes,' approved March 2, 1917, as amended, shall be known and designated as 'Puerto Rico.' All laws, regulations, and public documents and records of the United States in which such island is designated or referred to under the name of 'Porto Rico' shall be held to refer to such island under and by the name 'Puerto Rico.'"

This resolution was introduced in the Senate by Hiram Bingham, of Connecticut, at the request of the Porto Rico legislature, and when it came up for consideration on the consent calendar February 17, 1932, Senator Clarence C. Dill, of Washington, objected. "Instead of making geography more difficult," he declared, "we ought to simplify it, and I think it is a ridiculous proposition to go back to an ancient spelling of the name."

Previously the United States Geographic Board had ruled that "Porto Rico," not "Puerto Rico," was the correct English spelling of the name of the West Indian island that was seized by force by General Nelson A. Miles in 1898 during the Spanish-American War and later annexed outright as a "possession" of the United States.

"Puerto Rico" (pronounced PWER-toe REE-koe) is the Spanish spelling of the name, which literally means "Port Rich" or "Port of Riches" and which was given to the island by Columbus when he discovered it on his second voyage in 1493.

The inhabitants themselves generally preferred the original spelling and before Congress finally acted they more than once petitioned the United States government to make "Puerto Rico" the official name of the island.

Canadian Legion Prepares for Armistice Day

The regular meeting of Belleville Branch 99 Canadian Legion was held recently, at their meeting Hall, the meeting being well attended, especially by the young veterans of the Second Great War. Eight new candidates being initiated.

Comrade E. J. Dainard reported for the Poppy Day Committee, also Armistice Day arrangements. It is expected that a large turnout of citizens of Belleville and district will be at the Cenotaph Remembrance Service. The Local Branch of Army and Navy veterans, Canadian National Veterans and the Legion will parade. A church service will be held at the Tabernacle United Church after the Cenotaph Service. The Annual Poppy Day will be held Saturday, one day previous to Armistice, Nov. 11th. Your support is urgently requested to support this day, and everyone should wear a Poppy. The local Soldier organizations work together on this day and all proceeds are used strictly for Veterans and their families in distress.

The Monster Bingo arranged for will probably be the last Bingo held at the Hume Arena this season. Come along and get the price of a Hundred Dollar Victory Bond as door prize and help the 9th Victory Loan Campaign. There will be four hundred dollars in share the wealth prizes, that have been advertised by the Bingo Committee, $500.00 in all. We want to see you there.

An Armistice social evening is planned for Monday, Nov. 12th, and all members of the Legion, their wives and sweethearts and friends are invited to be present. There will be a buffet lunch and a fine entertainment.

It was decided at the meeting that the nomination for office for the coming year will be held the last meeting in November, elections the first meeting in December and installation the first meeting in January.

The ladies auxiliary sent in a report that while meeting the trains at the Canadian National station; that a troop train from the west coast, loaded with British prisoners of War from Japan pulled in unexpected to them. All the cigarettes available were given out, amounting to over 2000. The boys sure enjoyed them and gave the ladies Jap money as souvenirs. There were 19 coaches on this train, all bound for the east coast and Blighty.

At the close of the meeting some fine entertainment was enjoyed by the Legion members. Platoon Sgt. Major Garnet Dainard of Picton and a former member of the Hasty Pees, favored the members with some old time music on a violin he brought back from Germany. Some high class boxing was then enjoyed, a four 2-minute round bout was put on by two local boys, namely George Polmanter, weight 135 lbs. and Jerry Downs, weight 135 lbs. These rounds were fast and furious and the fighters got a big round of applause. Comrade E. J. Dainard, Chairman of social and entertainment was the referee and also arranged the match.

At the close of the entertainment program the ladies of the Auxiliary furnished sandwiches and coffee, bringing another successful meeting to an end.

Britain's Solvency Essential To Prosperity of World

(An Editorial in New York Journal of Commerce.)

Lend-lease assistant to Great Britain has been ended following the surrender of Japan, in accordance with the act of Congress. But this Country cannot afford to be indifferent to the serious financial plight in which Britain finds herself today as a result of the war.

Without adequate assistance, Britain will have to resort to drastic foreign trade and exchange controls and perhaps to currency depreciation. This would hamper a post-war revival of trade and investment throughout the world. An impoverished Britain would provide a poor market for our products.

Weakening of British political influence due to economic difficulties would be a blow to the cause of democracy throughout Europe.

The facts about Britain's plight are well known. To finance her war effort, she had to liquidate about half the foreign investments, or some $8,000,000,000 of securities. In addition, India, the European neutral nations and Latin America have accumulated some $16,000,000,000 of blocked balances in London. These blocked sterling balances constitute floating debt that must be taken care of before Great Britain can consider ending exchange restrictions.

The United States has made a vast contribution in blood and treasure to victory that has just been won. Yet the huge debt this country has incurred to finance our participation in the war is domestic in character. We have lost a little during the war years, but our international financial position has been unimpaired.

Great Britain, by contrast, has suffered a serious deterioration of her international financial status. For a country that must import considerably more than she exports, the loss of half her foreign investments and the creation of a foreign floating debt of some $16,000,000,000 have drastic implications.

In the light of these facts, the United States must face squarely and sympathetically Britain's urgent need for reconstruction aid to replace wartime Lend-Lease. In granting such aid, we want to make sure that it will provide a permanent solution, not temporary relief, for Britain's financial ills. Otherwise, special assistance may be required anew every few years.

Reconstruction aid will have to be granted on a non-commercial basis, for Britain's balance of payments position will not permit her to pay any large sum for interest and sinking fund on a debt to the United States. Furthermore, such aid must be accompanied by an equitable final settlement of Britain's blocked sterling debt. Her creditors should be willing to scale down substantially the amount of their claims in exchange for par cash payment, as part of an over-all settlement involving a large contribution from the United States.

The last restoration of Britain's international financial solvency is a high stake, well worth a large investment by the United States.

Mark Vanner New President Of Kiwanis Club

Mark Vanner, member of the Kiwanis Club for the past three years and director during the past year, was elected president of the club at a meeting of the new board of directors held at Kiwanis Centre on Friday evening. Mark for the past two years has been chairman of the boys' and girls' work in the club and through his untiring efforts the Scouts' and Cubs' movement has increased considerably in this city. The directors also elected Ross Stiver as secretary, a post he has filled most capably for a number of years.

Mr. Vanner came to Canada from London, England, in 1913 settling in Toronto. In 1916 he joined the Canadian Army Service Corps and after six months' service in Canada went overseas and remained there until the Fall of 1919, when he returned to Toronto. In 1923 he came to Belleville and is at present secretary-treasurer of the Belleville Sargent Lock Company. Mark is an enthusiastic bowler being the secretary of the Belleville Bowling Club and also secretary-treasurer of the Corbin Lock Tournament Committee. He is also past chairman of the Cost Accountants' Association and treasurer of the Beaches Association and secretary-treasurer of the manufacturer's section of the Chamber of Commerce. He married Grace Hayne of Midland.

He is well and favorably known in club circles in the city and no doubt will carry on the fine record of the many presidents that have preceded him in the Belleville Kiwanis Club.

Motorcade Survey Of Moira R. Will Be Made Nov. 5

Municipal and civic officials, government representatives and those of various city organizations, have been invited to join a motorcade survey of the Moira River watershed on November 5 by the officials of Zone 4, Ontario Conservation and Reforestation Association.

Invited to the survey are officials of the Hastings County Council and Warden J. Fred Wilson; the Belleville City Council and Mayor Frank Follwell; the Chamber of Commerce; the Fish and Game Association, the press; municipal engineers of adjoining districts and county agricultural representatives.

The motorcade will leave the county buildings here at 9.30 a.m., and will have luncheon in Tweed, where addresses will be given by Mr. A. H. Richardson, department of Regional Planning and Development and Mr. W. H. Porter, secretary of the O.C.R.A., of London, Ont.

The party, in the afternoon will then proceed along a route of the river watershed, which has been laid out by County Engineer W. L. Langlois and County Representative H. L. Fair. County Clerk Erle Denyes is the secretary of Zone 4, O.C.R.A.

Mother's Letter to Czech Son Here Tells of Terror During Occupation

Thousands of refugees and Austrians died in Vienna from fear. Many bodies were found untouched by bomb or bullet during the last days of the war when a defeated Germany was trying to organize itself into some semblance of order.

Frank Barinka, Czecho-Slovakian member of the staff of the Queen's Hotel can vouch for that. For this week he received a letter, the first since 1939 from his father and mother who spent five terrified war years in their home village of Stitna, Czecho-Slovakia.

"We heard of the fine things which were being done in the United States and Canada. We were told you had plenty of food and clothing, and many times when the American planes flew over hope rose in our breasts. We prayed many times that, perhaps, you Frank, would be in one of those machines and drop us a parcel," his mother wrote.

A thirty-year -old sister of Barinka, who stayed in an Austrian convent in Vienna, was literally blown to pieces by a German bomb, when the Nazis in the final throes of defeat turned on their former allies.

An aunt, Rose by name, died from actual fear. A younger brother is serving in the Czech army.

Conditions are pitiful in the little village of Stitna where Barinka was born. Fortunately, his family are now getting sufficient food to maintain the spark of life but clothing is practically nil, and fuel constitutes another serious problem with winter in the offing.

He came to Canada sixteen years ago with his family. His mother, however, refused to leave her native country and the rest of the family returned to Czecho-Slovakia with the exception of Frank. He had given his family up for dead when the letter arrived a few days ago.

He forwarded three letters to his family some time ago with the hope they might be alive. One of them got through.

14,000 Applications For Divorce Made By Servicemen

London, Oct. 27 (CP) — Parliament pondered today the case of the soldier who comes home from the wars to find his wife in another man's arms, but who must remain married for two years because he cannot afford lawyers to pilot his divorce through the courts.

Describing homes broken by war separations, a Labor member, Lt.-Col. M. Lipton, said he has "known cases where the first indication anything was wrong was when the serviceman contracted veneral disease from his wife on returning to this country."

"It's a tribute to the self control of our men that in so few cases, when faced with domestic tragedies of this kind, they had taken the law into their own hands," Col. Lipton said.

The Poor Persons Committee of the Law Society, which arranges low cost legal service for applicants, has a dacklog of 14,000 applications, of which Lipton said more than 12,000 were in the "Services Divorce Department."

6 REASONS
why you will like to use
CAMPBELLS FLOUR?

DO YOU KNOW that there is a big difference in flour—that your best baking effort is at the mercy of the flour you use — that for lighter, more tender pies, cakes, tarts, puddings, in fact all types of pastry baking, Campbells Flour is the choice of experienced home bakers.

Just check the six advantages you get when you buy Campbells Flour against any other flour on the market.

THE HANDLE FOR CARRYING
A flour bag, because of its bulk, is clumsy to carry. Lakeside Milling Company Limited, recognizing this, invented a handle as part of each bag to make it convenient for you.

STANDARD SIZES
For years millers have been content to sell their flour in the old "stone" sizes. Now you can buy Campbells Flour in standard decimal sizes—5, 10, 25, 50 and 100 lb. bags (5's and 10's have handles). Just another Lakeside Milling feature for your convenience.

MORE EXPERIENCE
For three generations Campbells have been Ontario millers of Ontario winter wheat—have been developing flours for better baking—there is no substitute for experience. Campbells Flour is the answer.

A BETTER FLOUR
Campbells Flour is better, easier to work with. It's milled by experts, until downy light, from the finest selected Ontario Fall wheat and it's "test baked" for your protection.

A MONEY-BACK GUARANTEE
Because we know the care that goes into the milling of Campbells Flour, we don't hesitate to guarantee it on a money-back basis. If, after a fair trial, Campbells Flour fails to satisfy you, take the unused portion of this bag of flour along with the bag back to your dealer get your full purchase price.

HOME BAKING SERVICE
For your convenience we have available a Home Baking Service Bureau. If you have any baking problems, just write to Ruth Hudson, our dietitian in charge of the bureau. Her service and advice are free to all Canadian home bakers.

IF YOU are against too much fuss and feathers for your new hat, you can find models that strike a pretty balance between the dressy and the tailored design. Lilly Dache is responsible for an excellent example of the in-between hat. Of beige beaver felt, the rounded turban is trimmed with a neat cockade in black and green ribbon embroidered with a red and gold flower.

Mr. A. W. Robertson and Mr. and Mrs. Everett Brickman, of Thorold Lodge, Seigniory Club, Lucerne, P.Q., are leaving the first of November to spend the winter in Bradenton, Florida.

Miss Joyce Watson, Belleville has been elected president of the Library School, University of Toronto, for the year 1945-46.

F/O. and Mrs. Donald McKee visited the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. D. McKee, Cedar Street, over the weekend. F/O. McKee has just completed a 30-day leave and is now stationed at Ottawa.

Mr. and Mrs. Frank High entertained seventy-five friends at the Belleville Golf Club, Saturday evening on the occasion of their 15th wedding anniversary. Mr. and Mrs. High received a beautiful table lamp and some lovely crystal ware.

Approximately fifty guests attended a party given by Miss Charlotte Finkle at her home on Bridge Street East, Friday evening in honor of Miss Phyllis Trusdale, who is leaving Belleville, Wednesday to make her home in Hamilton. Following dancing and games, delicious refreshments were served.

WEDDINGS

SELMAN—LANGWIN

The wedding took place on Saturday, October 27, of Mary Rita, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Joe Langwin, Belleville, and Lorne John Selman, Rainy River, son of Mrs. John Selman, and the late Mr. Selman, in St. Michael's Church. Monsignor J. F. Nicholson officiated.

The bride wore a suit of brown gabardine with matching accessories and a corsage of red roses and baby's breath. She wore fox furs, the gift of the groom. She was attended by her sister, Helen Langwin, who wore an olive green suit with black accessories and a corsage of roses and 'mums.

The groom was attended by Mr. Gerald Clement of Belleville.

The bride's gift to the groom was a black onyx ring, and to her sister, a string of pearls. The groom's gift to the groomsman was a pen and pencil set.

About 35 guests were present at the buffet luncheon held at the home of the bride, which was decorated with Autumn leaves. The bride's mother received in a mauve ensemble with black accessories. The bride and groom were toasted as they cut the wedding cake.

The bride wore a green wool suit with brown accessories for the wedding trip to Rochester and points west. On their return they will take up residence in Belleville.

Out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. Parson, Rochester; Miss M. Hotte, Mrs. T. Mereau and Mrs. W. Porter, all of Tweed, and Mr. and Mrs. Stewart of Kingston.

Couple Honored In New Home

On Friday evening, a number of friends and relatives gathered to honor Mr. and Mrs. Yorke Bushell, 92 St. Charles Street, in their new home.

During the evening euchre and bingo were enjoyed, the euchre being won by the following ladies' 1st, Mrs. Collins, 2nd, Mrs. Hughes, 3rd, Mrs. G. Evans; the men's prizes by Mr. A. Seeley, 1st; Mr. C. Tebworth, 2nd, and Mr. L. Kelly, 3rd; bingo prizes by Mrs. J. Evans, Mrs. R. Howe, Mrs. H. Carter.

The gathering was called to order and Mr. H. Carter read the address and Mr. Alan Bushell presented the new home owners with a lovely coffee table and set of wall ducks. Although taken by surprise Yorke and Kay thanked everyone and asked them all to visit them again.

Mr. Harry Carter played his violin for dancing which was enjoyed very much.

Dainty refreshments were served and brought a very enjoyable evening to a close. Everyone wished Yorke and Kay much happiness in their new home.

Reception Held For Recent Bride

A reception was held recently at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Everett Fitzgibbon, Lewis Street, in honor of Mr. and Mrs. Donald Francis, (nee Rita Fitzgibbon).

The table looked lovely with white cloth and pink streamers, the centrepiece being a two-tier wedding cake.

A social evening was enjoyed by all the bride receiving many beautiful gifts.

Dainty refreshments were served by Mrs. Arthur Demorest, Mrs. Ralph Ashmore and Mrs. Arthur Gough, sister of the bride.

Out-of town guests were from Picton, Trenton and Oshawa.

Women's Activities

MELROSE W. I.

The regular W.I. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. Chas. Bates. Mrs. G. McLaren, president, opened the meeting. An invitation to the Officers' Rally from the Quinte Branch was read and accepted.

The War Charities' conveners reported an excellent responce to the Clothing collection, also reported 288 lbs honey donated. The President suggested the post war aim "Be alive to the needs of others".

Mrs. Fred Jeffrey took charge of the program as leader, and introduced her topic "The United Nations' Conference."

Mrs. Sherry Demill read an account on Foreign Secretary, Anthony Eden. Mrs. Arnold Masters read one on Secretary of State, Edward Stettinius; Mrs. Clare Weese on Foreign Commissar Molotov; Mrs. Bruce Sherman on Foreign Minister, Dr. T. V. Soong. Spotlights from the San Francisco Conference were given by Mrs. MacMechan. These reading proved very interesting and educational.

Mrs. Jeffrey then gave an excellently prepared topic, "The United Nations Conference", and the formation of the Charter of the Conference.

There were thirty members present.

Dainty refreshments closed the meeting.

MARMORA W.M.S.

The October meeting of St. Andrew's United Church Women's Missionary Society was held in the church hall on Tuesday afternoon with a good attendance. Miss M. Brown presided and conducted the opening period.

Mr. Alec Gordon, organist of Bridge Street Church, Belleville, had consented to give an organ recital some time this Fall and a committee was appointed to arrange for some. Mrs. Dickson sang an African hymn, that is to be taught the C.G.I.T. group.

Very interesting reports were given by Mrs. Haacke of the School for Leaders held in Ladies' College, Whitby, in September and Mrs. Pack and Mrs. Cadigan gave notes on the District Rally held at Cooper last week.

Mesdames Cadigan Sabine and Sweet were appointed a nominating Committee to draw up a slate of officers for 1946. Mrs. Burwash had charge of the worship period.

W.C.T.U.

A very interesting W.C.T.U. meeting was held at the home of Mrs. S. Sweetman, Hillside, St., on Thursday, October 25, with the Vice President, Mrs. Garn Dobbs, presiding.

Mrs. Hubbs favored with a piano solo, Minuet A'Antico by Seeboeck, which was much enjoyed by all. A reading by Mrs. Ralph Morden, "Higher Culture", with a strain of humor, was well received. Mrs. Montgomery contributed a reading "The College Oil Cans", presenting the sad life of a college graduate enslaved by drink.

The devotional service was conducted by Mrs. Hibbard.

After some discussion, a motion was made by Mrs. J. Blackburn and seconded by Mrs. J. N. Boyd, that the executive plan to interview the ministers of the different churches asking for a service of Temperance at which all women interested in Temperance reform, will be urged to attend in a group. It was carried unanimously.

A clip sheet on "The Menace of the Liquor Traffic", was presented by Mrs. J. Blackburn and Mrs. E. Farnswroth.

Big business firms generally do not organize against the traffic but there is at least the Businessmen's Research Foundation, and different branches of industry that enforce prohibition during the time on duty. Every great railroad system and bus line forbids its employees to use intoxicants during work periods and discourages their use when off duty, also abstinence in the great commercial aviation industry because tragic experiences have proved that even a small amount of alcohol in one or two drinks, lessens co-ordination between brain and muscle thereby increasing accidents and decreasing efficiency.

Scientists have given us their verdict that beverage alcohol is a narcotic depressant, habit-forming drug which impairs the control of the physical intellectual and moral powers of the user. Dr. Wm. Mayo expressed the opinion that one out of every three moderate drinkers becomes a toper or sot.

Alcoholism stands beside cancer and venereal disease as a scourge of the race and as a more general scourge than infantile paralysis or smallpox.

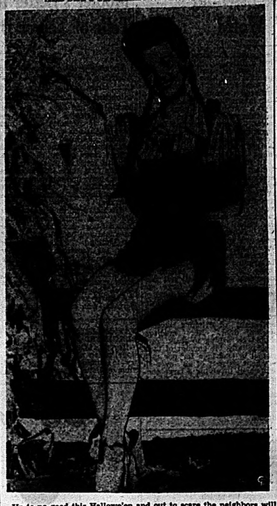
Alcoholism is a disease and this fact should be recognized by the government since revenue is received from the sale of that which creates alcoholics, some part of that revenue should be used in combating that evil.

It has been said the liquor traffic is the greatest enemy of social welfare. It is a wealthy, well managed organization with money to buy the best brains to serve them, and with one aim—the extension of their business no matter at what sacrifice of human welfare. With Judson of Burma, we say "Our prospects are bright as the Promises of God."

GANANOQUE WOMAN DIES

Gananoque, Ont., Oct. 29. (CP)—Mrs. W. V. Bulloch, wife of the president of Parmenter and Bulloch Company Limited, died yesterday at her home here after a long illness. Survivors, besides her husband, include a daughter, Mrs. A. E. Godfrey, wife of Air Vice Marshal Godfrey of Ottawa.

ALL SET FOR HALLOWE'EN TRICKS



Up to no good this Hallowe'en and out to scare the neighbors will be Inky, Sooty and Stewart. But before you bolt the doors and hide under the kitchen table, we'll let you in on a little secret. Inky and Sooty can be bought off with a saucer of milk and the blonde member of a terrible trio is not nearly as desperate as she would have you believe. She is Martha Stewart, new 20th Century-Fox discovery who makes her film debut in the musical "Doll Face."

The Marry Go Round

Let Him Have His Hobby!

Not every wife's rival for her husband's affections is another woman!

Sometimes it's a hobby, sometimes it's a business or a lodge or a boat, or an innocent little trout stream that happens to be his Big Heart Interest. And sometimes it's just a convivial crowd and old John Barleycorn.

Many a lonely wife could name a golf course or a bag of clubs as the guilty co-respondent who lured away her husband's love and most of his attention. And thousands of women could sue an office desk or a stock-ticker for alienation of their husbands' affections.

These three can be more dangerous rivals to a woman's happiness than any blonde in a beauty chorus. And they are more permanent and take up more time.

Perhaps no writer's wife ever lived who was not a little bit envious of his typewriter or his pen or a wee bit jealous of his absorption in the imaginary characters whom he spent hours creating, unless she too was a writer, and could work right with him.

Sometimes, a wife actually envies her husband's new car all the loving care and tenderness that he lavishes on it. And many a beautiful woman would love to shoot all the race horses on which her husband spends his time and money, or to sue them and collect damage.

As a matter of fact, every normal man has more than one love in his life; and his wife is lucky if her "rival" happens to be a car or a garden or a nice, healthy sport.

A grande passion for fishing or hunting may take away from his home for a week at a time—but it also takes his mind off other women. It's a better sign to see a married man spending his money on fancy "flies" and trick fishing rods than on fancy neckties and tricky clothes.

A man without a few avocations—a few side-lines—soon becomes a prosaic, a mere money-making machine, about as interesting to chat with as a cash-register. Or else he spends his spare time getting into mischief, getting into silly love-affairs or getting fat.

If your husband has absorbing fondness for a boat, a car, a horse, a garden, a game for anything except a woman or a bottle—don't regard it as a rival, but as a friend in disguise. Give me a man with a hobby, every time!

TERRIFY NAZI

When S. S. Troopers were sent to the home of Theresa Neumann, Germany's "Saint," under orders to "do away with her," they turned and fled as they saw the crown of thorns wound on her head, and with blood dripping from her hands, side and feet. The peasant girl is said to suffer wounds similar to those on the body of Christ.

Pendant Necklace Again

By PRUNELLA WOOD

THE FLEXIBLE gold (or gold-seeming) short necklace is a fashion which has stayed with us for some time, and which still has a gleaming future.

Here is a new version. . .one which uses pendants to accent its line which is so becoming to all types of clothes. The pendants are sprays of pink gold flowers, set with realistic copies of precious gems, plus rhinestones. Two of the pendants can be slipped off the chain, and worn as clips, which is how they are constructed.

Sheep in Wolves' Clothing

Do all man like to think of themselves as potential wolves or frustrated Casanovas, just as we women like to think of ourselves as possible movie stars or glamor girls, who have been side-tracked by fate or marriage or lack of a chance?

At any rate, some of the best and most devoted husbands I've known like to give the impression that they are gayboys at heart, suppressed only by legal ties and lack of opportunity. Don't you believe them!

Many a kind, good, regular husband will tell you what a "devil" he has been or could be; and he will brag how all the pretty young girls in the office make a fuss over him and hang around his desk. Of course they do; they like him—and know that he's perfectly "safe".

He will assure you that the gray patches over his temples have only made him more popular with the debutantes; and will tell you quite frankly that it would be dangerous for you to go driving with him in the moonlight. He is such an impetuous devil!

Baloney! He never even goes so far as to squeeze a woman's arm when he's helping her across the street; and you will observe that, when you dance with him, he always holds you at a very discreet distance, and talks about the Administration or the stock market or the housing problem. And he never goes anywhere without the wife, except on Lodge nights.

That's what Indian Summer does to a man who knows that he's good-looking and attractive, but who is so completely in love with his wife that he wouldn't exchange her for a car-load of beauty prize winners. It makes him a sheep in wolf's clothing.

What he really enjoys is making a selling talk—putting himself across as a gay dog, a dangerous fellow and an all-around Don Juan! And, the more innocent he is, the deeper purple he paints himself, and the more scarlet his past!

Then there is another type of husband who never looks at you when his wife is around, but stalks you silently into the foyer or the pantry, when you are totally unsuspecting and off your guard, and snatches a sly kiss. He doesn't give you a selling talk—he gives you a sample and he is terribly, terribly hurt when you slap his face instead of responding enthusiastically. But don't worry. He doesn't mean a thing. He's just another sheep in wolf's clothing—another married Casanova with a "bad boy" complex.

Neither of these types is dangerous, and neither would really give his wife up for any woman! It's just that they want to think of themselves as gay devils and woman tamers. Any girl who takes either of them seriously, and lets herself fall for such, is just preparing for a big disappointment.

BEAUTY

By HELEN JAMESON

Perfume is the Final Touch

Perfumes exercise an element of charm. The Egyptians enjoyed them as early as the fourth dynasty; they used them lavishly, frictioning their bodies with fragrant oils and ointments. During the middle-ages scents were so expensive that their use was limited to the courts of the nobles. It wasn't until the reign of "Good Queen Bess" that perfumes were popular in England.

Some of us can't indulge in the use of our favorites, but delightful floretted aromas are still available. We manage to stretch the budget so that we can enjoy them. Yes, and for a definite psychological reason! They do things to our souls. They make us feel rich and luxurious. Every woman delights in delicate odors. And now that household help is scarce, or too expensive for most of us, they are especially precious. If you wash dishes three times a day, it's nice to use something that wafts you far away from kitchen odors. There are times when the smell of food is enchanting. You're hungry; it makes an appeal. But you don't care to carry it around with you.

Do you know that some perfumes appeal to the imagination, while others stimulate the mind? That's what they say!

Selecting a perfume is no business for a dumb woman. It requires brains, good taste and a fastidious nose. It's a gift. Many women have lugged home a perfume that made a heavenly appeal only to find that, after a few days, they couldn't live in the same house with it. Not that it wasn't a first-class product. It just didn't appeal.

Unless a scent puts your spirits on its toes, gives you an elegant exalted feeling, it is not doing its duty by you.

What you want is a romantic perfume, one that savors of a fresh breeze blowing over a meadow, or one that makes you think of being in a flower garden with your very Best Feller. All strong musky odors pall. They last longer than the floretted ones, but, if they are not pleasant to the olfactory motors, who wants them?

Helen Stevens

Unless a scent puts your spirits on its toes, it is not doing its duty.

The nicest perfumes are cool and fresh. They subtle. They come and go as you move about. If you have found such a perfume, hang on to it; you have found a treasure.

Conserve your precious perfume by using an atomizer. After the bath, spray the neck and shoulders. The warmth of the flesh will cause the alcoholic content to evaporate, and the full richness of the perfume will delight you. Keep the atomizer in a cool, dark place.

Don't put it on your hair. A dab back of the ear lobes is all right, or a drop on the inner surface of the elbows.

GOOD MANNERS

By MRS. CORNELIUS BEECKMAN

Hallowe'en Is A-Coming

Dear Mrs. Beeckman:

Within the last few days so many of our servicemen, relatives and friends have returned that our group of friends thought it would be a grand idea to have a Hallowe'en party as a Welcome Home. Since my house is largest, we decided to have it here.

Will you please give us some suggestions as to (1) menu; (2) games; (3) the centrepieces for the buffet table which we are setting in the dining-room?

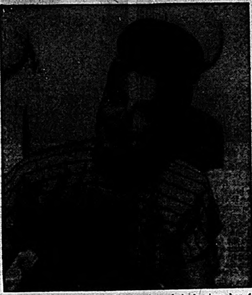
G. L.

1.—No special, "fancy" menu for a Hallowe'en party . . .what these returning servicemen will appreciate are the foods traditionally associated with Hallowe'en. Always welcome and appropriate are those two standbys: baked beans and brown bread, and "hot dogs". And for dessert, pumpkin or apple pie; or doughnuts and coffee; or fruit salad, served in hollowed-out apples. Or each member of your group might be asked to contribute a certain number of sandwiches; and with these you might serve a salad (chicken, tuna fish, shrimp or any other kind; coffee, cider (Hallowe'en's time-honored beverage), and Hallowe'en cookies or cakes. Cookie dough can be cut with a sharp knife into pumpkin faces; or just before the cookies are put into the oven, you can insert a piece of paper in each with a "prophecy" written on it. Skillful fingers can pinch marshmallows (now back again) into all kinds of weird shapes, and these obliging shapes, dipped in chocolate, emerge as black cats and other weird-ities. Candies (provided beforehand or "made on the spot" with a candy-pull as part of the entertainment), popcorn, stuffed dates, figs, raisins, nuts, licorice candies (and old-fashioned motto candies, if you can locate some) made for "good nibbling".

2.—Hallowe'en games, too, are traditional: spooky games with mirrors; guessing games; fortune-telling by games or cards, palm-reading, tea-leaves-reading; blindfold stunts; charades; matching for partners; ghost stunts; candy-pulls; Pin-tail on Donkey (but for Hallowe'en a cutout of a black cat is substituted for the donkey); bobbin for apples; pencil-and-paper games (it would be clever and fun for your group to devise your own Twenty Questions, based on the guests invited to the party, or on events or occasions that particularly concern them); and always popular is the singing of songs, old and new.

3.—The pumpkin, the just-right-color emblem of Hallowe'en, is often given the place of honor as the table centrepiece. It may be cut in weird grimaces, lighted within; or it may be scooped out and filled with gracefully-trailing bittersweet and autumn leaves. Or there may be the lantern decoration, in a bed of Autumn leaves surrounded by the traditional black cats. Picturesque, too, is the witches' cauldron set on three sticks; and from this may come as many ribbons or cords as there are guests; attached to each ribbon either a Hallowe'en favor or a verse. Or a mystery cake may serve as the centrepiece threads of frosting falling irregularly over the top and sides to suggest cobwebs; and on the inside concealed "mysteries" of all kinds, or such emblems as thimbles, rings, coins, buttons, and so forth; black cat cutouts may be pressed against the sides of the cake, and tiny candles (orange-colored, if possible) stuck in the top.

The Top-Knot Coiffure and Evolution in Hair-Styling



Marguerite Chapman wears the top-knot hair-do since her features are even.

By HELEN FOLLETT

HAIR-STYLISTS are in a great dither about the top-knot hair-do. And well they might be. If a woman is going to brush her hair straight up, back, front and sides—twist it into a huge doorknob, what will the poor hair dressers do? Sit around and twirl their restless fingers? Never hear the clang of the cash register? With no crimps in feminine wool there will certainly be a crimp in the shop's income.

One wonders! Stunning women with good features and good figures can get away with it. But how about those whose godmothers did not kiss them in the cradle, who have big noses or snubby, turned up ones? They were helped a lot by soft waves, curls and rolls. Chances are, if the style gets really established, they will follow suit, no matter how terrible they may look.

Coiffures Change

We're no fortune teller, but it is the opinion of this good looks reporter that something more pleasing will result from this smooth, upped effect. Coiffures often evolute, one changing into another. We've seen it happen again and again.

The short bob developed into the shoulder length. Then it seemed a pity to shear it, so it was folded into a chignon at the nape line. When a few more inches were added it was long enough to pack on the crown of the head. So it goes. Anyhow, the new style—which is as old as the hills; natives of strange countries have always done it that way—is neat. You can say that much for it.

Hard and Brittle

We understand that men are not keen about it. They say it makes a woman look hard and brittle and they're dead right. Men admire girls as they admire fluffy attire. They like their women to look womanly.

But what the men think won't matter. When the bob first came in and all the pretty lambs were shorn, they kicked up a big fuss. And a lot of good it did them. That was twenty years ago. It has taken two decades for long hair to come back.

Advice to the Lovelorn

By BEATRICE FAIRFAX

Decided to go to Business College Instead of Getting Married

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I graduated from high school last year and have now started to business college. trying to fit myself to become a secretary. But I'm so discouraged. I'm 18 years old and in love with a young man of 28 who has just returned from service and has married another girl.

Before he went into the service he asked me several times to marry him, but my parents didn't approve of my marrying or making any promises until I finished my education. He wouldn't wait but married someone else. He hasn't a regular job now, and they are living with his parents. I love him terribly, but my mother says I'll be thankful before the year is over that I didn't marry him. Do you think she's right?

Unhappy

A good many young people fall in love frantically before they're quite 18, and when meeting those same sweethearts later on, are more than resigned that they did not marry them. I'm willing to wager that you'll be thankful for the decision to graduate from business college before you consider marriage.

Wants to Get Home Ready for her Sailor-Husband's Return.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I'm a young married woman. My husband enlisted in the Navy soon after we were married, and is now expecting to be discharged.

About two years ago my mother died, and as my sisters were married and had children, it was up to me to go home and take care of the younger sister and brother. I closed my house which is entirely furnished, as I hoped to go back to it again. I get so lonesome and dissatisfied here that I don't see how I can stay on. And I feel as if I should go to my house and get it ready for my husband's return. We live forty miles away.

My father knew a nice woman friend he said would marry him, but he doesn't want to bring anyone into mother's place. But don't you think he ought to consider me a little? I will appreciate so much if you will tell me what you think is best to do.

Dissatisfied

Sometimes being absolutely frank is the only solution to a problem such as yours. Why don't you tell your father that you would like to return and get your home ready for your husband? That should be easy enough for him to understand. If he doesn't want to marry, he could employ a respectable middle-aged woman as house-keeper. Good housekeepers aren't impossible to get. If he inquires among his friends, it's likely he will get the right sort of woman.

You've shown a keen sense of responsibility in assuming duties in your father's house for the last two years and now that your husband is coming home, you owe it to him to have his home ready.

Parents Want Her to Date Younger Boy

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I have to decide between going out with a young man of 23 or dating a younger boy. I'm 17 and very fond of a soldier I met at the home of a girl chum while he was home on furlough. We have the same ideals, like sports, and both like to read. I also go out with younger boys, but they bore me, as they constantly want to neck.

My parents are opposed to my friendship with the soldier and prefer that I go out with someone younger, and think I should date only one boy. I like a variety. If I have to date only one, I'd choose the young man of 23 who doesn't want to sit around all evening and pet.

High School Senior

If your parents insist upon your going out with only one boy, the young man of 23 who doesn't insist on continual "petting" and who likes to read would seem to make a better friend than the youngsters you mention.

Why not explain this preference to your mother? If you were my daughter I wouldn't restrict you to one boy friend. Remember the old saw: "There's safety in numbers".

Her Husband Brings Her Gifts When Returning From Business Trips.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

We've been married for two years, and as my husband is a travelling man, I used to go with him until recently. And now we are so happy over an expected visit from the stork. We were hoping to save enough money to make a down-payment on a little home in the suburbs, but now, since the good news, we'll have to save for the baby instead.

My husband insists upon bringing home expensive gifts every time he returns from a business trip, and I told him we'd have to save our money if we're ever to get on. We'll have to be practical rather than sentimental, but he felt terribly hurt. What do you think of this plan?

Happy Wife

The usual run of letters which come to this column from wives, both young and old, are so different from yours that I find it hard to agree with you on the question of being practical. It's so delightful for a man to remember his wife as if she were his sweetheart. Don't be too severe with him. Perhaps if he spends a little less on the gifts and puts the rest in the bank for the baby, it would help.

She's Interested in a New Boy in Her Class.

Dear Miss Fairfax:

I am in my last year in high school and have become acquainted with a boy in my class who has just moved into the neighborhood. He seems to be a very nice boy and I haven't noticed him with any of the girls in particular. I would like to ask him over and Mother says she would not object. Do you think it would be all right to invite him to the house? How can I do this without causing comment?

S. G.

Yes, I think it would be nice to ask the young man to call on you. You might phone and invite him that way, or ask him when you see him at school. Why not have an informal party and ask several more friends? As your mother is agreeable, you might even ask him to have Sunday night supper with you.

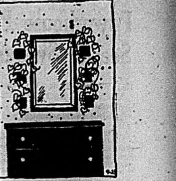
Flattering shoes for day and night

By GRACE THORNCLIFFE

HERE ARE three of the most applauded shoe types for fall and early winter. First, the ballet slipper which has gone over so successfully, makes its debut in silver kid for light-footed evening wear. Black suede is used for the smart d'orsay afternoon pump, with a cylindrical type buckle of carved, polished wood to give a bluky look. The favorite afternoon-into-evening shoe is still the high twisted ankle-strap model. This shoe goes in for a really high heel, and has square nailheads to brighten the platform sole.

It's About Time



By DOLORES BOLAND

IT'S ABOUT TIME to make that small hallway mirror look more important. Little pots of green vines will do the trick. Paint the pots (and the brackets that hold them) the color of the wall or to match the mirror frame.

Fashion Flashes

Here again is the costume ensemble. An elegant model has a full-length redingote of plum-colored woolen with velvet scrolls in applique at the waistline. This is worn over a matching velveteen dress with shield-shaped bodice.

Seen frequently is the simply-fashioned dress with rich trimming. A black crepe afternoon dress made on soft; shirtwaist lines, has gold leaf paillettes making a hem border to match neck and sleeves detail.

At present a high fashion, but one that is expected to gain in favor, is the skirt of metallic cloth or all-over sequin-trimmed wool or fabric worn with a plain wool jersey sweater-like top. This is the sort of thing best carried off by the perfectly groomed woman.

Detroit, Canadiens Uncover Powerhouse Play as N.H.L. Season Swings into Stride

Red Wings Rack Up First Shutout of Year; Toronto Maple Leafs Come From Behind to Tie Boston

By The Canadian Press

If season-starters mean anything in the National Hockey League, look for Montreal Canadiens and Detroit Red Wings when it comes time to "reckon up" for the Stanley Cup.

After an early mid-week start, which saw Chicago Black Hawks take Boston Bruins, the N. H. L. settled down to three games during the weekend. Net results: Canadiens and Red Wings put on powerhouse performances; the rest did their best.

Detroit uncovered a dynamo in Adam (Bomb) Brown who racked up the first hat trick of the season against Bruins. Canadiens' famed punch line was in top condition, and so was the Canuck's newly-acquired Billy Reay.

Boston, losers twice in three games, went down 7-0 to the Red Wings Sunday after they battled to a 1-1 draw with Toronto the night previous. The Montrealers, last year's N.H.L. champions, made it 8-4 against Chihawks on Saturday.

Maurice (Rocket) Richard, last of the holdout parade, came to terms with Canadiens before game time and rumor has it he now is the "highest paid hockey player in the world" — bar none. But with his 50-goal effort last year and his linemates still with him, he should be worth a "pile of dough" to the Canadiens.

Toe Blake and Reay, the former Winnipeg sailor, bagged a pair of markers each against goalie Doug Stevenson, while Lach, Richard, Buddy O'Connor and Joe Benoit were the other scorers. Wingy Johnson pushed two pucks into Bill Durnan's nets, the other Hawk tallies coming from Don Grosso and Max Bentley.

Toronto Leafs — Stanley Cup holders and picked by Ranger boss Frank Boucher as the 'team to beat' — came from behind in their hard-hitting contest with Boston to tie things up on a third frame goal by Bob Davidson. Bill Shill notched the Bruin goal in the second period.

There was a lot of prewar talent showing, including the famed Boston Krauters, and N.H.L. customers seemed well satisfied with the preview of the coming season.

Adam Brown went after tall Paul Bibeault in the Boston nets last night with vengeance and nicked him once in each stanza. The Bruneteaus — Modere and Eddie — each scored once as did Syd Howe and Joe Carveth.

And to Harry Lumley went the honor of the season's first shutout.

Athletic Students Best Says Professor

Middletown, Conn., Oct. 29 — (AP) — Prof. Hugh G. McCurdy of Wesleyan claims the stout-hearted lads who do or die on the athletic fields are better students than the boys who confine their exercise to hitting the books.

To prove his point, the professor tosses out the results of an investigation of records of Wesleyan athletes from 1926 through 1940, and by golly he's convincing.

He sums up his survey by asking two questions:

1. Do non-athletes win more scholastic honors than athletes?
2. Does intercollegiate sport take so much time and energy that the players do not have enough left to excell scholastically?

His answer to both is an emphatic, "No."

McCurdy, associate professor of physical education and coach of soccer, swimming and tennis here, says the best marks are turned in by the cross-country and soccer boys, with golf, swimming, tennis, track, football, baseball, basketball and wrestling not too far behind.

Soccer and Golf turn in the best material for Phi Beta Kappa Keys, with swimming, cross country, track, baseball, football, wrestling, basketball and tennis somewhat off the pace.

The professor, who discloses his results in the current issue of the Wesleyan Alumnus, offers no explanation why cross-country and soccer is so stimulating to the

JOHN KATAN

PAT FLANAGAN

Dashing Pat Flanagan pictured above get his first "whack" at big time wrestling here on Wednesday at the Hume Arena when he meets the crafty John Katan in the main bout. Pat has been going places lately with his fast, clean, aggressive type of wrestling and he is out to show the "Fingers" that speed and agility are more than a match for villainous mat practices. However, "Uncle" John may have something to say about that, and the faster Flanagan may have his hands full when John applies the pressure. In any event the bout should prove to be one of the best mat attractions offered the faithful this season. In the semi-final Walter Sirois who was unexpectedly disqualified last week in his bout here, will meet newcomer Al. O'Donnell, the boy from Missouri who in his first appearance here showed he knows a mat trick or two. In the curtain raiser the Ole Showman, Al Dunlop, will meet Aaron Stein. Advance sale at Cook's tobacco store. First bout at 8.45.

The Van Horne Series

According to reports from a successful meeting of the officials of the Van Horne hockey series held in Kingston on Friday, it looks as though the seasonal hockey dish is off to a good start.

The Belleville delegation which attended the confab stated over the weekend that six teams will battle for the pewterware come ice time. These include Belleville, Queen's Vimy, Ordnance, Kingston Victorias and Kingston Locos.

The Belleville representatives officially entered the team at the meeting and they will pry the lid off the series in Kingston on Nov. 14, when they meet the Victorias of that city. The series will end on January 15.

In the meantime the local squad, which has yet to receive an official title will get in one or two practices prior to the curtain raiser, but in the meantime will get in a lot of conditioning work either at the Y.M.C.A. or the Hume Arena. The boys are enthusiastic over the prospect and are showing lots of the old zip in preparing for the winter pastime.

While Kingston will operate a city loop down there, it was intimated that one of the squads would welcome an invitation to play in a similar loop here if and when it is organized. In addition, all five Kingston teams representatives told the Belleville delegation they are willing to play exhibition games here at dates to be mentioned.

However with the possibility and it is a strong one, that Belleville will go in with an intermediate "A" or "A" setup with Norwood, Omemee, and other squads, these exhibition dates could be used as "fillers" during the sometimes lengthy interims between O.H.A. games.

Kingston put out feelers that it would and could be represented in an intermediate "A" grouping. With teams like Kingston, Belleville, and possibly Oshawa-Whitby, Trenton, or maybe Batawa, battling out there along the icelanes it would look like old times in these parts again. The Peterborough players, through lack of ice in their home town, are dividing their playing abilities between Omemee and Norwood.

Something of definite nature can be expected within the next few days along these lines.

In the meantime the Belleville players and officials meet again tonight at the Y.M.C.A. to select coaches and club officials. As has been mentioned before the players have equal voting power with officials and it has been decided to operate on the basis that a coach or official who does not prove up to the necessary mark of efficiency can be ousted on a round-the table ballot.

A Good Show

There is plenty of interest and enthusiasm being shown in the forthcoming triple-trophy-tournament being staged at the Hume Arena, Friday evening, by the Gardens' Athletic Club. The three cups are beauties and the boys will go all out in an effort to take home the silverware. There will be plenty of entries in the 118-135 and 150 pound classes and top-notch boxers of the district will vie for the honors. Opponents will be drawn at the ringside so that up to the night of the fight, the boxers will not know whom the opposition will be. In some of the classes practically each bout will be of main-go calibre.

J. KROL CAUSED FIREWORKS IN WEEKEND GAME

Vice President of Big Four Union Resigns Because He is Allowed to Play

By FRED KERNER
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

The name of Joe Krol reappeared on the Canadian football scene last weekend—with drastic results.

Lining up with the powerful Toronto Argonauts, Krol's all-round playing was responsible to a great extent for Argos' sweeping 31-6 victory over the ill-fated Montreal Hornets. But on the other side of the ledger word came that Fred Hatch, vice-president of the Interprovincial Union, had resigned in protest to Krol's being permitted to play.

Argos flashed a series of plays, combining Krol with fleet Royal Copeland, that stung the Hornets and boosted Argo stock sky-high for the Big Four play-off next Saturday between the roaring Rough Riders from Ottawa and Toronto. The former Hamilton Wildcat's return to Canadian football fields after a short-lived stay with Detroit's professional grid Lions, however, caused a rift in the I.R.U. executive.

Hatch said in his letter of resignation that contrary to I.R.U. rules, Krol was not a resident of Toronto before Sept. 1 and therefore ineligible to play for Argos. But Hatch's action brought no immediate comment from all parties concerned.

Hamilton Routed.

Meanwhile the Rough Riders routed Hamilton Tigers 16-0 in the last I.R.U. scheduled tilt. The Riders and Argos tied for lead in the loop standing, but the Ottawans hold an edge in both points scored and scored against totals.

University of Western Ontario's Mustangs mauled the McGill Redmen 15-5 to grab a lone stand in the Intercollegiate loop's top slot, increasing possibilities of retaining their 1939 crown. The Western lads did their major scoring early in the game and then dug in to hold the Montrealers in check.

Paced by Bob Henry, Captain Stu Scott and Ruliff Grass — all former Balmy Beach men — Toronto Varsity Blues reversed last week's defeat at Queen's hands and whipped the Kingston team 25-6. Queen's starry Jack Parry was sidelined with an ankle injury.

In the Ontario union, Toronto Balmy Beaches crept atop the heap with a 5-2 victory eked out over Ottawa Trojans. It was strictly two-bucks-and-a-kick contest with Beaches qualifying for the O.R.F.U. finals through canny use of a couple of booters —Sammy Sward and Bobby Porter — who scored all their points.

Windsor Rockets tried their luck in an exhibition game against Hamilton Wildcats at Sarnia, but even the change of venue to one of the hottest prewar football cities didn't change Rockets' luck. The winless Windsorites went down 13-5.

Bucko McDonald Only a Shell Of Former Self

By The Canadian Press

Bucko McDonald, one-time roaring, bouncing defenceman with Toronto Maple Leafs, Detroit Red Wings and New York Rangers of the National Hockey League, returned to the ice wars Sunday night. Leaving the dignified halls of the House of Commons, where he represents Parry Sound as Liberal Member, Bucko, now 34, donned the pads and appeared behind the Hull Volants blue-line in the opening game of the Quebec Hockey League season. Rotund and perspiring freely, he did yeoman service during his turns on duty and once drew a cheer as he fell to his knees in goalie fashion to save a sizzling drive, but it was a pale reflection of the battling Bucko of old.

Following up the promise of President Clarence Rowland that the Pacific Coast Baseball League would seek major-loop status, the directors of the circuit appointed a committee Saturday at Los Angeles to confer with the National and American League clubs on the subject.

After being flown by airplane from Hollywood Park to San Mateo, Calif., El Lobo defeated the favorite, High Resolve, to take the Burlingame Handicap, with $10,000 added, in Saturday's card. The high-flying winner paid $38.60 for first.

Manager of Washington Senators for three years, Ossie Bluege signed for a further two years Saturday at an increase which would make his salary about $30,000 per annum, it was reported. The Senators finished second in the American League last season.

Jimmy Dunn of Winnipeg was elected president of the Manitoba Amateur Hockey Association at its annual meeting at Winnipeg yesterday. He succeeds Frank Hanibal. Honorary presidents named were Frank Sargent of Port Arthur, Ont., and Claude Robinson of Vancouver, recently named to the Hockey Hall of Fame at Kingston, Ont.

Calgary Stampeders took a two-point lead in the semi-finals of the Western Canada Rugby Football Union playoff with a 3-1 victory over Regina Roughriders at Regina Saturday.

New York Rangers scored a 5-4 victory over their farm club, St. Paul Saints of United States Hockey League at Winnipeg Saturday night when Ab Demarco scored a third period goal to break a 4-4 deadlock in the second game of an exhibition series between the clubs. In the game Rangers used for the first time their idea of alternating goaltenders every six minutes.

Johnny Kelly, the West Acton, Mass., marathoner, paced a field of 15 at Hamilton Saturday, to cop the annual Army and Navy veterans 19-mile road race. The two-time winner of the classic Boston Marathon, trotted the distance in 1.51:48, six minutes off the record set by Scotty Rankine in 1936. Rankine was second, covering the course in 1.52:15. Whitey Sheridan, Waterdown, Ont., was third.

With five armored cars and soldiers patrolling the park to quell any revolutionary outbreak, the eighth annual amateur baseball world series got under way at Caracas, Venezuela, Saturday, when the locals defeated Costa Rica 11-1-before 15,000 fans.

Attended by all four generals of Allied occupation forces, Vienna saw its first turf meeting since the war Saturday. Capt. Joe Hartigan, son of a horse trainer, rode the winner in the Champion Cup race, the feature event.

Amateur Boxing Club Officials Form Association

Hamilton, Oct. 29. — (CP) — Amateur boxing club officials from Port Colborne, Guelph, Oshawa, Toronto and Hamilton at a meeting here Saturday formed an association to be called the Ontario Amateur Boxing Association.

The new organization, to operate under the Ontario Athletic Commission, aims to develop amateur boxing throughout Ontario and promote a fund to assist individual clubs in obtaining equipment and help boxers in the event of injury. All clubs in Ontario will be invited to join the association.

Officers elected were: Jack Carey of Hamilton, president; Joseph Veroni of Guelph, vice-president; and Jack Allen of Toronto, treasurer.

Sit around and take six of these last eight tricks. Hearts are trumps and it is your lead. Start a diamond and trump dummy's spade return with your heart five. Lead a club for the west king to win.

In the past several days, I have been explaining what should be done if west now leads back a trump or a spade. But suppose the lead from west is a diamond.

Dummy must trump that with the heart four and you must drop your trump trey on it. In this way dummy hangs onto the lead and you have a club for future emergency purposes. You will see why.

Dummy now leads a spade. East must either trump or let go of a diamond. If he sluffs a diamond, sluff the club you saved and thus permit dummy to stay in the lead.

By this time east has nothing but three trumps and dummy pitches a heart through him. If east plays the nine, take it with your jack and the ace of trump will be your sixth trick.

When dummy shoots his last trump, east may cover with the queen instead of the nine. In that case, refuse to take that trick. After that, whether east leads trump nine or king, you have both.

On dummy's last spade lead, east may trump instead of sluffing a diamond. If his trump is the nine, overtrump. Then lead your ace of trump and give up only one trump trick.

Or when dummy leads the spade, east may trump with the queen. If so, let him keep that trick and drop your heart six on it. East must then lead a trump or his last diamond. If a trump, take all.

If he leads a diamond, sluff your club and trump with dummy deuce to lead a spade from there. East is smothered into playing a trump. Overtrump for the rest. And take a rest from this deal.

FLANAGAN MEETS KATAN HERE FRIDAY NIGHT

Pilot Officer Pat Flanagan the most improved young heavyweight in the wrestling game today, gets his first big chance for higher honors here on Wednesday night at the Hume Arena. Flanagan has agreed to meet big John Katan in the main bout and in spite of Katan's obvious advantages of weight and strength Irish Pat is quite confident of the outcome. "Whipper Watson beat Katan recently" stated Flanagan when offered the match and added "I've been training with Billy all summer and have gained a great deal of new strength and science and I not only believe I can get the best of Katan but I'm willing to make a substantial side bet on it." Well, popular Pat certainly has the confidence of youth but there is no denying the fact that the young airman has come on like a whirlwind these last few months. In Buffalo two weeks ago Pat disposed of big Bill Demetral and since then he beat Toar Morgan who has given John Katan some tremendous matches here. As a result of his victory over Jo Jackson, Flanagan's claim to more important matches could not be denied but on Wednesday here he will certainly be getting the acid test. Katan needs no introduction to Belleville fans and what he will do in the face of Flanagan's superlative cleverness and devastating Mule-Kick, will be intensely interesting to see.

Another bout that will cause plenty of interest is the semi-final match between Walt Sirois, Sandy O'Donnell. O'Donnell is very tough and Sergeant Walter is going to find him an exceedingly rugged opponent. In fact from what we have heard about O'Donnell he is another Katan, only younger Bunny Dunlop will be back on this program to meet Aaron Stein the smart boy from South America. Whipper Watson, now rapidly recovering from his broken chest, has been training Flanagan daily for his big chance and the Irish lad is sure to make a really desperate effort to hurl himself to the top rung by a victory over Katan.

NAVY HAS HARD TIME BEATING PENNSYLVANIA

Purdue Beaten by Northwestern While Ohio State Defeats Minnesota

By TED MEIER

New York, Oct. 29. (AP)—The Monday morning quarterbacks in United States College football scarcely know where to begin their second-guessing today.

So much happened during Saturday's hectic competition that saw Pennsylvania, Purdue, Minnesota, Tulsa and Texas chopped from the list of unbeaten, untied major events that the Old Grads are hard put where to point the finger.

For a starter they might speculate about what might have happened to Navy if Penn had not tried a field goal from the Middies' 20-yard line in the last two minutes of their fray in Philadelphia.

The try for three points missed. This gave the Middies the ball and a chance to win after being outplayed 52 of the 60 minutes. They promptly put on a series of passes that produced a touchdown and a 14-7 victory in the last 25 seconds.

The Purdue boilermakers, who tasted fame and glory last week by overpowering Ohio State, got it in the neck, 26-14, by Northwestern, while, in another upset, Ohio State bounced back into the national picture by whipping Minnesota, 20-7.

Texas was considered a cinch to whip Rice in the southwest conference, but the Owls came up with a stunning 7-6 conquest on Bob Nemir's conversion.

Army and Notre Dame, ranked No. 1 and 2 nationally in last week's Associated Press poll, won as they pleased against Duke (48-13) and Iowa (56-0), respectively.

CAPITALS REMAIN ONLY UNBEATEN TEAM IN A.H.L.

Defeat St. Louis Flyers in Both Ends of a Double-header

(By the Canadian Press)

Indianapolis Capitals remain the only unbeaten team in the hockey league today after a heavy weekend schedule. The fast-stepping Caps came through with two rather easy victories defeating St. Louis Flyers, 7-3 last night and whipping the same clubs 5-1 in a Saturday fixture.

Jerry Brown paced Caps last night scoring the first three goals of the game to give his club a commanding lead. Tony Bukovitch added two counters to Indianapolis total while Steve Wochy and Les Douglas got the others. The biggest crowd ever to watch an A.H.L. league game—13,848 fans—packed the St. Louis rink Saturday night when the home team dropped a 5-1 decision to the powerful Capitals. Bill Thomson sent Flyers into an early lead at the half-way mark of the opening period but Caps replied with goals by Rollie McLenahan and Norm McAtee to lead 2-1 going into the second. The Capitals solid defence and a great exhibition by Rookie goalie Tom Wilson kept Flyers at bay while Indianapolis added a single in the second and two more in the third.

Hornets Beaten Twice

The previously unbeaten Pittsburgh Hornets suffered a pair of reverses to drop into second position in the western section two points behind Indianapolis. The Hornets lost 4-2 to New Haven Eagles last night and bowed 2-1 Saturday to Hershey Bears.

Scoring two goals in one minute and 17 seconds late in the final period, Hershey earned a close 2-1 victory over the Hornets Saturday. New Haven displayed their best form of the season to chalk up their initial victory, downing Hornets 4-2 Saturday.

Hershey suffered their first setback of the campaign losing 4-0 to the improving Buffalo Bisons last night. Goalie Frank Ceryance was given great support by defenceman Frankie Eddols and Wilf Field as he fashioned his first shutout of the season. Eddols, Len Halderson, Vic Lynn and Roger Leger were the Buffalo scorers.

Cleveland Barons and Providence Reds split in their two-game set, the Barons winning a close 4-3 verdict at home Saturday and the Reds pinning a 6-3 defeat on Cleveland last night.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Oct. 29 —(AP)— If Havana is voted into the proposed Florida International (class c) Baseball League, Clark Griffith probably will support the Cuban club. . . . We thought Griff had been supporting all the Cuban club. . . . The Boston Red Sox Piedmont league farm at Roanoke, Va., recently signed Gerard Fielder to a 1946 contract. Probable a hitless wonder.

Such is Fame Dept.

Ted Del Guercio, Newark schoolboy baseball star, attracted plenty of headlines—not to mention a $19,000 bonus — when he signed with the Boston Red Sox farm chain last summer. . . . The other day the final, but unofficial, averages of the Carolina League came out. . . . Del Guercio, who played with the Durham club from July to the end of the season was completely overlooked.

Monday Matinee.

Sal Bartolo, N.B.A., featherweight champ, is expected to announce his retirement any day now. But he'd like a "money" shot at Willie Pep first. . . . Former jockey Red Howell, who has charge of seven horses, once the mounts of German cavalry officers, at Wasserburg in Germany, claims he has "forgotten all about shipping lists" in his excitement over managing a stable. Wanna bet? . . . Vic Keen, the old Cardinal pitcher, is digging in as president of the Salisbury, Md., club of the reorganized Eastern Shore League. . . . And Stuart X. Stephenson, former Montgomery, Ala., sports scribe, is all set to take over the presidency of the class b southeastern loop.

PROBLEM NEARLY SOLVED

Moscow, Oct. 29. (AP)—An age-old Russian problem—the settlement and full exploitation of Siberia and the Far East—is well on the way to being solved, it was announced officially Saturday by D. P. Bychenko, head of a newly Resettlement Department.

AT THE BELLE

Sonja Henie in Technicolor

Now Hollywood cleverly presents Sonja Henie in a spectacular picture which subordinates her skating, superlative as it is, to the story. "It's a Pleasure!" the star's first in Technicolor, presents her in the full range of her versatility in a de luxe entertainment aimed for universal appeal and now on the Belle Theatre screen.

An appealing love story, alternating between laughs and tears, is told in this International Picture's production against the colorful but little known background of ice show trouping. None of the lavish production value expected of a vehicle for the world's finest performer on the flashing blades has been sacrificed. The sets credited to Wiard Ihnan of "Wilson" fame, and the costumes designed by Don Loper, are a repeated delight. Loper does a dance number with Miss Henie that reveals a hitherto-undisclosed talent of hers. They perform complicated routines to an arrangement of the song, "Romance," by Edgar Leslie and Walter Donaldson.

Miss Henie's various specialty performances lead up to the finale number, when she does a samba on vivid green ice to the tune of "Tico Tico," with an accompanying chorus of boy and girl skaters. Her skating numbers are woven into the plot with justification, by Producer David Lewis, who realizes that audiences always should be sent away unsurfeited. While the posies are being handed out, several to William A. Seiter for his sensitive direction and to Lynn Starling and Elliot Paul for their adult writing of the original screenplay.

Michael O'Shea does his best screen work to date in the featured role of a professional hockey ace who runs afoul of a referee, is barred from the game, persuaded into show business and matrimony by a small-time exhibition skater (Sonja) and then runs afoul of the impressario's uninhibited wife. From there the plot is full of surprises.

Supporting roles are competently handled by Marie McDonald, Bill Johnson, playing his 1st screen role, Gus Schilling, Iris Adrian, Cheryl Walker and Arthur Loft.

And The Walls Came Tumbling

By Joseph McCord

CHAPTER 4

"I don't care for any, thank you."

There was the sound of a chair being moved and Carol returned to the porch. There another shock awaited her. Wige spoke from the gloom and there was a curious restraint in his voice.

"Why didn't you say you were expecting company tonight?"

Carol wished she could see his face. She realized that he believed her headache was an invention and for a second wished she might verify his evident suspicion. Just to see if he could be jealous. It was a temptation. But she couldn't carry it through. It was all too flimsy.

"But I wasn't, Wige," she told him quietly.

"Who is that fellow? Dennison you said?" Lennon lowered his voice cautiously, but the edge of resentment still was plain.

"I don't know," Carol admitted. "I never saw him until this afternoon. He hurt his foot and came into the office for treatment."

"Nobody ever saw him before this morning I don't think," Wige said with a slightly mollified air. "He was in Mr. Higgin's office for more than an hour. They had the door shut. I guess he knows your father."

"I don't believe so," Carol admitted. She suddenly was thankful that she hadn't attempted to lead Wige on. "But of course he may," she added with attempted indifference. "Anyway, it's something to have a mysterious stranger come to town. He's an interesting-looking man, I thought."

"He seemed to interest the boss," Wige said, "and he didn't act like he was trying to sell anything. He wouldn't have lasted that long. I could watch them through the glass partition."

"Could you?"

Carol was wondering in her turn. Why would Mr. Dennison have important business with the bank's president then seem anxious to see Andy as well? Andy didn't have an account with the bank. There was no connection there. She was puzzling that over in her mind when Wige surprised her further. He pulled his chair closer, but it was only because he didn't want his words to carry to a chance listener.

"Don't say I told you anything, Carol, but I got a hint today that there's maybe something doing about a new plant coming here. It might have something to do with the defense business. There are ever so many factories going up around the country."

"Really?" In a flash Carol recalled that Mr. Dennison had been "prowling" around the old canning building. That's what he had said. But that wouldn't explain his call here tonight. For some reason, she felt vaguely uneasy and scarcely heard Wige's despondent conclusion.

"Somebody's pipe dream, I'll bet. But if something like that would happen it might do a lot for this dump. Help the bank some....and maybe us."

"I suppose so." She was thinking too deeply to attach any significance to his last words. If she heard them.

Thereupon Wige departed, mentioning a forgotten errand for his mother.

Carol remained motionless in her chair near the open door. She made no attempt to eavesdrop on the conversation in the dining-room but she could distinguish the voices plainly. Mr. Dennison was doing the greater part of the talking and occasionally his deep tones lifted to a harsh pitch almost as if he were angry. Andy's contributions were gentle by comparison, but Carol fancied she caught the mocking inflection she knew so well. Her uneasiness increased and she found herself feeling thankful when Aunt Cassie returned from a neighborhood call.

"Who's in there?" Mrs. Steel wanted to know.

"Some man."

"Humph. It's a wonder your father wouldn't ask him in the parlor. Now I'll have to go up the front way. I'm tired." The screen door closed with a bang that might have been interpreted as a suggestion. It had that result.

Very soon Carol heard a limping step in the hall. Andy, apparently, was allowing the guest to see himself out. Dennison paused when he saw Carol sitting alone in the moonlight.

"Hello," he said shortly. "You still up?"

"It's too pleasant to go in."

"Very nice." He walked to the top step, paused a second time. "Your doctor is something of a character," he said unexpectedly. "I had him wrong. But you were rather right, after all."

"I was right?" she said in surprise. "About your foot do you mean?"

To her utter amazement, Dennison laughed.

"My foot....with a big exclamation point after it....would be as apt a retort to that as I could manage. But, as a matter of fact, I had that Biblical conjecture of yours in mind. Good night."

Carol scarcely saw Dennison climb into his roadster and drive away from the front gate. She was trying to associate his last remark with anything she had said to him that afternoon in Doctor Silverthorne's office. It had to do with something—"Biblical."

It came to her in a flash: The patient's acrid humor.

He had thought the name of Jericho amusing. It recalled the Good Samaritan. And her own pointless contribution about falling among thieves. That was it! He had looked at her queerly when she said it. Was he trying to tell her that he had? Could he mean—Andy! The uneasiness she had felt during the last hour became a big fear that rose in her throat, made her heart throb.

He couldn't have meant that. He couldn't! Why, Andy had been in Jericho for more than five years, this time. He'd rarely been away overnight. Everybody knew him. Everybody. Or did they? Could all this be something from the days when Andy wasn't in Jericho? Before he came home to stay? "There are ways now and then....with luck." Why should that remark of Andy's at the supper table come tumbling into her mind from nowhere? He always was saying funny things, things he didn't mean. If only that one hadn't followed on the heels of a suggestion that Jed Harper might have fired his own barn for the sake of the insurance. Silly. But she had to reassure herself in some way.

When Carol reached the dining-room door she suddenly realized that the reassurance must come from Andy. He seldom spoke of the past, save for a trivial incident now and then. She could ask him anything relative to the life they had shared together but nothing of other days. This was different. If only he would confide in her. A fierce desire to protect him caught at her heart. He might be in trouble.

To her relief Andy did not appear worried in the least. He had laid out the cards again, was studying them, with his head on one side, cigar stub at a grotesque angle in the corner of his mouth to keep the smoke out of his eyes.

"Has delight come to the old idiot yet?" she asked, striving to adopt the bantering tone she often employed to match her father's puckish talk.

"Well, I've been able to restrain my exuberance at least," he admitted. "Had you met that fellow who was here just now? Thought I heard him call you by name out there." André did not look up.

"Why... yes. He came to see the doctor this afternoon. He had run a nail in his foot. Didn't you notice his limp?"

"Um. He's a bit lame, all right. What was the crack he made when he left? Maybe he's lame in the head, too."

Carol dropped into the chair where Dennison had sat. She rested her chin in her cupped hands and stared at the card layout with assumed interest. Still trying desperately to keep her voice level, indifferent. "I didn't get it," she decided. That much was true. She hadn't, at first. A new dismay gripped her. Andy's hearing was keen. He might repeat Mr. Dennison's words for her benefit. She ventured a question in return hoping to parry the danger.

"You'd met him, too?"

"Never laid eyes on him before."

"Oh...." Carol very nearly betrayed the comfort his words brought her.

"Trying to sell me a....proposition," Andy admitted. "Picked me for a sucker. I let him talk himself out. It's the best way."

"Oh," Carol said again. That might account for Mr. Dennison's call at the bank although the word "sucker" could never apply to the elderly dour president of the Jericho Savings. But it didn't account at all for the impatient gruffness in the visitor's voice. He couldn't be a very successful promoter.

"No luck." With a sweep of his hand Andy scattered the deck. "I'm going to bed, ducklet," and he pushed back his chair.

"Leave the cards there. I think I'll play one game. I don't feel sleepy somehow."

"Is it Wige and that moon?"

"Perhaps it is. I hadn't thought of it."

"Goodnight." Andy rumpled her hair gently as he passed behind her leaving her to stare at the cards. Carol was trying to argue herself into a finding that everything was all right after all, but some vague disquiet persisted.

That feeling would have increased had she been an observer at that conference of two in the dining-room, even though she might not have comprehended its details fully.

Dennison had helped himself to the chair his host indicated with a careless wave of a hand after the suggestion of a drink was dispensed with.

"I'll have a cigarette, if you don't mind. May I offer you one?"

"Don't use them," Andre returned. "But save your match. I'll light this butt again." He sucked it into action as his caller held out a flame. "Thank you, sir. Dennison, is it?"

"That's right. I'm with the Lawhead Corporation. That doesn't surprise you, I dare say."

"I make it a point never to be suprrised at anything," Andre observed gently. "Should I make this an exception?"

"Look here, Delaine. I see you have your cards on the table and all face-up. I'll do the same. So far as I've been able to learn, you have no congressman or other government officials living around here. I'll admit I've no idea where the leak came from. It was to be expected under the circumstances.... the way things have been managed, I mean. There is going to be a change in the program. Take my word for it."

"Isn't that a trifle vague? Considering your mention of cards?"

"I will diagram it if you insist. But I'm aware it isn't necessary. I...."

"Use that plate over there for your ashes. It won't hurt it."

"All right. We're rushing through a plant extension project to handle defense material. It was decided to bring it farther inland than our main works. A tract near here was decided on, too. I trust I'm not boring you with this familiar recitation." Dennison made no attempt to disguise a slight sneer in his voice.

"On the contrary, you interest me."

"Unfortunately, it is being privately built and operated. I say unfortunately because the government will finance and own it. We have to make the initial deals. Apparently you didn't meet our man who has been getting the options together. I'm sorry to say he slipped up....in a way."

"Yes?" Andre commenced gathering his cards in a pile. If there was anything significant in the move Dennison chose to ignore it.

"I was looking over the property today," he resumed. "There's a tract just north of the old canning factory and fronting on the railroad right of way, worthless for farming, scrubby. But it's the only piece that is leven enough for a landing field without spending a lot of time and money. We've got to have that acreage..almost. The old man who owns it was ready to let us have it on reasonable terms. But our option form must have stirred some chords of memory for he trotted out a copy of a prior option. Given a month ago....to you. For one dollar paid in hand and other valuable considerations. I saw it."

"Yes? Apparently all in due form?"

"So far as it goes. I know the answers, but it would be rather interesting to know why you picked up that piece just now.... your version, I mean."

"Why not?" Andre cut the pack and shuffled the halves expertly. "I'm public spirited where Jericho is concerned. We've never had a commercial air field here. I admit toying with the idea."

"Bunk! I don't like to use the word chiseler, but it's the one that comes to mind."

"I'd rather you didn't. You invited yourself here, after all." Andre's blue eyes contracted slightly as they met his caller's with a cold stare. "What angle comes next in your order of business,...legal or patriotic?"

"You're in the clear legally," was the grim admission. "But I hope you are going to be moderate. You may not be aware of it, but the government can institute condemnation proceedings, if you hold out for too big a take."

"But the government would hate to waste all that time just now," Delaine conjectured musingly.

"You think of everything don't you? Well, you're right. This thing has to be pushed along. That's what I'm here for and I'm going to stick around for a time. We may as well get down to cases."

Saturday Market

Price of eggs held firm at 55 cents the dozen for firsts on the local produce market Saturday, with mediums being quoted at 52 and pullets from 45 to 48 cents the dozen.

Fowl seemed quite plentiful with spring chicken bring 40 cents the pound and capons up to 45 cents with individual birds bringing as high as $3 each. Older fowl sold at 35 cents the pound with a few ducks selling from $2.25 to $3 each.

One vendor offered white fish at 35 cents the pound.

McIntosh apples saw good demand with top grade fetching $1 the peck: Delicious brought 75c the 6-quart basket and cooking apples at from 50 to 60 cents the basket. Apple cider sold at $1 the gallon with lesser quantities at comparative prices. Grapes were 65 cents the basket.

On the vegetable market farmers quoted 48 cents the peck as ceiling price for potatoes with other vegetables such as parsnips, carrots and beets bringing 50c the peck. Turnips brought a nickel each and cauliflower sold 10c up to 30 cents. Onions sold at $3.50 the bushel, an increase of $1 over last week.

Quite a number of farmers offered young pigs with from $7 to $8 being the general price asked.

Mixed dry stove wood sawed into short lengths brought $14 the cord.

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 29—(CP)—Apart from an index loss of .24 for the Industrials and a gain of .21 for the Western Oils, stocks showed little change on the Toronto exchange at noon. Trading turned quiet and the volume for the first three hours was down to 859,000 shares.

Brazilian traction sold down to 22½ and was showing a loss of 1¾ at 23 at noon, weakened by the uncertainty of the election campaign in Brazil. Fanny Farmer lost a point. The newsprint issues were strong generally.

In the Golds Giant, East Sullivan, Cochenour Willans, Bear, Eldona, H. Astoria, San Antonio, Cariboo, Campbell Red Lake and O'Brien ruled higher. Noranda, Steep Rock, Golden Manitoba and Pend Oreille were slightly stronger Base Metals.

WALL STREET

New York, Oct. 29 —(AP)— Light selling of steels, rails and motors interrupted the recovery swing of today's stock market. The persistently cloudy labor picture generally received the blame for a mild revival of bearishness.

While dealings slowed on the retreat, losses of fractions to a point predominated near the fourth hour.

On the offside were U. S. Steel, Bethlehem, Chrysler, General Motors, Western Union "A," Sears Roebuck, General Electric, Allied Chemical and Douglas Aircraft.

Canadian Distillers were mixed with Hiram Walker up 1 1-2 and Distillers Seagrams off 1 7-8. Lake Shore slipped 3-8.

Thugs No Match For Groceryman

Toronto, Oct. 29—(CP)—Three youths, one armed with a revolver, were no match for grocer Arthur McGee's flailing fists and lusty lungs in an attempted holdup in suburban York Township Sunday night.

McGee who lives above his store, said he routed the trio in a free-for-all fight, while yelling for aid, when one of the three whipped out a revolver after they had called at his back door and asked if they might purchase a loaf of bread.

"They didn't get my money but I never got the 10 cents for the bread," McGee said with dry humor. "Those punks kicked it all over the place while we fought."

PALACE ALMOST COMPLETED

Tokyo, Oct. 29. (AP)—A vast underground palace to which Imperial headquarters had planned to flee was almost completed by the Japs by the end of the war. It was in Mount Sushiro, 150 miles northeast of Tokyo.

KILLS FAMILY, SELF

A copy photo of George Barbier, released from the army two months ago, who bludgeoned his two children, George Jr., and Thomas, and his wife, Helen, to death in their cheerless tenement home in New York and then killed himself with illuminating gas. Steel Production In Ruhr Valley Being Resumed

By ROSS MUNRO
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Essen, Germany, Oct. 29 (CP) —Steel production in the Ruhr is being resumed on a small scale to provide girders for bridges and buildings in Germany's reconstruction.

It is under rigid British control and only about 100,000 tons a month will be produced at this stage, a negligible amount compared with the 1,500,000 tons a month turned out by the Germans in 1939, and 1,000,000 tons a month produced even at the beginning of 1944.

The future of Germany's steel industry is being discussed, it is understood, by the British cabinet and eventually a monthly quota will be laid down.

The problem of how much steel Germany should be allowed to produce was also discussed at Potsdam in light of the over-all policy of eliminating Germany's war potential. It is believed Britain and the United States wanted producing capacity to be reduced about 40 to 50 per cent, while the Russians wanted to knock it down to 15 per cent of normal.

The recovery, in part at least, of the steel industry here has an important bearing on the coal crisis and is part of the vicious circle of shortages in which the German economy is enmeshed.

To step up Ruhr coal production, food must be brought here and to bring food in bridges must be repaired. Steel is required for these repairs and the steel will have to come from the industries here.

EINSTEIN'S VIEW CLARIFIED

New York, Oct. 29 —(AP)— Professor Albert Einstein said yesterday in a statement aimed at clarifying his views on the atomic bomb published in the Atlantic Monthly Friday that to give away the secret of the atomic bomb "under present anarchic conditions would lead to an accelerated armament race."

SIX U. S. SOLDIERS HURT

Fusan, Korea, Oct. 29 —(AP)— Six United States soldiers were injured and a square mile of army warehouses were set afire when a Japanese ammunition ship exploded Saturday at Fusan, Korea's largest seaport. Officials said the ship exploded by sparks from a small dock fire.

Stage Door Canteen Officially Closed

(By JACK O'BRIAN)

New York, Oct. 29—(AP)— The juke box was playing "Good Night Sweetheart" for the last time at the Stage Door Canteen Sunday night. Junior Hostess Virginia Kaye was just starting a little goodbye speech when a private grabbed the mike and, his eyes brimming with tears, made a speech on behalf of his service buddies.

"Everything in this war has to end, we know, but we'll never forget the Stage Door Canteen," he said.

It was the end of the Stage Door Canteen, most famous of the Second Great War. Since it first opened its doors March 2, 1942, the canteen has become a fabled hangout for every lonely serviceman. It had been chronicled in film and song. Many romances began there. Many lads who danced, had sandwiches and soft drinks and spent a few happy hours there, didn't come back. Approximately 3,250,000 service men of every one of the United Nations had attended the canteen's various entertainments. Almost every big-time entertainer had appeared there.

Teachers' Federation Elects Picton Principal as Pres.

R. L. Perkin, principal of Picton Collegiate, was named as president of the Kingston district branch of the Ontario Secondary School Teachers' Federation when members met at their annual meeting in the auditorium of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational School on Saturday.

Mr. Perkin succeeds T. W. Mayor of Kingston who was retained on the federation executive as past president.

Matters of interest to the school teaching profession were thoroughly discussed at the meeting, including plans for hospitalization, superannuation and cumulative sick leave plans. Other officers elected for the coming year included J. L. Murray of Kingston as vice-president and E. L. Earl, also of Kingston, as secretary-treasurer. Councillors for 1946 are R. P. Perkin and J. L. Murray, while delegates to the provincial organization are the president, vice president, H. A. McQueen of Brockville and Miss Farley of Trenton.

Served Luncheon

Following the morning business meeting members of the Federation numbering approximately 125 convened in St. Andrew's Presbyterian Sunday School parlors, where the Women's Guild served a tasty luncheon.

With the vice president Mr. Perkin acting as chairman for the luncheon meeting Mayor Frank S. Follwell extended the official welcome of the city to the visiting federation members. Importance of the teaching profession was stressed by Mayor Follwell, he stating that school teachers in dealing with children — the nation's greatest asset—had the responsibility of moulding the Nation's progress.

Have Best Wishes

Roscoe Robson, M.L.A. for Hastings East, assured that the teachers' federation had the best wishes of the government for success. He advised that the aims of the federation should be one of long standing policy and pointed out there were always two sides to any argument.

The welcome of the county was extended by Fred J. Wilson, M.L.A. for Hastings West. He paid tribute to the high standards of education in Canada, stating this to be a credit to the teachers. "Next to parents, school teachers have the greatest influence on moulding a child's life," he said.

Mr. Wilson spoke of the value of organizing and advised teachers to go to the Ontario Department of Education with their troubles, where, he assured, they would get a good hearing.

Relations Quite Happy

Acting secretary of the O.S.S.T.F., Steve G. B. Robinson, spoke briefly at the luncheon assuring visiting members of parliament that relations between the teachers' federation and the Department of Education were today happier than they had been for many years.

Membership in the teachers' federation was now automatic, according to Mr. Robinson, who stated there was now a membership of over 22,500, including teachers in elementary schools. Recently the federation had purchased a building in Toronto to be used as a headquarters. The building, when occupied by the federation, will give added accommodation but this was declared to be secondary to the fact that it will be a headquarters for teachers who were invited to use the building while visiting Toronto.

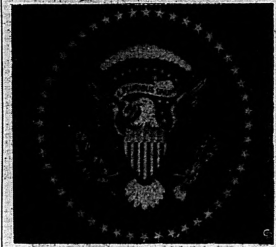
NEW FLAG FOR U. S. PRESIDENT



This is the new flag adopted by U. S. President Harry S. Truman, under terms of an executive order issued Oct. 25. Work on the flag was ordered by the late President Roosevelt. The flag carries the presidential coat of arms, with an eagle looking toward the olive branch of peace, surrounded by 48 stars representing the states of the union.

Deer Season Dates Changed

A change in the open season on deer south of the French and Mattawa rivers was announced Saturday by Deputy Minister D. J. Taylor of the Ontario Game and Fisheries Department.

The dates originally set were for the opening on Nov. 5 on the upper reaches of the Parry Sound district, and Nov. 12, south and east of there. Following complaints that the waterways might be frozen, new dates have been set whereby the season is from Nov. 5 until Nov. 27 south and east of the French and Mattawa rivers, except for the regulated townships and counties of Bruce, Huron and Grey.

TRUCE REPORTED

The fighting began when a hail of bullets peppered a jeep and two truckloads of British personnel en route to a meeting with the Soerabaja chief of police. The meeting had been arranged by a Nationalist resident named Suderman who had pledged full co-operation with occupation authorities only three hours before.

Brig. A. W. F. Mallaby, the Commander of the British 49th Brigade task force, immediately ordered restoration of street barricades.

A few minutes later snipers fired on a sedan car containing five British soldiers. One was killed.

Brig. Mallaby ordered patrols into the streets. They were greeted by small arms fire from surrounding buildings. British headquarters was besieged.

Mortars Are Used

Twice last night mortars were used. While the shells were falling, Suderman telephoned Brig. Mallaby and requested a armistice, offering to stop the shooting if British troops followed suit. Brig. Mallaby said he would be willing to begin talks only if armed Indonesians were off the streets by dawn.

The fighting was reported growing heavier this morning. British troops guarding the hospital and residential areas were under continuous fire.

The Soerabaja trouble arose at a time when well-informed quarters had been predicting informal peace talks between Dutch and Indonesian leaders would begin within 48 hours.

While mystery cloaked plans for the conciliation conferences, there were mounting indications that British and American pressure for a settlement had been felt by both sides.

Set for Neutral Place

The peace talks were reported to be set for a neutral place. However, Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten, Allied Supreme Commander for Southeast Asia, officially denied published rumors that the conference would be held in Singapore with Lord Mountbatten acting as mediator.

Indonesian leaders said the Dutch were flooding the country with millions of Japanese - issued guilders and announced plans to print their own currency "in self defence."

(In Moradabad, India, Jawaharlal Nehru, a leader of India's campaign for freedom, predicted the "people of India will stand by the Indonesian demand for Independence and will give all the help they can." Nehru decried British use of Indian troops against the Indonesians.)

Brazil President Resigns in Surprise Move

Chief Justice Of Supreme Court Assumes Office

Will Direct Country Until General Elections in Dec.

By CHANDLER DIEHL

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 30. (AP)—The Chief Justice of the Supreme Court assumed the presidency of Brazil today under an army mandate to direct the country until the Dec. 2 elections after Getulio Vargas resigned in the midst of tense political situation.

Chief Justice Jose Linhares was inducted officially at a pre-dawn ceremony at the War Ministry. War Minister Pedro Aurelio Goes Monteiro announced he had invited Linhares to serve until the elections were held.

Although the army appeared to be in complete charge of the situation, Goes Monteiro said there had been no military coup as such. He said the army would guarantee the holding of the elections, which he said the Vargas government no longer was capable of realizing.

The news came with shocking suddenness to the people, in the wake of a swift succession of events which began with the appointment of Vargas' brother, Benjamin, as chief of the Federal police. He was regarded as a leader of a movement to keep Vargas in power despite the forthcoming elections.

Goes Monteiro, an advocate of State, Congressional and Presidential elections, resigned as war minister but reconsidered at the request of the army and called for Joao Lins de Barros to resume his office as chief of the Federal police.

An ultimatum was served upon Getulio Vargas to resign.

Tanks were assembled in the streets about the presidential palace. The President's wife and another brother, Viriato Vargas, left the grounds in a presidential car. Troops already had occupied key points in the city as a precautionary measure.

Rip Down Posters

The cabinet was assembled at the presidential palace when first word came late last night Vargas had resigned. Confirmation came shortly after midnight.

In the early morning hours a band of about 1,000 men roamed the streets in the center of the capital, ripping down posters of the Queremistas party, which had been demanding that Vargas cancel the scheduled elections and remain at the helm of the government he headed since 1930.

Vargas has governed Brazilian affairs for 15 years. He seized power in the 1930 revolution in which the leaders included both Goes Monteiro and De Barros. He governed without a Congress until 1934, when he became president and promulgated a new constitution.

In 1937 he proclaimed the "New State," dissolved the Congress and decreed a new constitution giving the greatest authority to the executive branch.

Linhares, on the other hand, is little known and not identified with any particular political group. His assumption of presidential power probably would be a stopgap measure under the terms of the 1937 constitution which decrees that the head of the Supreme Court take over in the event of the president's removal.

It was recalled that the opposition candidate, Gomez, had suggested several months ago that Vargas resign and permit the elections to be held while Linhares was president.

Liquor Rationing Will Likely End Early in 1946

Toronto, Oct. 30 —(CP)— Hon. W. G. Webster, Ontario Liquor Commissioner, said today rationing of liquor and wine in Ontario probably will be wiped out early in 1946.

At the same time the Provincial Liquor Control Board announced increases in the rations of hard liquor and imported wines effective Nov. 1.

The new ration, announced in a statement by Commissioner W. G. Webster, allows permit-holders 2 26-ounce bottles of any type of hard liquor each half-month period, with a proviso that not more than one bottle a month may be imported Scotch whisky.

The present ration of two 26-ounce bottles of imported wine a month is increased to two bottles of still wine and six bottles of sparkling wine each half-month period, in addition to other purchases.

Under the old regulations, permit holders could purchase 26 ozs. of whisky, rye, or rum each half-month or alternately 52 ounces of gin.

Bacon and Cheese Shipments Cut By Dock Strike

London, Oct. 30. (CP Cable)—The United Kingdom's dock strike has sharply reduced unloading of Canadian bacon, it was learned today.

Instead of the 33,000,000 pounds scheduled for October, only 7,000,000 pounds have been shipped due to a shortage of ships as a result of the strike.

Cheese shipments from Canada also have been affected but 87,500,000 pounds of the 125,000,000-pound contract had been shipped to the end of September.

B. C. Coalition Strength Is Increased to 36

Vancouver, Oct. 30 (CP)—Coalition strength in the 48-seat British Columbia Legislature was increased to 36 members yesterday with the election of H. J. Welsh in Comox indicated on the basis of the civilian and registered service votes.

Ten C.C.F. candidates and one Labor candidate were elected on the same basis. The result in the one remaining constituency—Atlin—is still in doubt.

Baby With Heart Outside Chest Wall Fails to Rally After Operation

Montreal, Oct. 30 (CP)—A six-pound baby boy, born here Sunday with his heart outside his chest wall, died early today following an operation.

The child, delivered Sunday to the wife of a merchant marine officer, caused a stir in local medical circles because of the "very rare" phenomenon, known to the medical profession as "ectopic cordis." A second fact which was considered unusual was that the baby survived more than 12 hours.

Medical authorities in St. Mary's Hospital, where the birth occurred Sunday afternoon, announced this morning that an operation was attempted at 2:30 a.m.

An incision was made in the chest, the heart was slipped into place, but the child died shortly after three o'clock "from other complications."

Dr. Wallace J. Lafave, who delivered the baby, said yesterday that baby specialists had been called in on the case, but that the general opinion was that he would not survive.

The baby, immediately after the birth at 2:30 p.m. Sunday was placed in an incubator. Because of the exposed nature of the heart and the necessity for keeping it warm, a continuous warm saline drip was placed over the heart, while oxygen was fed to it continuously.

T.C.A. EXPANSION AND REPATRIATION POLICY DEBATED

Opposition Wants Men Who Did Fighting to Be Brought Home Before Any Others

By D'ARCY O'DONNELL
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 30—(CP)—The army's repatriation plan and the government plans to expand Trans Canada Air Lines came under opposition fire in the Commons yesterday but the government declined to commit itself to any of the proposed changes.

Progressive Conservative members were insistent in their demands that the repatriation plan be changed so that the men who did the fighting would be brought home before those who did not reach the battlefronts.

Defence Minister Abbott was equally insistent that the present repatriation plan was the "fairest and most workable system" that could be devised. He clashed with opposition members on several occasions and denied charges that on the repatriation plan he was hiding behind his overseas army officers.

Shortly before adjournment he said he would submit suggestions for changes in the repatriation plan to his staff, but he could give no promise that changes would be made.

On the T.C.A. bill, John Bracken, Progressive Conservative Leader, said the government's plans to expand the international and domestic services of the Crown-owned company would lead to a giant state monopoly. He gave his party's views on the legislation and on the matter of public ownership.

Toronto Woman Victim of Attack

Toronto, Oct. 30 — (CP) — A young married woman was raped and robbed by two men near the Victoria Park Avenue railway siding in the east end of the city last night. Police threw a cordon around the area but a five - hour search failed to find the attackers.

"It is one of the worst cases we have had in some time," said Inspector of Detectives Arthur Levitt today.

The woman, suffering severe shock, told police the men jumped from a clump of bushes and seized her after she had accompanied her husband, a night-shift worker, to a trolley stop on Danforth Avenue and was on her way back to her home. She said both men criminally assaulted her and that one man put his hand over her mouth to stifle her screams.

The men robbed her of her wedding ring, engagement ring and some money.

After the men fled she walked to a nearby house and called police.

Attlee, King to Visit Pres. Truman, Discuss Atomic Energy Issues

Washington, Oct. 30. (CP) — The White House announced today that Prime Ministers Attlee of Britain and Mackenzie King of Canada will discuss with President Truman early next month the future of atomic energy.

Announcement of the forthcoming visit of the two Prime Ministers was made in a statement timed simultaneously with an announcement by Mr. Attlee to the House of Commons in London.

"Prime Minister Attlee will visit the President in Washington early next month to discuss with him and Prime Minister Mackenzie King of Canada problems to which the discovery of atomic energy has given rise," the White House said.

"The Prime Minister is expected to arrive in Washington so that the discussions can begin about Nov. 11."

Mr. Attlee was in the United States last April as a member of the British delegation to the United Nations Post-War Security Conference at San Francisco. He and President Truman also met at the last "Big Three" meeting in Potsdam

Mr. King saw the President just before his present visit to the United Kingdom where he is conducting informal discussions with members of the British Cabinet and other leaders.

President Truman recently told Congress he soon would initiate discussions looking to renunciation of the atomic bomb. At the same time he called upon Congress to create a commission to control the domestic use and development of atomic energy.

Eben Ayers, Assistant Press Secretary who released the White House announcement, was asked at a news conference later whether Premier Stalin of Russia was invited to the conference. Mr. Ayers said he had no knowledge of such an invitation.

The House of Representatives military committee, meanwhile, pushed along President Truman's proposals for atomic-energy controls by approving legislation creating a nine-man commission to supervise domestic development of the new power.

A Reuters despatch from London stated that "Mr. Attlee, speaking in the House of Commons, said he had invited Sir John Anderson, chairman of the advisody committee on atomic energy to accompany him in an advisory capacity.

"Winston Churchill, former Prime Minister and leader of the opposition, expressed the hope that the talks would not be limited to a particular topic but that they would range over everything which would lead to good relations between Britain and the United States.

The Evening Standard said Mr. Attlee will address Congress during his visit.

"Some sources here believe that President Truman also invited Generalissimo Stalin," the newspaper said.

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP)—Atomic bomb discussions at Washington early next month in which Prime Minister Mackenzie King will participate are expected to relate to general policy rather than to the scientific aspects of the application of atomic energy.

ALLIES SEIZE OPIUM CACHE WORTH 50 MILLION

MacArthur Issues Directive to Stamp Out Japanese Narcotics Industry

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Oct. 30 — (AP)—Allied occupation troops operating under a directive to stamp out the Japanese narcotics industry which supplies approximately 90 per cent of the world's illicit drug traffic, today seized an opium cache worth $50,000,000 at smugglers' prices.

They also located tons of other narcotics worth hundreds of thousands of dollars.

Gen. MacArthur, meanwhile, ordered the arrest of Genki Abe, one of the organizers of the hated Japanese "thought police," and commanded that the confidential files of the 15 largest Zaibatsu (family-controlled industrial monopolies) be reported to him.

In another major action, Gen. MacArthur declined in a personal interview granted Foreign Minister Shigeru Yoshida to modify in the slightest the recent directive diplomatically isolating Japan from the rest of the world.

The big narcotics haul was made in the Nagano district of Central Honshu. The legal price of the lot was estimated at $6,000,000 but it was said four tons of confiscated opium alone would bring $50,000,000 in illicit traffic in the United States.

Must Deliver Officer

Under today's order, the Japanese government was instructed to deliver Abe, who besides his "thought police" activities was Japanese home minister in Premier Kantaro Suzuki's surrender cabinet, to Allied officers for incarceration in Omori prison, where a number of other former war lords are awaiting war criminal trials.

The new Zaibatsu directive ordered the 15 companies to prepare within 45 days from Oct. 22 exhaustive reports disclosing complete financial and production records for the war years 1935 thru 1944; lists of all foreign Nationals who owned any shares in that period; annual lists of major customers and details on capitalization, balance sheets, property holdings, investments, bank deposits, loans and major stockholders.

HEAVY SUPPORT CONTINUES TO BE GIVEN 9TH LOAN

Sales on Monday Were $75,433,750 Up Seven Million From Last Loan

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP) — National subscriptions to Canada's Ninth Victory Loan soared to $574,619,000 with continued heavy support Monday, more than $74,000,000 ahead of the comparative figure for the Eighth Loan drive last Spring, the National War Finance Committee announced today.

Monday's canvassing in the drive for a minimum of $1,500,000,000—Canada's biggest financial effort to date—brought $75,433,750, up $7,000,000 from the corresponding date in the last loan when sales were $67,994,150.

Sales to individuals through cash purchases and the 12-month installment plan continued strong with $293,871,900 subscribed up to and including Monday, compared with $253,432,650 for the same period of the last loan drive. Actual sales to individuals Monday reached $37,001,900, compared with $32,332,000.

Prince Edward County was well in the lead among Ontario's 62 units with 77 per cent of its quota reached. Strung out behind were Norfolk, Welland, North York and Middlesex West and among the large towns and small cities, Niagara Falls, Ont., led with 62 per cent.

Reach 41.4 Per Cent.

Alberta last night reached 41.4 per cent of the general canvass quota of $40,000,000.

Large purchases reported included North American Life Assurance Company, Toronto, $5,000,000; Canadian International Paper Company, Limited, Montreal, and Affiliated Companies, $5,000,000; Dominion Life Assurance Company, Waterloo, Ont., $4,000,000; Dominion Textile Co. Limited, Montreal, and Subsidiary, $3,500,000; Massey Harris Co. Limited, Toronto, $3,000,000; City of Toronto Sinking Fund, Toronto, $2,000,000.

Others were the Montreal Trust Company, Montreal, $1,000,000; Electro-Metallurgical Company of Canada, Limited, Welland, Ont., $600,000.

CHARGED U.S. MEDDLING IN CHINESE AFFAIRS

Tension Increased in Chinese Capital and Observers Watch For Outbreak of Civil War

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Oct. 30 (AP — Charges that the United States is meddling in Chinese internal affairs, today increased the tension in the Chinese capital where political observers already are watching for the possible outbreak of civil war between Nationalist and Communist troops.

Reports from Tientsin said the United States Marine garrison there had been altered after reports spread through North China that the clash between the two armies was impending.

Presence of the estimated 60,000 Marines in North China, and the transfer of Chinese Nationalist troops into that area by the United States Air Forces, were the basis of the protest against American actions which was issued by a Communist spokesman. He charged the United States with "intervening in China's internal politics."

Non-Communist quarters said they feared the Communists might deliberately provoke a clash with the Marines with the intention of embarrassing the United States and central governments and arousing agitation in the United States for immediate withdrawal of American forces from China.

Movements Hampered.

Central government troop movements into the unsettled North China regions were considerably hampered by the reported cutting of 100 miles of the Peiping-Hankow railroad by Communist troops.

The Yenan forces were officially reported to have burned bridges, and stations and to have torn up tracks on the Peiping-Hankow line.

Nationalist troops continued northward along the Peiping-Mukden route, however, reportedly to take "defensive positions" along the Great Wall.

Peiping dispatches which reported the altering of the Marines said minor clashes had been reported outside the city. Tientsin itself was quiet, but beginning to suffer from a food shortage because of the breakdown of supply lines either by Communist troops or roving bandits.

The dispatch said Nationalist troops now were in Tientsin "in force" and had disarmed an estimated 1,500 officers and men of the Third Advance Army and arrested at least 200 irregular officers, including some generals.

DOESN'T KNOW WHAT HAPPENED TO CAUSE FIRE

Haileybury, Ont., Oct. 30—(CP)—Arthur Hacquard, in hospital following fire which killed his 5 children and destroyed his home Saturday night, said last night the explosion of a can of coal oil he was pouring on the stove happened so swiftly that he could not piece together just what happened.

Commission Makes Recommendations To Aid Servicemen

Problem of Re-establishment Primarily Task of Govt.

By DOUGLAS HOW
(Canadian Press Staff Writer

Ottawa, Oct. 30—(CP)—Canada's plans for re-establishment are "too few in number and limited in scope to provide opportunities for more than a very small proportion of her veterans," the Royal Commission on Veterans Qualifications reported yesterday in presenting 82 recommendations to facilitate the serviceman's return to civilian life.

Its 30,000-word report, tabled in the Commons yesterday by Labor Minister Mitchell, maintained that the Federal government should give "all possible encouragement" to the beginnings the provinces have made.

But there was "a general feeling that the problem of re-establishment is primarily the task of the Dominion government", a fact that was "conducive to a general lack of initiative and sense of responsibility on the part of provincial governments."

The Commission hoped the Dominion-Provincial conference "will result in a greater assumption of initiative by the provincial governments."

In its brief general recapitulation, it noted, too, "a lack of definite plans for public works throughout the country."

Wait for Guidance.

"The municipalities seem to be waiting for guidance or assistance from the provincial governments who, in turn, are waiting for an undertaking by the federal government."

The report, ranging over the whole field of re-establishment from the sustenance of radar to aid of the universities in their emergency, emerged from the four-month study of a commission charged with "examining the rehabilitation problems of veterans seeking employment and recommending suitable measures for obtaining proper credit in regard to trades, technical or other educational experience gained while in the forces."

Under Col. Wilfrid Bovey, O.B.E., of Montreal, it sat in 11 cities, heard representatives of education, the trade unions, employers, the services.

Considered one of its most important recommendations was that urging the great need for technical institutes across Canada at a post-secondary school level. They would be "of great assistance to industry in the fields of management and product engineering" and would enable many veterans to complete technical training begun in the forces without too great a lapse of time.

The commission also recommended:

1. That servicemen be furnished with documents for each course of instruction completed.

2. That the government restart an aerial survey of Canada to make use of lessons of aerial photography learned by many servicemen.

Asked to Establish Courses

3. That universities be urged to establish courses in clinical and engineering photography.

4. That facilities be made available by the services to provide as many teaching recruits as possible.

5. That the whole sea service of naval officers of the executive from the Dominion will be on its branch and of ratings of the seaman branch be accepted as qualifying sea time for any department of marine certificate of competency up to a maximum of a year less than that required for the certificate.

6. That the Veterans Affairs Department appoint special counsellors for ex-service personnel wishing to enter the building and construction trades.

7. That the salaries of university and technical school instructors be adjusted so that they will be comparable to sums paid in neighboring areas of the United States.

8. That ex-servicemen attending technical institutes receive the same assistance as if they were attending university.

9. That there be uniformity of policy in enabling service personnel to improve their professional status as teachers.

10. That servicemen "of suitable calibre" be counselled to investigate opportunities in police work.

11. That there be placed in contact with provincial educational authorities, representatives of the three services with a thorough knowledge of services trades training and a general knowledge of other courses given and experience gained in the services.

12. That set examinations be prepared by the Toronto Conservatory of Music and used to determine standards of servicemen's musical knowledge and the credits obtained be generally accepted by educational institutions in which music is either a prerequisite or a credit.

13. That no private operator be invited to carry out link training in the retraining of R.C.A.F. pilots for commercial flying; that the government contribute the whole cost of link training and a share of salary during the remaining period of training. The T.C.A. said 18 months are necessary and that figure may be lengthened to two years. The cost to T.C.A. was $10,281.

14. That governments recognize and state that labor is a full partner of government and employers in rehabilitation with definite rights and definite responsibilities.

15. That all partially-trained tradesmen be advised to complete their training.

16. That a searching inquiry be instituted into the earned income of returned personnel.

Pensions at 60.

17. That reasonably adequate, non-contributory old age pensions be made available at age 60 years to those no longer gainfully employed and that the veterans allowance and dual service pensions be made more adequate.

18. That both out-of-work benefits and unemployment insurance benefits be increased.

19. That vocational training be extended to cover the serviceman who wants to start his own small business and that the training not be charged against his re-establishment credit; that he get low interest rate loans and he get surplus war materials at reasonable prices.

20. That trade standards be made applicable throughout Canada in respect to trades designed under apprenticeship acts.

1,000 Tons Relief Clothing Expected To Be Collected by End of Week

Montreal, Oct. 30—(CP)—The national clothing collection in Canada has gone over the top, it was announced today by William M. Birks of Montreal, National Chairman of the collection, which was sponsored by the Canadian United Allied Relief Fund on behalf of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration.

Reports received at headquarters from the 13 central shipping and baling centres showed that more than 10,000,000 pounds of serviceable used clothing had already been received, the announcement said, and there were indications that the total might reach 14,000,000 pounds before the end of the week.

The first shipload of clothing way to the distressed peoples of Europe within a day or so, as it now is being loaded on the Grafton Park here. Every effort is being made to speed up the process of baling the clothing so that all of it will reach its destination before Christmas.

Mr. Birks today expressed his thanks to the people of Canada for the successful campaign.

Following are the figures of collection from each province: Prince Edward Island 55,023; Nova Scotia 493,831; New Brunswick 348,231; Quebec 1,600,000; Ontario 4,157,663; Manitoba 753,574; Saskatchewan 292,674; Alberta 986,724; British Columbia 1,378,000; Yukon Territory 10,400. Total 10,178,120 pounds.

City and District News

INQUEST ADJOURNED

City police court was of rather short duration Tuesday morning, when the entire proceedings were disposed of within a matter of minutes. Outside of several pleas of guilty with fines and costs paid out of court, no cases were heard in court, those listed being enlarged until a later session of court.

NO CASES HEARD

Preliminary inquest looking into the death of Mrs. Jessie Hamilton, Stirling, who died in Belleville hospital early Monday morning following injuries received when struck by a car in Stirling on Friday afternoon was held at the Belleville Burial Company Funeral Home, Monday evening. Held under Coroner Dr. E. A. Carleton of Stirling, the inquest was adjourned until November 6.

1,200 GALLONS PUT IN GLOSTER METEOR

The tremendous consumption of fuel of the Gloster Meteor, jet-propelled fighter aicraft, which gave a demonstration over Trenton, Belleville and district today is an important phase of the operation of the craft.

A special fuel called Aviation Kerosene is used in the craft, and an idea of the amount used is seen in the special order for 1200 gallons sent to the Belleville office of the Imperial Oil Company, the day previous to arrival of the plane.

The fuel was rushed to the air station, Branch Manager A. D. McLean stated, in plenty of time to refuel the Meteor for its flips here.

Obituary

GEORGE F. TOMPKINS
(Harold)

Stirling, Oct. 30 (Special) — George Franklin Tompkins of Harold, who died suddenly recently was born at Harold sixty seven years ago and was a son of the late Albert Tompkins and his wife Emily R. Graham. All his life was passed in the district where he was born and he was engaged in farming. For some time he was in failing health. He was a member of the United Church at Springbrook.

The deceased never married and is survived by one brother, Mr. Bert Tompkins, Stirling; two sisters, Miss Emma Tompkins and Miss Violet Tompkins, both of Harold.

The funeral was held this afternoon from the Duffin Funeral Home, Stirling, and interment took place in Wellman's Cemetery.

MRS. HANNAH HOLLAND
(Consecon—Coe Hill)

Mrs. Hannah Holland, widow of Samuel Holland, died on Monday afternoon at the home of her son, Mr. Charles Holland at Consecon, Prince Edward County, after an illness of one month's duration.

Born at Millbridge, the late Mrs. Holland was in her 86th. year and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Henry Ruckstuhl. For the past month she was with her son at Consecon, and prior to that time she made her home at Coe Hill for many years. She was a member of the Gospel Tabernacle at Coe Hill.

Surviving her are four sons: Robert of England; William of Eldersley, Sask.; Harry of Coe Hill, and Charles of Consecon; one sister, Mrs. William Hubble, Trenton; four half brothers, Albert Ruckstuhl, Carrying Place; Herbert Ruckstuhl, Hamilton; Frank Ruckstuhl, Trenton, and Charles Ruckstuhl, Coe Hill. A half sister, Mrs. Thomas Peacock, Corbyville, died two years ago.

Resting at the Martin Funeral Home, Church Street, until Wednesday morning; the funeral announcement is made in this issue.

Need for Ditty Bags Is Still Great

Although the war is over, men of the Royal Canadian Navy and the Merchant Marine are patrolling the high seas. A great number of them will spend Christmas at sea or in foreign ports.

The need for ditty bags, which brought a tremendous amount of comfort to the boys in blue during the war, is still great. The St. Julien Chapter I.O.D.E. is still carrying on its work in this respect and will need a large number of ditty bags for distribution to the men of the sea.

The bags may be secured from Mr. Stewart, Tip Top Tailors, or from the chapter regent, Mrs. Emily Neate, by phoning 1475M. Get yours and fill it so it can be handed in by Nov. 15. The sailor boys will appreciate them.

CARTOON AMUSES KRAMER

Lueneburg, Germany, Oct. 30 (AP)—The "Beast of Belsen," Josef Kramer, laughed long and loud today when someone gave him a cartoon from the London Sunday Express showing him with a long white beard being wheeled away from "ye olde Lueneburg trials" in 1995.

The war crimes trial against Kramer, the commandant, and 44 guards of the Belsen concentration camp now is in its seventh week. The British military court is a month behind schedule.

St. Thomas Church Parish Bids Farewell to Rector, Wife At Function in Parish Hall

Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne Presented With Sum of Money While Mrs. Payne Receives Beautiful Gifts From Organizations of the Church

Heartfelt expressions of regret at the severance of closely knit friendships and years of happy association were heard in the Parish Hall of St. Thomas Church Monday night when the congregation assembled to bid official farewell to the Rev. A. Beauchamp Payne and Mrs. Payne who leave for their new home in Kingston in the near future. Mr. Payne was recently appointed to the new office of Diocesan Commissioner for the Diocese of Ontario.

There was present the pleasant camaraderie and happy fellowship that has characterized the informal meetings of the rector, his wife and the congregation albeit was tinged with a note of sadness at the forthcoming parting of the ways.

An intangible tribute was seen in the large number of the congregation and members of other parishes who were present at the function, while material tokens of affection and esteem were seen in a number of handsome gifts presented to the guests of honor.

Many Gifts Presented

Mr. Robert Pringle, people's warden in an eloquent yet brief address voiced the regrets of the congregation of St. Thomas at the ending of many years of association. Following the address he presented Mr. Payne on behalf of the congregation with the sum of $425 and to Mrs. Payne a box of beautiful roses. Later, speaking for the group of the Women's Guild headed by Mrs. Lyall, he presented Mrs. Payne with a pretty bag filled with silk stockings, and a pink negligee.

The Women's Guild Group, supervised by Mrs. Payne and represented by Mrs. Patterson, then presented Mrs. Payne with a handsome pink Kenwood blanket. The Woman's Auxiliary, represented by Mrs. Tilley, gave the rector's wife a pair of suede gloves and two silver bangle bracelets.

A further gift to the rector was a handsome black leather wallet, presented to him by Professor E. Wheatley, church organist and music director on behalf of the choir.

Mr. Payne eloquently expressed his appreciation of the many gifts to himself and Mrs. Payne and voiced his personal regrets and those of his family at the severance of happy relations with their many friends in the congregation and the city. He paid especial tribute to the church organizations referring to the work of the choir as being that of "special dignity and Christian endeavor that made the services of St. Thomas outstanding in the city."

Following the addresses and presentations, refreshments were served in the Parish House basement by members of the various women's organizations.

Mr. and Mrs. Payne expect to leave for their new home sometime in mid-November.

Rflmn. D. Vanclief On Way Home From Jap Prison

It was a happy silver wedding anniversary for Mr. and Mrs. Frank Vanclief of Consecon when on Saturday they received a telegram from their son Rifleman Donald Vanclief, informing them that he had arrived back in Canada after more than four years as prisoner of war in Japan.

Rifleman Vanclief was taken prisoner of war following the fall of Hong Kong and remained in Japanese concentration camps until they were liberated after the capitulation of the Japanese. During his long internment Mr. and Mrs. Vanclief had only two or 3 brief messages from their son. He had previously been reported as safe when the Allies took over Japanese prison camps.

"Arrived at Gordon Head Camp, Victoria, B.C.," the telegram to Mr. and Mrs. Vanclief read, "Feeling fine, home soon, love to all."

Kinsmen Pack Candies for Kiddies

In preparation for the forthcoming Kinsmen "Shell Out" party at the Armouries and at the Y.M.C.A., members of the local Kinsmen Club acted as candy packers following their regular dinner meeting at the Quinte Hotel Monday evening. Kinsmen will have approximately 2,000 pounds of candy in readiness for handing out to city kiddies on Hallowe'en night.

With preparations for the "Shell Out" program taking up most of the business portion of the meeting members heard no guest speaker but enjoyed movie shots taken by two of their members. Dr. Earl MacDonald and Dr. Russell Scott. Kin Earl's pictures were taken at the Kinsmen children's party at Stoco Lake early in September, while the other pictures were taken by Dr. Scott while he was serving overseas.

As an added bit of entertainment the North American Yo-Yo champion put on an exhibition as to the proper manner in which to handle the toy which gained great popularity several years ago.

Observe Feast Of Christ the King At St. Michael's

The Feast of Christ-the-King was celebrated in the Church of St. Michael the Archangel on Sunday Oct. 28th.

This festival, instituted by the late Pope Pius XI, places special emphasis on the sovereign right of Christ over the hearts of men and of nations and it was introduced previous to the recent war, attempting to bring to mind the responsibilities of individuals and governments towards the authority of God.

At 10:30 a.m. the pastor, Monsignor Nicholson, celebrated a Solemn High Mass in St. Michael's. He was assisted by Rev. C. E. Baker as deacon and Rev. A. L. O'Donnell as subdeacon.

The Mass of "St. John the Baptist," under the direction of Miss Dorothy Grant, was sung by the senior choir.

Rev. A. L. O'Donnell preached the sermon, proper to the feast.

At the conclusion of the Mass the Blessed Sacrament remained exposed on the altar, which was beautifully adorned.

At 7:30 p.m. the Holy Hour took place. A procession of the Blessed Sacrament was held, about the church, in which the Altar Boys, the Holy Name Society, the 4th Degree Knights of Columbus, the Children of Mary and Holy Angels Sodality were represented. Monsignor Nicholson was assisted by Rev. C. E. Baker and Rev. A. L. O'Donnell.

The choir of St. Michael's Academy rendered beautiful hymns throughout the service.

'Jeff' Marvell, Branch Mgr. Shell Oil Company, Honored By Dealers at Meeting Here

Moving to Windsor and Presented With Gold Wrist Watch

Shell oil service station operators and lessees in the Belleville district combined three occasions into one meeting Monday evening when at the Belleville Golf Club they expressed in a tangible way their appreciation to "Jeff" Marvell, their branch manager: heard ranking executives of their company express views on the future of the firm, and decided to hold semi-annual dealer meetings in the city.

"Jeff" Marvell, genial branch manager for Belleville district will shortly be moved to Windsor, and at last night's meeting dealers and lessees from the district presented him with a gold wrist watch. J. B. Newell, local Shell salesman, made the presentation on behalf of the dealers with "Jeff" in his customary charming manner expressing his appreciation for the gift.

The meeting represented the first attempt on the part of district Shell dealers to have a social gathering and as an outgrowth it was unanimously decided by those present to have a semi-annual get-together of dealers and lessees. The meeting was arranged by Messrs. Norm Garbutt and Clarence Gibson, local Shell service station operators, and was attended by about fifty, including company representatives from "home" office in Toronto.

Dependent on Future of Canada

General Sales manager for Canada, W. F. Mitchell, assured local dealers that the future of the Shell Oil Company was dependent upon the future of Canada. The economic security of Canada was dependent upon exports, he stated. For this reason it was necessary that European nations be lent financial assistance with which to purchase Canadian products.

Turning to company prospects Mr. Mitchell foresaw gradually increasing gasoline and petroleum products sales until 1951 when it was expected smaller internal combustion engines would require gasoline of a higher octane rating. After ten years it was expected turbo engines similar to those used in jet propelled aircraft would be adopted as motive power for automobiles. The next ten years would be the best period ever to be enjoyed by the company, it was prophesied.

Courtesy Most Important

Divisional manager for the Toronto district, J. A. Carruthers advised dealers that courtesy to the customer was one of the most important aspects of service station operation. In the future competition would be keen and a man would have to be "good" to stay in business.

Other company officials to attend the meeting included divisional service station manager C. A. Dixon of Toronto and R. M. Elmer, divisional manager for Ottawa district.

Norm Garbutt acted as chairman for the evening's program which included dinner, community singing led by "Jeff" Marvell, and several solo numbers by Harold Barrett. Phil Huddleston acted as pianist for the evening.

Coroner's Jury Finds Man's Death Is Accidental

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury at Tweed Monday afternoon at an adjourned inquest looking into the death of Thomas Henry Slush, Tweed, who was drowned October 17th when the car in which he was passenger turned over into the ditch on the Tweed - Stoco road.

In their verdict the jury made no comment regarding the condition of the road, while no blame was attached to Allan H. Wilson, Corbyville, driver of the car. The inquest was held under Coroner Dr. M. Dales of Tweed with Assistant Crown Attorney Gordon Robertson acting for the Crown. Seven witnesses were called, including the driver of the car, H. W. Wilson of Belleville, a passenger, Provincial Constable Harry Caldwell and Felix LeSage, garage operator at Tweed.

Evidence brought out at the inquest showed that Allan H. Wilson had taken Thomas Slush and H. W. Wilson to Stoco to visit relatives. On their way back to Tweed the right front wheel of the car had dropped off the travelled portion of the road pulling the vehicle into the ditch where it overturned into three feet of water.

Driver of the car and the other passenger managed to escape from the overturned auto but Mr. Slush's head and shoulders were wedged in and he could not be extricated. Medical evidence given indicated he had died of drowning.

Jury empanelled by County Constable Thomas Thorn of Belleville included G. Morton, Arthur McCarey, Ed. Jones, Chas. Kerr (foreman) and Charles Porritt.

Meteor Plane Gives Demonstration Flight Over City During Morning

An air-breathing mechanized dragon of the air travelling at the incredible speed of 543 miles per hour split the skies over the Trenton Air Station and surrounding district today.

The aerial meteor is well named, it is the Gloster Meteor fighter, the first jet-propelled aircraft to visit Canada which was piloted by Squadron Leader Everett (Shan) Baudoux, D.S.O., D. F. C., a veteran of the Battle of Britain and a former Liberator and fighter pilot.

With nearly two thousand station personnel looking on from all points of vantage, the khaki-colored air comet took off, pointed her nose to the sky and climbed to two thousand feet almost "in a breath." Etched against the blue of the October sky, the aircraft barrel-rolled "peeled off" flew upside down and roared earthwards in almost perpendicular dives.

Like Watching Tennis Match

Levelling off the machine, Squadron Leader Baudoux ripped through the air at one-hundred-foot level at a speed of well over 500 miles per hour. As one spectator remarked it was like "watching a tennis match."

There is a terrific roar as the machine hurtles through the air but the speed is so terrific that the sound of the engines appears to come from a distance hundreds of feet to the rear of the machine.

The Gloster again plunged earthward in a spectacular dive, levelled off and "whooshed" over the tarmac, waggling his wings in a signal that he was leaving on a tour of the district.

He arrived over Belleville about 10.30 flew over the city in a brief demonstration of flying and speed. The craft was travelling so fast that many residents of the city were unable to see it.

After its flight over the city, the Meteor left for Frankford and Trenton. It will give demonstrations over Toronto on Thursday.

Air Speed Flecks Off Paint

The sleek, torpedo-shaped aircraft, specks of paint on her "nose" literally blown off by terrific air speed, is a veteran of the wars and has several enemy buzz bombs to her credit.

"She is the M 3 type," S-L Baudoux smiled, "We now have the M 4 perfected and soon this craft may be a trifle obsolete."

Her twin turbine engines mounted on the wings burn 280 gallons of aviation kerosene an hour. The atomizer spray is so fine that it is invisible. There is no sign of smoke or flame by day or night when the Meteor ships through the air at a speed approaching that of sound.

On each side of her torpedo-shaped nose can be mounted two 20-millimetre cannon. Directly on her nose can be installed high-speed cameras. It is a single-seater job.

Riding the airways at a speed of over 500 miles an hour doesn't affect one, the pilot said. "You ride along as easily as though you were in an automobile travelling at 60 miles per hour. But one must be careful when manoeuvring up there. Sharp banks and flips at a tremendous speed are liable to be a bit uncomfortable."

33 Feet Wing Span

The jet fighter has a wing span of 33 feet and its fuselage measures 41 feet. It has a high tail assembly and its long narrow "body" in its khaki and grey color resembles that of a huge beetle.

It uses a special mixture of kerosene and one per cent oil. Its engines use a pint of oil in an hour's flight, used for lubrication purposes only. Two sparkplugs in each engine are used for take-off purposes. They automatically shut off when the aircraft attains a certain speed. The jets need approximately the same size runways as propeller planes for taking off and landing.

Squadron Leader Baudoux predicted that within a few years jet planes will outdistance the speed of sound (760 miles per hour) and travel much, very much faster.

Stronger Engines Ready

He stated that Britain has the engines necessary to send aircraft shooting through the skies faster than sound, and the type of plane necessary for it is in the immediate future. A plane travelling at the hitherto unheard of speed of sound at sea level or at 610 miles per hour at an altitude of 36,000 feet tends to go out of control. Vibrations or shock waves which the plane creates, instead of travelling before the aircraft when flying at a speed slightly slower than sound pile up and stick to it.

"To overcome this," he said, "planes must travel at 850 miles per hour and then it will be safe. That speed will be within reach in a few years." He predicted, however, that commercial aviation will not be using jet-propelled aircraft for some years.

Accompanying Squadron Leader Baudoux is a service crew of nine experienced mechanics, all sergeants and staff sergeants of the R.C.A.F. Three of the men took intensive courses at a Rolls-Royce school over a period of fourteen months. The ground crew travels in a large Dakota Transport.

PICTON

County Leading Ontario Districts In Percentage

Picton, Oct. 30 — Prince Edward County continues to lead all Ontario districts in percentage of general canvass quota attained in the 9th Victory Loan with returns of $1,090,000 yesterday, this rural area had reached 76.6 per cent of its quota. Picton was the first county district to reach its objective, securing $6,000 over its $650,000 mark.

In this loan, the Town was asked to subscribe $200,000 more than in the 8th Loan. Three salesmen have exceeded their quotas: J. P. Williams, Donald Thompson and Lyle Branscombe.

STIRLING

Rural Deanery Laymen Hold Annual Banquet

Stirling, Oct. 30—St. John's Parish Hall was well filled on Wednesday evening last when the laymen of Hastings Deanery Association held their annual banquet.

Following the serving of the banquet and toast to the King, the address of welcome was given by the Rector, Rev. C. C. Brazill and Glen Morrow, President of St. John's. Mr. J. F. Baker of Bonarlaw was chairman.

The Bishop proposed the toast to the Church and Clergy, reminding those present of the days ahead although holding out great hope because he was confident that the Laymen would respond to the challenge of the times. Mr. C. Buskard of Deloro replied.

Mr. F. Houchin favored the gathering with a piano solo.

The guest speaker, Major Rev. F. A. Smith of St. George's, Trenton, in speaking to the laymen said the latent power that is highest in the lives of the laymen of any generation was sacrifice. If they will only recognize it and step out and use it in the work of the church and in the lives of others.

He spoke of the five dams on the Trent River between Trenton and Stirling and likened them to the five great powers necessary in the lives of men 1—Character; 2—Service; 3—Power; 4—Edification and 5—Fellowship.

Using a war illustration Major Smith told of he and two other chaplain's looking for the grave of the wife of one of the early explorers who had died near Spitzbergen. They were walking along the seashore and met some soldiers. They inquired if they had seen the cross to which one soldiers answered, Yes, on the high land. One chaplain turned to the others and said "Did you head what that man said "that the cross was on high land." Upon finding the cross they remarked that it was the loneliest spot they had ever been in. If people keep on the high road, which demands sacrifice they will always see the cross."

Rev. A. B. Payne Speaks

Following a sing song with Mr. F. Houchin at the piano, the Diocesan commissioner, Rev. A. B. Payne, spoke asking the Laymen for re-dedication to the church and to the Laymen's Association. Mr. Simpson of Christ Church, Belleville, brought the greetings of the Diocesan Laymen's committee, representing Brig. General Anderson, Chairman of the Diocesan Laymen's Association. The business portion of the meeting was followed by the election of officers: President, Mr. H. B. Smith, Trenton; Vice President, Mr. G. Morrow, Stirling and Secretary, Mr. C. R. Whittmore. Benediction was given by Rural Dean Robinson of Tweed.

NEED FIVE YEARS

Buffalo, Oct. 30 — (AP) —British newspapers will require at least another five years to return to a normal, pre-war basis, said Richard P. Winfrey, publisher of 13 daily and weekly British newspapers, here yesterday. Talking of newsprint, he said "We shall have to wait until more important items such as clothing, food and war materials are purchased with our dollars."

IN MEMORIAM

TURNER — In memory of Harriett Ann Turner, wife of Walter Turner, who died October 30th., 1944.

Somewhere beyond the shadows
Dwells a dear sweet mother of mine.
Whom we looked on as a treasure,
Whom we cherished as divine.
But God called the one we loved away.
Forget you, dear mum, no, we never will,
As the years roll on we miss you still.
The blow was great, the shock severe,
We little thought the end was near.

It is only those who have lost can tell
The sorrow of parting without farewell—
But God is good, He gave us strength
To bear our little cross.
He is the only one who knows
How bitter is our loss.

—Ever remembered by Husband and Family.

Major E. Watts Awarded E.D.

Major Edwin Watts, Deputy Assistant Provost Marshal for Military District No. 3 at Army Headquarters, and well known both in Kingston and Napanee, has been awarded the Canadian Efficiency Decoration. A member of the Reserve Army, serving with the 4th Hussars and the Frontenac Regiment for 19 years, Major Watts enlisted with the Canadian Active Army early in 1940. He was stationed at Petewawa for over a year, and in Ottawa for 9 months before assuming his present duties in Kingston.

Formerly on the staff of the Kingston Penitentiary, and Chief Constable for Napanee for 11 years previous to enlistment, Major Watts is a sports enthusiast, and was instrumental in forming various boys' softball and hockey teams in Napanee. He is a member of the Chief Constables Association of Canada, and a past executive member of this organization for the Province of Ontario. Fruit Yields Are Considerably Less Than in '44

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP) — The Ontario Department of Agriculture said Monday provincial fruit yields this year, with the exception of grapes, will be considerably less than 1944. Only an average vegetable crop is expected, the monthly report added.

Eastern Ontario is experiencing one of its lightest apple crops on record. With harvesting practically completed, only 58,000 barrels have been picked—17 per cent of last year's yield. Although October predictions for Western Ontario were slightly better than September figures, a total of 131,430 barrels, more than a 75-per-cent decrease from the 1944 harvest, was anticipated.

Early frost caused considerable damage in some Eastern Ontario grape areas, but farmer reported a 40-per-cent increase over 1944 and Western Ontario growers estimated total yields at approximat[illegible] 31,443 tons—2,800 tons mo[illegible]n last year.

[illegible] port set the peach yield at [illegible]0 barrels, a 29-per-cent decrease from last year's total although increased harvests were reported from Norfolk and Elgin Counties. Plums, prunes and pears were also reported in short supply at a general reduction of approximately 70 per cent in yield.

All main vegetable crops in the western part of the Province showed a decrease over last year's harvest, apart from late cabbage, carrots, head lettuce, spinach and table turnips. The late potato crop was reported "considerably less" than 1944 yield, and frost destroyed unharvested tomatoes, beans and cucumber, except in parts of Niagara district.

Tender crops were also ruined by frost in some eastern sections where a poor potato harvest was experienced due to blight damage and rain.

Last Two Shots Fired into Body

Lorain, O., Oct. 30 (AP)—Gordon E. Wellman today pleaded innocent of first degree murder in the death of Mrs. Helen Duffield, 24, wife of a sailor in the Pacific, at arraignment in municipal court here.

An ex-convict, Wellman was bound over to a Lorain County grand jury called into special session for next Wednesday.

The 23-year-old steelworker, arrested in Columbus, O., Saturday, told police he shot and killed Mrs. Helen Duffield Wednesday but maintained the first two bullets were fired "accidentally."

However, police reported Wellman confessed firing two more bullets into her body when he found she was not dead.

Smith said Wellman confessed he had intended to steal "any car available" to take another Lorain woman to George and force her to marry him.

Police reported the steelworker gave this version of the shooting:

Wellman, waiting to take Mrs. Duffield's car, told her to "move over" and grabbed her keys. In an ensuing scuffle, his gun was discharged twice accidentally and the bullets struck the woman.

Wellman drove to a country road and dumped her in a ditch. Hearing Mrs. Duffield moan, he straddled the ditch to avoid "getting muddy" and fired two more bullets into her body.

Headless Rooster Gains Pound In 49 Days

Fruita, Colo., Oct. 30. (AP)—Mike, five-months-old white Wyandotte cockerel, has gained a pound since its head was cut off 49 days ago.

L. A. Olson of Fruita, Mike's owner, said the chicken weighed 3 1-2 pounds the morning of Sept. 10, when it was beheaded, and now tips the scale at 4 1-2 pounds. The cockerel is at Long Beach, Calif., where it is being exhibited.

Scientists who examined the bird said the reason for its existence, despite the loss of its head, was that the basal portion of the brain remained connected to the spinal cord,. and the throat and windpipe were left intact according to Olson.

However, when another chicken was beheaded in the same manner for experimental purposes it died almost immediately he said.

Mike is fed small amounts of food several times daily. He is given liquids with an eye-dropper and corn is dropped into his open throat. Mike's toenails are kept taped to prevent it from scratching or injuring its neck, where the axe wound is healed over.

Mikes moves about, flaps his wings when prodded and sometimes attempts to crow.

HALIFAX GRAIN ELEVATOR FILLED

Halifax, Oct. 30 — (CP)—The grain elevator at Halifax an all-winter port, is filled to its capacity of 2,000,000 bushels and loading of grain supplies for Britain can begin as soon as ships are available, Ralph W. Hendry, port manager for the National Harbors Board, said last night.

Prompt Action Saves Family From Flames

Collingwood, Oct. 30 (CP) — Prompt action and perfect team work on the part of Burnfield (Bun) Murray, returned Collingwood war veteran, and his wife, Jessie, saved the lives of their three small children when fire trapped the family in the upstairs of their home here Sunday morning.

The Murrays were just getting up when a call of "the place is on fire" came from a member of another family who occupy the ground floor of the house. Already smoke was pouring up the stairs and, without waiting to investigate, Murray gathered his wife and three children at the front window, issued hurried instructions and jumped 15 feet to the sidewalk.

"Are you all set?" asked Mrs. Murray. When he replied "okay" she dropped the three children, one at a time, into the arms of her husband.

Tongues of fire were reaching the top of the stairs when Mrs. Murray, clad only in a pink slip, lowered herself to safety.

The fire started from a kitchen stove, spread to the staircase and had cut off any chance of escape by that passage when the alarm was given. The family of Roland Brennan downstairs had no trouble in getting out safely.

Firemen quickly extinguished the blaze and the greater part of the house was saved.

"We worked the old pitcher-to-catcher combination," Murray said. "My wife dropped the children in order of age, the youngest getting priority."

N. Y. State Chamber Of Commerce Opposes St. Lawrence Project

New York, Oct. 29 — (CP) — The executive committee of the New York State Chamber of Commerce yesterday made public a report urging Congress to defeat the proposed construction of the St. Lawrence Waterway and Power Project.

The Chamber of Commerce contended in its report that the proposed undertaking would be injurious to railroads, shipping, coal mining, public utility and other privately-owned enterprises in the United States.

The report will be presented at the Chamber's monthly meeting Thursday.

YOUTH TAKEN TO LINDSAY

Galt, Oct. 30 —(CP)— Police said Arthur Wildfong, 16, of Peterborough, Ont., was taken to Lindsay to face a charge of automobile theft after being arrested here during the weekend in a car allegedly stolen from a Lindsay garage. The arrest was made when they investigated a car driving without lights, officers said.

FALL 1¢ SALE

ONE CENT SALE

WINTER 1¢ SALE

AT THE Rexall DRUG STORE

In Drugs, If It's REXALL - - - It's Right

There's a world of meaning in that simple statement, and no quicker way to tell you of the rigid scientific control that insures the quality and safety of every REXALL PRODUCT. That control begins and ends in the ultra-modern, expertly staffed Rexall Laboratory, where every step of manufacture is carefully supervised to insure absolute conformity to Rexall standards of purity and quality.

To get acquainted with the quality of Rexall products stop in during our sale and buy any one of the products listed at the advertised price and receive another one just like it for ONE CENT. It's your chance to know Rexall and save money!

The Reason for This Money-Saving Opportunity

29 years ago, a young Canadian druggist who believed that the actual use of a product offered the most convincing proof of its merits, suggested to the United-Rexall Drug Company Limited, the Home Office of Rexall, that they inaugurate the REXALL 1¢ SALE. Since that time, this sale has been offered twice a year to REXALL Stores throughout Canada.

Through this sale, money ordinarily spent in press and radio advertising is used to your direct advantage. For the price of one, plus one cent, you get two regular, full size packages of high quality REXALL Merchandise and YOU save money — WE gain friends.

Concern for People of Europe

Foreign Secretary Bevin made a startling statement in the British Commons the other day when he warned of the hunger and privation on the Continent of Europe that might cause such a loss of life that it would be "more devastating than the gun or the atomic bomb." It was made clear that the situation rightly caused concern not only for the people who were directly involved but for the rest of the world since "you cannot limit the devastation of an epidemic by a frontier or a strategic port."

The Foreign Secretary warned of "the danger of a terrible epidemic" in Continental Europe and declared that exporting countries must make a greater contribution to the food problems of Europe.

He pointed to the fact that fourteen to fifteen million persons were moving at once in Eastern Europe and ten million of these were displaced persons, labor slaves and prisoners of war and that "no one knows how many Germans have gone to work in Germany."

Mr. Bevin charged that Hitler was to blame for the conditions in which the Continent was found to be. Hitler's aim had been to leave Europe in a state of complete anarchy when he discovered that he could not win the war. Britain and the other Allies had to redevise a system which would take the place of government in a country that had no organization at all.

Mr. Bevin said to avoid disaster this year demands for wheat made by the British and American zone commanders in Germany must be met "but it must come from the territory where the wheat is—there is no other way," and added that the only way to feed Europe properly was for the surplus areas in the east and centre of the Continent to feed the industrial areas. Then Mr. Bevin expressed his hope, "I hope and long for the day when all nations will put their trust in a world organization because I don't think frontiers and spheres of influence are as important as they used to be."

A similar message of the gravity of the situation in Europe was brought to Canada by George Spooney of the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration. His view was that only a miracle could prevent a human tragedy in Europe this winter unparelleled in our time, "unless the flow of supplies to the war-stricken peoples can be maintained and in some countries increased." Millions are homeless and existing in holes dug in the ruins of these ruined cities and towns. Hundreds of thousands are trekking the roads looking for a place to live. Everything is needed, food, medical supplies, clothing, footwear. These are needed now and "January and February will be too late."

Enjoyable and Sane Hallowe'en

Another Hallowe'en is at hand with its wealth of tradition and folklore offering endless opportunity for festivity, hilarity and mirth. Hallowe'en gives the rein to fancy and imagination in preparation for the evening, for masquerading, for refreshment for young masked visitors, and for parties. Spontaneously everyone would turn celebrant and join the hilarious parade that fills the evening and night of Oct. 31st with pleasures.

The world has gone on so long that Hallowe'en, though it lacks much of the manner of festivity of the past, will linger on seemingly for ages, for it is a festive occasion which is suited not only to the season but to every individual. Its celebrations can be joined in by everyone, young, mature and old. Hallowe'en being a growth of centuries and with a rich tradition of customs of other ages goes on in this world even in the age that has split the atom and released and can control atomic energy.

Hallowe'en is a popular development of traditions and fits the universal sense of play, fancy, and admirable fooling. Every child takes to celebration with alacrity and by inclination. It is a mental food for young and old, it releases pent up abilities of everyone and is the touchstone of pleasures of all sorts and delights every age. It pleases the mind and the eye. Tradition made no mistake in developing such a fete and the modern world has wisely preserved many of its oddities and quaintnesses into which everyone fits with ease.

Something of the lightheartedness of the evening of the last day of October had a serious foundation in ages long ago. Much could happen in that age of romance when so much was unknown. Wednesday night accordingly has a fine lineage of early beliefs, of endless legends of strange happenings. It is the eve of All Saints' Day and spirits were supposed in early days to move about. In time harmless revels by the fireside marked the anniversary of this festival.

With so much pleasure to be enjoyed, it is to be regretted that sometimes some few persons see in wreckage something to make sport of. Fortunately very few see any sport in doing wanton damage to property or playing a trick that might cause injury or loss or damage. Where there is damage it is often the case that the sufferer is one who can ill afford loss. Authorities everywhere and the people at large enjoy the time and want to see everyone enjoying it—but without destructiveness. There is so much fun to be had that is much more exhilarating than doing damage that it seems strange that anyone can take delight in smashing property. To cause damage wantonly is both wrong and criminal and can only be the result of a perverted mind.

It is to be hoped and it is expected that the occasion will be celebrated in a sane and good-natured spirit with indulgence in all sort of harmless revels but without a touch of the spirit that would spoil and destroy the time for others by causing pain or loss or damage. Hallowe'en is for everyone and it is the gift of tradition to the modern world which everyone has inherited and has the right and privilege to enjoy. Vandalism and destructiveness have no place and will not be condoned.

At this time particularly of shortage of materials and of labor to replace or repair damage wanton destructiveness is unthinkable.

Can It Be Conscience?

"Why, we wonder, would a tough Nazi like Robert Ley commit suicide in such a fearful manner as described in newspaper despatches?" the Ottawa Journal asks and goes on to say:

"Slow self-suffocation and strangulation such as Ley forced on himself is a much more dreadful death than to fall before the bullets of a firing-squad or a quick drop at the end of a hangman's noose.

"Can it conscience? When men such as Ley read the awful indictments against them, do they re-live the days when they rode heedless and all-powerful down the road of cruelty and mass-murder? Do they in the long and wakeful nights, think of the innocent thousands they have sent to death in the hell-camps of the Reich?

"This indeed may be the answer. Overwhelmed with remorse, certain of their guilt on the charges facing them and of their fate before the courts, they will take any way—however horrible—out of a world their minds can no longer endure."

Wallboard From Sawdust

Wood waste in the shape of sawdust, shavings and chips are to be converted into wallboard by a simple, quick and cheap method recently discovered, according to Business Week Magazine. Experiments show that a ton of sawdust will yield 2,000 square feet of board, using equipment so low in cost that most sawmills and woodworking plants will be able to realize dividends from hitherto worthless materials. Present manufacture of hard wallboard involves reducing whole logs to fibres before processing, a method requiring a large capital outlay for equipment.

LETTER

Beloved, still our lives go on,
And much is as before,
Except the joy of things is gone
Past power to restore.
We laugh as you would have us do;
We meet at time for tea,
But so much braver, missing you,
Day long we now must be.

Beloved, as the weeks go by,
The old ways we resume,
But often now I find that I
Am odd man in the room.
The table, best with six or eight,
Is set for seven or nine,
And always extra chair and plate
Which crowd the board are mine.

Beloved, though we both had known
For this to be prepared,
I cannot do as well alone
The tasks we've always shared.
But birthdays come and feast days, too,
And these we'll surely try
To keep the way we used to do
Through all the years gone by.

LOOKING BACKWARDS

GLEANINGS FROM OUR FYLES OF BY-GONE YEARS.

20 YEARS AGO

OCT. 30TH, 1925

In the Dominion elections yesterday Mr. W. E. Tummon, the Conservative candidate in South Hastings, defeated Mr. Charles Hanna, the Liberal candidate and former member by a majority announced to be 2640. In Belleville Mr. Tummon's majority was 835; he received 3698 votes and Mr. Hanna received 2863. The vote throughout the Dominion remains still somewhat indefinite, although the Conservatives have the largest group so far. The Rt. Hon. Arthur Meighan, Conservative leader was elected in Portage La Prairie, Manitoba, and the Rt. Hon. Mackenzie King was defeated in his own riding of North York. This morning the standing of the various parties was reported to be as follows: Liberals 95; Conservatives 118; Progressive 17; Labor 2; Independent 1; in doubt 14—total 245. One hundred and twenty three seats are necessary to give a clear majority in the house.

30 YEARS AGO

OCT. 30TH, 1915

Sir Charles Tupper, Bart., died in Ottawa this morning. The venerable statesman was one of the most picturesque figures in Canadian politics. He was the last of the Fathers of Confederation. For the past few years he lived in Kent, England and was in his 95th year. On May 24th, he was appointed High Commissioner for Canada at London, England. In January 1896 he entered the administration of Sir Mackenzie Bowell as Secretary of State, and on the resignation of Sir Mackenzie Bowell as Prime Minister, he formed a Liberal Conservative administration in which he held office of Prime Minister and Secretary of State from April 27th, 1896 to July 8th, 1896 when in consequence of the defeat of his party at the polls on June 23rd, 1896, he resigned. He became leader of the Opposition in August, 1896. His son, Mr. Charles Tupper, barrister, Winnipeg, succeeds to the baronetcy.

The Rev. Dr. George and Mrs. George of Chicago, Ill., formerly of this city, are visiting relatives in the city.

It is announced that "Reddy" McMillan, formerly of this city, will play hockey this winter with the American "Soo" team.

The many friends of an old Belleville boy, Mr. J.C. Holden, now of Montreal, will be pleased to learn that he has been made a member of the National Geographical Society of the United States. The honor is conferred owing to Mr. Holden's extensive travels. A year ago he was made a member of the Royal Geographical Society.

Mrs. H. W. Henthorn, George Street, has returned home from London, Ontario, where she visited friends.

A complaint was made to the police this morning that cows are running at large on West Bridge Street. This should be stopped at once.

Mr. H. C. Hunt is moving into his new house at Avondale, Trent Road, today.

Mr. J. Boyd went to Welland Ontario, today.

Mr. C. M. Reid, is spending a few days in Toronto.

Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Sir Charles Tupper called on President Grover Cleveland in Washington yesterday.

Several young men in this city have organized a social club to be known as the Bay City Club, and they held their first assembly of the season in the Oddfellows' Hall last evening. About sixty couples were present. Music was furnished by Chalaupka's Orchestra. Mr. James Gerow performed the duties of master of ceremonies in his usual graceful manner. The following composed the committee in charge of the affairs: A. LaPalm, J. Dolan, R. Dion, G. Brown, J. Truaisch, T. Conlin, H. Foster and T. Hanley.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

What birds fly under water?

The family of birds known as dippers and water ouzels exhibit remarkable agility under water and while submerged use their wings much as they do in flying.

These birds, which are thrush-like in build, walk or run along the bottom of swift streams in search of insect larvae and small mollusks and crustacea.

While thus submerged the birds continually move their wings like flippers to keep themselves down, for their bodies are only three-fourths as heavy as water and would rise like corks except for the wing motions.

They are able to remain under water for short periods without getting wet because nature protects them from the chilly water by a coat of thick down underneath the feathers, which are kept oily by a gland under the tail.

When a dipper or water ouzel moves from one place to another under water it uses its wings in a manner that all observers describe as "flying under water."

From all appearances the bird manipulates its wings under water in exactly the same fashion that it does when flying in the air.

Although not web-footed, birds of this family swim with ease on the surface.

"Sub-aqueous flight" is characteristic also of some other birds.

Some of the little sea birds known variously as murres, guillemots and auklets dive into the water with half-opened wings and "fly under water."

Cormorants make flying motions with their wings while diving in pursuit of fish, and penguins, which cannot fly, use their featherless wings like paddles to propel themselves beneath the surface of the water.

'Herbie' is Home

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP)—Apparently through no fault of his own, "Herbie" is home.

Sapper Norman P. Smith, 25, of Ottawa, from whose ability to get in and out of trouble CSM William G (Bing) Coughlin of Ottawa drew the inspiration for his "Herbie" cartoon feature in the Canadian army newspaper Maple Leaf, made a belated entry into his home town Saturday.

Scheduled to return with Coughlin on the Ile De France, Smith said he missed the boat because of a "place with swinging doors," and caught the Queen Elizabeth, which docked at Halifax last Friday. Finally after almost going along with a draft for Kingston, Ont., he arrived at Union Station Saturday night.

In the best "Herbie" tradition, he took time out for a "hot dog" and dashed out of the station restaurant too late to catch the buses which take returned men to Lansdowne Park for an official reception.

He telephoned frantically, but could find none of his family or friends at home since they were waiting at the park. When he finally made it, there under a "welcome home, son" sign were his mother, fiancee, Betty Dwyer, and "Herbie's" creator, Bing.

A map-maker with the army newspaper, Smith hopes to find a job as a draughtsman in Ottawa.

T.C.A. EXPANSION

The bill was given second reading on division and sent to the Commons committee on railway and shipping for detailed study. Under the bill T.C.A.'s capital would be expanded from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000 and subsidiaries would be established to operate trans-Atlantic, trans-Pacific and Canada-to-Latin-America services. Domestic services would be increased.

Proposes an Umpire

When the House opened, Labor Minister Mitchell said he had proposed the appointment of an umpire to settle differences between the Ford Motor Company of Canada and employees of its Windsor, Ont., plant, strike-bound for the last month.

Mr. Mitchell tabled the report of the Royal Commission on Veterans' qualifications. The report, result of a study of Veterans' Rehabilitation problems, urged the establishment of technical institutes for students past the second school stage.

Bequests for changes in the repatriation plan were initiated by Lt.-Col. D. S. Harkness (PC—Calgary East). Among those backing his request were M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, Howard Green (PC—Vancouver South); Maj.-Gen. G. R. Pearkes V.C., (PC—Nanaimo); Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt V.C. (PC—Vancouver-Burrard); Maj. E. D. Fulton (PC—Kamloops) and Capt. J. O. Probe (CCF—Regina City).

Pressed by Gen. Pearkes for an answer as to whether the repatriation plan would be revised, Mr. Abbott said he could not give an answer.

He would submit the matter to his staff. He had confidence in his staff and so long as he had confidence he would take their advice. If he could not take their advice there would be nothing to do but replace them.

The matter of changes was consistently being reviewed.

The suggestion of opposition members that men be given additional points for service in battle dress had been studied and discarded because of the difficulty of devising a proper system.

Not Perfect System

"I am not going to stand here and say that this system which has been adopted is the perfect system or one which is not susceptible of improvement, but I do say that it is the system which has been worked out by men who in my judgment at any rate are extremely competent officers," said Mr. Abbott.

"It represents their considered view as to what is the most workable system. I have no doubt they will take into account the points brought forward in this debate for instance.

"The system is working. It is working well, and on balance — and you can only take these things on balance and on averages — I do not know that a much better system could be evolved.

"From the information I have been given I can certainly say to the committee that the system of any other of our associated or Allied nations is working no better than our own."

Mr. Green said he did not think it was fair for Mr. Abbott to come into the House and "hide behind" a repatriation plan drawn up by his officers.

Not Hiding Behind Anyone

Mr. Abbott retorted that he was not hiding behind anyone and the opposition had no monopoly on desires to have men repatriated quickly.

Mr. Green reiterated earlier requests National Resources Mobilization troops be used to relieve men in the Army of Occupation in Germany.

On the T.C.A. bill, Mr. Bracken said that the great majority of members, he believed, were opposed to adopting a policy by which all air services, external as well as domestic, became a state monopoly.

"I do not argue that we should have a second external air service tomorrow, but I think it is very shortsighted on the part of this government to announce to the world that it is practically foreclosing the possibility of a second service developing within the predictable future," said Mr. Bracken. "I sincerely hope that, on further consideration, the minister will state that this is not the government's intention."

Bracken's Opposition

The bill would bring five unfavorable results:

1. It would discourage private enterprise in the whole field of air transportation.
2. It would prevent private enterprise from serving outlying communities efficiently.
3. It would set up a state monopoly in international and domestic air transportation fields.
4. It would drive the government to subsidizing smaller air lines and would thus increase the burden on the taxpayer.
5. It would eventually result in a state monopoly with no competition to keep it efficient.

The people wanted a public and private railway system so they could use both and judge the efficiency of the two. T.C.A. should not be afraid of competition.

His party's view toward public enterprise was that such projects should be encouraged and supported wherever and whenever they can serve the public interest best or improve the service already given. Monopoly, whether state-owned or privately-owned, in the field of transportation should be discouraged, and competition wherever practicable, should be encouraged if there was to be greater efficiency.

Supports Government Bill

Stanley Knowles (CCF—Winnipeg North Centre) supporting the government's bill, asked that the Progressive Conservatives state who they would have operate the proposed expanded lines in place of T.C.A.

Reconstruction Minister Howe, sponser of the bill, said that some had said during the debate that he regarded T.C.A. as his "baby" and that he insisted upon keeping it.

"Well, perhaps I do," said Mr. Howe, "I admit it.

"But if I do, it is for only one purpose and that is, before I leave public life, to make Trans-Canada Air Lines such a strong company that in the very unlikely event of the peoples of this country putting any of the groups opposite into the seats of the government the line cannot be wrecked either by the friends of private interests or by the theorists who believe that all property should be public."

He explained how the original T.C.A. was to have been a company made up of Canadian National Railways, Canadian Pacific Railways and Canadian [illegible] It was to be two-thirds private interests and one-third [illegible] terest. However, the C.P.R. and C.A.L. decided not to be partners to the transaction.

A Wise Move

Howard Green (PC—Vancouver South) said he felt it was a wise move to seek increase in the capital of T.C.A. from $5,000,000 to $25,000,000. This was done under the first section of the bill. However, this new capital would be invested in Canadian National Railways which within six months would, like the C.P.R., be divested on its air lines. The shares would be turned over to the minister of reconstruction and he would become sole shareholder. This was the picture he wanted to get across.

He suggested an amendment to the section of the bill setting up subsidiary corporations.

Reconstruction Minister Howe had said the subsidiaries would operate international lines. He accepted the minister's statement but felt the bill should be changed to make it impossible for the subsidiaries to operate domestic lines.

He felt the legislation gave Mr. Howe a blank cheque. It was a skeleton on which the minister could put the flesh.

The bill was another step to make Mr. Howe the dictator of civil aviation in Canada. The Progressive Conservative party did not favor such dictatorship no matter how qualified the man for the post.

CALCIUM, D AND RHEUMATIZ

Last May I wrote you for the name of a remedy for stiffness of joints....my arthritis began in 1924....I have visited (the best advertised "clinic") three times, (three sanitariums or health resorts) and the (quack) health school. I am still taking calcium and D as you suggest in your pamphlet and am delighted at my great improvement. My knees are so limber now that I seriously think of joining up at Arthur Murray's. .... (G. K. M.)

Six years ago I suffered terribly with Arthritis. I read your article about calcium and rheumatism, began supplementing my diet with the necessary daily rations of these....the terrible pain in my right knee left....I can run up stairs as well as I could twenty years ago.... (A. H.)

The truth is that G. K. M. and A. H. do not know, and neither do I know, whether calcium and vitamin D had anything to do with the improvement or relief they experienced after they began supplementing their deficient diets with these essential nutritional elements.

All I know is that, no matter what ails you, it can do no harm to boop your intake of calcium (and phosphorus) and vitamin D to optimal (two or three times the amounts required daily to maintain normal nutrition) for several months. It seems that a great many individuals with what they regard as chronic "rheumatism" (which doesn't mean a thing) or "arthritis" (Greek for inflammation of a joint or joints, which is nearly as meaningless, for inflammation seldom characterizes the disability) experience such relief or improvement after a month or two of such better nutrition. This is not medicine at all, please try to bear in mind.

It would be absurd to assume that joint disabilities are not due to other causes than nutritional deficiencies. But aside from derangements by injury and strain and changes produced in the joints by inflammation, as in rheumatic fever (acute inflammatory rheumatism, acute multiple infectious arthritis) and in the more gradually developing focal infection, chronic joint disabilities in the majority of cases are manifestations of nutritional deficiency, in my opinion—but remember, I am no authority.

Here's how to get a copy of the booklet "The Ills Called Rheumatism": Ask for it in writing (no clipping, please) and inclose ten cents and stamped envelope bearing your address. If the coin arrives in negotiable condition, oke. But if you mess it up with glue, gum, adhesive tape, staples, paste, wire, pins etc., it will come back to you for laundering, at your expense and leisure. We do not do laundry work here.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Specialist Dislikes Goats

Local child specialist says goat's milk will cause a baby to be anemic. Our baby has been thriving on it for six months, no signs of anemia or other ailment.

(Mrs. J. R.)

Answer—It is no more likely to cause anemia than is cow's milk. Your baby is lucky to have goat's milk.

Acid Fruits

Authorities seem to differ on this, some say citrus fruits, tomatoes and other acid fruits contain an acid which is poisonous or injurious to any one with rheumatism. Others maintain the contrary. (H. S.)

Answer—I know of no authority who imagine such fruits or their juices are in any way injurious to any one.

Relief For Allergy

When I tried to get some of the chemical you suggested for allergy the druggist said if my trouble was hay fever what I wanted was potassium chlorate.

(Miss E.S.)

Answer—Send a stamped envelope bearing your address, and ask for monograph "Relief for Allergy." Beware of the irresponsible druggist who tries to sell you potassium chlorate—it might do serious harm if taken internally.

Penicillin

Have been watching for you to explain about penicillin, but so far have seen not a word about it ....relative given 30,000,000 penicillin... Please explain these figures. We are anxious to know all about its use.

(T. M. H.)

Answer—You know as much as a layman should know about it. I have never said anything about the sulfa drugs here either, except to warn people against monkeying with them. Better leave penicillin to the doctors.

8th Canadian Field Regt. Received 26 Decorations For Distinguished Service

Thirteen Commanding Officers Produced From Roster of Officers Who Served With Regiment

By WILLIAM BOSS
Canadian Press War Correspondent

With Canadian Forces in The Netherlands, Oct. 30 (CP)— The 8th Canadian Field Regiment R. C. A.—one of the few self-propelled artillery regiments in the Canadian army—did some reckoning the other day.

They found the 8th Field has received 26 decorations for distinguished service and more are known to be forthcoming. Casualties totalled 93. Of these, 26 were officers and other ranks who gave their lives.

The unit has provided the Canadian army with three Brigadiers—H. O. N. Brownfield, Kingston, Ont.; E. C. Plow, Kingston and William Zigler, Calgary and Edmonton.

Thirteen commanding officers have been produced from the roster of officers who served with the unit while the Royal Canadian Artillery has been enriched by 100 officers, commissioned after having served as gunners and N. C. O.'s with the regiment.

Three Batteries

Three batteries comprise the 8th Field: the 61st from Edmonton; the 71st from Brandon, Man.; and the 107th from Cranbrook, B.C. Throughout their operational career they supported Maj.-Gen. Bert Hoffmeister's 5th Canadian Armored Brigade.

Biggest day's shooting by the regiment is said to have been May 24-25, 1944, when it supported the Canadian Corps' battle of the Hitler line in Italy. The gunners claim to have established a record by firing at 18 regimental targets within four hours. The battle cost the unit 11 killed and 16 wounded.

Each Gun Fired 1,000 Rounds

Their biggest fire plan was drawn up in Holland when they supported the 49th British (West Riding) Division's fighting in Arnhem. On one day they sent 650 rounds of smoke shells per gun during a 14-hour period, maintaining a constant smoke screen for the fighting troops. At another stage their 24 guns hurled 1,000 rounds each over the Neder Rijn into the famous city.

At Baneveld, Holland, where a strong concentration of Germans and Dutch S.S. were holding up the 8th New Brunswick Hussars, Capt. Ellis Evans of Toronto went 1,000 yards into the enemy's territory to better direct the fire of his guns.

The unit's last "do" was in support of the Perth Regiment, the Cape Breton Highlanders and the Irish Regiment of Canada in the elimination of the Delfzijl pocket. There the targets were naval guns mounted in concrete emplacements and turned to face inland. It was a nasty job and they were given the help of a battery of 7.2 guns.

Batmen, Clerks Help

When Germans infiltrated the Canadian lines a mile behind the 8th Field's gun positions, a force of batmen and clerks since known as "Donnelly's Commandos" went out under Paymaster Sam Donnelly, Guelph, Ont., to extricate troops they were annoying.

Intense educational and sports activity features current regimental life.

Sports are organized by Maj. Roy Craddock, Lethbridge and Edmonton. The regimental team placed seconds in 5th Division's track and field meet, and had two representatives on the divisional team—Lieuts. Pete Midonough, Kingston, Ont., and Cliff Gillespie, Indian Head, Sask.

In action the 8th Field has had only one commander, Lt.-Col. Arthur Birks, Toronto. Since his return to Canada it has had Lt.-Col. J. D. Watt, Ottawa, and Lt.-Col. Hodson, former second-in-command.

Adjutant at the close of hostilities was Capt. T. A. Lemoire, Cornwall, Ont.

COLLEGIATE NEWS

Weekly Assembly

The bible was read by Mr. Mr. Youdale and dedicated to the 11th, grade forms for reasons known only to himself apparently.

After the conventional proceedure of our weekly assembly had run its course we were given some very stimulating instructions on cheering a Rugby team to victory. I certainly hope that the cheer-leaders don't feel too down hearted because the game was lost for their efforts were well to be recognized.

The band played with its usual rousing manner and much credit is due to them and should righteously be paid.

Girls' Sports

The following games were played between Friday 19 and Thursday 25. All volley ball games are cancelled and the next season will be purely basket ball. Why the cancelling games? Unexpected arrivals from above causing minor disturbances on the gym floor.

On Monday 22 XIII A beat XIIIB althought it would seem that Ruth Palmer's team underwent great handicap as only five of her players were listed.

Of the games played by the XII grades XIID won two. One against XIIB 13-10, one against XIIA 16-10. Evening the score XIIB overcame XIID 15-12. The two XII C teams played each other with Donna Davidson's team coming out victorious. XIIA overcame XIIB 18-10.

In the XI grades XID overcame XIF 21-13 then XIF had higher score in the game with XIA 20-15.

Between the two XID teams Dot Cook's team was victorious score being 21-17.

Betty Zebedee's XF team overcame XA 26-6. In the game of XD vs XE, 10D won with final score of 19-17.

The 9th grades were again the most active forms playing more games than any other grade. 9E came out victorious in the three games 19-6 over 9D. 18-15 over 9F and 16-9 over 9D again.

9A won one game against 9E 11-4 and one against 9C 22-8. Scores were 27-4 over 9AB. for Grace Delong's team and 14-12 over the other 9D team. Between 9AB and 9C Marilyn Payne's tem won 13-8.

Possibly we were all thinking rather seriously this week about that old proverb "Pride goeth before a fall." Well let Albert and any other scoffers laugh. There are great possibilities that they will be laughing out the other side of their faces next week. With such a show of mass school spirit our boys were probably frozen from shock as well as the cold. (For those of you who were sitting in cars cosy and snug for the whole game just ask Marg and Loey if it wasn't cold. The cheer leaders were all pretty snazzy weren't they. Much credit is due to them and their victory aspiring leader Miss Morton.

R. J. W.

Ad Libitum:

The middle and upper school students may remember my saying last year that the human race is declining socially and perhaps physically. This fact was somewhat stimulated by something I saw the other day. The persons concerned, though well known would not appreciate their names being mentioned. so therefore their said appellations will remain anonymous.

When returning to school after lunch, I beheld to my surprise and utmost amusement, two boys valiantly trying to mount an ancient bicycle. It was one of the type having a front wheel five or six feet in diameter and a rear one of about twelve inches. It was indeed ancient. Ten chances to one, Noah had its ancestor on board his Ark.

Once astride the vehicle the rider progressed very rapidly although being at an altitude beyond comprehension It decidedly dwarfed any bicycles of the conventional type. The mirth of nearby pedestrians was loudly expressed as was my own.

R. C. D.

Boys' Sports

In spite of the impressive parade and the organized cheering the Albert College Juniors stepped into our boys and handed them a 5 to 0 setback, in the second junior game of the season. The frigid weather did not help matters any. Lois Flindall, Marg Taylor, John Stewart and Jack Muirhead, did a fine job of leading the special school yells although the support from the frozen on-lookers seemed very weak.

The loss ties both schools at one game each so the next one will be the all important one and our boys are sure that they can do it, if the rest of the school is there to encourage them. The game will be played at Albert on Wednesday, Oct. 31. Remember the date, and make sure that you don't miss the opportunity to show some real school spirit.

13-B took the limelight in inter-form rugby this week by winning both of their games. 9 - H also came out on top.

R.B.B.

Coming Events

Tickets for "June Mad" the B.C.I.V.S. Dramatic Club presentation for 1945 will be ready for distribution around the first of November. So dig up your best salesmanship manner and let's see you sell those tickets. Remember that all the money raised by the play will go to the Students' Council. Need we say more except, perhaps, that the play is going to be one of the best ever put on in these hallowed halls of learning.

Wednesday afternoon will see another of those whiz bang rugby games between Albert College and B.C.I.V.S. After tasting defeat at the hands of the College boys our Juniors are out for revenge. So it goes without saying that this game should be one of the best ever seen in these parts. But definitely! Congratulations to the cheer leaders and the rooting section from the old alma mater. You were swell and we hope to see you out at the third game.

By the time you read this the inter-form rugby schedule will probably have run its course. However, on Thursday the spare rugby balls are going to be used for the first practice of junior and senior basketball. Or do they use a different kind of ball for that game? But whatever kind of ball they use everybody interested in playing the games, both junior and senior, see Mr. Townsend at 4 Pip Emma on Thursday afternoon.

As you have probably gathered after reading this far the Coming Events Editor is back (marvelous deducing, my dear Watson). Oh yes, he had a swell time while he was playing hooky from the Collegiate News. He went to London to see the Queen. And what he saw — Ou la la!

HALLOWE'EN

To-night's the night when all around
Hosts of prey are to be found;
Or by some chance you'll always spy
A bat or vampire in the sky.

Maybe a skeleton you'll run across
And find for speech you're at a loss;
But then of course you might not see
That you have spooks for company.

Then some witch with magic broom
Is seen to ride abreast the moon.
Or from some window grins a face
To make your knees a sore disgrace.
But should a scarecrow move his arm
There is no cause to raise alarm,
For all these things you just have seen
Will happen once; on Hallowe'en.

Doug Donaldson.

POINT TRAVERSE

3 Arctic Owls Seen on Island

Point Traverse Oct. Wandering far from the Arctic regions, which they inhabit, three Arctic or Snowy owls are disporting about on the False Duck island, according to lighthouseman, K. A. McConnell. Another large snowy owl is staying on the Point Traverse mainland.

These large, stout birds are pure white with markings of dull brown or brownish black. These rare birds are clothed with a dense coating of white feathers, which render them discernible from the snows.

The severity of the climate of the Arctic or a scarcity of feed, is said to be the reason for their coming southward during the winter.

Reports from hunters who participated in the two day pheasant shoot in the township of South Marysburgh, state that very few of the birds were bagged during the open days Sportsmen reported a scarcity of pheasants in the township, which is a regulated game preserve.

Commercial fishermen here are not only complaining about the windy weather of the past month, but also of the numerous raccoons about the fishing colony. The animals are very venturesome, and under cover of night they go aboard the fishing crafts in search of fish. In so doing they have caused considerable damage to planking and flooring in the boats. Two of the badger-like animals have already been caught aboard one of the boats.

BABY BORN WITH HEART OUTSIDE CHEST WALL

Montreal, Oct. 30 —(CP)— Born with his heart outside its chest wall, a six-pound boy is still living at St. Mary's Hospital here, more than 24 hours after the unusual event.

The baby, a full-term infant was born at 2:30 p.m. yesterday, to the wife of a merchant marine officer. The officer is at present somewhere on the high seas.

Medical men discussed Monday morning what could be done to put the heart in its proper place, and it is probable an effort will be made to do this as soon as the child's condition will permit.

Marriage is Annuled

Montreal, Oct. 30 (CP)— Mr. Justice P. F. Casgrain in Superior Court yesterday annulled the marriage of Marie Blanche Andree Gourdeau of Dorion, Que., to Frank Robert Hallsworth of Montreal on petition of Miss Gourdeau who claimed Hallsworth failed to have the marriage "regulated" by a Roman Catholic priest after it was celebrated before a protestant minister.

SOCIAL AND PERSONAL

ENGAGEMENT NOTICE

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Lynch, 80A West Moira Street, announce the engagement of their eldest daughter, Sgt. Margaret Frances Lynch, C.W.A.C., to Pte. Walter V. Nezvitsky, R.C.A.M.C., son of Mr. and Mrs. George Nezvitsky, of Montreal, the marriage to take place in Bridge Street United Church, on Tuesday, November 20, 1945, at 3.30 p.m.

Mr. Kenneth Camken spent the weekend in Cobourg the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Houston.

Mr. and Mrs. Jim Denard and family, Mr. Percy Jodrell and sons, of Wellington, were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Floyd Way, Bay Street.

Mrs. Percy Jodrell, who underwent a critical operation in Belleville General hospital, is very much improved.

AB. Ron Aitchison, RCNVR, recently returned from overseas duty on the minesweeper "Bayfield", is visiting friends in the city.

Miss Irene Camken returned from a visit to Rochester, Niagara Falls and Toronto, where she visited friends.

Lieut. Paul Dandeno, RCNVR, of the H.M.C.S., 'Scotian', is spending a leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. L. G. Dandeno, Bridge Street East.

Mr. and Mrs. Wilmot Bailey, 2nd of Sidney, accompanied by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Moon, left by motor this morning for Peterborough, where they will spend the day with Mrs. Bailey's sisters, Mrs. Bowerman and Mrs. George Green and their father, Mr. R. A. Elliott, who is celebrating his 86th birthday today.

WEDDINGS

FULLER—HILL

Mohawk Reserve. (Special.)—The marriage of Austin Elmer Fuller, son of Mr. Clayton Fuller and the late Mrs. Fuller, to Miss Kathryn Hill, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Herman Hill, took place at Christ Church at eleven o'clock, Thursday morning, Oct. 25. The bride, who was given in marriage by her father, wore an attractive street-length dress of Copenhagen blue crepe. She was attended by Miss Madge Fuller as bridesmaid.

Mr. Leslie Hill was groomsman.

In the evening, largely attended reception for the newlyweds was held in the Council House, where many useful and beautiful wedding gifts were on display.

Mr. and Mrs. Fuller will make their home in Kingston. The bridegroom recently returned to Canada from overseas.

BARNHARDT—BRANT

Mohawk Reserve. (Special.)—Christ Church was the scene of a pretty Autumn wedding, Saturday afternoon, October 27, when Miss Gladys Marion Brant, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Hugh Brant, became the bride of Kenneth Barnhardt, son of Mr. and Mrs. Isaac Barnhardt. The bride chose a wedding gown of queen's blue sheer, and was attended by Mrs. Albert Maracle as matron of honor.

Mr. Albert Maracle was groomsman.

After the ceremony, a sumptuous dinner was served at the bridegroom's home. The bridegroom recently received his discharge from the Canadian Army, after several years' service overseas.

RICHARDSON—BATEMAN

Thomasburg. (Special.) — Standards of yellow and bronze chrysanthemums, foliage and lighted candles formed a very picturesque setting in Thomasburg United Church at two o'clock on Saturday, October 27, when Evelyn Jane, second daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ervine Bateman, of Thomasburg, became the bride of Mr. Donald Austin Richardson, son of Mrs. A. A. Richardson of Thomasburg, and the late Mr. Richardson. The pastor, Rev. Bernard Heywood was the officiating clergyman.

The bride, given in marriage by her father, entered the church to the strains of wedding music played by Mr. Fred Porter. She was attractively attired in the traditional floor-length gown of white satin, fashioned with buttoned back, fitted sleeves and sweetheart neckline. She wore a full-length veil and carried a Colonial bouquet of yellow chrysanthemums and Better Time roses and fern.

Miss Merle Bateman was her sister's bridesmaid, wearing white chiffon, with shoulder-length veil and she carried mauve and white baby chrysanthemums and fern.

Mr. Edward Richardson was groomsman for his brother, while Mr. Gerald Bateman, brother of the bride, and Mr. Parkyn Richardson, brother of the groom, were the ushers.

During the ceremony the congregation sang the hymn "O, Perfect Love", and during the signing of the register, Mrs. Bernard Heywood sang very sweetly "I Love You Truly".

Following the ceremony a reception was held at the home of the bride's parents for about forty guests. Receiving with the bridal party were the bride's mother attired in an ensemble of black and turquoise crepe with black accessories and a corsage of American Beatuy roses, while Mrs. Richardson, mother of the groom, chose a dress of moss green with black sequin and braid trimming, matching hat and corsage of American Beauty roses.

A delicious buffet luncheon was served with Mrs. Russell Wood, Misses Betty Vance, Joan Reynolds and Joyce Morton acting as serviteurs.

The happy couple left amid showers of confetti and good wishes, on a motor trip to western points, the bride travelling in a suit of mauve with navy blue accessories completed by a natural camel hair top-coat.

Upon their return they will reside in the village.

Guests from a distance included Mr. and Mrs. Harold Morton and Ervine, Misses Merle Bateman and Joan Reynolds, all of Toronto; Miss Isabel Richardson, of Belleville; Mrs. T. Slush and Mrs. James Bateman, of Tweed.

Collegiate Home and School Assoc. Discusses 'Functions, Purposes of Secondary Schools

"Is the Secondary School fulfilling its purpose?" was the subject of a panel discussion at the opening meeting of the Belleville Collegiate and Vocational Home and School Association held Monday evening in the auditorium of the School.

The President, Mr. J. M. Wood occupied the chair and introduced the participants in the discussion: Mr. George Wishart, Mrs. M. Ward representing the Association, Miss Roothe Blatherwick, a student, and Mr. Scott Denton, president of the Students' Council.

Four-Fold Purpose

It was decided that the Secondary School had a four-fold purpose—to prepare students academically for entrance to the University; to train students for entrance into business, industry and trades; to prepare students for entrance into non-academic institutions of higher learning such as business schools, and schools of science; and to prepare for life the great majority of students whose formal education ends with the close of their High School days.

Ninety-two years ago the universities laid down the standards for matriculation and they have remained unchanged regardless of the fact that in those days education was a privilege of the wealthy and today it is compulsory for everyone until the age of sixteen.

The result has been that new subjects designed for modern living have had to be super-imposed on the basic subjects required, making an over-crowded curriculum with the resultant overtime hours of homework.

No Supervision

In the matter of assigning homework it was noted that there is no supervision over the total amount given and many students must work 8 1-2 to 9 hours daily, thus crowding out extra curricula activities which would be beneficial to the health and welfare of the students.

It was stated that in many homes conditions were not conducive to study with distractions such as radio programs.

It was agreed that in its primary function of preparing students for University, the Secondary School comes nearer to achieving its purpose than in any other respect.

Too Much Theory

In training students for business, industry and the trades, the principal criticism was that there was too much theory and not enough practice. There were 15,000 vocations listed in the last Canadian census, and it was suggested that many of these courses might be taught. In this connection it was felt the attitude of parents towards the student in the technical school needed revision, since it takes brains to work with the hands as well as with books, and many people regard the student in the Vocational School as not quite bright enough to make the grade in academic work.

Totally Inadequate Claim

In preparing, for life the 85 per cent of students whose schooling ends with collegiate, the speakers stated that the education which was given was totally inadequate to aid them in their after-school life.

Practical training was advocated with courses in nutrition, budgeting, buying, building a home life, rearing children, biology and mental, physical and emotional health. In summing up, the speakers suggested that as remedial measures the number of subjects taught should be reduced, and the teaching periods lengthened which would serve to slacken the tempo of teaching and give the student time to work things out for himself instead of being spoon-fed with facts; that the school day should be lengthened to five o'clock with the elimination of homework; that the school courses be lengthened by a year; that more attention be given to developing personality; and a practical course be given in democracy and the rights, privileges, and responsibilities of citizenship.

Open Discussion

An open discussion followed with the audience participating.

Prior to the discussion the Glee Club under the direction of Mr. George Maybee ably rendered two vocal numbers.

Mr. George Currie, principal of the Collegiate opened the meeting and announced the appointment of Mr. J. M. Woods as president of the Association to succeed Mr. Harold Mott, who had moved to Oakville. The minutes of the last meeting were read by the Secretary, Mrs. G. Wright, and reports of committees were given by Mr. W. Lockyer and Mr. G. Stackhouse.

A social half-hour was spent in the cafeteria after the meeting where coffee was served by Mrs. H. Robbins and her committee.

Centenary Church Holds Anniversary

Sunday, October 28, marked the 77th anniversary of the opening of Centenary Church, Sidney Township, when the church was filled to capacity for both morning and evening services. Rev. W. G. Mercer, a former pastor on the Bayside circuit, was the guest minister, he delivering two inspiring sermons.

During the morning service, Master Ronald Elmy, boy soprano from Belleville, contributed two numbers while the choir, under the leadership of Mr. D. A. Thrasher, rendered two anthems. Miss Elenor Roblin presided at the piano. The church was beautifully decorated with autumn leaves and potted plants for the occasion.

Taking as his subject "The "Blessedness of Life's Negations", the speaker pointed out the necessity of exercising implicit faith in God, even when things seemed the blackest. "God does not thwart the ambitions of men, if they are in accordance with His will," he said. "He rather helps use to attain to high standards of efficiency in His service."

Miss Ethel Smith of Belleville was the guest soloist at the evening service, rendering two pleasing numbers. The choir contributed two anthems with Mrs. Percy Sutherland and Miss Evelyn Ray taking the solo parts. In his sermon Mr. Mercer emphasized the necessity of looking beyond the present scenes to the ultimate triumph of the Church of God. He urged his listeners to greater loyalty and wholehearted devotion to the Church as she sets out on her great crusade for Christ and His kingdom.

Rev. A. C. MacCallum extended a warm welcome to all attending the services, especially to those from outside congregations. Rev. O. E. Wagar also assisted in the evening service. The thank offering amounted to $300.

Hallowe'en Party Held by St. Michael's Business Girl's Club

A Hallowe'en atmosphere prevailed in the K. of C. rooms Monday evening, when members of St. Michael's Business Girls' Club entertained at a masquerade party. Cleverly arranged decorations made a perfect setting for the occasion, with lighted pumpkins on the mantel and witches, black cats and all manner of black and orange motifs in evidence. Even the dignified moose head which is the centre of attraction in the lounge room, had its antlers festooned with crepe paper, giving it a decidedly rakish air. The costumes of the guests ranged from beautiful period dresses to highly original disguises, the most diverting of which were the Scottish piper and the imposing Rastus Brown family. Hallowe'en games formed the evening's entertainment the enjoyment of which was enhanced by the musical setting provided by Mrs. William Grant, at the piano. A special feature of the program were the numbers by Miss Helen Grant, on the bells, at which she is an accomplished performer. Mrs. Grant delighted the members with several very fine piano solos. Miss Anna Lafferty arranged the evening's program, and added to the general fun with her impersonations as Rastus Brown. The festivities were concluded with refreshments in Hallowe'en style.

Truman's 12-Pt. Foreign Policy Faces Early Tests

By JOHN M. HIGHTOWER

Washington, Oct. 30 — (AP) — Myriad international problems held promise today of early and critical tests for President Truman's newly-proclaimed 12-point foreign policy.

One touchy point may disappear. This concerns Russia's demand for an Allied control council for Japan. The issue may be compromised in the near future.

The brightest spot diplomatic authorities see in the international situation is evidence of improving Russian-American relations.

Here are the main international problems which President Truman and State Secretary Byrnes must reckon with in the weeks immediately ahead and in the light of Mr. Truman's foreign policy declarations in New York Saturday:

Japan — Representatives of the main victor nations in the Pacific War will meet tomorrow at the State Department to organize a "Far Eastern Advisory Commission" primarily to consult on future Japanese control policies. Russia is the only one of 10 nations initially scheduled to participate which has not yet designated a delegate but officials are hopeful she will attend.

The Balkans — one of President Truman's dozen foreign policy principles is that his government will not recognize any other government imposed by outside force on a country. His statement was generally interpreted here as applying to the Balkans.

Palestine — This is a problem between Britain and the United States over admittance of Jewish refugees from Europe to Palestine. But it involves the broad question of maintaining peace and order in the Arab-dominated, oil-rich, strategic Middle East.

Dardannelles — Russia's treaty of friendship and non-aggression with Turkey expires next week. That may signal intensified Soviet pressure for bases on these Straits. Mr. Truman's speech stressed the principle of equal rights to strategic waterways.

United Nations — The formal organization of the new Security League will raise questions of the commitment of United States forces to help preserve world peace.

Mr. Truman built his foreign policy statement around the principle that the United States intends to remain powerful for its own defence and co-operate in the United Nations' efforts to maintain peace.

HAUL NETS CRACKMEN $9,000

Winnipeg, Oct. 30 —(CP)— A haul of $9,000 in bearer Victory Bonds was made by cracksmen at Weidman Brothers Wholesale Grocers early Monday. The men removed a cash box from the vault and took it with them, said police. Account books were scattered around the office.

The robbery followed an epidemic of weekend break-ins. Earlier two bandits, armed with German Luger pistols and wearing hoods over their heads, looted a cash register in a downtown fruit store and escaped with $900 in cash.

Belleville 'Redmen' to Operate In Van Horne Series in Kingston And Sponsor Team in O.H.A.

Players Elect Officers From Their Own Ranks With an Advisory Board

Complete organization of the 1945 edition of the Belleville "Redmen" hockey club was effected at an enthusiastic meeting held in the Y.M.C.A. last night.

The name "Redmen" was adopted in honor of former Belleville teams of that name which brought championships to this city years ago, the traditions of which will be upheld, it is hoped, by the newly formed organization.

Operating on a purely co-operative basis, with each active member of the club having a voting voice in procedure, the meeting selected its active officials from its player ranks. A large number of honorary officials were admitted to the club but these are of a non-voting status.

Clare Williamson was appointed chairman of the club in the active list with Speedy St. Louis named as coach. Acting in an advisory capacity to the coach will be E. LeBonne, and Clare Williamson.

Secretary-Treasurer and Public Relations head is Frank Butler assisted by Don Barre't. Transportation manager is Clare Williamson, Equipment Manager Gord. Cook, assisted by F. Green.

Players to Donate Funds

It was the unanimous opinion of the club that any official deemed inefficient and detrimental to the progress of the organization can be ousted from office by vote of the players.

While each active member will be asked to donate one dollar to provide a fund for immediate financing, a strong delegation will wait on the City Council at its next meeting to ask for a grant for operation purposes.

Meanwhile the public relations committee and secretary treasurer will devise ways and means to raise funds to finance the heavy expenses which will be incurred in the team's participation in the Kingston Van Horne series which gets under on Nov. 14.

The meeting passed a vote of thanks to Mr. Ken Soden, of Reliance Industries, long a hockey fan and supporter, for his generosity in offering the use of hockey equipment. This equipment will be immediately available, and will be used by the team in its winter schedule.

Honorary members of the club as named at the meetings are: President, Ken Soden, Vice President, Arthur Young; Secretary-Treasurer and Public Relations, G. H. Carver; Executive; Fred Deacon, E. Kalnay, Bill Cook, S. R. Burrows, G. Freeman, Frank Follwell, H. Kurtz, J. J. Morch, A. Carmichael, J. V. Truaisch, Walter Gerow, Dr. J. Empson; Club Physician is Dr. "Nig" Ross while the honorary business manager is Eddie Schrieder.

Arrangements will be made immediately for the team to practise in Kingston preparatory to its first game on Nov. 14 against the Kingston Victorias. The Redmen will enter an intermediate "A" grouping if such can be arranged within the district covering Peterborough, Oshawa, Norwood, Omemee, etc.

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

In his first exhibition bout, a three-round affair, in the series of workouts before facing Joe Louis next summer, Billy Conn last night milled around with Bearcat Jones, a fellow-Pittsburgher, in the ring at Cleveland before a crowd of 4,426. Wearing a protruding mid-section, Conn highlighted the display with a complete miss of a left hook at Jones' head and fell on his hands and knees. Conn took no further chances of spilling himself while Jones contented himself with taps on the challenger's torso.

Conn's weight was not announced but Jack Kearns confided he "probably" scaled 192 pounds, against the 198 of Jones.

The British Golf Championship Committee announced tournament dates in 1946 as follows: — British Open at St. Andrews, Scotland, July 1-5; Amateur Tournament at Birkdale, Southport, May 27-31. The announcement at London yesterday said no team would be sent to the United States for Walker Cup competitions next year.

After his team lost four of its first five games in the American Hockey League, Leighton (Happy) Emms yesterday tendered his resignation as coach of the St. Louis Flyers at St. Louis and general manager George Carson temporarily took over the team.

Once famed as a slugger of the National League, Rogers Hornsby announced at Chicago yesterday he had turned down an offer as general manager of Milwaukee Brewers in the American Association and would continue to conduct baseball schools in the Windy City.

Jerry Brown of the Indianapolis Capitals appeared at the top of the first list of American Hockey League scoring statistics with 14 points, counting seven goals and seven assists in seven games. Leswick, a team-mate, is second with 12 points.

Manager of Newark Bears in the International League for four years, Bill Meyer yesterday signed a one-year contract at New York to pilot the Kansas City club in the American Association. Previously he had managed the Blues from 1938 to 1941.

After giving physical training to 500 Russian transport pilots during his three years with the U.S. Coast Guard, Irving Jaffee, former speed-skating champion, said yesterday at New York the Soviet athletes might surprise the world if they accepted the invitation to compete in the 1948 Olympics.

Benny Bengough, former catcher of New York Yankees and St. Louis Browns, yesterday signed to coach the Philadelphia Phillies next season. He was coach of Washington Senators from 1940 to 1943.

Jockey Jackie Martin suffered a head injury and jockey Phil Laveie a shoulder injury in a three-horse spill at Sportsman's Park, Chicago, yesterday. They were taken to hospital. Jockey Aullie Carr also went down but was unhurt.

CHAMPION RETURNS

Ottawa, Oct. 30—(CP)—Sgt. Don McDairmid, Canadian men's singles tennis champion in 1940, returned to Ottawa last night with a draft of R.C.A.F. personnel who arrived at Halifax on the Queen Elizabeth.

McDairmid served with a clerical detachment in Egypt and the Middle East and recently won the Canadian forces singles title at the all-service tournament at Hilversum, Holland.

He expects to be in the thick of tennis competition again next summer.

THRILLS APLENTY

Albert College gridders, and the Irish are back where they started in the football merry-go-round, thanks to the collegians' 1-0 win over the Irish yesterday. The junior squads are in the same situation, and the coaches can start figuring out a playoff series.

In one of the most thrilling last quarters of the current season, the Irish and Albert battled in an attempt to thwart Lady Luck or whoever it is that governs the destinies of the gridiron, with Albert stoutly endeavoring to hold its slim one-point margin and the Irish equally determined to snatch the pastime out of the fire. In fact it was the Irish effort to try for the victory rather than the tie, that cost them the game. They were in position for a kick to the deadline and probably would have made it, but the quarter blocked to try the placement and promptly booted it into the hands of a waiting college line.

Supporters of both teams ran the gamut of emotion in that last hectic seven minutes. Albert had scored in the second quarter when Vessey smashed Donovan behind his line for a point, and then the fun started. Both the college and the Irish hopes were up and down like the plunger in an old fashioned churn as the tide turned first one way then the other. It was fumbles that finally decided the victory, although as was said before the Irish muffed a beautiful chance to tie up the pastime.

Albert had a fine chance to increase their lead in the final minutes, but their kick behind the line was run out beautifully by the injured Fitzpatrick of the Irish . . . On his first play Fitz heaved a beautiful pitch that was good for forty and two more plays put them on the college 20 yard line. Then the famous kick occurred. Albert fumbled the ball on its 18 yard line, but its line stiffened and held. They kicked and the Irish fumbled. In the last minutes of the game the Irish took to the air, but Fitzpatrick's first heave was intercepted by a collegian and that was that.

Fitzpatrick who was injured several times in the fray suffered a wrenched ankled but gamely went back into the game. The Irish are not the same team when he is on the bench, and the collegians took every advantage of his absence.

B.C.I. and Albert will stage another of their thrillers on the Albert gridiron on Wednesday.

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 819
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Enroll a complaint of players unfeeling who have no restraint when dealer is dealing. The loss of such pards awaken no mourners. They look at their cards by bending the corners.

When cards are seen as they are being dealt, the laws of bridge provide some remedy in most cases. The intention is to make it fair for all parties concerned.

The laws committee made some revisions in 1943. A number of the changes took into consideration a more liberal view of circumstances. Not all players have the time or inclination to keep up with these newer provisions.

The laws now say: There must be a new deal if it is ascertained before the last card is dealt (1) that a card is faced, or (2) that a player has seen, and can correctly name two or more cards dealt or, to be dealt to another player.

In the old laws, a new deal was required if you could name only one card being dealt to another player. Notice, therefore, that now there is no new deal unless two such cards can be named.

Also in the old laws, a new deal was required if a player looked at a card being dealt to him before the last card was dealt. But now there is no new deal for looking at cards being dealt to you.

However, a chapter in the law book lists acts of impropriety. Among acts in that list is the looking at your cards as they are being dealt to you. Now, a player looking at one or more cards being dealt to him is merely unethical. A remedy for that is holding your nose.

While looking at the last cards being dealt to him, a player turned over the second last one. The faced card required a new deal. And he would have had this hand:

Rural Hockey Association Will Operate Again

Welland, Oct. 30. (CP)—Inactive for the past three years because of the war, the Ontario Rural Hockey Association will resume operations this coming winter, it was announced today by Horace D. Ovenden of Wainfleet, secretary-treasurer.

An organization meeting will be held in Galt shortly in conjunction with the annual meeting of the Ontario Hockey Association.

Ovenden disclosed requests from a number of County Rural Leagues regarding affiliation. The O.R.H.A. will give all possible assistance and information to leagues and associations wishing to operate under the O.R.H.A. banner, he added.

RANGERS DEBUT AGAINST HAWKS

By The Canadian Press

The New York Rangers make their season's debut in the National Hockey League Wednesday night at Chicago, last of the teams to get into league action. It remains to be seen what sort of a combination Lester Patrick has juggled together for the new campaign.

The Hawks already have two games under their belts, a victory over Boston and a loss to the Montreal Canadiens, and on their own ice guarantee to give the Rangers a stiff opening.

Only other mid-week games this week sees Toronto Maple Leafs at Montreal Canadiens Thursday night. Leafs got a tie with Boston in their opener at Toronto while Canadiens doubled the score on Chicago at 8-4 in their previous game

Tommy Anderson, another veteran Leaf defenceman just out of the army, has been released to Providence Reds of the A.H.L.

Geo. Pauley Elected President Of Belleville Bowling Club at Annual Meeting Held at "Y"

Club is in Sound Financial Condition and Membership Increased During Year; Officers Elected

George Pauley was the unanimous choice of the members of the Belleville Bowling Club as president for the coming year when the annual meeting was convened in the Y.M.C.A. on Monday evening. H. C. "Cliff" Argue, who has guided the destinies of the club during the war years asked to be relieved of his duties but his services will not be lost to the club as "Cliff" is interested in the Corbin Gold Cup tournament, run each year on Civic Holiday and he will devote his efforts in that behalf. The members made a wise choice for the new president as George Pauley has been an enthusiastic member of the club for many years and has served on many committees of the club. Other officers elected are vice president H. C. Argue, secretary, Harvey Stewart, treasurer, Harold Cross, Games Chairman Raymond Zufelt, Greens Chairman, Colonel Bonisteel, Membership Chairman Raymond Zufelt and Executive, A. E. Wonnacott, Doug Row, Howard Hanton, Joe Blackburn, Thomas Caton and Claude D Tice.

Sound Financial Condition

From the reports received from the various committee chairmen, the club was found to be in sound financial condition and many improvements are contemplated in the immediate future. There was a slight overdraft on year's operation but the Corbin Gold Cup committee reported a credit balance of $792.68 and the meeting voted to transfer $500 of this for a bond in the Ninth Victory Loan, $200 to the general account and the remainder to stay in the Gold Cup fund for money to again get the tournament in operation for next year. Renovations to club house are proposed so that the verandah of the club rooms can be used for observation purposes only, while a new tool house is mooted so that the tools can be stored in a proper place when not in use. Raymond Zufelt as games chairman did an excellent job during the year and he proposed that next year that jitneys be held on Wednesdays instead of the Monday nights as now used. The financial report of the games showed that attendance was greater on Wednesdays than on night play.

Increase in Membership

As chairman of membership Mr. Zufelt also showed an increase in the membership and hoped that quite a few more would be added this year. Colonel Bonisteel reported the sodding of greens and reported the general condition of the greens to be excellent for this time of year. He remarked that the installation of ditches around the greens was money well spent. Mr. Argue speaking on behalf of the Gold Cup tournament, thanked his committee for the work done and believed that the entertainment afforded the visitors to the tournament was well spent. He asked the committee to keep the high standard set because he said "good prizes have an attraction." A hearty vote of thanks was tendered Mr. Argue for his untiring efforts. A lengthy discussion was held on the election of skips for the season and it was finally agreed that one-quarter of the club roster be elected skips, one-quarter of the roster as vice skips and the remainder be selected as seconds and leads. It was moved that the whole club be a committee to select the skips but the motion was defeated by an amendment naming three to select the skips.

Method of Selection

In selecting rinks to compete from the local club in the Corbin Gold Cup tournament, the members were not all of one mind and a motion to have ten teams entered, these to be chosen by elimination through a series of games was defeated and another motion that if there is a vacancy in the entry list after the entries have closed on June 30th, the teams from the local club will be chosen from those having the highest standing in the elimination series. The games for elimination will start at the season's opening and continue throughout the summer. Mr. Argue urged that more support be given to the district and Provincial playdowns because he said "taking part in a Provincial playdown is an experience that should be had by every member of the club." He advised that all members take part in the elimination series in the club for the right to take part in the district playoffs.

Vote to Ladies

The members of the ladies bowling club were sincerely thanked for the invaluable aid that had been given the men's club during the year with especial thanks for their labors on the Civic Holiday, when the Corbin Trophy is competed for. All the members including the secretary, Mark Vanner and treasurer Harold Cross were thanked for their efforts on the club's behalf.

In relinquishing the president's chair Mr. Argue stated he had served the club to the best of his ability and since joining the club had served two years as games chairman and four years as president and "any progress that has been obtained is due to the fine committees by which I was surrounded", said Mr. Argue. He stated that the Corbin Gold Cup tournament had been a decided satisfaction to him and hoped that it would be continued at the high standard set. George Pauley in accepting the high office of president assured the members, that he would be unable to devote the same amount of time to the job as his predecessor but with the help of the executive he would try to keep the club on the high plane that had been set.

Trophies Presented

A number of trophies were presented during the evening, the Tip Top Cup being presented by Harvey Stewart to J. W. Davison and Percy Grant. George Pauley and Wilfrid Price received beautiful pipes for high score in this tournament. Harry Thompson and Dawson Boyd won the Hurley Trophy for club doubles with Harold Cross and Thomas Caton as runners-up. Alf Symons and Claude Tice won a prize for the two-game high in the contest and Charlie Hyde and Wilfrid Price for one game high. The meeting closed near midnight hour with the members expressing the opinion that next year would be a banner one in the Belleville Bowling Club.

ALBERT DEFEATS IRISH IN HECTIC SECOND HALF

Win 1-0 With St. Michael's Muffing Chance to Tie Score

A last quarter flurry that saw the tide of fortune sweep both ways featured the Albert College-St. Michaels senior C.O.S.S.A. football game on the Albert gridiron yesterday. When the shouting and the tumult had died, Albert's lone point scored in mid-third quarter proved the margin of victory despite a desperate Irish effort to pull the game out of the fire.

The first half was productive of some fairly strenuous football with both squads battling on an almost even footing.

The excitement occurred in the second half after the Collegians had scored the only point of the game. Lively had run back one of St. Mike's kicks some twenty-five yards and then flipped a forward which brought them within the shadow of the Irish goal-posts.

With the shadows lengthening, the quarterback elected to kick and sent a low bounding ball across the Irish goal line, Donovan, playing safety, attempted to smear the ball, fumbled it and Vessey tearing in downed him for the point.

Everything Happened.

After that practically everything in the football calendar happened. An inspired Albert squad marched the ball down field to the Irish ten-yard line. Fitzpatrick pitched a perfect forward pass that was good for 40 yards to Lucy, and the next two plays put them within scoring distance.

The Albert line stiffened and the Irish quarter decided to stake victory on a placement kick. The ball bounded into the Albert line 20 yards out and was grounded. The Collegians took over and on the first play fumbled with the Irish recovering. Their line held and three plays sent them down field. Here within minutes to go, the Irish went to the air but their first forward was intercepted on the 35-yard line and a minute later the game was over.

Fitzpatrick starred for the Irish despite the fact that he was taken out of the game several times due to an injured ankle. Moher stood out with his running as did Donovan who hit the Albert line hard for several gains. Lucy also turned in a good performance.

Vessey, Lively, McCullough did yeoman service for Pete Beach's squad, with the whole team showing decided improvement over their last performance against their ancient enemies in the Green and White.

The teams:

St. Michael's — Fitzpatrick, Donovan, Lucy, J. Barrett, Garven, Braddin, Briand, Pigeon, Boyle, E. Barrett, Duffy, Peets, E. Donovan, Finkle, Whalen, Burley, Callaghan, Moher.

Albert College — Landon, McCullough, Bell, Scott, McIntyre, Sutherland, Patterson, Vessey, Wilson, Stafford, Lively, Woodrow, Harkness, Colton, Aiken, Cay, Burns.

Officials: Eddie Schrieder, B. Moher.

SOCCER PLAYERS MAY STRIKE FOR INCREASED PAY

Owners Reject Demands of Union for a Raise From Maximum Fee

Manchester, Eng., Oct. 30. (CP)—Britain's professional soccer players were reported today voting 10 to one in favor of going on strike for increased pay.

Balloting began among the players a week ago after the Club Owners' Association rejected demands for a raise in the £8-a-week maximum allowed full-time players. Part-time booters earn half as much and all players are paid only during the league season. The club owners refused to increase wages on the grounds of "inability to pay".

A suggestion by one club official that British football players in uniform—and many still are in the services—could not strike because of army regulations was scoffed at by the secretary of the Players' Union. The Secretary, James Fay, said all contracts between the players and the Clubs were cancelled in 1939 when the war started.

The War Office confirmed that "soldiers are not allowed to take part in strike activities" but declined to say whether refusal to play soccer for professional clubs could be called a strike.

Former Players Give Their View On Present Style

Toronto, Oct. 30 —(CP)— Two celebrated Canadian sport figures of pre-war days, back from service overseas, gave their views today of post-war Canadian rugby, and they were somewhat disappointed.

They were Major Hugh (Bummer) Stirling, a star with the old Sarnia Imperials of pre-war rugby fame, and Flt.-Lt. Arthur Ross Jr., son of General Manager Art Ross of the Boston Bruins.

They saw the senior intercollegiate game here in which University of Toronto defeated Queen's. Major Stirling observed: "Gosh, those kickers sure stand close to the line of scrimmage. I don't know how they get the ball away at all."

Stirling used to stand 10 or 15 yards back of his snap when doing his punting. "I guess I was tough on snapbacks," he said, "but I was fortunate in having players that could fire the ball back at me like a forward passer. Boob Malloy and Bruce Spears were two of the best in the country, I thought."

Stirling said he missed the old football atmosphere around Sarnia but he hoped it wouldn't be for long. "I wouldn't be surprised if Imperials are back in the O.R.F.U. next season."

Ross said that the lack of blocking left him cold. "It does not seem right to see a bunch of athletes standing around doing nothing while a team-mate is running with the ball."

INITIATE DRIVE TO HAVE OLYMPIC GAMES IN 1948

Canada May Bid for First Post-War Games Says M. E. Rogers

Ottawa, Oct. 30. (CP)—Initiation of a campaign to have the 1948 Olympic games held in Canada was disclosed last night by Melville E. Rogers of Ottawa, newly-re-elected president of the Canadian Figure Skating Association, on his return from the organization's annual meeting in Toronto.

"Our organization feels that it is time this country was accorded the privilege of playing host of Olympic contestants and we have started the ball rolling to see what can be accomplished," he said.

Mr. Rogers said he had been assured of the support of the United States Figure Skating Association, which would make a recommendation that Canada be selected for the next Olympics to the U.S. Olympic Committee. The president of the American Figure Skating Association said he would also solicit the support of the corresponding British organization, Mr. Rogers said.

And The Walls Came Tumbling

By Joseph McCord

CHAPTER 5

"You're authorized to make terms? You seem rather young. I mean that in a complimentary sense."

"Naturally. I dare say you have settled on some figure?"

"Oh, yes. A moderate one, I believe. Old Jeremy Rand and his wife have to be taken care of properly. I'll see to that. I would like to insure what future I have against want and I wish to leave something for my only child. She's sweet and deserving . . . .but you have seen her."

"She's most charming."

"An odd notion, I dare say, Dennison." Andre stared down at his cards. "I've always wanted to say I had fifty thousand dollars. I don't know why just fifty and not seventy-five — or a hundred. That's what I want for my land. Net, of course. Please don't overlook that 'net.'"

"Why, that's. . . ."

"Very reasonable, as you were about to say. Perhaps too reasonable. After all, a man of my age and years of work is entitled to a sum like that. Compare it to the national debt, for instance. Chicken feed, Dennison."

"Ridiculous!"

"I think not. It's the only figure I'm interested in at the moment but I'll listen to your charges and objections, if they're not too lengthy."

From that point on, young Dennison did most of the talking, explaining, arguing, almost threatening. The most lengthy rebuttal he achieved was a mild, "I'm afraid I wouldn't be interested."

When the sound of the front screen door announced Mrs. Steel's arrival, her brother started laying out his cards once more. He was still listening politely to his visitor, but there was something dismissive in the action.

"I'm off!" Dennison pushed back his chair and rose to his feet. "I'll swear, Delaine, I can't understand. . . ."

The little man looked up with a disarming smile and said gently:

"Is it quite necessary that you should?"

It was two days after Dennison's call on Andre Delaine that Carol heard his name mentioned by Dr. Silverthorne.

"Seen your patient lately, Carol?"

"My patient?" She looked up in some surprise to find the doctor staring at her over the tops of his steel-framed lenses.

"The fellow with the nail poke . . . Dennison, wasn't it? I hear he's still at the hotel."

"Is he?" She did not think it necessary to admit that she had seen the young man driving along Front street, looking neither to the right or left. That was yesterday.

"Uh-huh. Hope his foot's all right. Might do us some good."

"I don't understand."

Doctor Silverthorne regarded her quizzically, the fingers of his right hand tugging gently at his goatee. It was a habit of his. One that had caused Andy to remark: "Doc always appears to be milking for ideas."

"Then you haven't heard about . . Dennison?"

"No, sir." Again that faint unrest at the sound of the name. Andy had contributed no further information, but many of Carol's waking hours had been spent in fruitless conjecture. She couldn't help it. Any more than she could the eager look that came into her brown eyes now.

"Some plane factory's moving here. There's been a lot of rumors. Seems this new man's some sort of an official . . . Here to start things. I reckon he has."

"Oh! That's marvelous!" Then Wige had been right, after all. "Will it be a large factory, Doctor?"

"More wild tales. From a hundred workmen to ten thousand. I don't know. And maybe they'll have their own doctor. If they don't, it shouldn't hurt me and our friend Rush. Both of us need some help, God knows."

"And think what it will do for the stores and . . . things!" Carol's practical mind leaped, ahead. There was Andy. Perhaps he could afford an attractive shop. "Where do you suppose all the people will find places to stay? Where is the factory going to be?"

"Up the railroad a piece. The old canning factory's a part of the ground they tell me. Odd you hadn't heard. Town's buzzing with it."

Doctor Silverthorne was recalling Dennison's injury, that the stranger had asked him where he might find Andy Delaine. Queer for a fellow like him to be hunting Andy. Carol's face convinced him that she didn't know the answer, either.

"I hope it's true," she sighed. "I can't remember anything exciting ever happening here. It would be almost as good as living in a city."

"Could boom things for a time. You should advise Mrs. Steel to take in boarders. She's famous for running church suppers." Erasmus gave his beard a final tug. "The Hanscomb can't stand much of a rush and if Peck Mather doesn't clean things up a bit, he'll find himself paying a bonus to the trade he does snare. Your friend with the magnetic feet must have hardy ancestors. Well, I'm leaving. If a call comes from Wilcox's, tell them I'll be along in the course of an hour or so. Ed can't last long, though. I'll give him a couple of days."

Ordinarily a statement like that would have depressed Carol greatly. Dr. Silverthorne had a dispassionate way of discussing death—births too—but he always brooded over the passing of a patient. As if he somehow had failed in a professional task. Just now, however, his receptionist's mind was too greatly taken up by Jericho's good fortune. Nevertheless, she deferred her lunch hour until she was sure that the doctor had time to reach the Wilcox farm. Scarcely half a block from the office she was startled to hear her name called and turned to see a car slowing at the curb.

It was Mr. Dennison.

"Going your way," he observed. "Can I drop you at your gate? It's warm walking today." As he spoke he reached out and flung open the roadster's door. That made an acceptance of the invitation rather compelling.

"Why, thank you very much!"

As Carol sank back into the deep upholstery the first thing that came to mind was that she had been picked up directly in front of the bank. Wige would have something to say about that now, if he saw it. After all, what difference did it make? "How is your foot?" she asked with polite concern, glancing down as if she expected to see the injured member swathed in bandages. It wasn't.

"Coming along nicely. And how are you?"

"I'm fine."

"I fancy so," He said quietly, but without any suggestion of the viled sarcasm Carol had come to associate with his talk. Privately she had concluded that he might have a keen sense of humor but for some reason feared it would break out and so was continually on his guard. After all, she had conversed with him but twice and when his foot was hurting him. In the excitement of this unexpected situation she promptly forgot the puzzle that was revolving in her mind when Dennison hailed her: What the "proposition" could be he had attempted to sell Andy but hadn't succeeded.

Now he was speaking again in the same casual way. And driving slowly, too.

"As a matter of fact, Miss Delaine, I was wondering if you weren't unusually happy just now."

There it was again. Why must he spoil almost everything, he said? She countered that one with Andy's dismissive:

"Why not? I've admired your car every time I've seen it. It's beautiful." She was aware that her driver gave her a quick glance, but she continued to look straight ahead.

'Goodness,' was his vexatious retort. "Excuse it. But I hope you don't really think I'm . . . . like that!"

"Then there is something else I should be happy about?"

"It sounds asinine. But I was thinking about our plant locating here. From the way I've been buttonholed and interviewed the last twenty-four hours, I had an impression. . . ."

"Why of course I'm happy about that! Perhaps I should have started enthusing at once. But I didn't know a thing about it until Doctor Silverthorne told me an hour or two ago. And he couldn't tell me very much. Then it's true?"

"It's true enough," Dennison cursed himself mentally for his callow attempt. This girl was sure to think him an utter simpleton.

He had visited Delaine at his shop that same morning and reluctantly accepted the little tailor's terms on the strength of a telegram received from the home office. Nothing else to do just now the wire said, later perhaps. Dennison was to make the best bargain he could. Progress was essential. Delaine was politely imperturbable, but the younger man thought he detected a certain smugness in his air. Of course he had told his family, gloated over his cleverness. He would.

Now, it appeared that he had done nothing of the sort. More than that, he had succeeded in making Lawhead's rising young executive look undeniably silly. In spite of her unfortunate choice of relatives, this girl was unusually attractive and she had a distinct personality. For some reason he could not explain she had been in his thoughts quite often during the past forty-eight hours. This morning he had been wondering how her father's stroke would affect her. From Jericho's viewpoint, the Delaines would be rich. They'd probably splurge and that, so far as Carol was concerned, seemed a pity.

Before he could think of any satisfactory way to escape from his present awkward dilemma, the Steel house was reached, and Carol had her hand on the car door. He opened it for her. At the same time a quick glance revealed Andre Delaine's slight figure reposing in a porch chair. That, too, was quite in keeping with the situation.

"Thank you very much, Mr. Dennison," Carol said quietly as she stepped out.

"Not at all.'

He pulled the door shut with a slam, lifted his hand in a stiff gesture and drove on, picking up speed as he went. Carol noted an amused gleam in Andy's blue eyes as she mounted the steps.

"I got a ride home today," she observed carelessly. "Pretty car, isn't it?"

"Most attractive. You, too, ducklet. Our Ben Hur has been a long time in arriving, but he knows how to grace the appearance of his chariot. How did you manage it?"

"I didn't. I had just left the office on my way home when he called to me and asked if I didn't want to ride. Wasn't that all right?"

"Assuredly."

"He must be on his way out to look over the plant site. I didn't know anything about the new factory until Doctor mentioned it." Carol leaned against a porch post and looked down accusingly at her father. "Why didn't you tell me, Andy?"

"To tell you the truth, I don't know much about it myself . . . no more than anybody else seems to. I gather that it will be quite a layout. If it is, the town has had a break at last." He changed the topic abruptly. "I'm glad I saw you drive up here just now."

"Why?" she asked in surprise.

"I suppose it's my artistic appreciation. You know that bus goes beautifully with your hair... the color, I mean. It occurred to me that you should have just such a car of your own. And a chauffeur."

"Silly!"

"But it isn't. Sudden inspirations like that have accounted for a lot of surprising happenings. One never knows. Wouldn't you like such an outfit?" There was a little gleam of interest in his eyes as he waited for her answer. Wondering what Dennison might have said.

"Oh, I'd take a smaller car to start with," she decided indifferently. "And I think I'd prefer to drive it myself. But I imagine we'll stick to the family wheelbarrow for a while . . . unless everybody here gets rich." She was reminded suddenly of Silverthorne's suggestion of boarders. "Do you suppose we might get a break, too, Andy?"

"Quien sabe." He thrugged expressively. "This mounting wave may roll up a new presser for me and a flivver for you. We'll stand by to grab if it does. I only hope the whole thing doesn't prove a dud."

"So do I. Yes, Auntie?" Mrs. Steel had appeared at the front door.

"Aren't you going to eat your lunch? The things are on the table waiting." She pushed open the screen and flapped her apron vigorously. "I declare I'll be glad when this Indian summer or what ever it is gets done with. The flies are worse than they've been all season. Hurry in while I've got the door open."

TORONTO STOCKS

Toronto, Oct. 30—(CP)—Trading action slumped off to 664,000 shares this afternoon on Toronto Exchange. Apart from a small gain for industrials the market was moderately weak.

Canadian breweries responded to the proposal to change preferred shares into common and the price gained 3-4 to 19 3-4. Distillers-Seagram gained a point and Abitibi Pfd. gained 2 points. The foods were stronger.

Powell Rouyn and Lingman Lake were gainers of 5 to 10 cents in active trading and other golds were in dull trade with small declines out-numbering the gains. East Sullivan lost 15 and Quemont gained 3-8. Pamour was up 10 cents.

SAW FATHER STRIKE MOTHER

Toronto, Oct. 30 — (CP) — Myrtle Crowther, 16-year-old daughter of William Crowther, charged with manslaughter in connection with the death of his wife, Myrtle Levina, during a domestic quarrel, testified yesterday she saw her father strike her mother on the face knocking her unconscious.

Construction on New O'Brien's Bridge Progressing Favorably

With the contract for the construction of new O'Brien bridge and building of the necessary approaches now having been let for several weeks, work on the project is progressing with expectancy of its being well under way before winter sets in. According to highway engineers the new bridge of steel and concrete will be constructed at a point approximately 300 feet south of the present bridge.

Mechanical shovels have cut their way through the grade north of the present bridge and on the route to the approach to the new bridge with the material being used for fill at bridge approach. Preliminary work on construction of the new river crossing has already commenced with upright timbers being placed in the river.

The new bridge was deemed necessary by highway engineers when two spans of the present bridge collapsed into the river following damage received when girders were buckled last spring when struck by a truck. The missing spans were temporarily replaced pending construction of the new bridge.

Wellington Boy Had Close Call From Death During Battle Around Caen

"We lay under the crest of a knoll during the bloody fighting around Caen. After the battle the padre, a corporal and myself went out to attend to the wounded. Rifles sticking in the air, bayonets driven deeply in the ground to identify the location of the killed of both sides, looked like a young forest."

"The padre and the corporal were captured, but I managed to get away and that is how I am alive today. Two days later we found their bodies in a ditch. The Nazis had shot them through the head."

That is one of the experiences of Sergeant Jack Ogilvy, R.E.M.E., attached to the Sherbrooke Fusiliers, 7th Brigade, Canadian Armored Corps, who arrived home on Sunday via the troopship "Queen Elizabeth."

Delay was Fortunate

On another occasion the young soldier who has been overseas for the past three years, and who got his baptism of fire on D-Day, came out victorious from a brush with the Grim Reaper while travelling in his jeep in Germany. It appears he with two men noticed a brand new bicycle which had been abandoned by the enemy, leaning against a ruined building.

"Stop this buggy, Sarge" sang out one of the men, "and we'll grab the bike and take it with us." Fortunately for the trio, that is what happened. They loaded the bike into the jeep and drove on to another village where heavy German mortar shells were falling. Stopping at a house to get rid of the bicycle, they left the jeep and ducked quickly as heavy shells landed in the vicinity. "Had we kept on going, we would have been blown to Kingdom come, for the road ahead of us was nothing but gaping mortar holes."

Enemy, Bazookas Deadly

Only one tank of his regiment survived the holocaust of action between D-Day and V-Day, he said. This is being presented by the Dominion government to the city of Sherbrooke, Que., home of the Fusiliers.

The German bazookas were deadly anti-tank weapons and caused a lot of damage. The shells, armor piercing, would penetrate armor plate until they came to an air space and then explode. Diesel driven tanks proved the best against enemy anti-tank fire because of less danger of gasoline explosions and of fire from ignition.

In charge of a recovery section of the Ordnance Corps, Sergeant Ogilvy said there was never a dull moment for his detachment: "We were kept busy day and night doing repair and maintenance work. Our electric welders were the busiest men in the army welding damaged tank tracks."

Rained All Way Home

The trip home aboard the "Queen Elizabeth" or the "Lizzie" as the troops call the giant liner, was a fitting climax to an army career.

"We never saw a gleam of sunshine from the time we left England on October 22, until we arrived home here in Prince Edward County. It rained during the entire trip and the ocean was anything but docile. On several occasions huge waves washed over her decks. However, the foods was excellent and we had no complaints."

He is spending a thirty-day leave with his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Ogilvy, and his wife in Wellington, Ontario.

Marmora

Marmora—Mr. Irwin McCoy attended a meeting of the Ontario Hog Producers' Association in Toronto last week.

Mr. and Mrs. N. H. McConnell of Belleville were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Lorne Bowen.

Mr. and Mrs. John McFarlin spent the week end with friends in Toronto.

Mr. Borb McGuire of New York City visited Mr. and Mrs. C. H. Buskard at Deloro last week.

Mrs. Gordon Jarvis visited her daughter, Mrs. Harold Mumby and Mr. Mumby at Port Hope for a few days last week.

Mr. and Mrs. E. C. Prentice and Laurie and Mr. and Mrs. H. W. Sabine visited Mr. and Mrs. A. M. Fulton at Warkworth on Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Chambers and sons and Mrs. Post of Eldorado were Sunday guests of Mr. and Mrs. Gordon Osborne and Mr. and Mrs. Fred Lee.

A number of members of Marmora Branch Canadian Legion No. 237 attended the funeral of the late Lieut. Col. John McLean at Trenton on Wednesday.

Mrs. W. Chrysler, Mrs. E. C. Prentice, Mrs. H. W. Sabine, Mrs. F. R. Wills and Mrs. F. Sweet attended the funeral of the late Lieut. Col. John McLean in Trenton on Wednesday.

On Saturday the "Pats" C. G. I.T. group of St. Andrew's Church journeyed to Belleville, where they were guests of the C. G. I. T. of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church. The Marmora group consisted of 14 girls and was the only group with 100 per cent attendance.

Over sixty friends and neighbors met at the home of Mr. and Mrs. William Hamilton on Saturday evening to honor them, prior to their departure to their new home in Peterborough. During the evening an address was read by Rev. Mr. Hicks and Mrs. R. Kennedy presented Mr. and Mrs. Hamilton with a purse of money.

Tweed

Tweed—A delightful party was given in the United Church Sunday School rooms on Friday evening from 4 to 6 by the Baby Band for their mothers and grandmothers. Mrs. Carman Atton, Leader of the Band spared no trouble to make it very enjoyable. About twenty five little tots wore Indian hats and in the center of the room was a sand table with a miniature hospital, set among small spruce trees, making it very realistic (and very fascinating to the children). Miss Marjory Elliott who spent the summer among the Indians in the west with pictures etc., gave a very interesting account of the Indians and their customs. A collection was taken by Donny Colgan and Garry Blakley to which the children dropping in their pennies felt they had a share in this great work. The meeting was closed with prayer by Rev. A. L. Sisco. Refreshments well served.

Mr. Sandy Kerr of Midland and Mr. and Mrs. Douglas Jones of Marmora visited Miss Margaret Kerr one day recently.

Mr. and Mrs. Slim McCrea are spending a few days with Mr. and Mrs. Austin Donahue of Oxford Mills and other friends in Winchester.

Mr. and Mrs. N. Wilder, Mr. Lorne Wilder, Mrs. J. Moore motored to Centreville on Sunday and visited Mr. and Mrs. T. Wanamaker and family.

The ladies of Plainfield community prepared a chicken dinner for the Rotary Club of Belleville and their wives on Tuesday evening in the Orange Hall. Four long tables and two smaller ones were filled. A nice program was enjoyed.

Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary motored to Toronto on Wednesday morning for a few days.

Mr. and Mrs. Edward Alexander of Prince Edward County spent Sunday with Mr. and Mrs. Archie Meeks and family.

Mr. and Mrs. Blake Cook and family have moved in with Mr. Earl Outwater and family for awhile.

Mrs. D. Young is spending a few days at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Harry McCreary.

Deepest sympathy is extended to the sorrowing family of the late Mrs. R. Colling of Belleville, who was well known in this community, having attended school at Maple Leaf School and lived on the 8th of Thurlow in her girlhood days.

"Thanks to you, Grandpa Kruschen ...

I'm Now Relieved of Rheumatic Pain"

Too bad this man didn't begin the saline treatment for his rheumatic pains when they first started. It is fortunate for him that he got relief when the pain had become acute. Here's his story:—

"I now feel as fit as a fiddle and I cannot praise Kruschen too much. Before taking Kruschen my rheumatic pains were pretty bad. I began to worry about my job and the children. But I got a tip to try Kruschen. After taking the first bottle I felt better. Since then I have had two more bottles and I now enjoy my work: for I have no aches or pains ... thanks to Kruschen."—Mr. A. H.

You will note that once Mr. A. H. started the Kruschen saline treatment he stayed with it. Follow his example if you too are bothered with rheumatic pains, lumbago or sciatic pains. Take Kruschen faithfully, as long as you feel it is needed. Give it a chance to help overcome conditions in your body which have probably taken months to develop. If you are like many other sufferers, you will notice a gradual improvement in your health and a lessening of pain as you continue the treatment. Just take a pinch of Kruschen in a glass of hot water first thing in the morning, as long as needed, and Mr. A. H. joins with us in wishing you a speedy return to your old, pain-free self!

MIRACLES of MAKE-DO
FROM THE TOPS OF MEN'S SOCKS
FROM SMALL PIECES OF WOOLLENS

Ever think of the wealth of perfectly good woollen yarn going to waste in those sweaters you have put away and forgotten?

Too small? A little moth-eaten? Too old-fashioned to compete with a "Sloppy Joe"?

All excellent reasons for not wearing them yourself, perhaps. But they can still be used to good advantage. For instance, why not try making over one into a smaller size? Or into an attractive swim suit for yourself for those warm vacation days next summer?

Here are just a few of the many miracles you can work with a discarded sweater. And, these days, when wool and other yarns are so scarce, they are worth a try. Pattern for dressing gown available at stores.

BRITISH ISSUE ULTIMATUM TO INDONESIANS

German Govt. in Civilian Hands Next June 1

Step to be Taken By Agreement U.S., Other 3 Powers

Military Occupation to Remain While Necessary

Washington, Oct. 31 —(AP)— President Truman today set next June 1 as a goal for transferring the German government from military to civilian hands.

The President did so in expressing his approval of a letter from Gen. Eisenhower advocating such a course through agreement with the other three powers participating in the occupation of Germany.

Gen. Eisenhower, commanding general of United States occupation forces, recommended — and the President agreed — that military occupation, as distinguished from military government should be continued as long as it is necessary.

New Government Supported by Armed Forces

By HOYT WARE

Rio de Janeiro, Oct. 31—(AP)— All Brazil was calm today as a new government, headed by a civilian jurist and supported by the country's armed forces, began its first day in office following a bloodless coup which ended the 15-year-reign of President Getulio Vargas.

The new regime has pledged itself to step down after the Dec. 2 elections. Chief Justice Jose Linhares, who formally assumed the presidency yesterday afternoon, announced he would hand over his office to the chosen representative of the people.

The government began its task with a full cabinet which included only one holdover from the Vargas regime — veteran diplomat Pedro Leao Velloso, who was acting foreign minister under Vargas and now becomes foreign minister. He led the Brazilian delegations at the Mexico City and San Francisco Conferences.

The swift, effective coup by the armed forces was interpreted by diplomatic observers here as entirely legal, since the president resigned before Linhares took office under a 1937 law requiring the head of the Supreme Court to assume the presidency in the event of the executive's removal. It was learned that the other American countries would be told the new government is entirely interim in character and did not believe it would be necessary to hold consultations regarding recognition.

Linhares said Vargas would be flown in an army plane to his family home at Sao Borja in the State of Rio Grande Do Sul in Southern Brazil.

NINTH LOAN OVER $117,000,000 AHEAD OF EIGHTH

Tuesday's $120,348,300 Sales Bring Total to $694,348,300

Ottawa, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Boosted by almost phenomenal sales Tuesday, the national total in Canada's Ninth Victory Loan was edging the $700,000,000 mark today and maintaining a pace more than $100,000,000 ahead of the 8th Loan drive last spring, the National War Finance Committee reported.

Total sales Tuesday were $120,348,300 compared with $77,039,000 for the corresponding day of the last loan. And the figures sent the national total of $694,967,300 in the Dominion's biggest loan drive for a minimum of $1,500,000,000 in three weeks. The national total at the same point of the Eighth Loan was $577,041,150.

Sales to individuals and payroll purchasers were still well ahead of schedule, totalling $54,820,050 Tuesday against $40,170,200 for the same day last spring. This brought the totalcumulative sales to individuals and payroll purchases to $348,691,950 compared with $293,602,850.

But the big factor in yesterday's total was a $30,000,000 investment by the Metropolitan Life Insurance Company, Ottawa.

Other large purchases included Singer Manufacturing Co., $2,300,000; Asbestos Corporation, Ltd., Montreal, $1,000,000.

Feature of the Ontario campaign last night was announcement by provincial headquarters that an additional 74 Ontario manufacturing plants had shot beyond their objectives, bringing to 280 the number oversubscribing payroll quotas.

The armed services competition was featured by a spurt put on by the army which passed the 200 per cent mark, while the R.C.A.F. followed close behind with 196 per cent and the navy trailed with 146 per cent.

100,000 TROOPS SAID ATTACKING CITY OF TATUNG

Charged Communists Using 40 Field Pieces And Tanks Putting City in Danger

By SPENCER MOOSA

Chungking, Oct. 31. (AP)— Gen. Yen Hsi-Shan, governor of Shansi province, charged today that 100,000 Communist troops are attacking the important rail junction city of Tatung in Northern Shansi.

Yen said he was "70 per cent certain" that the Communists are being directed by Gen. Chu Teh, Communist commander-in-chief.

The Shansi governor claimed he had received reports while visiting here that "unidentified aircraft have been landing behind the Communist lines" but he refused to elaborate on the subject.

He said the attacking forces were using more than 40 field guns and 15 to 20 tanks. "The tanks, according to reports I've received were manned by men dressed like Oute rMongolians."

Tatung is at the junction of the Peiping-Suiyuan and the Puchow railroads.

"Tatung is in great danger," said Yen.

He said the city was being defended by 10,000 troops under his deputy commander, but he added the defenders had only ten field guns and no tanks.

"I have ordered the garrison there to fight to the death," he declared.

Only Propaganda Charged

A Communist spokesman said Yen's accusation that tanks manned by men dressed like Outer Mongols were participating in the attack of Tatung was "Kuomintang propaganda trying to imply that we are getting Russian support so that Chiang Kai-Shek can appeal for American help."

Earlier, Communist troops were reported to have captured a town on the overland route for Central government troops moving toward Manchuria. The government has landed forces at a port near the Manchurian border.

A military dispatch acknowledged the loss of Chining in the Inner Mongolian province of Suiyuan where an estimated 100,000 Communists were said to be on an offensive aimed at controlling a railroad leading into Peiping from the northwest.

Augment U.S. Marines.

East of Peiping, President Chiang Kai-Shek's men were understood to have landed at Chinwangtao to augment United States marines guarding a coal-transporting railroad cut fifteen times recently by Communists. Official Chinese quarters would say only that the landing likely had occurred.

With China's railroad routes disrupted, movement by sea is the only safe and sure way for Chiang's men to move to north China to replace United States forces.

Only yesterday a high United States army officer at Shanghai named Chinwangtao as an explosive spot where the Central Government had better rush its troops because the Americans there were "walking a tightrope" to maintain order.

Britain and Canada As Well as U.S. Know Atomic Bomb Processes

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP) — Great Britain and Canada, as well as the United States, have the knowledge of manufacturing process necessary to produce the atomic bomb, President Truman told his press conference today.

However, Mr. Truman told reporters that he did not believe it was true that the late President Roosevelt and former Prime Minister Churchill reached a secret agreement at Quebec for the peace time use of the atomic discovery. This had been suggested yesterday in the British House of Commons by Capt. Raymond Blackburn, Labor member.

Mr. Truman's statements today were in answer to questions from reporters.

Regarding the coming meeting between the President and Prime Minister Attlee and Prime Minister Mackenzie King, Mr. Truman said Mr. Attlee can talk about anything he chooses (when he arrives in Washington) but he is coming to talk about atomic energy.

The President said that the next step, after a three-power agreement on international policy with respect to the bomb has been reached, will be discussion with other governments of Europe.

TRUMAN URGES HIGHER WAGES TO AVOID DEFLATION

President Says Industry Generally Can Stand Increases Out of Profits

By HAROLD W. WARD

Washington, Oct. 31—(AP)— President Truman has laid down as his post-war wage-policy general approval of reasonable wage increases to avoid deflation and unemployment, but approval of price increases only where necessary.

The president warned labor last night against making too great demands on employers, but he said industry generally could stand some pay increases out of profits.

To those employers wanting higher prices before giving workers more pay for shorter hours—to make up for loss in wartime earnings—Mr. Truman said price increases might be entertained in six months.

Industries essential to conversion could ask price increses now if they must have them to pay better wages to recruit necessary manpower.

Mr. Truman said in a broadcast that labor needs higher pay rates with the change-over from a 48 to a 40-hour work week, and industry can afford to go part way in making up this loss.

Amends August Order

But he also amended his Aug. 18 order relaxing controls on wage increases to add three classes of pay boosts for which compensating price increases could be approved by the stabilization administrator.

These were:

1. Cases where the percentage increase in average straight time hourly earnings since January, 1941, did not equal the percentage increase in the cost of living between January, 1941, and September, 1945.

2. Instances where increases were necessary to correct inequities in wage rates among plants in the same industry or locality, with due regard to normal competitive relationships.

3. Situations in which increases were necessary to insure full production in an industry designated by the stabilization administrator as essential to reconversion, and in which existing wage rates are inadequte to attract needed manpower.

Cost of Living up 30 P. C.

The cost of living rise in the United States since January, 1941, was figured by the Bureau of Labor Statistics at approximately 30 per cent in September. The average straight time hourly earnings increase is placed at about 40 per cent for that month.

The president made these other points:

1. The labor-management conference convening next Monday is to "recommend machinery for mediating or arbitrating differences whenever collective bargaining fails to work."

2. Recent labor difficulties "stand in the way of reconversion" and re-employment of veterans and war workers.

3. Congress has bottled up liberalized unemployment compensation and "full employment" legislation which Mr. Truman regards as vital.

PACKERS' WAGE NEGOTIATIONS NEAR SHOWDOWN

Three Companies Offer Counter-Proposals to Employees' Demands

Winnipeg, Oct. 31 — (CP)—The three big packing companies — Canada Packers, Swift Canadian and Burns and Company — have offered counter-proposals to their employees' demands for a 40-hour, five-day week with the same pay now being received for a 48-hour week, it was learned from an authoritative source today.

The counter-proposals for settlement were made by representatives of the companies last night after negotiations, underway since last Wednesday, were about to break up.

It was learned the terms proposed by the companies did not meet the full union demands and the executives of the United Packinghouse Workers of America (C.I.O.) wanted to have a few hours rest before making a decision.

They were scheduled to meet again today with officials of the companies and Mr. Justice S. E. Richards, government-appointed mediator and chairman of the conference resume discussion of the terms which would affect about 12,000 production employees in 19 packing plants across Canada.

Five-Hour Meeting

Spurred by reports of unrest among some of the Union members who claimed the negotiations for a new master agreement were too slow, delegates to the conference held a meeting last night that lasted more than five hours.

The session which finally broke up shortly after one o'clock this morning followed another four-hour discussion yesterday afternoon.

Attending the final stages of the conference was E. B. Jolliffe, Ontario leader of the C.C.F. party, who is counsel for the Canadian section of the C.I.O. He was working with Ralph Helstein of Chicago, general counsel for the U.P.W.A.

Both union and company officials hinted yesterday that the conference would be broken up if no agreement was reached last night. However the last-minute proposals and adjournment until today brought new hopes for settlement.

During last night's session the delegates read the report on president Truman's wage policy in the United States. The report was taken to the conference room after the president's radio broadcast.

QUESTION OF USE OF NRMA TROOPS RAISED IN HOUSE

Charged Some Members Are Discriminated Against For Political And Racial Reasons

By D'Arcy O'Donnell
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Ottawa, Oct. 31—(CP)—The contentious question of what use should be made of troops originally conscripted for service only in Canada and adjacent territories was revived yesterday in the Commons along with charges that some members of the forces have been discriminated against for political or racial reasons.

As debate on army estimates continued, discussions centred on the Canadian army in Germany and brought out requests that the N.R.M.A. troops be used to relieve general service personnel in the occupation force of 20,000.

In reply to the requests, made by Flt. Lt. James Sinclair (L—Vancouver North), Lt.-Col. Cecil Merritt V.C., (PC—Vancouver Burrard) and a number of other opposition members, Defence Minister Abbott said the method of relieving men in the occupational force now is being worked out.

The N. R. M. A. troops were regarded as potential replacements for the force, but it was not known yet whether they would be used.

Charges by Coldwell

Charges of discrimination in the army were made by M. J. Coldwell, C.C.F. leader, who said some men were demoted or let out of the army for alleged C.C.F. tendencies; by Bona Arsenault (Ind—Bonaventure) who dealt with the treatment of French speaking Canadians, and by T. F. Bentley (CCF—Swift Current) who said men from Prairie Provinces had not received their share of promotions in the army.

When the house opened, Justice Minister St. Laurnet said that arrangements for the Washington conference with President Truman and Prime Minister Attlee on the atomic bomb forced Prime Minister Mackenzie King to change his plans and cancel his visit to the continent of Europe.

Mr. Abbott said he believed the occupation force was one of the things Prime Minister Mackenzie King would have discussed with the British government during his visit to Britain. Mr. King might also discuss it with President Truman.

Swift Action After Brig. A. Mallaby Killed by Rebels

Commander Calls President Of Republic to Headquarters

By RALPH MORTON

Batavia, Java, Oct. 31 —(AP)— All available British warships and aircraft were reported rushing today to Soerabaja — the Java trouble spot where Brig. A. W. F. Mallaby while arranging a truce with Indonesian Nationalists.

Lt.-Gen. Sir Philip Christison, Allied commander in the Netherlands East Indies, notified the Nationalists in an ultimatum that further unprovoked native attacks upon British troops would be crushed with overpowering force.

The report of the dispatching of naval and air reinforcements to Soerabaja was circulated by the Netherlands news agency Aneta, which said the planes would be used to evacuate European women and children still held at the big naval base — the scene during the last few days of bitter clashes between British Indian and Indonesian Nationalist forces.

Informal Talks to be Held.

President Soekarno of the "Indonesian Republic" announced that his cabinet would hold informal talks tonight with Hubertus J. Van Mook, acting Governor General of the East Indies, at Gen. Christison's residence. The Nationalists are seeking freedom from Dutch colonial control of the rich islands.

Gen. Christison said Brig. Mallaby, commander of the 49th Indian Brigade, was murdered at Soerabaja last night "while arranging details of a cease fire order in the company of Indonesian leaders."

The British General summoned Soekarno, president of the "Indonesian Republic," to his headquarters, acquainted him with the facts of Brig. Mallaby's death and read his warning. Earlier, asked whether he held Soekarno responsible for the killing, he replied that "these acts were done in the name of the Republic set up by himself."

Climaxes 3-Day Battle

The murder climaxed a three-day battle which apparently had ended when the new attack broke out in Soerabaja. Gen. Christison charged that many Indonesians in the attack wore Japanese uniforms "and there were indications that some, if not all of them, actually were led and directed by Japanese officers and Germans who were former U-boat captains and crews."

They heavily outnumbered the 1,600 British troops, Gen. Christison said, and were armed with weapons secured because of what he described as an unauthorized surrender by a Japanese General Nakamura to Dutch Capt. P. J. G. Huyer in defiance of written British orders. Gen. Christison said only China, Russia, Britain and the United States were authorized to receive Japanese surrenders.

Treacherous Attack

As the result of that surrender, Christison said, "there were in Soerabaja large quantities of arms, ammunition, armored cars and tanks which the Japanese had surrendered to buyer."

The Allied commander told a press conference that on Oct. 28 "a treacherous and unprovoked attack was made on British and Indian forces at Soerabaja after the occupation had been proceeding there three days in a friendly and co-operative manner."

His warning to the Indonesians said:

"These direct and unprovoked attacks upon British forces cannot in any circumstances be permitted, and unless the Indonesians who have committed there acts surrender to my forces, I intend to bring the whole weight of my sea, land and air forces and all the weapons of modern war against them until they are crushed.

"If in this process innocent Indonesians should be killed or wounded, the sole responsibility will rest with those Indonesians who have committed the crimes I have named."

Crimes Detailed

The crimes referred to were the breaking of the truce, "agreed to in the presence of Dr. Soekarno and Mohammed Hatta" (Vice President of the Indonesian Republic), the killing of Brig. Mallaby and attacks on British troops.

Capt. J. J. L. Willinge, chief of staff of the Royal Dutch Navy, said Dutch Naval headquarters had received no report of a Dutch acceptance of Japanese surrender and he could not imagine that Capt. Buyer "would have defied the orders" of the British. mander in chief of Dutch forces in the N.E.I., expressed horror at the murder of Mallaby and Brig. H. L. Vanoyen, commander added: "It is clear that Soekarno was given a chance to try to control his people and failed."

Seven Years' Term Is Imposed On Guardsman

London, Oct. 31 — (Reuters) — Convicted Oct. 9 by court martial of voluntarily aiding the enemy while a prisoner of war, Guardsman William Humphrey Griffiths, 34, of the Welsh Guards, today was sentenced to seven years' penal servitude.

Griffiths, alleged to have taken part in propaganda broadcasts, admitted he made a recording of scripts written by William Joyce, "Lord Haw Haw" of the German propaganda radio whose appeal against death sentence for treason is being heard here today.

Griffiths' recordings were later broadcast and heard in Britain. The defendant said that when he protested to the Germans against the work, he was threatened with being sent to a concentration camp and that Joyce threatened his life.

Shoe Rationing In U.S. Terminates

Washington, Oct. 31 — (AP)— The end of shoe rationing in the United States was ordered yesterday, effective at 12:01 a.m., Wednesday.

Terminating a program which began Feb. 8, 1943, Chester Bowles administrator of the Office of Price Administrator, said rationing can be lifted because shoe production has increased substantially since VJ-Day.

Mr. Bowles said the outlook for November and December is for 29,000,000 to 30,000,000 pairs of shoes each month. This, he added, would be equal to demand before the war.

Resentment Against Displaced Folk Mostly Cause of Unrest in U.S. Zone

Frankfurt, Oct. 31 — (AP) — Groups of idle German youths and returning German soldiers are showing dangerous signs of increasing unrest in the United States occupation zone in Germany and are being watched closely for any indication of organized resistance, the American military government said today.

Most of the unrest, the government said in its monthly report, is the result of resentment against displaced persons, who were described as the chief source of lawlessness in the zone.

"There is a potential danger," it added, "that jealous resentment against and hatred of displaced persons . . . will serve as a popular rallying point for idle youths and young discharged German soldiers."

The German populace, the report said, is becoming increasingly bitter because of thefts of food and property by displaced persons. While there has been some improvement in dealing with this lawlessness, "cases of murder and organized looting have occurred at an unpleasant rate."

Resentment over depredations already has led to some trouble, the report disclosed. In Bremen, 20 German youths from 16 to 23 years of age were arrested before they could carry out a planned attack against displaced persons.

Holding out some hope for an improvement in the general situation, the report said:

"It is estimated that 60 to 70 per cent of the 250,000 Polish displaced persons now in the United States zone, and who constitute the greatest source of disorder and lawlessness, will be repatriated voluntarily by Dec. 1, 1945."

Soap Shortage Will End Soon

Ottawa, Oct. 31 — (CP) — Ottawa, and perhaps other cities are experiencing a shortage of bar soap and soap chips, but the word of Oils and Fats Administrator G. W. Lee Tuesday was that the situation won't last long.

The shortage apparently stems from control of soap-making materials because of Europe's need for fats and oils, but bar soap production has now been increased and should be showing in bigger supplies on store shelves soon.

Meanwhile, there's plenty of toilet soaps available.

'Modesty' Controversy Bids Fair To be Hot Public Issue in England

London, Oct. 31 — (CP) — A "modesty" controversy — does the Englishman like his girl friend to be modest or otherwise?—threatens to become a hot public issue after jogging through its initial stages in a sedate sort of war.

The question had been debated freely but with acrimony until Norman Dodd, Labor Member of Parliament for Dartford, said after a visit to Berlin that British occupation troops there preferred German girls to the home product. Why? Because the frauleins were more modest.

Mr. Dodd later protested undue significance had been attached to his remarks, but not before the Daily Mirror editorially told him "he should learn when to keep his mouth shut."

The Mirror added that it for one "refused to believe" that the British Tommy "really prefers the feminine types from which sprang the Hitler maidens; the Ima Greses; the keepers of concentration camps, to the frank, independent girls of his own country."

Ann Temple, who conducts a column in the Daily Mail, previously had come to the conclusion, based on a large correspondence from readers, that "there is everywhere a weariness of the gracelessness, the unrestrained speech, the manners, the slackness of behavior of the war years."

Women, she said, had generally condemned men "for their apparent preference for the "brazen hussy.' " On the men's side, she concluded, "modesty is almost unanimously acclaimed with the rider that modesty is not to be confused with prudery, Victorianism or even demureness."

Mr. Dodd's statement set the discussion off on another tack: What do Englishwomen think of their countrymen? One letter to the editor, after commenting on the Tommy's reported preference for German girls, added:

"But many thousands of British women have also made their choice, and find the young men of Canada, America, Australia and Sout Africa far more pleasing and attractive in every way than the dull-witted, stolid and bad-mannered young Englishman."

MANY APPLYING FOR DEER LICENCE

Old Man Deer and his family had better start seeking new hiding places before the annual hunting invasion starts next week if the sale of licences can be judged a criterion.

Eddie Thomas, local licence issuer, is busier than the proverbial one-armed paperhanger these days handing out the official documents which entitle the nimrods to bring home the venison.

One impatient lad awakened Mr. Thomas before the crack 'o dawn to get his licence. "They are going like hot cakes," he said "and it looks as if last year's record will be broken."

Sales are already equal to those of 1944 and the inevitable last-minute rush will send the number sold soaring.

CELEBRANTS WARNED NOT TO DAMAGE ON HALLOWE'EN

"Tonight is Hallowe'en, and likely the people will be celebrating," remarked Chief of Police Walter Probert today.

"It is perfectly all right to celebrate as long as it is done in an orderly manner, but the Police Department will not tolerate any rowdyism, or wilful destruction of property. Police officers will be on duty in all parts of the city and are under orders to curb any demonstrations that look likely to result in damage to or destruction of property."

"The youth and elder people of the city have behaved themselves admirably in the past," the Chief added, and he saw no reason why the fine record should not be maintained. But, he said, "we will not stand for any nonsense and people breaking the law will be dealt with in the usual manner, Hallowe'en or no Hallowe'en."

ALUMINUM EMPLOYEE INJURED IN ACCIDENT

Marshall Neil Hay, sales manager of the fabric department of the Aluminum Company of Canada, Kingston, was admitted to the Belleville General Hospital, Monday evening suffering with a fractured back and severe facial lacerations as a result of a motor accident.

Hay was travelling west on Highway No. 7, three miles west of Kaladar when his car went out of control, left the highway and plunged into a rock cut where it turned over.

Dr. M. G. Dales, Tweed, went to the scene of the accident and rendered first aid to the injured man, afterwards ordering him to hospital.

Chief of Police G. M. Spratt, of Tweed, investigated the accident.

Seek Man Who Attempted To Rob Two Citizens

Smith's Falls, Ont., Oct. 31 — (CP)— Smith's Falls police are on the lookout for a short, stout man wearing a brown leather jacket and felt hat who attempted to rob two citizens last night.

Warren William told police he had fled unharmed when the man stepped from behind a building and tried to strike him on the head with a bottle. R. Angus said he chased off after several blows a man who stepped from behind a parked car and accosted him. Both gave police a similar description of the would-be robber.

Cracked Water Main Laid More Than 58 Years Ago

Water mains put down fifty or sixty years ago were really water mains in the opinion of officials of the local public utilities commission, who over the weekend had the occasion to institute repairs in the west end of the city where an old sixteen-inch main had cracked.

The pipe which cracked was still 9-10 of an inch thick and according to dave on the pipe had been in service since 1887. During the interval in which repairs were being effected the city was served through the auxiliary water main constructed by the department some years ago. "Really it should not be termed an auxiliary main as it is actually in service all the time," commented Oswald Scott, utilities manager. "Had the main not been there conditions would have been serious."

Only about ten citizens were temporarily out of water because of the breaking of the main, according to Mr. Scott. The Ontario School for the Deaf and citizens west of Sidney Street, were given water service through running of fire hose, while like temporary measures were adopted to provide water service for Albert College and citizens on Parker Street.

Police Blotter

Although in this modern age there is nothing unusual in the sight of an intoxicated women, just such an incident caused a bit of excitement at the Dundas and John Street intersection Tuesday night. Crowds of people started to gather with result that the police cruiser was sent to investigate. The woman was taken into custody and charged.

Tire Taken

Parking cars on a local service station while attending the theatre is causing the odd local motorist considerable grief according to reports made at the police station. For the third or fourth time within the past week complaints have been received of cars being molested while parked on this station with last night's complaint involving the theft of a tire.

Cars Damaged

Damages amounting to approximately $100 resulted Tuesday afternoon at the Front and Bridge Street intersection when cars driven by Burton Redner, R.R., Belleville, and Samuel Carson, 81 George Street, were in collision. The Carson auto was being driven south and the other north on Front Street, the collision occurring when one attempted to turn onto Bridge Street.

Vicious Dogs Reported

Vicious dogs are also the object of complaints by residents. Early today a Murney Street resident reported he was attacked by a dog near 84 West Moira Street, the animal chewing his leg while he was passing. Also dogs are reported as molesting residents in the neighborhood of the Pine St school grounds. City Pound Keeper Thomas Thorn was instructed to look into the matter.

Verandah Chair Taken

There also seems to be a furniture shortage as is indicated by the disappearance of a chair from the verandah at 104 Dundas St. A Bleecker Street resident complains of lumber and plaster being damaged at her house which is under construction on that street.

Obituary

THOMAS EDGAR YATES
(Toronto — Belleville)

Thomas Edgar Yates died at his home, 111 Lyall Avenue, Toronto, on Monday, Oct. 29th. He was sixty three years of age. He was a member of the Masonic Order and of the I.O.O.F.

Surviving him are his wife, the former Daisy Biscomb; and one daughter, Miss Dorothy A. Yates. Interment took place in Belleville Cemetery early this afternoon.

MRS. JESSIE MAY HAMILTON
(Stirling)

Stirling, Oct. 31 (Special) — Following injuries sustained when struck by a motor car in Stirling recently, Mrs. Jessie May Hamilton, wife of Mr. John Alexander Hamilton, of this village, died in the Belleville General Hospital on Monday, October 29th.

The late Mrs. Hamilton, who was in her 39th. year, was born in Stirling and was a daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Mott. Her father died some years ago and her mother is now Mrs. C. Simmons, of Stirling. All her life was passed in this village and to many friends her death has brought much regret. In religion she was a member of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church.

Surviving her are her husband; her mother; three sons, John William age 10 years; Charles James, age eight years, and Robert Leslie, age six years; one daughter, Ruth Clara May, age four years; one sister, Miss Pearl Mott, Belleville.

The funeral announcement is made in this issue.

MRS. LANEY NICOLSON

After an illness of two weeks' duration, Mrs. Laney Nicolson, widow of James Nicolson, died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. David Asselstine, 62½ Moira St. West on Tuesday evening.

Born in Madoc Township, the late Mrs. Nicolson was in her 84th. year, and was a daughter of the late Mr. and Mrs. Samuel McMechan. Five years ago she came from Madoc to reside in this city. She was a member of the United Church.

Surviving her are four daughters, Mrs. David Asselstine, Belleville; Mrs. Samuel Marchen, Peterborough; Mrs. William Rollins, Peterborough, and Mrs. Kenneth Campbell, Toronto; one step-son, Kenneth Nicolson, Toronto; four brothers, Hugh McMechan, Madoc; William McMechan, Manitoba; John McMechan, Manitoba, and Charles McMechan, Vancouver, B.C.; two sisters, Mrs. Geo. Nicolson, Sidney Township, and Mrs. Charles Wilson, Manitoba. Her husband died ten years ago.

Two are Injured In Highway Crash Near Actinolite

Miss Agnes Walsh, 53, and her brother, Thomas Walsh, 63, both of Madoc, are in Belleville General Hospital suffering from serious injuries sustained when they were struck down by an oncoming auto on Highway No. 7, one mile east of Actinolite.

Tuesday night lights on the Walsh car had failed and its occupants attempted to flag down an oncoming car to obtain assistance. The oncoming car crashed into the rear of the Walsh vehicle, knocking the two elderly people to the road. Miss Walsh suffered numerous fractured ribs, while her brother sustained multiple head injuries. The car which crashed into the Walsh auto was driven by Franklin O'Coype of Tweed.

The injured persons were brought to Belleville hospital by Dr. M. G. Dales, of Tweed. The accident was investigated by Provincial Constable Jack Hatch, of Madoc.

ONE COON CAPTURED

Toronto, Oct. 31—(CP)—Three raccoons braved city traffic and ran into trouble yesterday. The coons, a mother and two young ones, were spotted by Ernie Mitchell and Charlie Harper. The men caught one of the young coons and the others escaped.

Runs Into Path Of Oncoming Car, Child Injured

Running into the path of an oncoming car at the corner of Dundas and William Streets, 9-year-old Francis Calbury, son of Mr. Alex Calbury, 98 S. George Street, sustained serious injury shortly after dinner on Tuesday and was admitted to the Belleville hospital. Medical examination showed the lad had suffered a broken jaw, arm and leg and face lacerations.

Wilfred Crawford, 50 Forin St. was driving a National Grocers auto west on Dundas Street when near the William Street intersection the lad is stated to have darted out from the north curb directly into the path of the car. He was struck by the fender and hurled to the pavement.

Eye witnesses to the accident stated the driver of the auto had no opportunity of avoiding hitting the Calbury boy as he darted directly into the path of the moving vehicle.

Byron O. Lott Heads Liberals In West Hastings

B. O. Lott was the unanimous choice of the West Hastings Liberal Association at the annual meeting held in Marmora recently. Mr. Lott was re-elected by acclamation.

The executive for the year 1945-46 will be comprised of 1st. vice-president, I. A. McGaughey, Trenton; 2nd. vice-president, Mrs. (Col.) Roscoe Vanderwater, Foxboro; 3rd. vice-president, Fred Johnson, Marmora.

W. C. Hale, secretary of the Ontario Liberal Association, addressed the meeting and paid tribute to the Rt. Hon. W. L. MacKenzie King, who, he said, "had conducted the most efficient and competent government in the history of the Dominion of Canada through the critical years of World War II." The speaker also referred to the rehabilitation program of the government and the important social legislation being introduced to the nation.

Mayor Frank Follwell, Belleville; Mayor Harry Cory, Trenton; Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, Foxboro and others addressed the meeting briefly.

Juvenile Girls Will be Returned To Rochester

Apparently tired of the routine life at Hillside Home, a home for neglected girls at Rochester, N.Y. and with a yen to see the world, particularly Canada, two 14-year-old girls from the above institution turned up at the local police station Tuesday evening requesting lodging for the night.

At first seemingly a bit reluctant to talk, the two young girls finally told their story with result that local police communicated with officials of the Rochester home and they are now awaiting escort to take them back to the home. The girls hitch-hiked a ride to the International border and crossing the Peace Bridge at Buffalo and Fort Erie continued on their travels to Belleville before night overtook them. The girls were not delinquent, it was pointed out by local officers, as Hillside Home is an institution for the care of neglected girls.

Death Accidental Jury's Verdict

A verdict of accidental death was returned by a coroner's jury Tuesday night at the adjourned inquest looking into the death of five-year-old D'Arcy Leland, Foxboro, who died in Belleville hospital a week ago after being struck down by a truck near his home on Mudcat Lane.

The Leland lad was returning home from school when he became frightened at a farm tractor emerging from a lane and ran across the road directly into the path of a truck being driven by Harry L. Clarke, R.R. Holloway. The inquest was held at the city police station under Coroner Dr. G. S. Cronk. Jurors empanelled were as follows: Tim Sullivan, Croft Smith, H. Rollins (Foreman), John Frost and Robert Christmas.

45.4 Per Cent of Objective Reached in Loan Campaign

With approximately 44 per cent of the time elapsed in the 9th. Victory Loan campaign, subscriptions in Hastings County are slightly more than keeping pace, it was announced today through the county loan headquarters. Subscriptions thus far in the campaign from all sources have now totalled $1,636,000, or 45.4 per cent of the $3,600,000 county objective.

With $166,500 of its $250,000 objective subscribed, the canvassing district of Madoc-Marmora and adjoining townships is still leading the county in percentage of objective attained, while the city of Belleville stands second with 58 per cent or $853,650 of its $1,448,000 objective subscribed.

Tweed district has $87,850 of its $185,000 objective subscribed; Trenton $192,950 of its $680,000 goal; Sidney and Thurlow district $182,800 of its $540,000 objective; Stirling and Rawdon district $60,650 of $197,000; Deseronto $37,150 of $105,000, and Bancroft district $54,650 of $195,000.

Throughout the county there have been 4,043 applications with total subscriptions of $1,636,000. Two thousand four hundred and fifty of these applications were received through banks, salesmen and group payrolls with sales amounting to $1,313,650, while the balance of 1,593 applications for $322,550, had been received thru' the payroll savings section of the county canvass.

8,000 TO 9,000 CAMP VICTIMS BELIEVED DEAD

Germans Crammed Them Before V-E Day Into Four Ships Sent to Baltic

(By BARBARA WACE)

Neustadt, Schleswig-Holstein, Oct. 31 (AP) — Between 8,000 and 9,000 Nazi concentration camp victims are believed to have died when the Germans crammed them into four ships which were sent deliberately into the Baltic Sea to be sunk by Allied warplanes, five days before VE-Day.

A ruthless hunt now is on for the German naval commander held responsible.

Bodies of thousands of Nazi slave workers who perished in blazing prison ships or were drowned in the icy waters still are being washed up on the beaches.

Nazi doctors who worked at the Neue Gamme concentration camp, from whence most of the victims came, also were being hunted. The doctors were said to have experimented on the internees by injecting them with tuberculosis.

Full Story Yet to be Told.

The full story will not be told fully until the War Crimes Trial of the Neue Gamme concentration camp commandant and his staff. But in a displaced persons camp which once was a U-boat school, 23-year-old Pieszerock Nikodem, a Pole, told how he swam to shore from one of the doomed ships. To his version was added that of an Allied naval officer who watched the sinkings of the four prison ships and helped rescue 490 of the victims.

Nikodem told this story:

"On April 8 we were pushed onto the Athene (a small freighter).

"There were 2,000 men in that little ship. We could not breathe.

"Then we sailed around and boarded the Cap Arcona (a pleasure liner). I do not know how many were put on board the Cap Arcona. For four days we had no food at all. We had little water and nowhere to wash. We stayed until May 3. We did not know why we were there, but we thought they would take us away to Norway, perhaps to continue the experiments they conducted at Neue Gamme."

The Allied planes hit the ships with rocket bombs, he said.

ENTIRE FLEET FOR SALE

Vancouver, Oct. 31 —(CP)— The Vancouver Sun said in a newspage story yesterday that it had learned from sources "in Ottawa" that the entire Park steamships fleet of 250 government built and owned 10,000-ton and 4,700-ton freighters will shortly be offered for sale, chiefly to Canadian shipping companies.

Russian Girl Tells Memories Of Hiroshima

By RUSSELL BRINES

Tokyo, Oct. 31 —(AP)— Whimpering people stumbling up roads to the mountains . . . their faces black . . . skin hanging like torn sleeves from their arms . . . bare bones . . . people clamping their rent flesh with their own hands . . . people crawling on broken legs . . .

These are the memories of Kaleria Palchikoff, an eye-witness to the atomic bombing of Hiroshima and the days that followed.

The 21-year-old Russian, now a typist for the American armed forces here, was sitting with her parents and one of her two younger brothers in their Japanese-style house about two miles from the bomb blast centre. They joined in the flight to the mountains.

The Palchikoff family and other white Aliens in Hiroshima weren't burned, she said but thousands of Japanese were scorched "jet black."

Many were burned fatally though their clothes did not catch fire, the young woman recalled in an interview, and others had their clothes burned off but escaped death.

"When the bomb exploded," she said, "I saw a brilliant white flare, and suddenly the air seemed to be unusually hot but I heard no explosion."

In the mountains, blackened Japanese told her "we just saw a flash and this is how it affected us."

"They believe the Americans had fixed the bomb so only Japanese would be burned and had chosen early-morning for the attack in order to kill all the children then out in the open," said Miss Palchikoff. "I believe most of the children were killed."

The typist said she saw two kinds of death. Some persons died in two or three days from severe burns. Others grew gradually weaker and died at the end of a week, and in some cases their heads became misshapen bulges within a few hours."

Still another kind of death occurred a month after the bomb struck, the young woman said. Many had recovered from their burns "when their hair started falling out, they ran a temperature, their bodies turned a pale green, then they died."

Prime Minister King May Sail on Sunday

London, Oct. 31 —(CP Cable) —Prime Minister Mackenzie King may sail for Canada on the Queen Mary leaving Southampton next Sunday, Nov. 4, it was learned today.

It was understood that Mr. King would liek to have Prime Minister Attlee visit Ottawa after the Washington conferences but this was still undecided because the British Prime Minister's engagements at that time would be heavy.

Whether Mr. King and Mr. Attlee will travel together across the Atlantic is still uncertain.

BIRTHS

DUNCAN—To Mr. and Mrs. Arthur Duncan of Batawa, in Belleville General Hospital on Monday, October 29th., 1945, a daughter.

Russia Expected To Join Far East Commission

Washington, Oct. 31. (AP)— President Truman said today he expects Russia to participate soon in the Far Eastern Advisory Commission meeting here to consider Japanese control policy.

The President told a Press Conference he also had received a satisfactory reply from Premier Stalin to the letter which the United States Ambassador, Averill Harriman, recently delivered to Stalin at his vacation retreat in the Crimea.

He did not disclose the contents of the reply.

Failure of Russia so far to send a representative to the Far Eastern meeting here had constituted a stumbling block in American-Soviet relations. The participating governments met for the first time yesterday, but adjourned immediately for a week evidently to give Russia further opportunity to come in on the sessions.

Allied officials had been discussing for some week the best way to arrange for the occupation of Japan by joint British-Chinese-Soviet forces to work alongside the present United States occupation force. It is understood Gen. MacArthur has been kept informed and his views taken into account.

Killing of High Filipino Officers Ascribed to Japs

Manila, Oct. 31—(AP)—Maj.-Gen Basilio J. Valdes, Philippine Chief of Staff, Tuesday told a military commission trying Japanese Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita on war crime charges that he found the half-cremated bodies of his older brother and a nephew in a pit filled with decomposing flesh.

Earlier, the general's sister-in-law Mrs. Agela Lopez de Valdes, and Mrs. Justa Guido, decribed how their husbands—Lt.-Cols. Alejo Valdes and Jose Guido—were tied up by Japanese soldiers under Yamashita's command taken away, never to be seen alive again.

Meanwhile, the defence indicated it would seek to prove that those who fought the Japanese after the surrender of Gen. Jonathan Wainwright on Corregidor could be considered war criminals and that the Japanese occupying Manila found themselves in a situation where any and all civilians might be Guerillas in disguise.

Explaining he did not condone atrocities, Capt. Adolf F. Reel of Boston said the defence would attempt to show that the existence of this underground army without uniforms was responsible for actions of the Japanese troops under the "Tiger of Malaya."

Gen. Valdes testified that he and some soldiers "found many bodies piled on top of each other" in a pit under ruins of a paper factory in Manila.

Not Negative Defence

Meanwhile, an indication that the strategy of the fallen "Tiger of Malaya" will be more than mere negative defence of war crime responsibility charges was the arrival in Tokyo of one of his counsel, Maj. George F. Guy, on a evidence-seeking mission.

Maj. Guy would not disclose the nature of the information he sought, but he told newspapermen he had found much more evidence on behalf of Yamashitz than was believed in existence. He planned to return to Manila late this week or early next week.

"The tall, paunchy, bullet-headed ex-commander of Japan's Philippine occupation army listened intently as the widow of Lt.-Col. Alejo Valdes told how Japanese killed her husband and Lt.-Col. Jose Guido after demobilizing them. The officers and 20 other Filipinos were slain by the invaders in the Singalong residential district of Manila last Feb. 7, she testified, adding that Japanese attempted to rape her daughter the following day.

Listening to her account was the commander of the Philippine Army, Maj.-Gen. Basilio Valdes, brother of Alejo.

The widow of Colonel Guido sobbingly testified that Japanese soldiers tied up her husband and three sons then led them to death after plundering the Guido home of 5,000 pesos ($2,500) and some ancestral jewels.

Strike-Bound Ports Taken Over By British Govt.

London, Oct. 30 —(CP)— The British government had virtually taken over all of Britain's strike-bound ports today, ordering out thousands of additional troops to unload all ships and get the country's export trade moving by loading a number of vessels.

Soldiers had hitherto been used only to unload food ships since the outbreak of the six-week-old stevedores' strike.

The Ministry of War Transport announcing the government's decision to use troops for loading ships as well, said the number of soldiers to be used would be increased as necessity indicated. So far 17,500 men have been assigned to take over the gaps left by the walkout of 40,000 dock workers.

Strike spokesmen yesterday told the government it must either "intervene or perish" as the worst tie up in the United Kingdom in 20 years continued without signs of settlement.

The unauthorized strike for a guaranteed $5.50-a-day wage which has tied up almost every port in the United Kingdom became recognized by the government.

Meanwhile more than 300 loaded ships were tied up in various ports, with more vessels arriving daily. Yesterday 5,000 more soldiers were ordered back from the Continent to help those already working on the docks in an effort to save perishable foodstuffs from rotting.

$60,000 FIRE LOSS

North Bay, Oct. 30 — (CP) — Damage was estimated at $60,000 when fire destroyed stocked lumber and the sawmill at the Haileybury Lumber Company yards at Swastika. During the fire Adolph Chrysler, 72, died from a heart attack as he was pouring water on his threatened home nearby.

URGES ENLARGEMENT

Toronto, Oct. 30 — (CP)—City council yesterday urged enlargement of the Federal Housing program for Toronto to at least 2,000 houses instead of 600. Controller Stewart Smith said already 2,000 applications have been received for the contemplated 600 homes.

R.C.A.F. Pilots Given Preference For T.C.A. Posts

Ottawa, Oct. 31. (CP)—RCAF pilots who will fly Trans-Canada air lines in the future are finding commercial flying a tough job to learn but they are sticking to it and hold good promise, W. F. English, T.C.A. vice-president, said today in an interview.

T.C.A. now is employing only veterans but has not altered its maximum age of 28 for pilot candidates. The normal maximum service for a pilot is 20 years after which he is given a ground job.

So far T.C.A. has signed 750 veterans, about 100 of them pilots, another 180 radio operators and 250 aircraft maintenance men. Another 100 will be passenger agents and traffic personnel.

H. J. Symington, T.C.A. president, mentioned the difficulty in converting pilots from war to civilian flying when he appeared yesterday before the Commons Railway Committee. He said it was difficult to cure the RCAF pilots of their wartime habit of "flying by the seat of their pants."

Mr. English said it had been estimated that it would take from nine to 12 months to train a war pilot for commercial flying but experience had shown the time required would be from 12 to 18 months.

"The men often tell us they would like to get a bit more experience before they assume complete charge as captain of the aircraft," Mr. English said. "They are good material and once they are trained we know they are going to make splendid commercial pilots."

Roughly 20 per cent of the originally-approved applicants are eliminated for medical reasons before they start the course or because "a good war pilot does not necessarily make a good commercial pilot." Extensive tests including link trainer flights, are used to determine the candidate's possibilities as a commercial pilot.

British Reach Bottom of Food Basket For Europe

(By JAMES McCOOK)
(Canadian Press Staff Writer.)

London, Oct. 31. (CP)—Britain, a good neighbor to the hungry continent when the war ended, has found that for the sake of her own hard-rationed people she can give no more.

Sir Ben Smith, Food Minister, was asked in the House of Commons about food for Europe. He replied:

"This country reduced to the minimum the level of the whole of its stocks at the end of the European war. That could only happen once. We have no further stocks to deplete. My job is to feed the people of this country and that is the job I am going on doing."

With rations tighter than at the height of the war, authorities say further cuts cannot be imposed without endangering health. The Marquess of Reading, speaking in the House of Lords, said that "we have drawn our belts to the last hole of safety. Any further construction would be followed by physical and mental deterioration difficult to arrest and impossible to repair."

Substantial British stocks of food were built up just before and in the early years of the war and in spite of U-boat operations they were maintained. From D-Day onwards, these reserves were poured into liberated countries on the continent.

They never have been restored, it was learned. They might have been rebuilt had the lend-lease system continued but the continuation of minimum rations in the United Kingdom now is encouraged by the need of conserving Foreign Exchange. Organizations like the United Nations Relief and Rehabilitation Administration now have the major responsibility for obtaining the food Europe needs.

Complaints from soldiers returning from overseas service to civilian life have indicated the austerity of the British diet. Sir Ben mentioned the government's intention to bring rations in the armed forces into line with those of civilians and added that former soldiers had better become used to civilian rations even if they found them small.

ATTLEE TO VISIT U. S.

Washington, Oct. 30—(Reuters)—Prime Minister Attlee has decided to visit Washington within the next three weeks, an authoritative source who declined to give his name said Monday.

Official announcement of the Prime Minister's trip is expected at the White House within a few days.

In London, press services and newspapers said Mr. Attlee would visit President Truman about Christmas time.

CONFESSED TO THEFTS

Montreal, Oct. 30 — (CP)—Provincial Police Saturday arrested two unidentified men and recovered more than $3,000 in stolen diamond rings and watches after an investigation into the theft of goods from a jewelry store here Oct. 3.

Capt. J. A. Quenneville said the men confessed to the thefts. Part of the stolen goods were recovered in Chambly Canton, Que., and the remainder is expected to be found shortly.

Britain to Build New Atomic Research Plant

London, Oct. 30. (Reuters)—Britain's new atomic research and experimental station will be less concerned with the atomic bomb than with the industrial potentialities of atomic energy, the Press Association reported today.

The station, announced by Prime Minister Attlee in the House of Commons yesterday, will be at Harwell, near Didcot, Berkshire.

A large team of scientists, including a number who worked on the atomic bomb during the war years, will work out the technical application of atomic energy in the service of man. Their job will be technological as well as scientific.

The name of the scientist who will head the new department will probably be announced in a few days.

Wartime researches were carried out under the camouflage of Tube Alloys Limited, and some of those who worked in this unit will be members of the new department. It may possibly be called the atomic energy department.

Professor W. N. Haworth, professor of Chemistry at Birmingham University and one of the atom bomb "team", told a Press Association reporter that progress in the use of atomic power will be by stages.

"The first stage will probably be the production of power on a big scale on a par with our electric power stations", he said. "Before that can come about much more must be known about atomic energy and the way to produce a refinement of control. The new research an experimental station will no doubt investigate all these things and the application will come later."

CHURCHILL MAY RESIGN

London, Oct. 31 — (Reuters) — The News Chronicle said today rumors were current that Winston Churchill intends to retire from both the House of Commons and leadership of the Conservative party. Mr. Churchill, who will be 71 next Nov. 30, is believed to be eager to get to work on a history of the war years.

WANTED WITNESS LYNCHED

Budapest, Oct. 31 — (AP) — Jeering courtroom spectators yesterday shouted demands that Ferenc Szalasi be lynched when the former puppet premier of Hungary was brought before a six-judge Peoples' Court to testify as a witness at the trial of Former Premier Laszlo De Bardossy. The latter was premier in 1941.

Blow at Illicit Drug Traffic

Death blow is being given to the illicit traffic in narcotics by the action taken by General MacArthur to stamp out this industry which has been so terrible a menace to humanity not only in the Far East but other parts of the world. Japan, according to articles published in the time of the war had used narcotic trade to further her ambitions in China. Nine tenths of the world's trade in illicit drugs stems from Japan.

What staggering figures this industry has reached is seen in the latest news of hidden opium having been discovered to the value of fifty millions of dollars.

To strike with all the might possible this traffic in drugs used for the debasement of human beings to wipe it out as far as possible is one of the beneficent results of the war. The Japanese illicit industry is to be destroyed.

S. A. Reclamation Work Grows

Major or minor law infractions bring more than 75,000 Canadians into police custody every year, it is shown by statistics received by Commissioner Benjamin Orames, Salvation Army Territorial Commander.

Salvation Army prisoner reclamation work has grown over the years until now there are 92 officers doing full — or part-time prison and police court work, 33 full-time, said the Commissioner.

"Proof of the great need for The Salvation Army's work among prisoners is given by the figures on criminality in Canada," he said. "The causes go deep into the social fabric and into the problems of human personality. There is great scope for work to ameliorate the causes and solve the problems.

"Constant efforts must also be made to rescue those in trouble and for nearly 60 years prisoner reclamation has been an important and fruitful phase of Salvation Army work."

One of the nearly 50 different social service and welfare activities of The Salvation Army across Canada is prisoner reclamation work. The Salvation Army maintains 83 institutions in the Dominion.

Figures tabulated by the Dominion Bureau of Statistics show 63,074 adults were admitted to penitentiaries, reformatories, training schools, prisons and common jails in 1943, latest year for which statistics are complete. Nearly as many (62,663) were discharged and the number in custody at the end of the year was 10,862. In the same year, 12,225 juveniles were in court.

Houses of Concrete

British enterprise is seen in the construction of houses out of concrete with the purpose of speeding up building and saving labor. Models of the new British structure are demonstrated at an exhibition of such houses near London at Eastcote, Middlesex. Wooden frames and huge molds for the walls, with the necessary openings for windows, doors, water and gas pipes, are erected on the site by means of cranes. The concrete is then poured into the molds resulting in 12-inch thick, weather-proof and heat-resisting walls. The wooden frames and molds are then removed by crane. The front of the house is of bricks and the roof is pre-fabricated. It is estimated that the work of erecting the structure can be carried out, to a great extent, by unskilled labor and can be made habitable within a month.

Restoration at Hong Kong

United Kingdom fighting services have during and since the war undertaken huge tasks in clearing and rebuilding docks, airfields and railways in many parts of the world. In Hong Kong harbor which is one of the greatest shipping centres of the Far East, two hundred and sixty-eight Royal Marine Engineers, who are specialists in harbor work, are clearing navigation channels, docks of wrecks and obstructions and repairing shore installations.

They did a month's work in a fortnight in Sydney harbor when "A" Company converted the motorship Shirrabank into their own accommodation and supply ship. This same company restored the docks at Le Havre. The men work with bulldozers, lorries, mobile workshops, mobile cranes, welding gear, excavators, three harbor boats and all necessary supplies. The company is now at work in Hong Kong harbor. Cargo holds have been turned into workshops and storage space.

R.A.F. Airfield Construction units have after weeks of work started the Kowleen-Canton Railway to work, tracks and bridges having been repaired, tunnels shored up and two locomotives put in running order. Wing Commander Mortar said they first found and repaired two old engines. On the first run to the Chinese border, they were told by guerillas of engines on a siding. These were hitched to the rear of the train and the train completed the journey. The next day the engineers began a daily service to Canton, running the engine on wood until a Japanese fuel dump was discovered. Their first job was to bring back sick evacuees from new territories.

It is hoped to build a modern airfield in the city of Hong Kong to handle all types of planes including jet-propelled and make it one of the best, ready to compete with any in the world as a traffic centre. Though the present airport is small, regular services are already maintained with India, China, Singapore, Tokyo and Australia. Among incoming passengers have been civil servants, doctors and other experts essential to speedy rehabilitation of the colony.

Repairs at the great docks in Bombay have formed one of the greatest reconstruction tasks, appalling damage having been done to the Princes and Victoria Docks by an ammunition ship explosion which set on fire most ships in the port, seriously damaging the swing bridges over the dock entrance and buried the hydraulic operating gear for the gates and bridge under masses of debris. All warehouses and dock buildings had been levelled to the ground. The task was so colossal that no civil agency could undertake it. British and India military labor, helped by West African troops and Italians, met the demand with astonishing speed and versatility and ended the task in six and a half months. The personnel toiled unflaggingly at their urgent task and even in the monsoon season worked all day in the wet without cover and lived in tents in flooded areas. At the peak about eight thousand personnel were employed, about half skilled and semi-skilled. Seventy-five percent of the total were Indian. The mechanized plant used was equal to an additional daily manual force of twenty-one thousand.

London's Churches

(BBC Bulletin)

Out of 600 Anglican churches in London, only 60 have escaped all damage from enemy action, and no less than 230 will have to be totally or partially rebuilt. That is a task to daunt the bravest.

At the same time, what an opportunity for the ecclesiastical architect. A proportion of those ruined churches will have to be replaced by new buildings either on the same site or elsewhere. This offers a greater chance than was enjoyed even by Sir Christopher Wren. To enshrine God's condescension and His people's aspiration in stone, and at the same time to convey the meaning of the endurance and the deliverance of these last years in the most permanent of all forms of art is a task to excite the highest genius. There can of course be no doubt that such genius will be called forth by the needs and opportunity of the hour.

JUST FOLKS

HALLOWE'EN

Should a little ghost I see,
I must very frightened be!
Should at dusk I face the charge
Of a leopard that's at large,
Fanged and spotted, I must run
Terror-stricken! Just for fun!
Sights like this are often seen
By old men at Hallowe'en.

Should a beggar, in a mask,
Ring the door bell just to ask
Have I fruit or cake or pie
For a poor soul passing by,
I must not let on I know
Who receives what I bestow;
All such visits merely mean
Once again it's Hallowe'en.

Should a tick-tack on the pane
Tell that spirits walk again,
An old codger, say like me,
Must pretend to frightened be.
Or if, seeing no one near,
Sounds of laughter he can hear,
He must smile, as oft before.
It is Hallowe'en once more!

Tonight is Hallowe'en and artificial goblins wearing masks, false faces and outlandish garb over human bodies will prevail. There will also be many private parties with the usual taffy pulling, ducking for apples and other amusements.

Captain W. Ferguson of Pembroke left for his home today after visiting friends here for several weeks.

Mr. W. A. Bleecker of Trenton was a visitor in town today.

Mrs. Norman Cox of Toronto, Mrs. Preston of Stockdale and Mr. and Mrs. Richards and son of Wooler were recent guests at the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Yateman at Corbyville.

Abram Diamond died at his home on Highland Avenue today in his 93rd. year. He was of U.E.L. descent and lived at Queenston for many years.

Dr. Alex. Embury, Reeve of Bancroft, Conservative candidate for the new riding of Hastings-Peterboro, was elected in the recent Federal election over G. A. Brethen, ex M. P., Progressive in the last parliament by a majority of over 2500.

INFORMATION ROUNDUP

Why are postal officials called Nasbys?

Postal officials, particulary post-masters, acquired the generic nickname "Nasby" from the fact that David Ross Locke (1833-1888), American newspaperman and whimsical humorist, wrote a series of satirical letters and signed them "The Rev. Petroleum Vesuvius Nasby, Postmaster at Confedrit X Roads, which is in the State of Kentucky."

The first of these letters, which are credited with having aided the Union cause, began to appear in the Findlay (Ohio) Jeffersonian in 1861.

The writer pretended to be an old-fashioned, ignorant, whisky-drinking, Negro-hating, pro-slavery politician who was determined to be postmaster of the "post orifice" at "Confedrit X "Roads, Ky," a position then held by a niggur."

His sly satire, comical spelling and experiences as an office-seeker furnished the entire nation with much fun. The particular slant of his humor was no doubt inspired by that of Charles Farrar Browne (1834-1867), who wrote under the name of "Artemus Ward."

After the Civil War David R. Locke continued the Nasby Letters in the Toledo Blade, a paper of which he became editor and part owner.

His comic articles saddled "Nasby" on postmasters and other postal officials.

The famous humorist himself is known as Petroleum V. Nasby rather than as David R. Locke.

He delivered a lecture entitled Cursed Be Canaan 225 times. It began with the sentence: "We are all descended from grandfathers."

Shaw Says Life Should Extend To 300 Years

Ayot, St. Lawrence, Hertfordshire, England, Oct. 31 —(CP)— Now in his 90th year, George Bernard Shaw says he believes human life can and should be extended to at least 300 years—"the necessary span of a worthwhile human life" and "essential for political maturity."

"Death is not to be regarded as natural and inevitable," said the playwright. "We die because we do not know how to live and kill ourselves by lethal habits. Mortality should be confined to murder, suicide and fatal accidents."

Life at present, he added, was too short to be taken seriously.

"Remember our conduct is influenced not by our experience, but by our expectations. Give a man only 70 years to live and he sings 'Let us eat and drink for tomorrow we die.' Give him 300 and he becomes a new man. All his valuations change — and valuations govern conduct."

In "Back to Methuselah" Mr. Shaw demanded a lifetime of 300 years for political maturity and condemned all existing attempts to government as "mischievous child's play."

Had Something On His Mind, Gives Self up

Toronto, Oct. 31 —(CP)— Police said a man who gave his name as Gordon Ryan, 25, no fixed address, walked into Dundas Street West police station Tuesday and told the duty sergeant he had something on his mind. "it's about hold-ups in Toronto and Aylmer," he added.

Police said later the man told them he used a toy gun Sept. 29 to hold up Lorraine Gifford as she counted money in a Woolworth's store here. They said Ryan also made a statement that he held up two women in a store at Aylmer, Ont., last week, taking some cash and cheques.

Ethel Cooke and Rosa Balcom were held up in their Aylmer grocery store Oct. 25, police said.

First Civilian Car Since War Rolls off Gen. Motors Line

Oshawa, Ont., Oct. 31 —(CP)— The first civilian motorcar to be produced in Canada since the war rolled off the assembly line of the General Motors plant here Tuesday afternoon. No civilian car had been built here since February, 1942.

The resumption of civilian production marked completion of a re-conversion program which required more than 900,000 man-hours of labor. The manufacture peak will not be reached until next spring.

The first car is to be equipped with special driving aids and presented to the Shaughnessy Hospital, Vancouver, as an instructional unit for incapacitated veterans. It was turned over by a company official to Major C. A. Bell of the Department of Veterans' Affairs and driven off the line by Pte. Verne Bowen, who lost an arm in Italy.

MAY IDENTIFY MEN

London, Ont., Oct. 31 (CP) — Three Coleman Packing Company, Ltd., employees—trussed to a radiator last month while three polka-dot masked gunmen stole $1,600—will go to Toronto Thursday for an identification parade of men recently arrested there for suspected connections with the "polka-dot" gang, police said Tuesday.

London Letter

By NORMAN CRIBBENS
Canadian Press Staff Writer

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—A Chelsea pensioner—one of the old soldiers seen about London streets in black cocked hats and red frock coats with shiny brass buttons—was talking over the beer mugs with a young man just discharged from Britain's wartime army.

"It's wonderful to be free again," said the youngster, as he told of the complicated "demob" process. The old man shook his grey head.

"I should have done all that 50 years ago," he said. "Then I wouldn't be relying on Chelsea Hospital for my bread and on good-hearted folk for my beer."

The pensioner was 79. He had served in two wars and several skirmishes along the Indian frontier. Now he was living at the Royal Hospital in Chelsea founded by King Charles II in 1682 on the whim of a pretty lass named Nell Gwynne. He looked happy, well-fed and contented; but he had some complaints.

He complained of snobbery. Old soldiers with small private incomes would not mix with those who received only the sixpence-a-day pocket money handed out by the hospital. They gave themselves airs and strutted about "as if they owned the place."

Then there was a "young" bully of 65 who because of his fewer years took it out on the older fellows, pushing them around and demanding obedience to his lightest word. He met his match in a sturdy fellow of 71 who challenged him to a stand-up fight and would have carried out the threat if the color sergeant had not interfered.

"When men get past 70 they become crotchety and little things get on their nerves," said the pensioner. "You'd be surprised at some of the bothers we have over trivialities—things that don't really matter, like opening and shutting windows or smoking the wrong kind of tobacco.

"I like to get away from it during the day and roam around the pubs a bit."

Chelsea pensioners have to be indoors by midnight and disciplinary action is taken against those who repeatedly stay out after that time. Going up before the Colonel, as in the army, means parading bareheaded, hands behind back. The severest penalty is expulsion from the hospital.

Chelsea Hospital is not regarded as a charity. Residents, all former soldiers of 55 and over, disabled by wounds or old age, are there in enjoyment of honest independence.

"Some time ago we had inquiries from Canada with a view to starting a similar institution there," said a hospital official, "we gave them all the information we could."

A TOUCH OF NOSTALGIA

The word nostalgia, says Webster, is derived from the Greek nostos, meaning a return home, and the Greek suffix algia, meaning pain or ache. Actually, of course, nostalgia is not pain or ache in the ordinary sense, but rather a pining or an intense yearning for home. Mind, now, I'm not hard-boiled about it. Homesickness in the first person is a grave illness, I can testify. In the second person it just about unnerves me—takes all the strength I can muster to refrain from crying on the shoulder of the victim. Even in the third person it is a pretty pathetic condition.

Maybe I shouldn't talk about the condition here. It might be all right to bring it up if I had some sort of remedy or palliative to offer. But on the other hand, sometimes one can give the sufferer a little comfort or consolation by just analyzing the situation with him, even though there be no alternative to radical treatment—a quick trip home, a quiet marriage, a divorce or an operation, as the case may be.

The state commonly called "heart-ache" or "broken heart" is similar if not identical with homesickness.

To pine is to lose vigor, health or flesh through grief, anxiety, hunger, to become wasted through sorrow....up to a certain point this may be all within the bounds of sanity. In many instances, however, it is pathological and even absurd. We haven't sufficient space to cite instances here, but there are plenty of cases that show beyond shadow of doubt that some people pine for reasons that are simply absurd.

A little boy I know is pining right now for his pal, his mom, who is separated from him for the first time in his experience. He makes a brave effort to cover his loneliness. But his little dog pines for the absent one too and the pup is quite candid about it. The pup reminds me of one thing and another—the last time I saw Topsy the sorrel, my one and only horse—that was a long time ago and yet—and the last uncertain wag of the tail of Tony the Irish Terror when I turned him over to the vet for euthanasia. I have a fine portrait of Tony hanging over my desk—I'd give more than I paid for Topsy herself, for a snapshot or other picture of our firstborn riding on her back or sitting in the buggy holding the reins.

It isn't just home one yearns for when one is homesick. It's a visit to the old swimming hole, a stroll along the brook where one used to pick mint or watercress, a look at the mill dam where the fishing was so good, a chat with some of the folks who are still right there as always, and perhaps, who knows, a chance to taste once more a dipper of milk—oh, be still, weary heart, this is only a dream—in its fresh state, right there at cowside. But then, I suppose it is the very combination of such joys that makes home home.

QUESTIONS AND ANSWERS

Anemia

How much iron does a person require to insure sufficient red blood coloring? I read that liver is the best source, and lean meat, green vegetables and eggs are good sources. Are these rich in iron? What other foods are rich in iron? (A. W.)

Answer—The body uses approximately one-fourth of a grain of iron daily. Pork liver yields more than twice as much iron as beef or calf liver. Total amount of iron in a given food is less significant than the amount of iron the body can assimilate from the food. For instance only half of the iron in lean beef is available, whereas all of the iron in raw peaches, raw pears, raw egg, black molasses, roasted peanuts, raw bananas, raw apple, raw or cooked carrot, raw onion, raw celery, is assimilable. Of course lean beef contains five times as much iron as egg yolk, more than three times as much as raisins, forty times as much as apple, weight for weight. Send stamped self addressed envelope and ten cents in negotiable condition for booklet "Blood and Health."

Fluorides and Teeth

Have been watching for you to give some definite information concerning fluorides and the teeth. (.... D. D. S.)

Answer—Goes to show how conservative I am, Doctor. I'm waiting until we have some definite information to give. However there are chapters about fluorine in booklet "Save Your Teeth"—for copy send 25 cents and stamped self addressed envelope.

Five Crewmen Perish

Anchorage, Alaska, Oct. 30 — (AP)—Five crewmen perished and two persons escaped alive, the army reported last night, when a C-54 transport plane inbound from Edmonton, Ala., crashed before dawn eight miles southeast of nearby Elmendorf Field.

Your home test can bring you SOFTER, SMOOTHER SKIN in just 14 days!

Compare your complexion with your shoulders. You'll find your shoulders look 5 or more years younger. Why? Because shoulder pores are kept clean by your regular Palmolive Soap baths —and so, able to breathe freely. But face pores, clogged with dirt and make-up, can't breathe freely and soon your complexion loses its flexible softness and ages before its time. That needn't happen to your complexion. Palmolive offers an easy way to keep it radiantly lovely.

You can look younger in 14 days! Wash your face 3 times a day with Palmolive, and each time, with a face-cloth massage Palmolive lather into your skin—for an extra 60-seconds! This easy Palmolive Massage stimulates the circulation, clears the pores to help your complexion regain its flexible softness, become softer, smoother in just 14 days!

Finns Hope For Yuletide Coffee

Helsinki, Oct. 31 (CP)—If you were to eat with the average family in Finland, you'd probably have porridge and coffee for breakfast, potatoes with onion sauce and coffee for lunch, and potatoes, black bread, cabbage soup and raw fish for dinner.

The porridge would have no sugar or milk and the coffee would be made of roots and cereals. The raw fish would be only occasional.

And that is southern Finland. In northern Finland you would have potatoes and black bread.

Daily rations for the average Finn are 1,200 calories with extras for ill persons or those doing heavy work. Calories required for a person doing light work are listed at 2,500 daily.

Meat is available only two to four times a month now and is usually used in stew so it can be spread out. It was not a good season for fish and what little there is goes to restaurants.

The average person in Finland is not a vegetable eater. Anyway the only vegetables that can be obtained are potatoes, carrots, cucumbers, cauliflower and a few tomatoes. A small head of cauliflower costs 40 to 50 marks (32 to 40 cents even at present rate of exchange) tomatoes sell for 120 marks kilo (50 cents a pound) and neither are always available.

Eggs are impossible to get except in the country and cost 50 marks (40 cents) each. Milk is rationed with adults allotted three decilitres (about a third of a pint) daily. Children up to two years get one pint.

There is an enormous black market on all food stuffs, especially in restaurants where they still serve smorgasbords, sandwiches, melon, fish, fowl and some meat. But a meal for two persons costs from 700 to 1000 marks and when the average worker makes perhaps 5000 monthly (less than $50) he can't eat out very often.

New U.S. Cars Not to be Rationed

Washington, Oct. 30 —(AP)— New automobiles soon to go on sale in the United States will not be rationed, the government announced yesterday.

Honor Cheese Grader

Prince Edward County cheesemakers gathered at the home of Eugene VanDusen to honor J. L. Irwin of Belleville, who has just retired as Federal Cheese Grader. Roy Wellbanks read an address and Dairy Inspector Henderson and Mr. VanDusen presented the gifts, an easy chair and a hassock. Mention was made of Mr. Irwin's 48 years' service to the dairy industry, as maker, Provincial Dairy Instructor and as Federal Cheese Grader. During this time makers have found him a helpful friend. The makers here also contributed $67 to the Hospital for Sick Children fund.

South Africa Tabs Uranium Deposits

Cape Town, Oct. 37 —(CP) — South Africa has uranium, the basic composition of the atomic bomb. The deposits have not been exploited, but it is possible that prospecting will shortly be undertaken on a wider scale.

In 1919, Dr. William Versfeldt, a government chemist, referred to the existence of radio-active minerals in the Transvaal and Swaziland. Uranium was one of them.

Later Dr. A. L. Hall, then assistant director of the Union Geological Survey, announced the existence of "uranochre" (uranium ochre) in a mica quarry west of the Selati railway in the northern Transvaal.

Near Malelane in 1920, in the corundun occurences of the northern Transvaal, Dr. Hall found uranium ochre in the pegnatitie formation.

As recently as 1940 the Union Geological Survey stated that there was an authentic occurence of pitchblende (the uranium-bearing mineral from which radium is usually recovered) at Gordonia, in the northwestern Cape. Small quantities of uranium-bearing euxenite have been discovered in other parts of the country.

BROCHURE LISTS "BLACK RECORD" OF NATIONALISTS

South African Government Party Publication Describes Nationalist "Record of Foolishness"

Cape Town — (CP) — A brochure on "the black record of South African nationalism during the war" just issued by the United (government) party lists cases of dissemination of Nazi propaganda, insults to soldiers and "leaders' opportunism."

The brochure is described by the United Party as a "record of foolishness, treachery and hysteria by political leaders obsessed with the idea of the omnipotence of the Nazi ideology." The publication says that the government's policy of ignoring "the rantings of political sharpshooters" was justified as treason trials would have served to increase the prestige of offenders in the eyes of their followers.

Instead of nationalist leaders "figuring in history as martyers they will have to take their place as clowns," the brochure says.

Housing difficulties are receiving increasing attention in the Union's newspapers and authorities have warned owners of vacant houses that unless they rent the government will take them over. Returned soldiers in Johannesburg expressed indignation when a survey indicated that between 150 and 200 houses were unoccupied while their owners held them for sale at high prices.

The first of a large number of shipments of wheat from Canada has just been discharged from a British freighter in Cape Town. Other grain cargoes are expected to arrive shortly from Angola and the Argentine will assist considerably in relieving the wheat shortage in the Union.

The butter situation is serious despite good falls of rain in all parts of the country. The ration has been reduced by one sixth but the country's weekly consumption is still 700,000 pounds and weekly production is only 425,000.

A national appeal to raise £5,000,000 ($22,500,000) to aid Britain has been launched by delegates to a conference held at Johannesburg. Premier Smuts was named patron-in-chief and the chairman, Robin Stratford, M.P., said that efforts will be made to make the fund the greatest ever raised in South Africa.

A square deal for natives was demanded by the Anglican bishops of the Union at the annual diocesan synod in Johannesburg. The bishop of Johannesburg criticized a judicial system which differentiated so strongly between two sections of the population. The bishop of Pretoria called for a new attitude by the Labor party and trade unions towards native laborers.

The National Union of Students is preparing a scheme to share in rebuilding Europe's crippled universities by aiding colleges in Holland and other war-torn countries. South African universities will "adopt" overseas universities and collections of scientific equipment will be made next year. In the meantime food and clothing will be sent.

Cycling Troubadour Reaches Vancouver

Vancouver — (CP) — After covering 11,250 miles by bicycle to entertain servicemen during the last three years G. Harrison Randall of Fredericton, N.B., plans to stay in British Columbia for a month or two. During his stay Randall will be adding to his total of 756 shows performed under his own and Canadian Legion auspices.

Randall's stage show includes a 1-man trip in which he plays the piano and two harmonicas simultaneously. He also sings and does impersonations and "hill-billy stuff" on request but specializes in "jive."

His last jaunt was a 1,100-trip through the mountains from Lethbridge, Alta., to Vancouver, which took him two weeks but his average day's run is 128 miles.

Rejected from military service, Randall became a cycling troubadour in May, 1942 and travelled 4,500 miles on his own giving shows throughout Eastern Canada before joining the Canadian Legion War Services in 1943. His longest day's ride was a 22-hour trek in sub-zero weather between Regina and Dundurn, Sask., during which he went without food for 13 hours.

"I didn't want to stop in case it started snowing and then I would really have been stranded," says Randall.

Randall is a self-taught pianist and knows more than 1,800 pieces by memory.

His bicycle is equipped with one of the original tires but the other gave out after 10,000 miles. Upkeep of his machine has cost him five dollars for the entire tour.

Randall's next trip, scheduled for January, will take him home to Fredericton by way of Hollywood, Florida and the Atlantic coast. It's just a short pedal this time—only 9,000 miles.

Australian Develops Big Migration Plan

Canberra, Oct. 31 (CP)— Australia hopes to get as migrants 50,000 European war veterans. In announcing this, Immigration Minister Calwell said that Australia might seek 20,000 Poles who have been serving with the R. A. F.

Migration plans also include the bringing to Australia of 50,000 European war orphans. Some of these are to come from Britain but it is expected that most will be from the Continent.

Mr. Calwell has put Australia's maximum absorption capacity in good times at 70,000 a year. It is hoped that the 51,000 children will reach Australia within three years.

The Minister has also stated that no migrant will be assisted or encouraged to travel to Australia unless his or her economic future is reasonably assured. Much depends on post-war prosperity.

Royal Navy Patrols Ocean's Air Routes

London, Oct. 31 (CP)—Royal navy corvettes are operating as air-sea rescue service on transatlantic air routes, with seven points in the east Atlantic continually patrolled since before VE-day when traffic was increased.

Lt.-Cmdr. A. C. Palmer of Surrey, commanding officer of the H.M.S. Berkely Castle, said that on a recent patrol "the station turned out to be a real Piccadilly Circus of the Atlantic. More than 660 aircraft passed over us during the patrol, all communicated with radio telephone, although few were seen because of their height."

Two main transatlantic routes are in use—one running from Britain to Iceland and the other from Casablanca to the Azores.

Each corvette remains on station for about two weeks. Royal Canadian Navy officials said no Canadian ships had been engaged on air-sea rescue in the eastern Atlantic.

"Pedlars"; Address, F. O. Ralph Campbell who spoke on "Health Insurance" as carried out in England; Solo, Mrs. White, Wallbridge W.I.; Rev. L. Shorten, of Foxboro, spoke on the opportunities of the W.I. in the future rehabilitation of Canada; Duet was given by Mrs. G. Frederick and Miss Evelyn Bleecker, Chatterton W.I. Mrs. Ben Bleecker, the district president, spoke briefly.

The members of Pine Grove served refreshments.

U. P. E. — BELLEVILLE WOMEN'S CLUB

Favored with bright autumn weather and an unusually large attendance the United Prince Edward - Belleville Women's Club held its October meeting at the home of Mrs. Wannamaker, Victoria Ave.

After the usual opening the president read a poem on "Autumn" written by Mrs. Helen B. Anderson of Melville.

An interesting paper on the "Early History of Crofton and Vicinity" was given by Mrs. Palmer.

Mrs. N. Montgomery, in her usual charming style, gave a description of her recent trip down the St. Lawrence to Quebec and up the Saguenay river.

Mrs. G. Gorsline conducted a contest on "Trees."

Best wishes were extended to Mrs. S. Anderson and "Happy Birthday" sung.

Delicious refreshments were served by the hostess, assisted by Mrs. Gorsline, Miss Clara Anderson and Mrs. Schryver, and a vote of thanks extended them.

Young Women's Guild Discusses Vital Problems

The Young Women's Guild of Tabernacle Church met Monday evening, at the home of Mrs. A. D. Archibald, Dufferin Avenue. Mrs. Scripture, presided, and following the regular business Miss M. Ferguson conducted the worship service based on the parable of the good neighbor.

"The Scientific Approach to Social Sin" was the topic of discussion, directed by Miss Jane Smythe, assisted by Miss Hazel Thompson and Mrs. J. Buchanan. This very urgent and vital problem was discussed from three standpoints.

1.—What has been done in other countries.

2.—What has been done by the armed services.

3.—What is being done in our own country.

Miss Smythe told of the progress that had been made in Russia in the eradication of venereal disease and its attendant evils in the past thirty years. During the Czarist regime organized vice flourished under government supervision and protection. Immediately following the overthrow of this regime, it was realized that something should be done to rid the country of this evil. A campaign was organized by the educators, medical and scientific authorities, the methods were drastic, but the results were satisfactory. They succeeded in permanently eliminating from Soviet life the age old social curse of commercialized vice. Simultaneously it achieved the eradication of V.D. Today the average Soviet doctor rarely encounters a case of this dread disease. While we may not be in accord with Russia's program in all cases, we do have to give credit where credit is due and commend her for her action in this regard.

Dept. Set Up.

The Armed Forces have always realized the necessity for action against V.D. A department for the control of Venereal Disease has been set up. Education campaigns are conducted, and the members of the armed services are all in possession of a thorough knowledge of the danger. They are not especially concerned with the moral issues at stake, but they are deeply concerned from the standpoint of health. Treatment is available for all. Clinics are held and a real effort is being made to stamp out the evil.

In the Provinces of Saskatchewan and Alberta, legislation has been enacted in the form of amendments to the marriage laws, making compulsory premarital blood tests. These health certificates must be presented to the officiating clergymen before a marriage ceremony can be performed, and must be forwarded by him to the Provincial Dept., of Health within 24 hours after the ceremony. Early in 1945, New Brunswick carried on an educational health program, in which lectures were given and films shown to senior High School students, with the hope that knowledge of the essential facts should do much to raise the standards of their people. Considerable progress has been made with a similar program in Vancouver.

Receives Approval.

The educational authorities in Ontario are realizing the necessity of some form of health and sex education. At the Ontario Educational Association in Toronto, Dr. Gordon Brown recommended that it be included in the curriculum for Secondary Schools. This plan has received the approval of the Toronto Board of Education and was endorsed by them on October 24. At the close of the discussion a resolution was passed that we recommend to the Department of Education that the recommendation of Dr. Brown be accepted and some form of legislation enacted to make it effective as soon as possible.

BEER A MUST

Sydney, Australia (CP)— Nine ships have been held up in Australian ports because Greek seamen refuse to sail unless they are given beer with their meals.

Honor Couple Before Leaving 2nd Line District

3rd Sidney — A large number of friends and neighbors from Aikens and Centenary gathered Friday evening to present farewell gifts to Mr. and Mrs. Bidwell Westover, 2nd line, who are leaving the community after over 30 years. Rev. H. H. Hillis called the gathering together for community singing led by Mr. S. W. Spafford. Readings were given by Mrs. Fred Moon and Mrs. Sam Marshall. Messrs. Fred Moon and Ken Jones gave musical selections.

The address was read by Mrs. Lily Hall and the presentation made by William Bush and Carmen Grills. Mr. and Mrs. Westover thanked their many friends for the beautiful gifts.

Later in the evening, delicious refreshments were served.

Mr. and Mrs. Westover leave this week to reside with Mrs. Westover's brother, Mr. Stafford Irvine, near Trenton.

Couple Honored Prior to Departure From Community

A large gathering assembled at Glen Miller Community Hall on Monday night, October 22nd., to offer best luck and good wishes to Mr. and Mrs. Edward A. Hogle prior to their departure from that community as grocer and postmaster for thirteen years.

During the evening an address was read by Mrs. John Cole on behalf of the community and surrounding district and the presentation of a chest of silver and a pyrex platter set in silver was made. Another address was read by Mr. Ernest Collier, secretary of the hockey club, and Mr. John Cole, president, made the presentation of a table lamp. Then Miss C. L. Miller, on behalf of the Anglican Parish Guild, read an address and Mrs. Harold Collier, president, made the presentation of a silver cream and sugar set.

Mr. and Mrs. Hogle expressed words of appreciation for each gift, saying also, that they were sorry to leave such a fine neighborhood.

In the past thirteen years, Mr. and Mrs. Hogle have made a wide circle of friends who will miss them in the surrounding community where they have spent many happy times.

C.G.I.T. Stages Hallowe'en Party At Bridge Street

A highly successful Hallowe'en party was held in Bridge Street United Church last evening by the Bridge Street C.G.I.T. Following a scavenger hunt, the girls were taken on a "ghost walk" through the dark passages of the church basement. Properly frightened, they returned to the main room to find hot dogs and hot chocolate awaiting them.

A grand march followed as the costumes were judged. Prizes were given for the most original costume, the funniest costume and the prettiest costume. Winning the first was Miss Jeanette Fink, dressed as a Chinese boy. The funniest award went to Miss Gloria Gill, dressed in a very long-eared bunny costume. The prettiest costume was worn by Miss May Griffiths, an Irish colleen. Almost every kind of costume was seen, gypsies and pirates, witches, birds, senoras, Bo-peep, and many others.

In all, the party was voted a great success, by the many who attended.

Freeze Order on Tomatoes Lifted

Ottawa, Oct. 30 (CP) —Prices Board officials said last night that a freeze order which would have ensured shipment of 400,000 cases of canned tomato products to Britain had been lifted because of the poor Canadian crop.

23 NAZI LEADERS ARE INFORMED OF SUICIDE OF LEY

Goering Says Ley Might Have Broken at Trial as He Was Unstable

Nuernberg, Oct. 31 —(AP)— Former Reichsmarshal Hermann Goering thinks the suicide of Dr. Ley, one-time Nazi Labor Chief, probably was a "good thing."

Goering and 22 other Nazi leaders waiting trial for war crimes were informed officially Monday of Ley's suicide by strangulation.

"Dr. Ley was unstable and probably would have broken at the trial," Goering said. "The thing that worries me is how the other defendants will react, we must conduct ourselves like men."

Julius Streicher, Nazi Jew baiter, commented: "Dr. Ley drank too much when he was young." The Nazi Finance Minister, Hjalmar Schacht, read the list of names of defendants who had signed acknowledgment of the notification, and remarked: "If you want me to I'll be glad to mark an 'X' after the names of those who ought to be shot."

Rudolf Hess, whose fading memory, fancied or real, has puzzled interrogators since his arrival at the jail, is the only defendant who has not requested counsel.

Enlightened Opinion Needed Today — Attlee

London, Oct. 30 —(CP)— Speaking before a luncheon of the American Outpost in Great Britain, Prime Minister Attlee said today the tremendous problems facing all governments made enlightened public opinion a necessity.

Both the United States and Britain, he told the organization, "have an alert and thinking public on whose opinions we rely for our support."

"We cannot get that support," he said, "unless they are well acquainted with the reasons for our actions, and they cannot be so acquainted unless they are kept informed."

100-MILE DASH SAVES SIGHT OF FISHERMAN

Edinburgh (Reuters)—A 100-mile dash from Galloway to Edinburgh by car saved the sight of Robert Hunter, of Dabry. Hunter was fishing at dusk when his cast was lashed back and the fishhook embedded in the cornea of his eye.

Mrs. Hunter drove her husband to Edinburgh where a successful operation was performed.

Lawson Revives Long Passing Of Pre-war Aerial Play Through Fine Coaching by W. Stevens

Varsity Back Has Been Trained to Put His Entire Body Into Tosses

By ALAN HARVEY
(Canadian Press Staff Writer)

Toronto, Oct. 31. (CP)—It's been a long, long time since anybody in Canadian football stood "behind the counter" and served up steaming pigskin for Varsity Stadium customers in the manner now being perfected by Mel Lawson of the University of Toronto.

The 22-year-old forestry student from Hamilton chucked an assortment of forward passes in Varsity's 25-6 conquest of Queen's Saturday but it was his 45-yard touchdown "strike" to Bob Henry in the fourth quarter which rocked the critics.

The long heave furled the football calender back to 1931 when Warren Stevens, relying principally on 50-yard pegs practically unknown to the Canadian grid, pitched Montreal Winged Wheelers into a Dominion title.

The 14-year link between Lawson and Stevens had extra significance today because pass master Stevens, as Varsity coach, must be given at least partial credit for Lawson's sudden emergence as a long-distance slinger.

Before joining the RCAF Lawson directed Hamilton Wildcats in their 1943 Canadian championship victory over Winnipeg Blue Bombers. But he wasn't a sure-fire passer until he hit the Toronto campus this season and Stevens went to work.

Corrected Faults

Stevens corrected faults in Lawson's footwork, taught him tricks of balance and developed his distance tosses by training him to put his entire body into the throw. Before that Lawson, like most passers, relied almost exclusively on his arm.

If Lawson maintains the pace he set Saturday football seems assured of a revival of its most intricate piece of timing— the long, drifting pass which requires perfect synchronization of thrower and receiver.

In the interval between Stevens' retirement from active competition and Lawson's appearance on the scene the long pass gradually gave way to the short, flat professional pass, with or without flea flicker variations. Often teams completed two or three such heaves without making yards.

Stevens accepts bouquets for developing Lawson in usual self-effacing fashion.

"He's an apt pupil with all the natural qualifications," the Toronto coach said today. "He knows how to throw, he's a good judge of speed and he has a flair for hitting the receiver just as he's breaking into the open."

The next big test for Lawson and his Toronto team-mates comes this Saturday at London when Varsity faces the University of Western Ontario Mustangs in a game which may decide disposition of the college crown. With just two games left for each team, Varsity and Queen's now are tied two points behind Western, defending titlists.

Revamped Cast Expected to Elevate Club Above Pre-War Standards

By The Canadian Press

Wartime underdogs of National Hockey League competition, New York Rangers open their peacetime campaign tonight against the Black Hawks in Chicago with a revamped cast expected to elevate the club close to prewar standards.

Critics who watched Rangers at their Winnipeg training camp look for considerable improvement from the team which trailed the six-team circuit for two straight years, winning six games in 1943-44 and 11 last season.

Acquisition of netminders Chuck Rayner and Sugar Jim Henry is expected to enhance Ranger prospects against Chicago, who defeated Boston Bruins and lost to Montreal Canadiens in their two games to date. Ken McAuley carried the netminding burden for Rangers last year.

New York newcomers this season include Hal Brown, Edgar LaPrade, Hal Laycoe, Tony Leswick, Church Russell, Rene Trudell, Lynn and Muzz Patrick, Mac and Neil Colville, Bill Juzda, Alan Kuntz, Alex Shibicky and Alf Pike. Some of those listed played for Rangers before entering the services and not all are available yet for N.H.L. campaigning.

JOE McCARTHY WILL MANAGE YANKS NEXT YEAR

Team Will Have Two Conditioning Camps in Florida

New York, Oct. 31. (AP)—Joe McCarthy isn't ready to step out of baseball yet and is looking forward to the next Spring training season as one of his most interesting adventures.

Joe came out of a three-hour huddle with President Larry MacPhail yesterday to announce that New York Yankees will have two conditioning camps at St. Petersburg and Bradenton for the first time in history.

"I hope to manage the Yanks for the next ten years if my health holds out", commented McCarthy who must make a flock of decisions before February.

Joe Dimaggio, Tommy Henrich, Phil Rizzuto, Charley Keller, Spud Chandler, Aaron Robinson, and Red Ruffing already have returned from the wars and many more like Joe Gordon, Bill Dickey, Bill Johnson, Budy Hassett and Johnny Sturm are expected before another season.

Unofficial estimates indicate about seventy players will be quartered at St. Pete and across the bay at Bradenton where Coach Art Fletcher probably will be in charge if his health permits.

Player personnel won't be the only change at the Yankee Stadium next year. Lghts for night ball will be installed. MacPhail said the installation of tha most powerful lighting system in baseball will start Jan. 1 at a cost of $250,000. The right field bleachers will be roofed and a double-decked stand will increase the seating capacity to about 75,000.

Sports Roundup

By HUGH FULLERTON, Jr.

New York, Oct. 31 — (AP)—A group of Southern California sportsmen has leased the Hollywood Park and Santa Anita racetracks to hold an annual harness racing meet, starting next year . . . they plan to run in May and early June, using the tracks in alternate years, and will ask for Grand Circuit dates . . . if that goes through, the "Grand" really will be grand, with 35 days in California before the eastern season starts.

One Hit, No Error

When the United States 18th Infantry Regiment moved into Windsheim, Germany, it took over a small gymnasium and some of the soldiers immediately began boxing . . . some German youngsters gathered to watch them and Sgt. Bert Williams, North Dakota welter who used to fight in the Chicago Golden Gloves tournament, invited them to try the sport. Bert soon had classes organized for six-year-old kids up to discharged Nazi soldiers . . . "Many of my buddies think my time is being wasted on the German kids," Williams explained, "but I taught some of them baseball and the results are already apparent."

If Harry (Better Than Baugh) Gilmer can keep on pitching strikes, Alabama looks like the No. 1 choice for the Rose Bowl bid.

Headline Headliner

When the news hit the Hollywood, Cal., Citizen - News desk that Gordon Richards, British jockey, needed only one more winner to reach the 3,000 mark, an anonymous scribe moaned in type, "If we had only known this about 2,999 wins ago!"

What's Doing in Sport

By The Canadian Press

Ches McCance, Winnipeg Blue Bomber flying wing, star on two Grey Cup rugby teams, currently is the team's leading scorer with 43 points garnered in six exhibition games against U.S. college teams and Regina Roughriders this season. McCance has five touchdowns, each worth six points under American rules, 10 converts and one field goal. Bombers lost only one of the six games, their first encounter with Minot, N. D., State Teachers College.

Lyn McDougal, star with Port Arthur Bearcats in the 1941 Allan Cup finals against Ottawa RCAF, will be on left wing for Ottawa Senators when they meet Hull Volants tonight in a Quebec Senior Hockey League game.

Newest co-operative sport team is Belleville's intermediate entry in the O.H.A. Thirty candidates tossed $1 apiece into the player pot yesterday and in ballotting officials were chosen from playing members and plans formulated to divide profits, if any.

Hamilton is not quite through with rugby. The O.R.F.U. Wildcats last night accepted a challenge from the Interprovincial Union Tigers for a city championship game to be played Nov. 17. Proceeds will go to charity.

In London, England, last night Al Phillips of London knocked out Danny Webb of Montreal in the sixth round. The Montreal featherweight was knocked down eight times in the first round but recovered to put Phillips down for a seven-count in the third. After that it was all Phillips.

THE PAYOFF

There'll be cooing co-eds and frolicking freshies, staid sophomores and fretting faculty men at the Albert College vs. B.C.I. junior football game this afternoon. Tis likely the Church St. studes will waltz up the West Hill behind the school band to cheer their junior gridders to victory in the playoff game of the season. The boys and gals of Dear Old Albert will be out in full force and it should be a noisy but interesting affair. There'll still be time to see some of the game after you've read this.

LOSE NO TIME

Frank Butler and Don Barrett, newly appointed secretary treasurer-public relations, and assistant officials of the Redmen Hockey Club are losing no time in getting down to brass tacks to raise some much needed dinero for the club. Today they organized a program advertising campaign and at this writing are well on their way. The entire net proceeds of the program will be devoted to the club's expenses which will primarily be heavy, and business and other men of the city will be asked to co-operate. The proposed program will be a colorful one and will be handed to the patrons of each game played in the city. There will be cuts and anecdotes of the players and the advertising will be attractively laid out and arranged.

A NICE GESTURE

Tommy Mascaro, one of the city's most ardent sports fans (ask him how much avoirdupois he lost the day before that seventh world series game) comes out with a nice gesture to the leather pushers of the city. Tommy is showing a fine boxing film "Come Out Fighting" on Thursday, Friday and Saturday at his Capitol Theatre, and the winners of the bouts and the tournaments at the Hume Arena Friday will receive two free passes for another show.

In the meantime Tommy extends a cordial invitation to all the boys taking part in the Gardens Athletic Club Boxing show Friday night at the Hume Arena, to be his guests on any of the three days "Come Out Fighting" is being shown.

BEAUTY AND...

"So," growled John "The Fingers" Katan, deep down in his diaphram, "Patsy Flanigan thinks he'll tear me apart here tonight, does he? Well, he'd better remember my record. I'll ground him so quick that he'll think a couple of jet planes struck him abaft the cockpit. That young whippersnapper, why I was wrestling at the time he thought a chorine was a kind of gas. Just wait and see." The two will stage the main bout at the Hume Arena tonight and feeling is running high between the pair, let alone the faithful. Walter Sirois and Alf O'Donnell, talkative guy from down south meet in the semi-final while Al Dunlop meets Aaron Stein in the opener. A tasty evening, wot-

NICE GOING

Two well known business men who reside on Front Street in the daytime, came through with a 5-spot each aniece this mawning for the Redmen, unsolicited. 'Twas a nice way to start the ball rolling and it is hoped other sportsmen of the city will do likewise.

A GOOD CHOICE

Bowlers of the city and district hailed with satisfaction the election of George Pauley to the president's chair of the Belleville Lawn Bowling Club at the annual confab Monday, twilight. George is an ardent bowler and will take his office and its accompanying duties seriously. Bowling in the city is on the upsurge and in all probability will enjoy added popularity next summer.

Halifax, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Once bitten, hockey promoters in Glace Bay, N.S., are more than a trifle leery of again embarking on high-powered amateur hockey with its attendant importations and big salaries. Wisely enough, the Glace Bay Forum has decided to let senior hockey go by the boards this winter and begin a program on developing junior talent.

Glace Bay, like other Maritime centres, had disheartening experiences before the war in the effort to develop strong teams that would bring the Allan Cup down east. The Maritimes did hold the trophy for a three-year stretch, but the financial success definitely did not match the artistic.

Deciding to hire an instructor to develop the juniors, the Glace Bay directors in a statement turned thumbs down on the senior proposition. Said they significantly "in view of past experience, such a hazardous adventure should not be undertaken at this time."

There's a lesson in that for other centres, similarly situated, who might be tempted to neglect their youngsters while providing cushy service station jobs for itinerant athletes from other parts of the country.

Harness Hash

Next summer may see a more pronounced Maritime flavor in United States harness racing circles. Ald. Frank Adams of Halifax intended to send his Maritime champion trotter, Watchim, to the Grand Circuit this year, but transportation regulations nipped that in the bud.

There's a strong possibility Watchim may be sent to the States next year in an attempt to lower his 2.06 3/4 trotting mark in speedy competition on the one-mile American tracks.

Billy Hood, one of the Maritimers' leading drivers, is toying with the idea of taking a fling at Roosevelt Speedway . Adams wants him to try Grand Circuit, so the summer might see a Watchim-Hood Maritime combination.

Trophy Hunt

One important decision reached at the annual meeting o the Maritime Hockey Association was an all-out search for some of the numerous hockey trophies that have become mislaid during the last few years.

One trophy that won't be found is the Starr Trophy, emblematic of the Maritime Senior title, which was lost when fire destroyed the recreation hall at HMCS Cornwallis naval base. The trophy had a long and memorable history, dating back to early in the century.

First Civilian Pleasure Cruise Since 1939

Montreal, Oct. 31 (CP) — The first civilian pleasure cruise from this port since 1939 will be undertaken shortly when two Montreal brothers—Fernand and Hector Langlois—sail their 24-foot yawl Leda to Cuba on a six-weeks' cruise.

The brothers sold their holdings here and bought the 16-ton vessel to make the trip south. Thy will sail through Lake Champlain, and the New York State Canal to New York City and from there into the ocean. Because of the low bridges in the canal the mast of the ship has been removed and the Leda's engines will be used until New York is reached.

"We have been working night and day throughout the war and like everybody else we are pretty tired," Fernand said. "We saw in a boat trip like this a chance to get away from everything and to get a complete rest."

Horse Sense Bridge

LESSON NO. 829
By SAM GORDON
The Kibitzer

Not always is it easy to plan in advance when you play a deal in bridge. But every good player does it the moment dummy's hand goes down on the table.

See what they cooked up for a World Olympic match in this deal:

NORTH
♠9 6
♥Q 7 4
♦A Q 10 7 5
♣A 7 4

WEST
♠Q J 10 7 3
♥A 10 8
♦6 3
♣J 8 6

EAST
♠8 4 2
♥J 9 5 2
♦K 8 2
♣Q 9 2

SOUTH
♠A K 5
♥K 6 3
♦J 9 4
♣K 10 5 3

South is declarer at three no-trump. West leads the spade queen. Four top tricks are in the black suits. Four diamonds can be had. A trick is there in hearts with the king or the queen.

Is it possible to take these needed nine tricks before opponents can take five? Besides the heart ace and diamond king, what is there to fear? Danger in spades if one opponent has five of them.

With that lead, it may be suspected that the most spades are in west. So, after south is out of top spades, west must be kept out of the lead. What must be taken into consideration?

If west can get in with any thing but spades, it would be with the heart ace. So, that danger must be removed before it is too late.

This warns the declarer to manufacture his heart trick before establishing diamonds. So, south takes the first spade trick and promptly shoots a small heart toward dummy.

If west does not run with the ace, dummy simply wins that trick with the queen. With that trick in, declarer has no worry. He has no trouble in controlling the rest of his needs.

South is entered with the club king and a diamond is finessed. East wins with the diamond king. But no return from there can now stop declarer from taking nine tricks in time.

The important thing was to go after that heart trick fast. If west took the first heart trick with the ace, the danger was past.

West comes back with a spade and south merely holds off until the third round. After that, east is out of spades when the diamond is finessed into him.

A good plan pays in many ways.

QUESTION OF USE

May be Extended

One of the things that was not known yet was how long Canada would be expected to maintain a force in Germany. The formal commitment would expire in March, 1946, but it might be extended beyond that date.

When length of the commitments became known it would be possible to formulate definite plans for the relief and replacement of the men in Germany. No large scale relief would be possible before next April or May because of the tight shipping situation.

Mr. Abbott said that 12,527 N.R.M.A. troops had been sent overseas up to Sept. 30 while the number in Canada totalled 33,207 at Oct. 15.

Flt. Lt. Sinclair said he wanted the N.R.M.A. troops in Canada to be sent overseas so that they might not be released to industry ahead of general service personnel and so that volunteer personnel overseas might be returned home as quickly as possible.

Col. Merritt said that members of the army in Canada, whether N.R.M.A. men or volunteers with low point scores, should be interchangeable with the troops overseas. There should be an end put to the two-army system in Canada.

Wants Services Co-ordinated.

A suggestion that Canada retain the scientific knowledge built up in wartime by placing technical research projects under the control of the National Research Council was made by Hon. Dr. H. A. Bruce, Progressive Conservative member for Toronto Parkdale.

Dr. Bruce said that the technical and research branches of the armed forces should be brought under the Research Council, the logical body to supervise co-ordination of scientific efforts.

He suggested that a comittee composed of National Research, government and armed forces' representatives be established to act as a central co-ordinating body in matters of research. The combining of research efforts would increase efficiency and cut down costs.

He urged also that medical services of the three forces be co-ordinated under one director-general and three deputies. Now the three services have separate medical establishments.

In the night debate Defence Minister Abbott said last night in the Commons he did not believe there was any censorship of mail from members of the occupational force but he would inquire.

He was replying to Gordon Graydon (PC-Peel) who said that a private recently had written to his family saying he could not write a member of parliament because the letter would be censored and destroyed.

Mr. Abbott said even if there was censorship there would be no reason to destroy a letter unless it contained something which endangered public safety.

No Decision Reached On Dishonorable Discharge Payments

Ottawa, Oct. 31 — (CP)—The Commons Committee on Veterans Affairs, faced with a motion that amounted to forgetting dishonorable discharges in payment of discharge benefits, ended a hectic meeting today with an 18-15 vote to adjourn rather than put it to a vote without further consideration.

Its members, continuing debate on a subject that has occupied much of their time, heard a letter from Maj.-Gen. A. E. Walford, Adjutant General, that warned that any such action would have a serious effect on the maintenance of discipline in the army both at home and overseas but mainly during the difficult period of winter ahead in Europe.

He wrote he was not objecting to the principle of such legislation but he was anxious about the danger of the "misunderstanding" that might arise over interpretation of its purposes. The men might assume there had been a change in the attitude of the people of Canada.

Churchill and Attlee Clash Over Question Armed Services Figure

London, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Winston Churchill and Prime Minister Attlee clashed in Commons yesterday over the question of how many British soldiers still are being held in Britain and Eastern Asia.

Mr. Attlee refused to answer Mr. Churchill's request for information on the disposition of army and R.A.F. personnel in Britain, Europe and the Orient on grounds that "it is not in the public interest."

There were cries of "Oh" and the former Prime Minister said:

"I am astounded at the answer which has been given by the Prime Minister. I do not for one moment accept the validity of the argument that rests behind it. I am not ill-acquainted with what is the situation in the world."

Mr. Attlee then suggested a conference later with Mr. Churchill to discuss just what figures could be disclosed. Mr. Churchill accepted, and said he would ask his question again Thursday.

Mr. Churchill said his object was "to get the largest number of men out of the army I can."

PACIFIC STAR FOR CANADIANS WHO DEFENDED HONG KONG

Ottawa, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Members of the Canadian force at Hong Kong will be given the Pacific Star, Defence Minister Abbott said last night in the Commons.

He was replying to Stanley Knowles (CCF — Winnipeg North Centre).

Mr. Abbott said he would inquire as to whether the 1939-45 Star could be given to the Hong Kong garrison and to men who went to Kiska in the Aleutian Islands.

PICTON YACHT CLUB MAY HOLD POWER REGATTA

Picton, Oct. 31 — J. C. Cooper was elected Commodore of Prince Edward Yacht Club at its annual meeting, held following a banquet at the club house. Fred VanDusen is Vice Commodore; Herbert Daubney, Rear Commodore; W. McLean, Secretary; Harold Knapman, Treasurer.

Possibility of a regatta next year was discussed with F. VanDusen named chairman of a power boat committee, and Mr. Daubney for sailing craft. The last regatta was held in 1940, and cancelled due to wartime restrictions. At these regattas new world records for speedboats were established.

Committees named were: Executive, H. B. Tully, George Publow, Harold Demille, C. H. McGibbon, C. R. Widdifield; House, H. B. Tully, chairman; Entertainment, C. Lewis chairman; Membership, G. E. Mason, H. Knapman, W. C. Hicks.

During the evening Mayor N. McKibbon showed colored films of previous regattas and W. Wright entertained with a demonstration of juggling.

Two Districts Over Their Quota In Loan Campaign

Picton, Oct. 31 — Picton and South Marysburg Township are leading Prince Edward County in the Victory Loan race. The town went over its objective first, with $673,200, or 103.6 per cent of quota. South Marysburg also exceeded its $50,000 objective by $1,650.

Wellington village has 80 per cent, Sophiasburg Township 68, Hallowell Township 66, Bloomfield 64, Ameliasburg 44, North Marysburgh 36, Hillier 29, and Athol 29 per cent of quotas.

Reports to noon yesterday showed county returns of $1,156,850, or 81.5 per cent of the $1,420,000 objective.

Victory Loan organizers are aiming at 100 per cent of objective by Thursday. Since the first day of the loan, Prince Edward has led all districts in percentage of general canvass sales.

Tell of Killing And Burning of Civilian Patients

Manila, Oct. 31 — (AP)—Witnesses at the war criminal trial of Lt.-Gen. Tomoyuki Yamashita continued through the third day today their recital of atrocity, slaughter and rape committed by troops commanded by the one-time "Tiger of Malaya" and supreme Japanese commander of the Philippines.

Through the repetition of similar instances of bestial brutality in the trial without precedent—Yamashita is charged with responsibility for crimes he never committed and denies having ordered — the prosecution hopes to establish that the acts of the Japanese followed a set pattern in such numbers that the commander should have known of the acts — and did nothing to stop them.

The defence, following its own pattern, continued to object to all affidavits and depositions offered by the prosecution, examining and questioning all offerings.

Highlight of the third day's recitation was the testimony of Mrs. Rosario Yulo, who told of being in a home last Feb. 7, where more than 100 civilian men and women and children were shot and burned. Mrs. Yulo's daughter, son and husband were among those slain.

The killing and burning of 22 patients, all civilians, at the National Psychopathic Hospital on the outskirts of Manila was described by a series of witnesses.

Lucio Mariano, hospital administrative officer, said five or six Japanese officers rushed into the buildings and started shooting. They ordered everyone outside. One woman screamed and was felled with a blow and then kicked.

Another patient was given the "Judo" treatment — picked up and hurled headfirst onto the floor.

A medical officer, Toribio Joson, testified that he had seen patients hurled over a cliff behind the hospital and then set afire.

Says It's Farce to Have People of No Beliefs Wedded by Clergyman

Toronto, Oct. 31 (CP)—A number of clergymen interviewed last night agreed with Rt. Rev. G. A. Wells, Chaplain of the Fleet, who told an Ottawa congregation that it was a farce to require people who have no religious beliefs to appear before a clergyman to be married.

12,527 Draftees Sent Overseas Up to Sept. 30

Ottawa, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Defence Minister Abbott told the Commons last night 12,527 draftees had been sent overseas up to Sept. 30 while the number in Canada totalled 33,207 at Oct. 15.

Of the 12,527 sent overseas, 4,199 went into Europe up to VE-Day, May 8, while another 1,107 crossed the Channel up to Sept. 30.

Some 950 of the overseas draftees converted to general service status while 67 were killed in action. Those returned to Canada in the repatriation stream totalled 1,217, leaving N.R.M.A. strength overseas at Sept. 30 at 10,693.

Mr. Abbott said the 33,207 N.R.M.A. men in Canada included 23,632 on strength and 9,575 on leave but did not include deserters.

(A return tabled in the Commons Oct. 4 by State Secretary Martin disclosed there were 11,145 N.R.M.A. deserters and absentees and 13,416 draft dodgers still at large in Canada at Sept. 1.)

The minister gave this breakdown of the 23,632 draftees on strength in the home establishment:—

In operational units, 1,285; referred for reallocation, 1,140; in holding units, 5,651; in non-operational units, 10,536; in training schools, 325; at depots, 2,943; on administrative and training staffs, 52, and in transit, 1,800.

When Mr. Abbott finished his statement, Alan Cockeram (PC — York South) said the minister had not said "where the 9,000 deserters are."

Mr. Abbott replied: "I didn't say anything about 9,000 deserters."

Mr. Cockeram: "Are they included in these figures?"

Mr. Abbott: "You don't carry deserters on strength."

Mr. Cockeram: "But you are looking for them, aren't you?"

WOOLER

Driver Injured When Car Struck

Wooler—An accident occurred on Saturday evening about sundown on Wooler highway opposite a sideroad which is situated between the premises of Mr. Dan Jenners and Mr. Roscoe Bentley on the north side of the highway.

Mr. Bert McKee, attached with the R.C.A.F. in Montreal, was en route to the home of his wife's parents, Mr. and Mrs. Henry Mitchell who reside about half a mile west of the village. He was slowing up at the mentioned sideroad on which a highpowered road grader was operating when a car struck his motor in the rear. The impact pushed his motor into the ditch and Mr. McKee was momentarily rendered unconscious. He also received minor bruises to one of his legs below the knee.

Mr. Gerald Blakley of Meyersburg was owner and driver of the other motor. Both cars were badly damaged and had to be towed away from the scene. Local and Provincial Police investigated.

RETURN TRUE BILL

St. Thomas, Oct. 30 — (CP) — The Grand Jury at the Fall Assizes last night returned a true bill on the charge of murder against Mrs. Vera Alberta Clarke, 34, charged in connection with the death of Richard Everett in her apartment Jan. 26 last from knife wounds.

GIVEN NEW POST

Kingston, Oct. 31—(CP)—Capt. Ronald Vale of the Royal Canadian Corps of Signals has been appointed Public Relations Officer of Military District No. 3 with headquarters here. He succeeds Capt. Fred Wooding who was recently discharged to become Public Relations Officer of the Canadian Tuberculosis Association. Capt. Vale formerly was with the Winnipeg Tribune and enlisted in 1940 in the RCAF from where he was transferred to the R.C.C.S., and posted to Barriefield.

15-YEAR-OLD BOY WOUNDED

Toronto, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Police last night arrested James Bain of Toronto on a dangerous driving charge after a wild chase through East Toronto and the suburbs during which a 15-year-old boy was wounded by a police bullet. A constable said he fired two warning shots but the driver of the vehicle did not stop. Then the officer shot at a rear tire. The bullet apparently ricocheted upward and grazed the head of one of three boys riding in the station wagon as passengers.

And The Walls Came Tumbling

CHAPTER 6

"Oh, Carol!" Andy called after her. "Keep the color of that car in mind, will you? And fetch me my zither before you sit down. I want to think."

Wige Lennon's appreciation of Jericho's good fortune was tempered by the fact that his grilled window in the bank was directly opposite the open front door and he had chanced to witness Carol's acceptance of Dennison's invitation to ride home. He could not hear what the man in the car said, but there was something so casual in the way he opened the door for his passenger, that Wige was left with the uncomfortable impression that it was prearranged.

It was a funny time for Carol to be going home for lunch, anyway. Maybe she had the afternoon off. He never had been given reason to feel jealous before because Carol never went out with anyone but him. Wige did not define this experience as jealousy, none the less it gave him a feeling of depression that might have accounted for his cash being slightly out of balance at closing time, a matter that took him more than two hours to rectify.

When he reached home he found that his mother had been shopping and had heard the news. She was desirous of further details as was his brother Charlie.

Charles Lennon was nineteen, a frail but cheerful polio victim with an almost useless left leg. Dr. Silverthorne had fitted him with a brace and he was able to move about slowly with the aid of a cane. He had a strong mechanical bent and was clever with his hands, spending much of his time tinkering at a work bench his older brother made for him. Wige was exceedingly fond of his brother and did his best to keep the boy supplied with simple materials and tools to while away what otherwise must have been tedious hours. When he came in this evening, Charlie's first question had been:

"My mechanics magazine is out today, did you remember?"

"Why, sure I did, Chuck," Wige's usually sober face lighted with a smile. "But darned if I didn't leave it in the car! I'll get it right after supper. Mother says it's ready. Okay?"

"Sure."

"What's this about a new factory coming to town?" Amanda Lennon wanted to know immediately after asking a blessing with an almost plaintive air. "If I heard it from one person uptown I did from half a dozen."

"I don't know much about it yet, Mother," Wige admitted, holding out his plate for a helping of fried eggs. "It's an airplane company, the Lawhead Corporation. They're supposed to have a big contract from the government for bombers or something. From the way people talk, this factory will be a big one. I hope it is. It could be a good thing for the bank, I should think."

"How?"

"Oh, it might mean a lot of new depositors. They might even handle their pay roll through us. I heard somebody say they would employ at least a thousand men."

"Gee!" Charlie broke in. "Wouldn't I like to work in a place like that!" His eyes were shining with excitement.

"There's no telling," Wige smiled. "If it's as big as all that I may be promoted to vice president. The first thing I'll do will be to send you down to those springs the doctor's been talking about and get you fixed up."

"Don't talk like that," Amanda cautioned. "You know as well as I do if the bank makes any money it'll go into Mr. Higgin's pocket. Look how long your father worked there and all we have to show for it is this house. I'm glad the bank doesn't have a mortgage on it or we might lose that some day. And don't forget you may be making a sight less some time before long."

"Less?" Wige regarded her somewhat apprehensively.

"You're in the draft, aren't you? I lie awake nights thinking of it. I don't know how we'd ever manage."

"Oh, that." Wige smiled again. "It will be a long time before they get to my number. And they don't want men with dependents."

"Don't be too sure. Remember you haven't any pull. I'd feel so much easier if you were married. Have you seen Carol lately?"

"I saw her Sunday."

Wige lowered his eyes with that evasion. The picture of Carol stepping into that roadster appeared again in his mind, the memory made all the more poignant by reason of his mother's last statement.

"Now what's the matter?" she wanted to know. "Carol and you haven't had a tiff, have you?"

"Of course not." It didn't sound so careless as he could wish.

"I'll declare I don't see why the two of you don't fix things up....you're neither of you getting any younger. I'd think Carol would jump at the chance to get out from under Cassie Steel's thumb. I would. Too bad her father isn't younger."

"Why?" Curiosity compelled Wige to recall his wandering thoughts.

"If they have to have men to shoot at, Andy Delaine's the kind they ought to pick. It's about all he's good for. And Carol won't ever make more than her keep as long as she stays in that office. Of course she could work there for a while after you were married just to make things a little easier for you....until you started having a family. I think a lot of Carol and I know well enough that the two of us would never have any trouble if she came here. That's what you ought to do."

This last argument was a familiar one, but it fell on unwilling ears tonight.

"We're not even engaged," Wige returned shortly. He turned to his brother who sat looking into the distance, apparently giving no heed to the arrangements his mother was proposing. "What's the matter, Chuckie? You're not eating much."

"Oh, nothing. I was just thinking."

Wige knew where the boy's mind was. His half-joking reference to that hospital accounted for the wistful look in Charlie's eyes. Doc Silverthorne had confidence in the institution, but there was no money available for such an experiment. Always money. With a forced cheerfulness Wige suggested.

"I'll step out and get your magazine if you've finished. I glanced through it while I was waiting for my change and it looks right interesting. I'm going out a little later...."

He had made no plans for the evening, but he was conscious of an overwhelming desire to escape from the house for a little time. Even as he changed his suit he had no definite idea of where he was going, but once in his small car he drove almost automatically to Carol's gate. He did not alight at once, but sat behind the wheel and pondered. He knew it would hurt if he found she was not at home and, for the first time in his life, it would hurt if she were—if she didn't voluntarily relieve his misery and uncertainty. He couldn't ask her about this afternoon. If he never found out. As he walked slowly up the path his heart sank. From out of the gloom came the sound of Andre's zither. Something told him he would find the musician alone on the porch. He was.

"Good evening, Wige my boy! Come up and have a chair. You're just in time to prevent a near murder of 'Where my caravan has rested.' Beautiful thing, but I can't somehow get the 'flowers of love and memory' to suit me. Provoking. But sit down and be comfortable."

"Is Carol at home, Mr. Delaine?"

"Not at the moment. But I'll be delighted to have your company

"You mean she will be here soon?" Wige did not know whether to be relieved or otherwise. Perhaps it would be as well if he left word of his call; Carol would be rather sure to say where she was the next time they met. But Andre rescued him happily.

"I'm positive. Patty Garver dropped by and asked Carol to walk down to the store with her. They said something about coming back in fifteen minutes or so. When you reach my age you will know that a woman's fifteen minutes is a flat forty. Will you wait and learn the truth?"

Wige expected that his host would open the conversation with a dissertation about the new factory, paint the town's future in glowing terms, but he was pleasantly disappointed. Dennison's name was sure to be mentioned and Wige had no desire whatever to hear it. Andre fell back on the weather. Most unseasonable for the time of year, and he predicted a thunderstorm before the night was over. That meant a change, cooler. It might even turn cold.

Wige murmured a polite assent to the prospect, but his attention was focused on the patch of light under a near-by street lamp, hoping to see Carol and her friend strolling homeward. There was one good feature about Andy Delaine's conversation. His listener didn't have to follow the flow of talk unless he wanted. When the girls finally appeared, Andre interrupted himself by lighting a match and consulting his watch. "On the dot," he chuckled. "Thanks for helping me pass a pleasant half hour, Wige." He disappeared through the front door carrying his zither with him.

The caller had another bad moment when he heard Carol urge Miss Garver to come in and sit on the porch. The answer was a meaning giggle followed by a refusal that Wige thought unnecessarily loud.

"I wouldn't dream of it, darling! Don't you suppose I know whose car this is? And don't you do anything I wouldn't do!" Another giggle.

Carol greeted Wige in her usual quietly-composed fashion. She was sorry she wasn't home when Wige arrived. Warm, wasn't it? She believed she would like a drink of water before she sat down. Might she bring a glass to Wige?

"How about some ice cream?" he asked. "I'll run us down to the drugstore if you'll have a dish." He had a sudden desire to be seen in Carol's company. There'd be a lot of people at Edgar's.

"Oh, I'm sorry. Patty just treated me. I think that is what has made me so thirsty. I'll be right out."

Even as her father, Carol made no mention whatever of the project that was engaging Jericho's attention almost to the exclusion of all else, and that added to her suitor's depression. Perhaps she was avoiding the topic purposely. After all, Wige had been the first to tell her of the possibility. And, at the time, she appeared to be thinking of something else. That was the day she first met this new fellow.

But Carol was ready enough to talk of other matters and Wige found himself following her lead with no particular enthusiasm, until she inquired about Charlie of whom she was very fond. It seemed to her he had walked with less difficulty the last time she saw him. If only something could be done to help if not cure his trouble. He was always so uncomplaining. And it was nothing short of marvelous the things he could do with his hands.

That was one topic that served as a balm and in a burst of gratitude Wige suggested a short ride over Carol's favorite road. Only to have his hopes dashed again.

"I'm afraid it's too late, Wige. And it's lightning. I guess you can't see it from where you're sitting."

Then it came out in a reckless blurt:

"You mean you guess my old flivver wouldn't seem comfortable after Dennison's car!"

Silence. Wige could not see Carol's face in the darkness, but he was miserably aware that she was smiling. It was not reflected, however, in her pensive conclusion.

Jericho's boom was on.

The contractor for the factory's buildings had lost no time in getting his job under way. The long sidings at the Junction were filled with cars loaded with lumber, cement and other materials. A constant procession of trucks rumbled to and from the scene of operations raising clouds of dust. Big shovels, guided by the engineers' wooden stakes, grunted over their mouthfuls of clay. Occasionally a series of blasts rattled windowpanes in near-by houses.

Almost any able-bodied Jerichoian who was not averse to manual labor could find a job. Those who were not interested, but with leisure time on their hands, flocked daily to the site to watch the activity.

Bosses and workers quickly exhausted the resources of the old Hanscomb House and overflowed into any private homes that would accommodate them. Others took advantage of the greater facilities offerd by Centertown, the nearby county seat. A thrifty group there lost no time in organizing a bus line to transport men to and from the new job.

And of all the influx none was busier than C. H. Dennison in his capacity as liaison man for the company, his government and the contractor. Wige Lennon was the first man in town to learn what that C. H. stood for.

Rubbing his thin hands and smiling frostily, Mr. Higgins had brought the newcomer to Wige's wicket and introduced the two young men. Mr. Dennison wished to open a personal account and would Mr. Lennon see to it that he was afforded every courtesy possible. A glint in the elderly banker's eye conveyed an impression to the teller that he better had.

TORONTO STOCK EXCHANGE

Toronto, Oct. 31 —(CP)— Quemont set the pace in the early session on the stock market today by advancing more than a point to 13, a new high. It touched 13 1-2 in the early afternoon on a report that a new and important find had been made on the property. Its eastern neighbor, Donalda, moved in sympathy, gaining 15 cents to 1.45. Industrials, golds and Western Oils showed index gains at noon and the base metals were down narrowly. Volume was normal at 1,069,000 shares for the first three hours.

Upper Canada, Osisko Lake, Pamour, Astoria and Eldona were other gold group leaders at sizeable gains.

Mining Corporation firmed 20 cents and Labrador added 15.

Abitibi 6 per cent pfd. added a point and Distillers-Seagram was up 2. Minnesota and Ontario and Consolidated added 5-8 in papers.

NEW YORK STOCK EXCHANGE

New York, Oct. 31. (AP)— Utilities, Rails and assorted Industrials led the stock market on an upswing today after considerable early hesitancy. On President Truman's wage-price policy, financial opinion veered to the idea pay increases ultimately would bring price raises despite the decree to "hold the line". This thought inspired a revival of bidding. Scattered losers were in evidence near the fourth hour.

At eight-year peaks were Electric Power & Light, United Corp., Columbia Gas, American Power & Light, Standard Gas $4 Pfd. and Eastern Kodak. Favored were U.S. Steel, Bethlehem, General Motors, Nickel Plate Common, North American, Douglas Aircraft and American Water Works.

Distillers Seagrams led Canadian issues at midday with a strong gain of 2 1-2 while Hiram Walker was up 1-2. Canadian Pacific and Dome Mines were up 3-8 and 1-8 respectively.

TORONNTO LIVESTOCK

Toronto, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Cattle prices were steady at the week's decline in trade on the livestock market up to mid-session today. Lambs were slow and steady with hogs, calves and sheep steady.

Receipts reported by the Dominion Marketing Service follow: cattle 500, calves 150, hogs 600, sheep and lambs 400. Unsold from yesterday were 3,500 head of cattle and 2,500 lambs.

Prices in the trade included:

Cattle: A few weighty steers $9-11.25, butcher steers and heifers $8.50-10.50, butcher cows $7-$8.50, canners downward to $5. bulls $6.50-8.35, a few fed yearlings $11-13.50, stockers $8-9.25.

Calves—$14-15 choice common heavy vealers downward to $8.

Lambs—$13.75-14.25, good ewes and wethers, $12.75-13.25 bucks, culls $6-9.

Sheep: $3-$7.

Hogs: dressed, grade A $17.65, grade B1 $17.25, sows $15.

MONTREAL LIVESTOCK

Montreal, Oct. 31 —(CP)— Prices were steady today on the livestock markets. Receipts: Cattle 12, sheep and lambs 20, hogs 67, calves 8.

Most cattle offered were canners and cutters which sold for 5-6. Good bulls were 8-9 and common ones 6 up.

Some heavy calves were left over, the balance making 9-11. Veals were 10-14.

Good ewes and wethers brought mostly 13.75 to 14. Sheep were 3-7.

Hog sales were made at 17.65 for Grade A. Sows were 16-16.50 if dressed.

HOGS

Toronto, Oct. 31 —(CP)— Prices were unchanged at bacon-hog markets reporting early today: Barrie $17.65 delivered; Hull $17.40 delivered; Stratford, to farmers $17.50, to truckers $17.65, delivered.

Masks are Scarce, Many Pranksters Make Their Own

By TIM DICKSON
Canadian Press Staff Writer

Bright orange Jack-o-lanterns will gleam tonight in every city, town and hamlet across the Dominion as young Canadians, wearing gay costumes and grotesque disguises, greet friends and neighbors with the traditional "Shell out!" demand in the first peacetime Hallowe'en celebration in more than six years.

Many fathers, home from the battlefronts, will try their hand for the first time at dressing a young son or daughter as a witch, sprite or hobgoblin.

Masks are scarce this year and some pranksters will wear homemade ones. The sugar shortage has cut down the supply of candies and an apple scarcity may compel rationing of another favorite treat. But if hand-outs are slimmer than in the past, reports from across the country indicate that the celebration will lack none of its usual merriment.

As householders bought up fast-dwindling stocks of nuts, candies and apples to meet the cry of "Treat or tricks," police officials in larger cities warned against letting harmless fun develop into hoodlumism.

Warning Over Hoodlumism

At the same time, police chiefs recalled that, in general, celebrations in the last few years have been orderly.

Taking no chances on possible vandalism, the Vancouver, Regina and Hamilton police departments will have every available patrolman on the streets. The Montreal force has assigned extra men to duty, mainly, officials explained, to handle the crowds having innocent fun. Elsewhere, no special police measures are planned.

To overcome any tendency towards property destruction following an after-supper canvass of neighbor's homes, several cities, including Toronto, Regina and London, Ont., planned monster Hallowe'en parties for school children. Staged mostly in school auditoriums, the parties will have all the time-honored features of the celebration including bobbing for apples, pin the donkey, costumes and games with grab bags of candies and novelties as prizes. London is prepared for 22 parties.

One service club (Kinsmen) has appealed to householders to shell out tickets, purchased for one cent each at grocery stores, to the children, who will have a chance to win prizes with them. Proceeds will go to projects to assist physically handicapped children.

Mock Battle Too Realistic

Albuquerque, N. M., Oct. 31 — (AP)—Police considered the mock battle on the sand lot altogether too realistic and halted the fray when they found two armies of boys ranging from 10 to 14 years of age peppering away at one another with .22 calibre rifles. One youngster was shot in the shoulder, precipitating the investigation into the war.

STAB WOUNDS DISCUSSED

St. Thomas, Oct. 31 — (CP) — Testimony given by the prosecution yesterday in the trial of Mrs. Vera Alberta Clarke, 34, charged with murdering Richard Evered in their apartment here last January 26, centred largely around the stab wounds over Evered's heart and whether they could have been self-inflicted.

Harbor Improvement Will be Carried Out by Federal Govt. Next Year Says Mayor Follwell

Construction of Retaining Wall Around Victoria Park Also a Possibility

Dredging of the harbor near the old Grand Junction dock; said to be a hazard to navigation and a general cleaning of the harbor proper will be definitely carried out in 1946, Mayor Frank Follwell has been informed by the Federal Department of Public Works.

Government engineers after going over plans of the harbor and a recent survey will be sent here to take soundings and borings in an effort to ascertain if sand-sucking operations will be feasible in the removal of from two to 3 feet of silt in the harbor bottom.

Construction of a retaining wall around Victoria Park is a possibility, the mayor was told, but will be a time project. Plans have been prepared and are now on file with the Department of Reconstruction which has informed the Deoartment of Public Works that when the labor situation is eased somewhat and the government decides on its postwar reconstruction program, work on the wall will be started.

The departmental decisions regarding the harbor and retaining wall projects are an aftermath of a visit to Ottawa by Mayor Follwell, Alderman Fred Chamberlain, and City Engineer Charles Mott, members of the Harbor Improvement Committee here. Other members of the committee are: Herbert Collins, Maurice Callaghan, A. H. Ketcheson and F. S. Lazier.

Deputation Well Received

The city delegation was well received in Ottawa by Emmett Murphy, deputy minister, Department of Public Works, Chief Engineer A. Cameron and District Engineer J. Trudeau.

Its requests included a cleaning out of the inner harbor by removing heavy deposits of silt; the building of the park retaining wall; dredging of the old junction dock which extends south of the Schuster Coal Company property and west of the present government wharf.

It also requested the dredging of the harbor east of the government wharf and the construction of a new retaining wall to extend present docking facilities east of the present dock to the George Street slip. It was suggested that material secured from dredging be used as a backfill for the proposed wall.

Included in Estimates

Deputy Minister Murphy has informed the mayor that if sufficient commercial value is apparent the above costs will be included in the public estimates and the work proceeded with. He also stated that residue from the inner harbor would not be suitable for fill and would have to be scowed away.

Some time ago, at the request of the Harbor Improvement Committee government engineers made a survey of the harbor and docking facilities and the above requests and decisions were based on their reports to the various departments.

3 Ottawa Men Remanded Week

Ottawa, Oct. 31 — (CP)—Three Ottawa men were remanded for a week when they appeared in police court Tuesday on murder charges in connection with the fatal shooting of a city detective on an Ottawa street early last Wednesday.

The charges were laid against the three, Wilfred D'Amour, 25, Eugene Lambert, 24, and Albert Henderson, 24, following the death in hospital yesterday of Detective Thomas Stoneman from a bullet in the chest. Originally the men had been charged with attempted murder and in addition face counts of breaking and entering and theft of an auto.

Meanwhile, arrangements went ahead for a civic funeral for the 37-year-old detective who suffered the fatal wound when he grappled with one of three men he had challenged on a report they were tampering with a parked car in downtown Ottawa. It is expected the funeral will be held Thursday.

Allied Air Power Was Decisive Factor in Conquest of Germany

Washington, Oct. 31 (AP) — Twelve civilians declared Tuesday that Allied air power was the decisive factor in the conquest of Germany.

Victory in the air cost Britain 79,281 fliers and 22,000 planes and the United States 79,265 flying men and 18,000 planes, the committee said in a report to the War Department.

But air power killed some 300,000 Germans, destroyed or heavily damaged 3,600,000 dwellings, made rubble of principal German cities and kept 5,000,000 persons busy repairing bomb damage.

"Hindsight inevitably suggests that it might have been employed differently or better in some respects," the committee said in an officially-titled "U.S. strategic bombing survey."

"Nevertheless, it was decisive. In the air, its victory was complete."

The appraisers were named by former War Secretary Stimson at the suggestion of the late President Roosevelt to make an impartial study of the effects of aerial attack on Germany.

Their conclusion was that Germany lost the war by losing the battle of the skies in the early months of 1944. Thereafter her resources were exposed to all-put Allied air attack.

Of Allied air power, the survey set forth that:

"At sea, its contribution, combined with naval power, brought an end to the enemy's greatest naval threat—the u-boat; on land, it helped turn the tide overwhelmingly in favor of Allied ground forces. Its power and superiority made possible the success of the invasion.

"It brought the economy which sustained the enemy's armed forces to virtual collapse, although the full effects of this collapse had not reached the enemy's front lines when they were overrun by Allied forces. It brought home to the German people the full impact of modern war with all its horror and suffering. It's imprint on the German nation will be lasting."

Almost 2,700,000 tons of bombs were dropped, more than 1,440,000 bomber sorties and 2,680,000 fighter sorties were flown. The number of combat planes reached a peak of some 28,000 and at the maximum 1,300,000 men were in combat commands.

British fliers experimented briefly with industrial bombing, then concentrated on bombing cities. The survey found that no city raid ever shook Germany as hard as one by the R.A.F. and R.C.A.F. on Hamburg in early August, 1943, when German estimates were that 60,000 to 100,000 people were killed and about one-third of the houses destroyed.

Most bombing operations over Germany had to be conducted under weather and battle conditions which restricted bombing technique and accuracy suffered accordingly, the appraisers said. Survey studies showed that only about 20 per cent of the bombs aimed at precision targets fell within the target area, a circle of 1,000-feet radius around the point attacked.

The attack on transportation was the decisive blow which disorganized the German economy, the committee said. It reduced war production in all categories and made it difficult to move what was produced to the front. The survey declared that all in all industrial bombing was more effective than "area" bombing—the pounding of cities.

Smuts Sees 'Ominous Signs,' Urges Conference

Capetown, Oct. 31 (Reuters) —Prime Minister Smuts said Tuesday "ominous signs" are appearing in Europe and suggested an international peace conference be called immediately.

Speaking at a "Thank-You-Smuts" demonstration, South Africa's war leader said:

"If a decision in the present form of meetings between statesmen proves impossible, let there be an appeal to a higher court—let an international peace conference be convened and the conscience of the nations be brought to bear on the problems which their leaders find too hard to solve.

"San Francisco, it should be remembered, was a long-range plan dealing with problems of war in the future and was not concerned with results of this war and the chaos now threatening to engulf Europe.

"This problem is one for present leaders to deal with as best and as wisely as they can.

"The immediate prospects are dark and threatening in the extreme.

"Developments now rapidly on the march in Europe and the failure of the council of foreign ministers to come to an agreement are ominous signs."

Gallows Tree Lane Keeps Reputation

Newcastle-Under-Lyme, Eng. (CP)—Gallows Tree Lane in this Staffordshire town has been living up to its name. The reputation goes back centuries, but in the last two months its bad name has become worse, with four people attacked and two deaths resulting in that time.

Latest victim was William Lawler, 49, who was stabbed and died a day later. On July 28 Henry Stubbs and his bride of four months were walking in the lane when he was shot and wounded fatally.

A Russian soldier was shot on Aug. 12 and several weeks ago a young couple were attacked. Scotland Yard detectives are investigating.

Maj. F. Tilston, V.C. Again Walks

Toronto, Oct. 30 (CP)—Major Fred Tilston of Toronto and Windsor, whose legs were shot off as he won the Victoria Cross in action in the Hochswald forest in Germany, is walking again. He is getting around on new artificial legs fitted at Christie Street Hospital here, but he's not any too sure about them as yet.

Now What?

He's Back . . .

As a fighting man he did more for us than we can ever hope to repay. Yet all he asks in return is a fair chance to find and fill the right civilian job.

The least we can do is to see that he gets this help . . . see that every young veteran is fitted for the future through the Government's Rehabilitation Program.

Under this program returned men and women are trained, equipped, and directed into farming, factories, business or professions according to their ambition and ability. Some need hospitalization, some pensions—all get gratuities and re-establishment credits.

It's going to take a lot of money to carry to completion such a vital and comprehensive plan. Every Canadian will have to dig deep to raise the sum that's needed.

Now that the shooting and shouting are over, let's tell these fellows that we are still interested! Let's come through and make their training for the future our first and most important job!
